60

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

Part 3
2076
886-H

CONTAINING

THE PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES

OF THE

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION.

VOLUME V, part 3

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1877.

AUTHENTICATED
U.S. GOVERNMENT
INFORMATION
GPO

SURPLUS - 1
LIBRARY OF CONGRESS DUPLICATE

VOLUME V, PART III.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD AND APPENDIX.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION.

VOLUME V, PART III.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD AND APPENDIX.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION.

that the House be notified that the Senate has determined the objection and is ready to meet the House in joint meeting.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will execute the order of the Senate.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. HARVEY presented the credentials of Preston B. Plumb, elected by the Legislature of Kansas a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1877; which were read and ordered to be filed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to allow me now to report a bill, with a view to have it printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair cannot entertain any business.

Mr. SHERMAN. Not by unanimous consent?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No legislative business can be transacted until the commission resumes its session, or the count is concluded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to make a brief statement. I was unexpectedly called away yesterday about the beginning of the session, hoping to be able to return before the vote was taken upon the question involving the count of the vote of Louisiana, but unfortunately I was not able to get back. Had I been here I should have voted to sustain the action of the commission.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

At five o'clock and thirteen minutes p. m. Mr. G. M. ADAMS, Clerk of the House of Representatives, appeared below the bar and said:

Mr. President, I am directed by the House of Representatives to inform the Senate that the House has passed the following:

Whereas the fact being established that it is about twelve years since the alleged ineligible elector exercised any of the functions of the office of United States commissioner, it is not sufficiently proven that at the time of his appointment he was an officer of the United States: Therefore,

Resolved, That the vote objected to be counted.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will observe that the House has given the Senate no notice of its readiness to receive it.

Mr. HAMLIN. Well, we are ready to go.

Mr. SARGENT. They have resolved that the vote ought to be counted; and of course the joint meeting proceeds at once.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At the suggestion made, the Senate will repair to the House of Representatives.

The Senate (at five o'clock and fourteen minutes p. m.) accordingly proceeded to the Hall of the House of Representatives.

The Senate returned to its Chamber at five o'clock and forty-six minutes p. m., and the President pro tempore resumed the chair.

ELECTORAL VOTE OF NEVADA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate having withdrawn from the joint meeting on objection being submitted to the certificate from the State of Nevada, the Chair will lay the objection before the Senate to be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

The undersigned, Senators and Representatives, object to the vote of R. M. Daggett, as an elector from the State of Nevada, upon the grounds following, namely:

That the said R. M. Daggett was on the 7th day of November, 1876, and had been for a long period prior thereto, and thereafter continued to be a United States commissioner for the circuit and district courts of the United States for the said State, and held therefore an office of trust and profit under the United States, and as such could not be constitutionally appointed an elector under the Constitution of the United States:

Wherefore the undersigned say that the said R. M. Daggett was not a duly appointed elector and that his vote as an elector should not be counted.

And the undersigned hereto annex the evidence taken before the committee of the House of Representatives on the powers, privileges, and duties of the House, to sustain said objection.

W. H. BARNUM, Connecticut;
WM. A. WALLACE, Pennsylvania;
FRANK HEREFORD, West Virginia;
Senators.

J. R. TUCKER, Virginia,
JOHN L. VANCE, Ohio,
WM. A. J. SPARKS, Illinois,
JOHN S. SAVAGE,
LEVI MAISH,
G. A. JENKS,
WM. M. SPRINGER,
Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there any evidence accompanying the objection?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is testimony accompanying the objection, and it was not read in the joint meeting.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read here.

The Secretary proceeded to read the testimony, and before concluding was interrupted by Mr. ALLISON. As we have the substance of this witness's statement now, I ask unanimous consent to waive the reading of the remainder of this paper.

Mr. INGALLS. With the understanding that the whole shall be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the further reading being dispensed with? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CRAGIN. I would like to inquire who is the gentleman who examines this witness as appears by this record?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the examination was conducted by different members of the House, Mr. FIELD, Mr. BURCHARD, and others. The further reading will be dispensed with, unless there be objection.

Mr. DAVIS. With the understanding that the whole paper shall be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The understanding is that it be printed in full in the RECORD.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I desire to ask whether there is any authentication to what purports to be testimony taken before the House committee attached to this objection?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. None.

The testimony is as follows:

COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES,
Washington, February 9, 1877.

R. M. DAGGETT sworn and examined.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Question. Were you a candidate for the office of presidential elector in the State of Nevada at the presidential election in November, 1876?

Answer. I was.

Q. Were you present in the college at the time of the vote for President and Vice-President?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you cast a vote for President and Vice-President?

A. I did.

Q. For whom did you vote?

A. I voted for Hayes and Wheeler.

Q. Mr. Hayes for President and Mr. Wheeler for Vice-President?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you the messenger who brought the vote to Washington by the appointment of the college?

A. I am.

Q. Did you hold any office under the United States prior to the election?

A. Yes.

Q. What office was that?

A. I was clerk of the Federal courts, the district and circuit courts of the State of Nevada.

Q. When were you appointed?

A. I think in 1868.

Q. Was that under the State government?

A. Yes. Nevada became a State in 1864, I believe.

Q. Do you hold that office now?

A. I do not.

Q. Who holds that office?

A. I think it is a man named McLean.

Q. When was he appointed?

A. I don't know exactly when he was appointed.

Q. By whom were you appointed?

A. I was appointed first by Associate Justice Field, of the circuit court, and subsequently by Judge Sawyer, of the circuit court, and by Judge Hillyer, for the district.

Q. The appointment was made not by the judge, but by the court; was it not?

A. Made by the judge.

Q. In court?

A. No; I believe not. It may have been.

Q. Where were you when you received the appointment?

A. I was in Virginia City, for the circuit court.

Q. How was the appointment notified to you?

A. It was sent to me by mail.

Q. Did you appear in court and take the oath and give the bond required by law?

A. Yes, sir; subsequently.

Q. You were the keeper of the records of the court; was not your appointment made a matter of record in that court?

A. I presume so.

Q. And your qualification was also entered upon the record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you cease to be the clerk of the court or cease to perform its duties?

A. I ceased on the 6th day of November, the day before the election.

Q. What made you cease to perform its duties?

A. Because it was a question in my mind whether I would be eligible as an elector if I continued to hold the office, and I therefore resigned.

Q. How did you resign?

A. I resigned by telegraph.

Q. A telegram to whom?

A. To Judge Sawyer, in San Francisco, and also to Judge Hillyer, in Carson. I was then living in Virginia City.

Q. Where is Virginia City?

A. It is about twelve miles from Carson.

Q. Carson is the capital where the Federal court holds its sessions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is the telegram which you sent to either of those judges?

A. I do not know. It is not with me. I did not bring it.

Q. Have you a copy of the telegram?

A. I think not.

Q. Who has? To whom did you send it?

A. I sent it to Judge Sawyer.

Q. Directed to what point?

A. To San Francisco.

Q. Does he live in San Francisco?

A. Well, he is judge of the district comprising those three States, California, Nevada, and Oregon.

Q. Does he reside in San Francisco?

A. Most of the time.

Q. You say you sent a telegram to another judge. Whom?

A. Judge Hillyer, of Carson, the district judge.

Q. And you have no copy of that telegram?

A. I have not. I did not think of saving it.

Q. Did you ever receive an answer to that telegram?

A. I received an answer from Judge Sawyer the same day, about an hour afterward.

Q. Where is that telegram?

A. I left it in Virginia City. I did not think of bringing it; I believe I have it.

Q. Why did not you bring it?

A. Well, I did not know that there would be any question about it.
Q. Did not you know what you were sent for?
A. I was only subpœnaed here two or three days ago.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. You telegraphed Judge Sawyer on the 6th of November?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you not give the exact words of the telegram?
A. I think I can.
Q. Give the exact words, then.
A. I think the telegram read this way: "Honorable Alonzo Sawyer, San Francisco: I have this day filed my resignation as clerk of the circuit court of the ninth circuit, and request the acceptance of my resignation." I, at the same time that I sent that telegram to Judge Sawyer, sent to Carson my resignation.
Q. No, don't say you sent your resignation. I am only asking about the telegram to Judge Sawyer; have you given the whole of that?
A. Yes, sir. I think that is about the substance of it, and I think pretty nearly the words.
Q. You received from him an answer?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. On the same day, about an hour afterward?
A. An hour or two afterward.
Q. That you have got, I suppose?
A. I think it is among my papers in Virginia City.
Q. Do you remember the exact words of that?
A. Pretty nearly.
Q. Give them.
A. "Your resignation as clerk of the circuit court is accepted. Alonzo Sawyer."
Q. Have you ever had any other communication with Judge Sawyer on the subject?
A. I have not.
Q. You have never written him?
A. I never have.
Q. Nor received a letter from him?
A. Never.
Q. You did not send to him a copy of your written resignation?
A. By telegraph?
Q. No. You say you wrote something; you did not send him a copy of that?
A. No. Do you mean send it by mail?
Q. Yes, or any way?
A. I did send it.
Q. How?
A. I sent it to Carson the same day.
Q. I am talking about Judge Sawyer. Did you send to Judge Sawyer any copy or any paper?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you send him?
A. My resignation.
Q. In what form?
A. In the usual form of resignations.
Q. You sent him a copy of your written paper?
A. My written paper; my resignation, you mean?
Q. Yes; don't you understand me? Did you send Judge Sawyer anything in the world but the telegram?
A. Yes.
Q. What else?
A. I sent him my resignation.
Q. You mean a written paper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you send him the original that was filed, or a copy?
A. I sent him the original; I only made one.
Q. You made one; then you did not file it?
A. I sent it down to be filed.
Q. You sent it to him to file, by mail?
A. I did not send it to San Francisco.
Q. Where did you send it?
A. I sent it to Carson.
Q. Now, I think I got an answer. Did you send anything to Judge Sawyer?
A. Yes.
Q. What?
A. I sent that resignation.
Q. That paper?
A. Yes.
Q. To Judge Sawyer, at San Francisco?
A. I did not say that I did send it to San Francisco.
Q. Well, he was there, was he not?
A. He was there that day, I think.
Q. Then that day did you send it? Did you send it to San Francisco the next day?
A. I did not send it to San Francisco.
Q. At all?
A. Not at all.
Q. Did you ever send the original paper anywhere?
A. Yes.
Q. Where did that go?
A. To Carson.
Q. How did you send that?
A. I sent it by mail.
Q. You mailed it in Virginia City direct to Carson, did you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you mail it in Virginia City?
A. I mailed it on the 6th.
Q. What time, or hour, on the 6th?
A. Along about eleven o'clock in the day.
Q. When did the next post leave Virginia City for Carson?
A. At about half past two in the afternoon.
Q. You say you telegraphed to Judge Hillyer?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you that telegram?
A. They were very much alike, except the change of the name.
Q. As near as you can remember, were they exactly the same?
A. Yes, sir; precisely the same, with such changes as there would necessarily be in telegraphing to a different person.
Q. Did you receive an answer from him?
A. I did not.
Q. He never answered you at all?
A. No.
Q. By letter or telegraph?
A. No.
Q. Has the circuit court ever been in session since that time?
A. Yes.
Q. When?
A. On the 6th of November.
Q. In session where?
A. In Carson City.
Q. Were you there?
A. I was not.
Q. When were you, next after the 6th of November, in the court?
A. I have not been there since.
Q. Personally, therefore, you do not know who transacted the business, as clerk, in the circuit court on the 7th day of November?
A. I do not.
Q. Did you yourself give any directions about the business of the court to be transacted on that next day?
A. I did not.
Q. Have you ever since?
A. I have not.
Q. Who is doing the business of the clerk?
A. There is a clerk there, Mr. McLean; I have forgotten his first name.
Q. Do you know whether he has been appointed by the circuit court?
A. Yes; I am certain he has.
Q. Well, you understand that he has?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When was he appointed?
A. That I do not know exactly.
Q. What month?
A. O, he was appointed in November.
Q. Do you know that?
A. Yes.
Q. You know that.
A. Well, I do not know it, because I never saw the appointment.
Q. And you have never seen any record of his appointment?
A. No, I never have.
Q. Was Mr. McLean your deputy?
A. No, he was not.
Q. Did your deputy make the entries and keep the minutes of the court until Mr. McLean took possession of the office?
A. I presume he did; I do not know. I never was there afterward.
Q. Did you make any communications to him?
A. I did not.
Q. Where is the paper that you call your written resignation?
A. It must be on file in Carson, in the clerk's office.
Q. That is to say, as far as you know?
A. So far as I know.
Q. Give the language, as near as you can, of that written paper which you call your resignation?
A. I think it was addressed to Judge Sawyer, and ran about in this style: "Having been nominated a presidential elector, I hereby tender my resignation as clerk of the circuit court, ninth circuit, and trust the resignation may be immediately accepted." I think that is about the purport of it.
Q. You inclosed that in an envelope, did you?
A. Yes.
Q. Directed to whom?
A. To Judge Sawyer.
Q. At Carson City?
A. At Carson City.
Q. It was sealed up, directed to Judge Sawyer, and put into the mail?
A. Yes.
Q. Judge Sawyer was then in San Francisco?
A. Yes; he was then in San Francisco.
Q. Do you know of your own knowledge that Judge Sawyer has ever been in Carson City since?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you there?
A. I was not.
Q. Do not you know what I mean by your own knowledge? Did you see him?
A. No, I did not see him.
Q. Very well; you do not know of your own knowledge that he has ever been there since?
A. Not by seeing him.
Q. That is your knowledge. You do not know, then, of your own knowledge that Judge Sawyer ever saw that package or letter?
A. I do not.
Q. You do not know of your own knowledge that it is not now in the post-office?
A. I do not.
Q. Have your accounts as clerk ever been settled?
A. Yes; I think so.
Q. You think so; do you know?
A. I did not attend to the business much; my deputy always did it.
Q. What deputy?
A. Mr. Edwards.
Q. Is he still there?
A. He is in Carson.
Q. Is he still in the office of the clerk?
A. I do not know.
Q. Do you know whether he has ever been out of it?
A. I do not know; I presume he was out of it after I resigned.
Q. Do you know that he was ever out of it? Were you there? Do you know whether he did not attend in court every day and transact business?
A. I do not of my own knowledge.
Q. Did not you as clerk receive money to be deposited to your credit in bank?
A. Frequently.
Q. In what bank?
A. I have forgotten where the deposits were made. We shifted them around quite often.
Q. In different banks?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Give us the names of some of them?
A. The Bank of California and Wells, Fargo & Co.
Q. What amount of money had you standing in your name or to your credit as clerk of the circuit court of the United States?
A. I think not a dollar.
Q. It had all been previously paid out?
A. Yes.
Q. Paid out for what purposes?
A. Paid out in the regular course of business.
Q. You think there were no moneys on deposit to your credit as clerk at that time?
A. I think not; I am not positive.
Q. Has your bond ever been discharged?
A. Not that I know of.
Q. I repeat now what I asked you before: have your accounts as clerk to your knowledge ever been settled?
A. We made our quarterly settlement.
Q. That is not an answer to my question.
A. You mean since that time.

Q. Have your accounts ever been finally settled?
A. Well, I do not know that there was any accounts to settle.
Q. You received fees?
A. I received fees.
Q. And you were paid through fees?
A. Paid through fees.
Q. Up to a certain amount, or all the fees?
A. Up to a certain amount.
Q. Very well, then, there must have been, of course, an account to be kept of the amount of fees received, and so far as they exceeded the limit you paid them over to the Treasury, didn't you?
A. I should have done so had they ever exceeded the amount.
Q. When were your periodical accounts regularly settled?
A. They were settled semi-annually.
Q. In what months?
A. In June and December, the 31st.
Q. Then you settled an account on the 31st of June, 1876?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you ever settled an account since?
A. I have not.
Q. Could you state, if you were asked, the items on different sides of the account?
A. O, no; I could not.
Q. Have you ever had any communication with Mr. Edwards since the 6th of November?
A. I have not; I have never been in Carson since but once; that was at the meeting of the college, and I did not see him.
Q. Did you have any communication with him on the 6th of November?
A. No, sir; I was in Virginia City.
Q. When first after the 6th of November did you visit Carson City?
A. Not until the meeting of the college.
Q. That was on the 6th of December?
A. I think so.
Q. In what business have you been engaged since?
A. Well, I am in the mining business principally, and always have been.
Q. Do you say that the circuit court has been in session since the 6th of November?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it not the district court?
A. The circuit court was in session also.
Q. Are you sure?
A. I am pretty positive.
Q. What are the times for the meeting of the circuit court in Nevada?
A. I don't remember just now; they made some changes, I think, in the last Congress.
Q. As the law stood on the 1st of November, what was the time for the meeting of the court; not the district, but the circuit court?
A. My opinion is that the circuit court was to meet on the 6th of November. That is my impression now and that is what I thought at the time.
Q. Your impression from what?
A. From the law. The first Monday, I think, in November.
Q. You can easily tell, can you not, by looking at the law?
A. Yes, I can tell.
Q. I wish you would tell us, then, before you leave the city.
A. I will do so.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. You did not file the paper that you call your resignation in the clerk's office on the 6th of November?
A. I transmitted it for filing, or rather to the judge.
Q. To Judge Sawyer, at Carson?
A. Yes.
Q. He was that day at San Francisco?
A. I understood that he was.
Q. Well, you got a telegram from him from there?
A. Yes.
Q. How long would it take Judge Sawyer to come by the quickest route from San Francisco to Carson?
A. Twenty hours, I believe.
Q. Coming by steamer?
A. No; by rail.
Q. You do not know when he did come?
A. I do not.
Q. Then if he had left San Francisco on the 6th, he would not get to Carson until what time?
A. He could have got there on the 7th.
Q. What time on the 7th?
A. It would have been along in the evening.
Q. When you communicated with the judges as you say, on the 6th, did you communicate to your deputy, Edwards, that you were no longer clerk of the court?
A. I did not.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. You did not exercise the duties of the clerk since the time of your telegram?
A. I have not.
Q. And they have been performed, as I understand, by a successor appointed by the court?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Your recollection is, that the district and the circuit court were then in session that day at Carson City?
A. I believe that was the day fixed for it.
Q. Where do I understand you to say Judge Sawyer was?
A. He was in Carson.
Q. Is there a railroad from Virginia City to Carson?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How far is it in time by rail?
A. Well, the railroad is a little long and pretty crooked, about twenty-four miles; they make it generally in about two hours and a half, sometimes at little less.
Q. The telegram was sent at what time to Judge Hillyer?
A. I think along about noon some time.
Q. You did put your resignation in the mail before the hour of sending the mail from Virginia City to Carson?
A. Yes, in order that it might reach there on that day, the 6th.
Q. Do you remember whether the envelope was addressed to your deputy, or a clerk, or to the judge himself?
A. It was addressed to the judge himself.
Q. And you sent a resignation to each judge, if I understand?
A. To each.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. Not a written paper to each?
A. Yes, I sent a resignation to each?
Q. The telegram, you said, you sent to each?
A. I sent the resignation also.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. Then you sent a resignation to each of the judges through the mail on the 6th?
A. Yes, and at the same time I telegraphed them that I had so sent it.
Q. And Judge Hillyer was then, as I understand, holding court at Carson City?
A. The circuit court, I think, was to meet.

By Mr. MAISH:

Q. He was the district judge?
A. Yes, sir; but I had understood that Judge Sawyer was in San Francisco. I had learned it from some source and therefore telegraphed to him there.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. In the absence of the circuit judge who holds the circuit court?
A. The district judge.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. Let me see if I understand you about this resignation directed to the district judge. Did you send exactly the same paper to the district judge that you had sent the circuit judge?
A. Not the same paper.
Q. Was it a copy of the same paper?
A. Pretty nearly.
Q. Can you give the contents of the paper?
A. A moment ago I gave it, and the other was pretty nearly a copy of it, with the exception of such changes as would necessarily be made.
Q. Did you put that in an envelope directed to somebody?
A. I did.
Q. How was it directed?
A. To Judge Hillyer.
Q. Give the direction altogether?
A. "Hon. E. W. Hillyer, U. S. District Judge, Carson City."
Q. Was the inside also directed in the same way to Judge Hillyer?
A. Yes.
Q. With the same designation of office and everything else as in the other?
A. Yes.
Q. You do not know whether he ever received that letter or not?
A. I think he told me he had received it.
Q. That is not evidence; do you know it in any way?
A. O, no.
Q. You think that he afterward told you he had received it?
A. Yes, in Virginia City.
Q. When do you think he told you?
A. Well, probably a week after, or possibly two weeks.
Q. You do not know that Judge Hillyer was in Carson City on the 6th or 7th of November, do you? Knowledge is what I ask for.
A. I was not there.
Q. Well, you do not know then in any way that they were received, either of them?
A. That seems to be the kind of information you want. I do not.
Q. And if he did receive that letter to him, you do not know when he received it?
A. Of course not; I don't know that he received it at all unless I take his word for it.
Q. And you have no information of his having received it within two weeks?
A. What kind of information?
Q. From him?
A. I tell you, I thought he told me so.
Q. Within two weeks he told you that he had received it; that was the information, was it not?
A. Yes, sir. He talked about sending the bankruptcy letters down—they were in Virginia City; that is the reason I happened to be there. He said he would send Mr. McLean up and remove the bankruptcy records. They had been in Virginia City for seven years and I had been attending to that branch of the business.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. In your possession?
A. In my possession.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. And remained in your possession until when?
A. They were locked up until Mr. McLean came up two or three days afterward.
Q. They remained in your possession until two or three weeks after?
A. No, not so long.
Q. For how long?
A. Well, some days.
Q. Some days after the 7th of November they remained in your possession?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then you gave them up?
A. Yes.
Q. Were those records locked up on the 6th of November?
A. Yes, they were always locked up.
Q. Did they remain locked—had they been touched?
A. Not that I know of.
Q. Who had charge of them?
A. I had.
Q. Nobody else under you?
A. Mr. Strother, the register in bankruptcy, had an office in the same place, and sometimes he had access to the documents.
Q. Was that bankruptcy business going on all the time from the 6th of November to the 6th of December?
A. It was not. There was no work done in the office or in any part of the office.
Q. Where was that bankruptcy business going on?
A. It was not going on at all.
Q. There was none?
A. There was none.
Q. But Mr. Strother remained there, did he not?
A. He was a register in bankruptcy in the same office.
Q. And he was there all the time?
A. Not all the time.
Q. Well, he was off and on?
A. Off and on.
Q. From the 6th until the present time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was he kept in office by Mr. McLean?
A. He is a register in bankruptcy, appointed by the judge.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. When did you mail your letter to Judge Hillyer?
A. I mailed it about the time I sent the dispatch, or pretty soon afterward.
Q. What time did you send the dispatch?
A. Somewhere about twelve o'clock, between eleven and one sometime.

Q. When did the mail leave Virginia City for Carson?
A. I think there are two mails; one in the morning and one at two-thirty p. m. or at one-thirty; I am not sure which—along in the afternoon.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. Is there any special provision of law in regard to the appointment of district or circuit clerk in Nevada?
A. No.
Q. Nothing but the general provision that the clerk shall be appointed for each district court by the judge thereof, and that the clerk shall be appointed for the circuit court by the circuit judge of the same?
A. Yes.
Q. Your appointment was made by the judge?
A. Yes.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you put on to the two letters that you sent to Carson City the proper postage-stamps?
A. Yes.
Q. What time would those letters reach Carson in the ordinary course of the mail?
A. They ought to have reached there along in the evening of the 6th, about five or six o'clock.
Q. Did the fees of the office or either of your offices ever exceed the limits fixed by law?
A. No. I lost $500 a year running the office for eight years.
Q. At the time you resigned was there any excess of fees above the limit prescribed by law?
A. O, no.
Q. You would owe the Government nothing, then?
A. O, no.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. What do you mean?
A. Well, there was nothing in the office. I had to pay the rent—the Government did not, that is what was the matter—and I kept it on to accommodate a deputy.

By Mr. MCLEAN:

Q. You have spoken of the time of mailing those letters; are you certain you mailed them in time for the evening mail on the 6th?
A. That was my purpose in putting them in; I presumed so at the time; I did not doubt it at the time; exactly at what time the cars went I am now unable to say, but I put them in the office on the supposition that I would get them there in time.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You signed your name to both resignations?
A. I did.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. How many hours does it take the mail to go from Virginia City to Carson?
A. About two hours and a half, sometimes a little less; it is twenty-four miles by rail.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the vote of R. M. Daggett be counted with the other votes of the electors of Nevada, notwithstanding the objections made thereto.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to this resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. HAMLIN. I move that the proper message be sent to the House of Representatives informing them that we are ready to meet that body.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the House of Representatives be notified that the Senate has determined the objection in relation to the elector from Nevada and is ready to meet the House and continue the count.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will execute the order of the Senate.

Mr. WHYTE, (at six o'clock and twelve minutes p. m.) The House of Representatives having taken a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock, as I presume there can be no further business to-day, I move that the Senate take a recess until that hour.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We do not know that fact.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I am advised that the House have not taken a recess.

Mr. DAVIS. What can we do here if the House has taken a recess?

Mr. HAMLIN. I understand they voted down the motion to take a recess by a majority of twenty.

Mr. WHYTE. I met several gentlemen who told me the House had taken a recess.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Evidence is pretty doubtful these days, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland moves that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Mr. SARGENT. I hope we shall first ascertain whether the House has taken a recess.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us vote down the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that the Secretary is on his way to the House and will soon be back.

Mr. WHYTE. Very well.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Action will be suspended.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not want it suspended. I want the motion either voted on or withdrawn.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland has withdrawn his motion.

Mr. STEVENSON. The Clerk informs me that the House have taken a recess, and I move that the Senate also take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I hope not. We want to hear from the Secretary of the Senate and find out what the fact is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky moves that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

The motion was not agreed to.

Mr. SARGENT. I am informed by the Secretary of the Senate that the House has taken a recess.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Wait and let us hear from the Chair, and let it go into the RECORD in the regular way.

Mr. SARGENT. It is not customary for the Secretary of the Senate to make an official announcement to the body.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not expect him to do it, but he will inform the Chair, who sent him, and the Chair will inform us, and it will then be entered in the Journal in the regular way.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed by the Secretary that the House had taken a recess before he reached the Hall of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SARGENT. Then I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at six o'clock and fifteen minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Wednesday, February 21, at ten o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, February 20, 1877.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides that a new legislative day has been reached, and the Chaplain will now offer prayer.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. I. L. TOWNSEND.

The SPEAKER. The Journal of yesterday will now be read.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I think that under our amended rule the intention was that the reading of the Journal should not be had, because it provides that nothing shall take place which might interfere with the meeting of the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. This is not a meeting of the two Houses.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The reading of the Journal would prevent that meeting.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot prevent that.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The amended rule says that the Journal shall not be read and that nothing shall be done which will interfere in any way with the meeting of the two Houses. We cannot therefore occupy time in the reading of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that nothing except a call of the House is in order before the reading of the Journal, and the House will be compelled to take up the business they have just left immediately after the reading of the Journal as unfinished business.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The Chair will see that the provision in the amended rule says that nothing shall transpire that shall delay the meeting of the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. That surely is not a correct construction of the rule, because it might be the want of a quorum or other matters might delay the meeting. The Chair thinks that the moment a new day is entered upon, the Journal of necessity has to be read and then the unfinished business will come up. This has been the uniform practice.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The amended rule says explicitly that nothing shall be done for the purpose of preventing the meeting of the two Houses or that will prevent the meeting of the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order; in fact he thinks that there is no point in it.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. With all due deference to the Chair I submit that there is a great deal of point in it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair regrets to differ with the gentleman from Iowa. The Journal will be read.

The Journal of yesterday was then read and approved.

COUNTING THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

The House resumed the unfinished business of yesterday.

Mr. ELLIS obtained the floor, and yielded five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. PIERCE.]

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, the bill to regulate the counting of the votes for President and Vice-President provides that when the decision of the commission is received upon the returns referred to it, the counting shall proceed in conformity therewith, unless, upon objection being made by a certain number of members, the two Houses shall concur in ordering otherwise, in which case the concurrent order shall govern. Objection having been made in due form to the report of the commission on the returns from Louisiana, we are brought face to face with the question whether the vote of that State shall be counted at all or whether it shall be counted for Hayes or Tilden.

I would gladly avoid the responsibility of passing upon this question if, consistently with the duty which devolves upon me as a member of this House, I could do so; but the responsibility is one which cannot be avoided. It is as great and as solemn as that which rested upon the members of the commission whose report is now before us. We are prevented by constitutional limitations from shifting the burden of our responsibility in this matter to other shoulders. It must be sustained by each one of us, and so sustained as to satisfy his conscience and his sense of duty to his country.

It is with great diffidence that I venture to dissent from the decision, or rather the recommendation, of the commission; but the rule which it has laid down for the determination of this question is one that I cannot conscientiously indorse. The commission declares that it is not competent to take any evidence to show that persons other than those certified to by the governor of the State, on and according to the determination of the returning officers for elections in a State, had been appointed or that the determination of the returning officers was not in accordance with the truth and the fact.

It could never have been intended by those who established this system of government that there should be no examination, no scrutiny of the returns of the electoral votes as certified by the State authorities. The most careful conservator of State rights would never have objected to an examination by Congress, or by any other national authority, so far as to ascertain whether the electors who sent their votes here to be counted had been chosen and were qualified in the manner provided by the constitution and laws of their State and of the United States.

In the case now under consideration, an offer of evidence was made to show the commission that the returning board of Louisiana was not legally constituted; that the action of the board in canvassing the votes for presidential electors was not in accordance with the laws of the State; that certain of the electors certified to have been chosen were disqualified, both under the provisions of the State constitution and the Federal Constitution. That gross frauds were committed in the canvass of votes is admitted, I believe, by both parties; and it is also admitted that the returning board acted in the discharge of their duties in an arbitrary and illegal manner. If these are not matters which the representatives of all the people, authorized by the Constitution to count the votes and declare the result, can inquire into, then this Government stands on a very insecure foundation. I cannot give my assent to any such declaration. It is contrary to good government; it is contrary to good morals; it tends to weaken the hold of the Government upon the respect and confidence of the people; and the party which gets office by its adoption will be a party founded on a principle dangerous to the perpetuity of the Government.

The evidence which has been presented here, and which the commission by a bare majority refuses to consider, shows a condition of things which justifies and, in my judgment, requires the exclusion of Louisiana from participating in the presidential election. It shows if possible a higher justification for such a course at this time than was shown in 1872, when the vote of the State was excluded by a republican Congress. I am aware, Mr. Speaker, that in the action I now take I stand almost alone among my political associates here, but I should be recreant to my convictions if I neglected to place on the imperishable records of the House my dissent from the rule which it is proposed to establish.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Speaker, I have been unavoidably absent during the progress of this debate this morning, and I am not aware of its drift, and therefore cannot be expected to respond to any arguments that may have been uttered by gentlemen on the other side. But this I do know, sir, that at the election held on November 7, 1876, as fair, as full, as peaceable, and as quiet as has ever characterized the elections of any State North or South, Louisiana, by the free voice of six thousand majority of her people, voted for Samuel J. Tilden for President of the United States. But I find to-day, by the voice of this commission, her electoral vote cast for Mr. Hayes. In arriving at that decision, in overthrowing the will of the people of Louisiana, that commission decided, in the first place, that it would not examine into the unconstitutionality of the law creating this returning board; in the second place, it refused to go into the question of fraud; and in the third place, having sworn to decide according to the Constitution of the United States, they, the chosen ministers, the high priests of that Constitution, sat and closed their ears against the expressed voice and will of that Constitution against any proof as to the ineligibility of two of those electors, well known, undisputed, and undoubted.

In the first place, Mr. Speaker, as regards the constitutionality of the election law, it violates grossly—and no lawyer has ever doubted it, and no lawyer will dispute it—articles 10, 73, 94, and 103 of the constitution of the State; and it is a principle of law familiar, known to every neophyte in the profession, that whatever is done in opposition to the declared will of the people through their constitution is an absolute nullity.

But again, sir, the commission refused to hear any proof of fraud. Fraud! it vitiates, it poisons everything; it unclasps the clutches of the most stringently drawn mortgage act from around the realty; it vitiates even the sanctity of the marriage tie. And yet this great Government which was able to summon three millions of men in its defense, which was able to shake the world by the very earthquake of its agony and struggle for self-preservation, nevertheless must fall helpless, puny, and paralyzed before the poison and fraud commended to it by four men whose hands are black with crime, whose souls are scorched with perjury, ay, blacker than Judas Iscariot's, and whom it were base flattery to call villains.

In the last place, as to the eligibility of these electors under the Constitution. These commissioners had sworn to decide according to the Constitution. As I said before, they sat there, its high priests, its chosen ministers, with the sword which is held by this House and by the Senate placed in their hand to guard that Constitution and to guard this Government against all illegal votes in this electoral college. Yet they sate there and refused to hear the most positive and convincing testimony of the ineligibility of two of the pretended electors from Louisiana.

Sir, the deed is done, the crime is accomplished. For four years from the 4th of March next the republican party will hold the shadow of executive power. I say the shadow, because the substance of usurped power is never and can never be realized. The immortal pencil of Gustave Doré has illustrated the legend of the Wandering Jew. You have all seen it. In all the dreary march of years he found no rest, no peace from his crime and its memories. Whether amid the busy haunts of men or in the dim aisles of the forest, whether upon the mountain-top or amid the roar and spray of the ocean storm, there was ever the memory of the crime, the specter of the pale suffering face of the Redeemer, and the accusing voice forever in the wanderer's ear. So it must be with the republican party forever. The spoils of office will not compensate it; the splendors of presidential receptions and levees will not banish its presence; the silence and gravity of cabinet meetings will not banish or hush its accusing voice.

And in four years more this great American people, this wronged and outraged people, will rise in their majesty and will hurl these "drunken guests" at this Thyestean feast from power everywhere, and brand with the indelible brand of infamy these man who have aided, countenanced, abetted, and defended this monstrous crime. [Applause.]

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker, with you, in common with the overwhelming majority of your party friends in both Houses, and against the wishes and views of most of my party friends in the Senate and this House, I supported the bill which created the electoral commission. And had Judge Davis not been elected to the United States Senate, and in that event had it so happened that my convictions were overruled by the tribunal, I would have acquiesced as the majority of your party friends now propose to do. And I feel that my first duty, brief as is the time allowed me, is to thank the gentlemen, late of the Confederate States, for the conservative tone they are reported to have adopted in your party caucus.

I rejoiced in the adoption of that bill because it averted possible tumult and war. But I now rejoice more fervently because its action is likely to withhold the Presidency, its honors, and the emoluments it dispenses, from becoming now and hereafter a reward to crime. The democratic canvass in republican parishes of Louisiana was one vast series of concerted crimes, and it was such under the directions of the State democratic committee, which recommended the organization of mounted clubs which should mark their power by riding through such parishes. Let me read from the confidential circular of the democratic-conservative State central committee some of its instructions:

> You cannot convince a negro's reason, but you can impress him by positive statements continually repeated.
>
> We recommend * * * that occasionally the ward clubs should form at their several places of meeting and proceed thence to the central rendezvous. Such meeting would tend to produce harmony, besides being an occasion for amusement and interesting ceremonies. Proceedings of this character would impress the negroes with a sense of your united strength.

These instructions were obeyed, and the amusements largely indulged in by the members involved larceny, robbery, arson, rape, and murder. And I reverently thank God that by the probable result under the electoral bill these amusements are not to be incorporated in our future political machinery.

I will mention to gentlemen familiar with the details of the campaign in Louisiana the names of a few of the sufferers there: Dr. Dinkgrave, Benjamin James, Cora Williams, Merriman Rhodes, James Jackson, Randall Driver, Henry Pinkston, Eliza Pinkston. [Laughter on democratic side, checked by the Speaker.] Ay, laugh; it is part of your game to sustain these crimes; I mean of those of you who laugh at and deride him who mentions the names of that murdered man, that mutilated woman, that poor babe. Other names that recall terrible crimes are Primus Johnson and Fred Byrum, and I could give a score of others who are dead or in a condition that they had better be dead, who were the victims of these "amusements and interesting ceremonies."

Neither age nor sex was spared by these clubs when in pursuit of the amusement suggested by the circular of the State committee. The white hairs of Randall Driver, venerable man that he was, did not protect him from the lash, and his slowly cicatrising back showed that it had been lacerated from hips to neck. The yet toothless babe of Eliza Pinkston, torn from her arms, was not too young for the knife of the democratic reformer. [Renewed laughter on democratic side, at once checked by the Speaker.] You may laugh, gentlemen, but the terrible story of the Pinkston family depends upon the testimony of no one witness; there are many collateral facts to sustain it; other witnesses who had fled before the club were concealed where they heard and saw what happened in that scene of horrible brutality and crime. Nor did their sex protect Eliza Pinkston and Cora Williams from the knife, the ax, the bullet, and the lash. They were women and had not the right to cast votes, but they had husbands who were registered republican voters and therefore they suffered. And, sir, if the question were between peaceful fraud and such deeds of violence, I freely admit that I prefer that peaceful fraud shall prevail.

But that sad alternative is not before us. Posterity will vindicate this action of the commission; and I appeal to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. SEELYE] to say at another time whether the decision of that commission is not sustained by the Constitution, is not sustained by the logic of the case, is not sustained by precedents of the most overwhelming and authoritative character, and whether being so sustained it can be fraudulent or even erroneous.

Mr. Speaker, though I may object to hearing the devil quote the Scriptures, I have great respect for the church; and I propose to call the attention of my friend from New York [Mr. COX] to a few words recently written by the democratic chief-justice of the court of appeals of the State of New York, Sandford E. Church, who, while recently qualifying utterances attributed to him, made this statement of his judicial opinion:

I have always expressed the opinion that the authentication of the election of presidential electors, according to the laws of each State, is final and conclusive, and that there exists no power to go behind them.

Mr. COX. According to the law.

Mr. KELLEY. Ay, "according to the law;" and it was a tribunal to decide according to the law that we created. With the Constitution, the law precedents, and the opinion of every well-instructed lawyer, not influenced by the partisan excitement of the hour approving their action, who need defend the reputation of the judges who as members of the bar have overruled the minority of their brethren? The lawyers of our country, of England, and of the British Colonies study our leading cases; and Justices Strong, Miller, and Bradley will find that before six months have passed they will hear the opinion of posterity in the undivided opinion of the bench and bar vindicating the judicial propriety of their judgment.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. PRATT. Mr. Speaker, the Constitution of the United States has again, as in the case of Florida, been vindicated by the decision of the electoral commission now before the House. Again, as in the case of Florida, is this triumph of the Constitution denounced as the victory of fraud and corruption. All the powers of argument and oratory are employed by gentlemen on the other side of the House in the attempt to make it appear that those who sustain this decision are supporting a gigantic fraud, are the champions of a monstrous corruption, and are reaching out their hands to grasp the fruits of successful villainy.

Unjust, unreasonable, and futile as this effort is, it is not altogether unnatural, and ought not, perhaps, to be unexpected. The history of political contests shows that it is a very common thing for a political party, stung by disappointment and maddened by defeat, to resort to the only revenge that is left it by crying fraud and charging corruption upon its successful rival. If the political majority of this House imagines that by this puerile and spiteful answer to the decision of the commission it can weaken the force of the decision or impair the strength and character of the republican party or make for itself a better title to public confidence and respect, then, sir, that party is destined to another disappointment, to another and a worse defeat. The country is not accustomed to listen when a party simply raves over its defeat. This burst of "righteous" indignation from the democratic side of the House will neither surprise nor deceive anybody. That party has for a long time been holding up its hands in "holy horror" at the pretended frauds and corruptions of the republicans, forgetful that the privilege of throwing stones belongs to the party that "is without sin." But, sir, the people have become too accustomed to the stale tableau to be moved or alarmed by it, and it will excite in their minds only the emotion of pitying scorn for the party that has the weakness to publicly exhibit its rage and temper over its defeat.

The democratic party opened the presidential campaign in this Hall more than a year ago by charging fraud and corruption upon the republicans. They have fought it out on that line ever since. They went to the country and were defeated. Then came fresh charges of fraud and new specifications of corruption. Upon these they are now defeated by the decision of the tribunal whose aid they joyfully invoked in the settlement of these questions. And now we have heard on this floor and in this debate the electoral law and commission denounced as one of the frauds and snares of the republican party, an insinuation for which there is not even the shadow of foundation, and made in the very wantonness of injustice, of unfairness, and of spleen.

What is the decision upon which gentlemen have poured out all the vials of their wrath and bitterness? In brief, sir, it is this: that it is not competent for the two Houses of Congress to receive evidence aliunde the certificates laid before them by the President of the Senate, for the purpose of impeaching the appointment of electors by a State, and, therefore, that the persons whose appointment as electors was regularly certified by the governor of Louisiana in accordance with the canvass of the votes are the constitutional electors for Louisiana and their votes must be counted.

This decision is the triumph of that provision of the Constitution which reserves to each State the sole right to appoint her electors in the manner directed by her Legislature; a right which constitutes one of the leading features of our constitutional system. A right which the National Government cannot invade without crossing the broadly marked limitations of its power, a right which the democratic party in this House sought to trample under foot and destroy by insisting upon the power and duty of Congress to set aside and nullify the action of Louisiana in the appointment of her electors. Who that is not blind with party fury does not see that a power to penetrate the action of the State of Louisiana, to revise and reverse the result arrived at by the State in the appointment of her electors, is a power to invade, to deny, to destroy the right of the State to appoint her own electors? By what authority will Louisiana he counted for Hayes and Wheeler? By the authority of the State of Louisiana. But suppose Congress should declare the appointment of the Hayes electors void, that the Tilden electors were entitled to cast the vote of the State, and that the State should be counted for Tilden and Hendricks; by what authority would the State be so counted? By the authority of the State? No, sir; she has sent no such a result here. It would not be her voice. If done at all, it could only be done through the usurped authority of Congress. Such a step could only be taken in shameless defiance of the rights of Louisiana and over the ruins of the Constitution we have sworn to support and maintain.

Gentlemen say it is necessary for Congress to exercise this power to prevent fraud. The answer is, we have not the power. We are required to accept the result the State sends here. She has the power to prevent fraud and it is her duty to preserve the purity of her elections. The alleged perpetration of an outrage upon the purity of the ballot-box in a State will not justify us in the perpetration of a greater outrage upon the Constitution of the United States.

Bad and loathsome as fraud is, much as it is to be deplored and condemned wherever it exists, yet I do not hesitate to say that the remedy urged upon us by the democratic party for the alleged frauds in the recent election is worse than the disease. By as much as cool, deliberate, premeditated murder is worse than a local irritation or temporary disease in the human system, by so much is this remedy of the democratic party—a remedy which is the destruction of the Constitution itself—worse than the malady for which it is proposed.

Mr. Speaker, it is well known that to change the result which the State of Louisiana has sent to us is to change the result of the presidential election and to insure the victory of the democratic party. In the presence of this great temptation a desperate effort is being made by that party to smother the voice of that State. We are asked to set aside the votes of Louisiana and to assume and exercise her functions for her. The vote which is about to be taken in this House upon that proposition will disclose to the House and to the country whether gentlemen have within them that virtue which will enable them in this great crisis of the nation's history to rise superior to the influence of party prejudice and feeling, to pursue the simple path of duty amid the bitterness of disappointment and the allurements of political power and of party supremacy, and to set a conspicuous example of that severe fidelity and unhesitating obedience to the law, the Constitution, and public duty, which is the hope, the safety, and the strength of the Republic.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. Mr. Speaker, when this House consented to the passage of a bill to provide for an electoral commission, it was understood in both Houses, by both sides, and generally throughout the country that the questions in dispute between the two great political parties would be judicially and impartially investigated and determined. This was the sole object of that measure; otherwise there would have been no necessity for either House to delegate its powers. Having failed to examine into and to decide those questions by refusing to consider the most important of them, the commission has nullified the object of its creation. Under the circumstances I doubt whether either House of Congress is bound legally or morally to abide its action; and yet while under no obligation I hope it will not refuse to submit.

It may be well asked, whether where a power delegated has not been executed, the duty of executing it as well as the authority to do so does not remain in the original possessor of it. If it were true that the people of the United States had a doubt as for whom or as for what candidates the people of Louisiana and Florida had cast their votes for President and Vice-President, certainly this doubt has not been removed by anything the electoral commission has done. They are as much in the dark on this question as before the commission was instituted. This House had no doubt of the fact when consenting to this tribunal, and so confident was it that the electoral vote of those States had been given for Tilden and Hendricks, it was willing to defer the inquiry and settlement of the question to an arbitration which in its character should be disinterested, impartial, judicial, and non-partisan.

It was to such a body that the House of Representatives supposed it was transmitting its authority. But, sir, we have been mistaken. This court has determined the matter against us without a hearing. The integrity of the elections as conducted and declared has not been inquired into. The prima facie case as certified has been accepted as valid without knowing whether the persons who signed and transmitted the certificates purporting to represent the votes of those States had been appointed electors according to the constitution and laws of those States, and the Constitution and laws of the United States. Without desiring to express a harsh judgment upon this omission of a clear duty, as a representative of the people I am compelled to charge that the commission has disregarded the law which gave it existence, and disappointed general public expectation. It has proved itself to be partisan in character and insufficient in judgment, and without those elevated attributes and that high moral sense which the world had the right to expect from men whose previous reputations justified their selection for this trust.

The judgment of history will record its condemnation of this strange conduct. Indeed I fear these men will not have to wait so long for that decree. It would be charitable to them to hope that posterity, and posterity alone, would deal with acts like these. The present generation, so deeply interested, will not and cannot omit its loud condemnation. A voice will go up from every extremity of this broad land in deprecation and denunciation of those who have thus ignored the rights and interests of the American people.

The patriotism of this House which induced it to forego the exercise of a constitutional right in submitting to an arbitration by which to secure justice, truth, and internal quiet, has been treacherously rewarded by an act of public infamy as criminal in character as it will be far-reaching and universal in its effects. I protest against it. As a Representative I denounce the treachery practiced upon me and my constituents.

Fraud vitiates all contracts, all compacts, all contracts, all compromises, and all agreements, written, moral, or legal. The votes of the so-called electors who sent certificates from the States of Florida and Louisiana, and which have been accepted, are fradulent and false, and hence are void. These men were not chosen electors for those States. Everbody knows this. It has been proven by testimony that has not been and cannot be disputed. The proof is accessible to every person, and was offered to this commission and was rejected; that body would not accept the proof to show this fact. It had the right and power to do so. Under the law as understood by those who framed it, it was constructed for this very purpose; and yet in disregard of the object of its creation, and its plain duty, it accepted the fraudulent certificates covered all over with corruption and forgery, thus becoming parties to an atrocious swindle. The men who have perpetrated this wrong by sanctioning it, sustaining it, and giving it their official indorsement have made themselves participants to the greatest political crime of modern times. Why have they done this? This House demands to know why; the American people demand to know why; and history will ask, with wonder and amazement, why?

Sir, I deeply deplore that within my life-time it has been ascertained that there is no power or authority in this country so high and so pure that the virus of partisan bias cannot infect it; that we have nowhere to flee from this moral pestilence which taints and destroys everything it touches. Though republican in form, ours is a Government of party in spirit and practice. Party is to be found everywhere—in our social organization, our system of education, in our literature, in our religion, in the jury-box, and on the bench. A lifetime of judicial office offers no security against its invasion. Its controlling and all-ruling influence overshadows everything everywhere, at all times, and under all circumstances. God help our country! God preserve our institutions! and God protect what is left of the blessed inheritance derived from the wisdom and virtues of our forefathers!

The SPEAKER. The time allowed for debate having expired, the question will now be taken on the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. HURLBUT.]

Mr. HURLBUT. I withdraw the amendment.

The question recurring on the motion submitted by Mr. GIBSON, it was read, as follows:

Ordered, That the votes purporting to be electoral votes for President and Vice-President which were given by William P. Kellogg, J. Henri Burch, Peter Joseph, Lionel A. Sheldon, Morris Marks, Aaron B. Levissee, Orlando H. Brewster, and Oscar Joffrion, claiming to be electors for the State of Louisiana, be not counted.

Mr. COX and Mr. HOLMAN called for the yeas and nays on agreeing to the motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 173, nays 99, not voting 18; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Abbott, Ainsworth, Anderson, Ashe, Atkins, Bagby, John H. Bagley, jr., Banning, Beebe, Bell, Blackburn, Bland, Bliss, Blount, Boone, Bradford, Bright, John Young Brown, Buckner, Samuel D. Burchard, Cabell, John H. Caldwell, William P. Caldwell, Campbell, Candler, Carr, Cate, Chapin, John B. Clarke of Kentucky, John B. Clark, jr., of Missouri, Clymer, Cochrane, Collins, Cook, Cowan, Cox, Culberson, Cutler, Davis, De Bolt, Dibrell, Durham, Eden, Egbert, Ellis, Faulkner, Felton, Field, Finley, Forney, Franklin, Fuller, Gause, Gibson, Glover, Goodin, Gunter, Andrew H. Hamilton, Robert Hamilton, Hancock, Hardenbergh, Henry R. Harris, John T. Harris, Harrison, Hartridge, Hartzell, Hatcher, Haymond, Henkle, Abram S. Hewitt, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Hill, Holman, Hooker, Hopkins, House, Humphreys, Hunton, Hurd, Jenks, Thomas L. Jones, Kehr, Knott, Lamar, Franklin Landers, George M. Landers, Lane, Le Moyne, Levy, Lewis, Luttrell, Lynde, Mackey, Maish, McFarland, McMahon, Meade, Metcalfe, Milliken, Mills, Money, Morgan, Morrison, Mutchler, Neal, New, O'Brien, Odell, Payne, Phelps, John F. Philips, Pierce, Piper, Poppleton, Powell, Rea, Reagan, John Reilly, James B. Reilly, Rice, Riddle, William M. Robbins, Roberts, Miles Ross, Savage, Sayler, Scales, Schleicher, Schumaker, Seelye, Singleton, Slemons, William E. Smith, Southard, Sparks, Springer, Stanton, Stenger, Stevenson, Stone, Swann, Tarbox, Teese, Terry, Thomas, Thompson, Throckmorton, Tucker, Turney, John L. Vance, Robert B. Vance, Waddell, Charles C. B. Walker, Gilbert C. Walker, Walling, Walsh, Ward, Warner, Warren, Watterson, Erastus Wells, Whitthorne, Wigginton, Wike, Alpheus S. Williams, James Williams, Jere N. Williams, Willis, Wilshire, Benjamin Wilson, Fernando Wood, Yeates, and Young—173.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, George A. Bagley, John H. Baker, William H. Baker, Ballou, Banks, Belford, Blair, Bradley, William R. Brown, Horatio C. Burchard, Cannon, Cason, Caswell, Conger, Crapo, Crounse, Danford, Darrall, Davy, Denison, Dobbins, Dunnell, Eames, Evans, Flye, Fort, Foster, Freeman, Frye, Garfield, Hale, Haralson, Benjamin W. Harris, Hathorn, Hays, Hendee, Henderson, Hoar, Hoge, Hoskins, Hubbell, Hunter, Hurlbut, Hyman, Joyce, Kasson, Kelley, Kimball, King Lapham, Lawrence, Leavenworth, Lynch, Magoon, McCrary, McDill, Miller, Monroe, Nash, Norton, Oliver, O'Neill, Packer, Page, William A. Phillips, Plaisted, Platt, Potter, Pratt, Robinson, Sobieski Ross, Rusk, Sampson, Sinnickson, Smalls, A. Herr Smith, Strait, Stowell, Thornburgh, Martin I. Townsend, Washington Townsend, Tufts, Van Vorhes, Wait, Waldron, Alexander S. Wallace, John W. Wallace, G. Wiley Wells, White, Whiting, Willard, Andrew Williams, Charles G. Williams, William B. Williams, James Wilson, Alan Wood, jr., Woodburn, and Woodworth—99.

NOT VOTING—Messrs. Bass, Burleigh, Buttz, Caulfield, Chittenden, Douglas, Durand, Goode, Frank Jones, Lord, MacDougall, Purman, Rainey, John Robbins, Sheakley, Stephens, Wheeler, and Whitehouse—18.

So the motion of Mr. GIBSON was agreed to.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. CABELL. My colleague, Mr. DOUGLAS, is absent by leave of the House. If he were here he would vote "ay." My colleague, Mr. GOODE, is detained from the House by indisposition. If he were here he would vote "ay."

Mr. J. H. BAGLEY. My colleague, Mr. LORD, is absent on account of a death in his family. If present he would vote "ay."

Mr. BURLEIGH. On this question I am paired with the gentleman from New Hampshire, Mr. JONES, who, if present, would vote "ay," while I should vote "no."

Mr. RAINEY. On this question I am paired with the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. DOUGLAS. If he were present he would vote "ay" and I should vote "no."

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

Mr. GIBSON offered the following; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Ordered, That the Clerk inform the Senate of the action of this House, and that the House is now ready to meet the Senate in this Hall.

COUNTING THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

At one o'clock and thirty-five minutes p. m. the Doorkeeper announced the Senate of the United States.

The Senate entered the Hall, preceded by its Sergeant-at-Arms and headed by its President pro tempore and its Secretary, the members and officers of the House rising to receive them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate took his seat as Presiding Officer of the joint meeting of the two Houses, the Speaker of the House occupying a chair upon his left.

Senators INGALLS and ALLISON, the tellers appointed on the part of the Senate, and Mr. COOK and Mr. STONE, the tellers appointed on the part of the House, took their seats at the Clerk's desk, at which the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House also occupied seats.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint meeting of Congress for counting the electoral vote resumes its session. The two Houses acting separately have considered and decided upon the objections to the decision of the commission upon the certificates from the State of of Louisiana. The Secretary of the Senate will read the resolution of the Senate.

The Secretary of the Senate [Mr. GORHAM] read as follows:

Resolved, That the decision of the commission upon the electoral vote of the State of Louisiana stand as the judgment of the Senate, the objections made thereto to the contrary notwithstanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk of the House will now read the resolution of the House of Representatives.

The Clerk of the House [Mr. ADAMS] read as follows:

Ordered, That the votes purporting to be electoral votes for President and Vice-President which were given by William P. Kellogg, J. Henri Burch, Peter Joseph, Lionel A. Sheldon, Morris Marks, Aaron B. Levissee, Orlando H. Brewster, and Oscar Joffrion, claiming to be electors for the State of Louisiana, be not counted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The two Houses not concurring in a contrary opinion, the decision of the commission stands, and the counting will now proceed in conformity therewith. The tellers will announce the vote of the State of Louisiana.

Senator ALLISON, (one of the tellers.) The State of Louisiana casts 8 votes for Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, for President, and 8 votes for William A. Wheeler, of New York, for Vice-President.

The certificates of Maine, Maryland, and Massachusetts were opened by the Presiding Officer and read; and the electoral votes of those States, no objection being made, were then counted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hands to the tellers the certificate of the electoral vote of the State of Michigan, received by messenger, and the corresponding one received by mail.

Senator ALLISON (one of the tellers) read the certificate in extenso.

Mr. TUCKER. I offer objections, signed by Senators and Representatives according to law, to the electoral vote of Daniel S. Crossman, of the State of Michigan, and also send up a duplicate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection presented by the Representative from Virginia will be read by the Clerk of the House.

Mr. ADAMS, Clerk of the House of Representatives, read as follows:

The undersigned, Senators and Representatives, object to the vote of Daniel L. Crossman as an elector for the State of Michigan upon the grounds following, to wit:

That a certain Benton Hanchett, of Saginaw, Michigan, was voted for and certified to have been elected and appointed an elector for the State of Michigan. That the said Benton Hanchett was on the 7th day of November, 1876, the day of the presidential election and for a long period prior thereto had been, and, up to and after the 6th day of December, 1876, the day on which the electors voted, according to law, continued to be an officer of the United States, and held the office of United States commissioner under and by appointment of the United States court for Michigan, which was an office of trust and profit under the United States, and that as such officer he could not be constitutionally appointed an elector under the Constitution of the United States.

And further, that by the laws of the State of Michigan there is power to fill vacancies in the office of electors under and by virtue of the following statute, and not otherwise:

"The electors of President and Vice-President shall convene at the capital of the State on the first Wednesday of December; and if there shall be any vacancy in the office of an elector occasioned by death, refusal to act, neglect to attend by the hour of twelve o'clock at noon of that day, or on account of any two of such electors having received an equal and the same number of votes, the electors present shall proceed to fill such vacancy by ballot and plurality of votes, and when all the electors shall appear or vacancies shall be filled as above provided, they shall proceed to perform the duties of such electors as required by the Constitution and laws of the United States."—Compiled Laws of 1871; compiler's section, 115.

And the undersigned further state that there was no vacancy in the office of elector for which said Hanchett was voted and to which he was not appointed by reason of the disqualification aforesaid; nor was any vacancy therein occasioned by the death, refusal to act, or neglect to attend of any elector at the hour of twelve o'clock at noon of the 6th day of December, 1876, nor on account of any two electors having an equal vote, nor in any manner provided for by the statute aforesaid. And the undersigned therefore object that the election of Daniel L. Crossman by the electors present at Lansing, the capital of Michigan, on the 6th day of December, 1876, was wholly without authority of law, and was void, and he was not appointed an elector in such manner as the Legislature of Michigan directed.

Wherefore they say that said Daniel L. Crossman was not a duly appointed elector for the State of Michigan, and that his vote as an elector should not be counted.

And the undersigned hereto annex the evidence taken before the committee of the House of Representatives on the powers, privileges, and duties of the House to sustain said objection.

T. M. NORWOOD, Georgia;
WILLIAM A. WALLACE, Pennsylvania;
W. H. BARNUM, Connecticut;
FRANK HEREFORD, West Virginia;
Senators.

A. S. WILLIAMS, Michigan;
J. R. TUCKER, Virginia;
JOHN L. VANCE, Ohio;
J. A. McMAHON,
A. V. RICE,
WILLIAM A. J. SPARKS,
JOHN S. SAVAGE,
LEVI MAISH,
FRANK H. HURD,
Representatives.

COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES, January 30, 1877.

BENTON HANCHETT sworn and examined.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Question. Where is your residence?
Answer. Saginaw, Michigan.
Q. Were you a candidate for the position of presidential elector in Michigan at the late election?
A. I was.
Q. On what ticket?
A. On the republican ticket.
Q. Were you elected?
A. I was.
Q. Did you vote in the college of electors?
A. I did not.
Q. Were you present?
A. No, sir; I was not present.
Q. Did you absent yourself?
A. I remained away; I did not attend.
Q. For what reason did you remain away?
A. The facts are these: In the spring of 1863, when I was living at Owassee, in the county of Shiawassee, Michigan, some statements were made to me in reference to a man living in an adjoining town, who, I think, sold liquor and paid no taxes under the revenue law. The parties desired me to write to the district attorney, living in Detroit, in reference to the matter. I did so. I received a reply from the district attorney saying that he would have me appointed a commissioner by the United States court, and he inclosed to me instructions what to do in the case. About the same time that I received that I received a letter from the clerk of the court saying that I had been appointed, and, I believe, inclosing the form of oath for me to take as commissioner, and, I believe, I took it and returned it to him. I have no recollection on the subject, but I suppose I did of course. I forwarded instructions to the district attorney in reference to the matter and issued a warrant for the man. He came in and paid it, the matter dropped, and there my services as commissioner ended, to the best of my recollection. It was not an office which I wanted to hold, but I performed that duty. In the fall of 1865 I went from that county to where I now reside, in Saginaw. The matter had entirely passed out of my mind. I have never acted since. Two or three days before the time appointed for the meeting of the electors, my attention was called to the subject in two ways. One was that some person spoke to me and said, "You are a United States commissioner;" and the other was that I had noticed that an objection had been made to one of the electors in New Jersey on that ground. This called my mind to the circumstances which I have related to you, and in order to avoid any doubt that might arise on the subject, I determined not to meet with the electors and did not.
Q. You were, then, duly appointed United States commissioner in 1863, and acted under the appointment by issuing a warrant against a party. Have you ever resigned it?
A. No, sir, I never made any resignation. I declined to act, and that was all there was to it.
Q. How did you decline to act?
A. Some persons applied to me to do further duties as commissioner, and I stated that I would not act.
Q. And you never resigned your position?
A. I never resigned my position formally.
Q. Then you failed to perform the duties of the office after the particular case mentioned?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But you never resigned the position?
A. I never resigned the position.
Q. Do you know who was appointed in your place in the college of electors?
A. I know by hearsay.
Q. Who was he?
A. Mr. Daniel L. Crossman, of Williamstown.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you resign the office of elector?
A. No, sir.
Q. You just failed to attend?
A. I just failed to attend.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further objections to the certificate from the State of Michigan?

There was no further objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An objection having been submitted by the member from Virginia, the Senate will now withdraw to its Chamber that the two Chambers may separately consider and decide upon the objection.

The Senate accordingly withdrew to its Chamber at two o'clock and twenty-five minutes p. m.

The SPEAKER called the House to order.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I move that the House take a recess till ten o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. HALE. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine rises to a point of order. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HALE. I make the point of order for the purpose of getting the ruling of the Chair upon it at this stage, it being the first case that has arisen of an objection where there is but one set of certificates. My point is that the House should proceed at once and consider the objection, and at the end of two hours' debate pass upon it by a vote.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will be kind enough to point to the part of the law on which he relies.

Mr. HALE. The Chair asked that question before and I give the answer that I gave heretofore—when the point of order was overruled at another stage—that it is found, if at all, in section 4 of the act. I do not need to go over what I have already said upon that point; that I make the point of order upon the general spirit and intent and scope of the act which is intended to prevent delay, which is intended to insure speedy action. And I make the appeal now all the more because of the little time intervening between this time and the 4th of March next, there being but ten legislative days remaining; and if a recess shall be allowed or taken upon each objection in the case of States where there is but one set of returns the whole machinery and operation of the electoral bill is paralyzed and destroyed.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say in reply to the gentleman from Maine that he has nothing to do with the general scope, intent, or purpose of the bill except in so far as he is compelled to rule by the language of the act. The Chair, therefore, having previously ruled upon a similar point, rules now that the motion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SOUTHARD] to take a recess is in order at this stage; and that he believes, as far as he individually can understand it, is the true intent and purpose and scope of the act.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I call for the regular order.

Mr. SAYLER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SAYLER. I understand that by the action of the House this evening was set apart for the consideration of reports from the Committee on Invalid Pensions. I rise to inquire whether, under the present circumstances, it is competent for the House to take a recess until half past seven o'clock for the exclusive purpose of considering reports from that committee?

The SPEAKER. The Chair intended at the instance of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. BAGBY,] and now of course at the instance of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SAYLER,] to suggest that the recess should be until seven and one-half o'clock this evening, so that the pension bills might be considered as it was previously determined that they should be considered by the House. This requires unanimous consent.

Mr. McCRARY. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry upon that point, and it is whether it is competent for the House to proceed to other business until something has been referred to the commission? That portion of the bill upon which my question is based is to be found at the end of the fifth section of the bill; it provides that—

While any question is being considered by said commission either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

I apprehend that the Chair will not hesitate to hold that unless something has been referred to the commission neither House can proceed with its other business.

Mr. HALE. That is an additional argument, if the Chair will allow me, that if we go on now and finish up the matter in the two hours some question may be referred to the commission, and then the House can proceed with the business which has been assigned for this evening's session.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I would like to call the attention of the Chair to a ministerial duty imposed upon him under this clause of the first section under which we are operating:

When all objections so made to any vote or paper from a State shall have been received and read, the Senate shall thereupon withdraw, and such objections shall be submitted to the Senate for its decision; and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall, in like manner, submit such objections to the House of Representatives for its decision, &c.

The SPEAKER. If the motion to take a recess is voted down, the Chair would, of course, in compliance with the act, immediately submit to the House the objection which has been raised in joint meeting.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Yes; but can the Chair allow any business or motion to intervene between the discharge of that minsterial duty and the presentation of the objection?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman raises in another form the same question which the gentleman from Maine raised. The Chair thinks there can be.

Mr. HALE. Let us have a vote.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. In the midst of this confusion it was impossible to hear what the ruling of the Chair was.

I wish to inquire whether the Chair rules that we may proceed with legislative business when the commission is not in session?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will cause to be read the concurrent resolution of the two Houses on this subject.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That during the sessions of the commission appointed under the act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877, each calendar day when legislative business shall have been transacted shall, by each House when in session, be considered a day for legislative purposes, and the Journals of the two Houses shall be so kept and dated.

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules that legislative business cannot intervene at this stage of the electoral count except by unanimous consent.

Mr. HOLMAN. One other inquiry; if this motion to take a recess were voted down would it be in order at once, and only in order, to proceed with the consideration of the objection filed upon which the joint meeting separated?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that by unanimous consent the House can take a recess until to-night at 7.30 o'clock to execute the former order of the House. But the Chair rules that, should the House take a recess, when the House shall again assemble, then the objection made to the counting of the vote of the State of Michigan will immediately come up.

Mr. HOLMAN. The language of the original act, the last clause of the fifth section, is as follows:

And while any question is being considered by said commission, either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

The implication from that would seem to me to be that when the commission is not in session legislative business cannot be transacted.

The SPEAKER. If that construction were correct the majority of the House could interpose legislative business at any time, which would, it seems to the Chair, be an absolute denial of the execution of the law.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. It is unquestionably the fact that the spirit of this law is that when objections are interposed, as at this stage, each House shall proceed to consider those objections, and I do not think it was designed that there should be any interposition of legislation.

Now if the gentlemen who have made these objections, who have filed them and presented them to the joint meeting, are ready to proceed and to state to the House in detail the grounds on which they object, I think we had better wait and determine that question now. I therefore hope that the House will not take a recess so early in the day as this, but that we will remain in session and settle this objection within the two hours allotted to us under the law.

Mr. SOUTHARD. There are many gentlemen in this House who desire to participate in this important discussion. Many of them first learned of this objection when it was read at the desk to-day. [Cries of "Regular order!"] I insist upon my motion for a recess.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for a division upon that motion. I hope no recess will be taken.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state that he has no volition in this matter; he must entertain motions when made by members if in order. In compliance with that requirement he recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SOUTHARD] who moves that the House now take a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

Mr. TUCKER. I desire to say in reference to this matter that the motion for a recess does not come from me; that I am prepared to present before the House now my objections and to maintain them. The principles of the electoral bill I think are very clear that where objections are made (and that is the question that now arises) it is competent for either House to take a recess. But I do not desire the recess on my own account, nor did I offer the objection in joint meeting with a view to any dilatory proceeding in this matter. I disclaim any purpose by dilatory action to prevent the execution of this law. [Cries of "Good!" "Good!"] I am prepared to maintain the objections which I with other gentlemen have presented to the House and to the Senate in the joint meeting of the two Houses, and I am prepared to go on now. But if there are other gentlemen in this House who desire time to consider the objection, that is a question for them to consider. I only mean to say that I have nothing to do with the motion for a recess.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker——

Cries of "Regular order!" "Regular order!"

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to hear the gentleman from Michigan, if he speaks to a point of order.

Mr. CONGER. "The gentleman from Michigan" can always wait the will of the House, he has been accustomed to that so long. I believe that those who maintain that the vote of the State of Michigan was correctly and legally given are prepared to go on and meet the objection to it at this time.

Mr. SOUTHARD. As I made this motion, I trust I will be indulged to make a single remark further. We are all aware of the great importance of the questions which are now before us; they relate to the succession to the presidential office. The House is composed of a large number of gentlemen; they ought to have time to consider these questions fully, to discuss them fully before the House, in order that the country may know their records, that the record may be made complete and perfect. I for one desire such time; and whether I discuss the question or not I desire this time for consideration. I for one am in no haste to declare through the processes of fraud a man entitled to the presidential chair several days before the Constitution would require the office to be filled——

Cries of "Regular order!" on the republican side.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen on the left are making the disorder.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I submit——

The SPEAKER. The Chair is glad the gentleman submits.

The question was then taken upon the motion for a recess; and upon a division there were—ayes 86, noes 163.

Before the result of this vote was announced,

Mr. O'BRIEN, Mr. SOUTHARD, and others called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was then taken; and there were—yeas 57, nays 192, not voting 41; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Ashe, Banning, Blackburn, Boone, Cabell, John H. Caldwell, William P. Caldwell, Cate, John B. Clarke of Kentucky, Cochrane, Cook, Cowan, Davis, Dibrell, Ellis, Forney, Fuller, Andrew H. Hamilton, Hartridge, Hooker, Humphreys, Hurd, Thomas L. Jones, Knott, Franklin Landers, Lane, Levy, Lynde, McMahon, Meade, Milliken, Money, Morrison, Mutchler, O'Brien, Odell, John F. Philips, Poppleton, Rice, Miles Ross, Sayler, Sheakley, Slemons, William E. Smith, Southard, Sparks Terry, Thomas, Thompson, Throckmorton, Turney, John L. Vance, Walling, Walsh, Whitthorne, Wigginton, and Benjamin Wilson—57.

NAYS—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Ainsworth, Anderson, Bagby, George A. Bagley, John H. Bagley, jr., John H. Baker, William H. Baker, Ballou, Banks, Beebe, Belford, Bell, Blair, Bland, Bliss, Blount, Bradford, Bradley, Bright, John Young Brown, William R. Brown, Buckner, Horatio C. Burchard, Samuel D. Burchard, Burleigh, Buttz, Campbell, Candler, Cannon, Carr, Cason, Caswell, Chapin, Chittenden, John B. Clark, jr., of Missouri, Clymer, Collins, Conger, Crapo, Crounse, Culberson, Cutler, Danford, Davy, De Bolt, Denison, Dobbins, Dunnell, Durham, Eames, Evans, Faulkner, Felton, Finley, Flye, Fort, Foster, Franklin, Freeman, Frye, Garfield, Gause, Glover, Hale, Robert Hamilton, Hancock, Haralson, Hardenbergh, Benjamin W. Harris, Henry R. Harris, John T. Harris, Harrison, Hartzell, Hatcher, Hathorn, Haymond, Hendee, Henderson, Abram S. Hewitt, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Hill, Hoar, Hoge, Holman, Hopkins, Hoskins, House, Hubbell, Hunter, Hyman, Jenks, Kasson, Kehr, Kelley, Kimball, King, Lamar, George M. Landers, Lapham, Lawrence, Leavenworth, Le Moyne, Lewis, Lynch, Mackey, Magoon, McCrary, McDill, McFarland, Metcalfe, Mills, Monroe, Morgan, Nash, Neal, New, Norton, Oliver, O'Neill, Packer, Page, Payne, William A. Phillips, Pierce, Piper, Plaisted, Platt, Potter, Powell, Pratt, Rainey, Rea, John Reilly, James Reilly, Riddle, William M. Robbins, Robinson, Sobieski Ross, Rusk, Sampson, Savage, Scales, Schleicher, Seelye, Singleton, Sinnickson, Smalls, A. Herr Smith, Springer, Stenger, Stevenson, Stone, Stowell, Strait, Swann, Tarbox, Teese, Thornburgh, Martin I. Townsend, Washington Townsend, Tucker, Tufts, Van Vorhes, Robert B. Vance, Waddell, Wait, Alexander S. Wallace, John W. Wallace, Ward, Warner, Warren, Watterson, Erastus Wells, G. Wiley Wells, White, Whiting, Wike, Willard, Alpheus S. Williams, Charles G. Williams, James Williams, Jere N. Williams, William B. Williams, Willis, Wilshire, James Wilson, Alan Wood, jr., Fernando Wood, Woodburn, and Yeates—192.

NOT VOTING—Messrs. Atkins, Bass, Caulfield, Cox, Darrall, Douglas, Durand, Eden, Egbert, Field, Gibson, Goode, Goodin, Gunter, Hays, Henkle, Hunton, Hurlbut, Frank Jones, Joyce, Lord, Luttrell, Maish, MacDougall, Miller, Phelps, Purman, Reagan, John Robbins, Roberts, Schumaker, Stanton, Stephens, Waldron, Charles C. B. Walker, Gilbert C. Walker, Wheeler, Whitehouse, Andrew Williams, Woodworth, and Young—41.

So the motion for a recess was not agreed to.

ELECTORAL VOTE OF MICHIGAN.

Mr. TUCKER submitted a resolution; which was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That Daniel L. Crossman was not appointed an elector by the State of Michigan as its Legislature directed, and that the vote of said Daniel L. Crossman as an elector of said State be not counted.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, the Constitution of the United States provides in the first section of article 2 that—

The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors and the day on which they shall give their votes.

Congress has determined the day on which electors shall be chosen, and has further provided by the act of 1792 that—

Each State may by law provide for the filling of any vacancies which may occur in its college of electors, when such college meets to give its electoral vote.

That is to say the act of 1792 provided for filling vacancies occurring in the college when it meets—vacancies by death, resignation, absence, or refusal to act. Then in the act of 1845 it was provided that—

Whenever any State has held an election for the purpose of choosing electors and has failed to make a choice on the day prescribed by law, the electors may be appointed on a subsequent day in such manner as the Legislature of such State may direct.

Thus the constitutional provision has been carried into execution by two acts of Congress, one providing for the filling of a vacancy occurring when the electoral college meets, and the other providing for a vacancy occurring, as Mr. Evarts argued the other day before the commission, by the office being vacant; that is, not being filled, whether by reason of nobody being appointed, or by a vacation of the office after having been filled.

It will be seen that the point now arising is not the case of a vacancy occurring at the time the college met, for it made no difference whether Mr. Hanchett was there or not. He had no right to be there; that is the point. He was disqualified for election. The State could not appoint him, for he was a United States officer. The consequence was that the act of the State was futile, in that it did not appoint anybody; and the question of filling the vacancy occasioned by the non-appointment of anybody comes under the act of Congress of 1845, which provides that—

Whenever any State has held an election for the purpose of choosing electors and has failed to make a choice on the day prescribed by law, the electors may be appointed on a subsequent day in such manner as the Legislature of such State may direct.

Now the Legislature of Michigan, in the law which will be found in the first volume of the compiled laws of that State, section 84, page 126, has provided as follows:

The electors of President and Vice-President shall convene at the capitol; and if there should be any vacancy in the office of elector, by death, refusal to act, neglect to attend by the hour of twelve o'clock noon on that day—

Up to that point we have cases where the vacancy arises from the non-assumption of the office by a man entitled—or on account of any two of such electors having received an equal and the same number of votes.

That is a case when neither is elected; there is a failure to appoint. That is provided for in this law. But that is not Hanchett's case. It will be seen that the Legislature of Michigan provided for filling a vacancy occurring at the meeting of electors by death, resignation, or refusal to act on the part of a man who had been actually appointed, and it has provided for the failure to appoint only in the case where there is an equal vote for two electors. It has made no provision for the failure to appoint a genuine constitutional elector because of the disqualification of the man voted for to hold the office.

Giving to the State the fullest power to regulate this matter of who shall be her electors, I submit that the State of Michigan has made no provision in such a case as that of Hanchett for the appointment of an elector by the college of electors when they meet. In the case of the attempted appointment of a disqualified person by the people to be an elector, there is no provision of law in the State of Michigan for filling such a vacuum as occurred there. I use the term "vacuum" as contradistinguished from "vacancy." A vacancy occurs where a man is once in office or entitled to be in, and has vacated; a vacuum is where the office has never been filled. Now there is no provision in the law of Michigan for a vacuum in the office except in the case where there are two persons who have an equal vote; and that case did not occur here. Hanchett had the certificate of the governor; and we cannot go behind that. He had the certificate of the governor that he was appointed. He "smelt a rat," knew he was disqualified, and failed to attend. The college of electors appointed a man in his place, without any authority under the law of Michigan to do so. Now, is Crossman, who was thus chosen, an elector? Shall he be allowed to vote for President and Vice-President?

Whatever may be said at the other end of the Capitol, whatever may be said amidships before the commission, let us of this House say that no man shall have a voice in the election of a President when the Constitution says that he shall be silent. How dare we to permit a man to speak who the Constitution has said shall not speak? How is it that we are to be silent when a man comes up here with such a title as this—that we are to be silent with the oath to support the Constitution resting upon our consciences, because the State chooses to appoint a man an elector who has no right to be one?

Mr. Speaker, I have stated the case very briefly and comprehensively. I believe I have stated the whole of it. The statute of Michigan is incorporated as part of the objection. The evidence in the case is clear and conclusive that Hanchett was appointed United States commissioner a long time ago. He has never resigned; he admits that he has never resigned. He is a United States commissioner so far as we know to this day. He held a Federal office, and was disqualified as an elector.

Gentlemen say, "O, that is a technical matter." A technical matter! A United States commissioner is competent under the law of the United States to be appointed a supervisor of elections; he may therefore under the law of the United States, in exercising such supervision, summon a force to control the very election in which he is a candidate. Federal interference in the appointment of electors by the States was a matter intended to be very carefully guarded against in the Constitution. It has been. Shall we now throw down the barriers that the Constitution has erected and allow any man who has been appointed to an office under Federal influence to cast his vote for the Federal Executive? Why, sir, the man who is President at the other end of the Avenue might be a candidate; he might appoint officers all over the land who would be candidates for the position of elector, and thus he might elect himself through his own subordinates. It is vitally important that Federal interference through the Federal Executive and his appointments should not enter as a virus into the presidential election. Therefore I submit that this is a case in which we are bound to vote that this man has no right to cast an electoral vote.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe from what the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has said he himself places any particular reliance upon these objections. I think he endeavors by zeal and warm language and earnest manner to make it appear there is some force in the objection, and would almost make some one not acquainted with him believe he had some confidence in his objection. Sir, it is not the first time great statesmen as well as great lawyers have jumped at a conclusion without knowing the law. My friend reads the Constitution of the United States as to an appointment by the Legislatures of the States and under their direction of electors, and he jumps to the conclusion, red-handed, violently, that the vote of the voters on the day of the election is the constitutional appointment by the Legislature. This assumption is an absurdity——

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman must not attribute to me that absurdity. He may utter it himself, but he must not attribute it to me.

Mr. CONGER. He jumps to the conclusion that the appointment provided for in the Constitution of the United States is determined under the legislation of the State of Michigan by voters on the day of election.

A MEMBER. That is the law.

Mr. CONGER. That is the fatal error of the gentleman and his very learned colleagues in this House, not only in this but in some other cases.

Mr. SPRINGER. Does not the statutes of the United States require that the electors of President and Vice-President shall be appointed on the first Monday in November in every fourth year succeeding every election of a President and Vice-President?

Mr. CONGER. Let the gentleman possess his soul in patience and I will enlighten him in a moment. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. That will be a difficult thing to do, with such a law as that before us.

Mr. CONGER. There are four processes which the Legislature of Michigan have directed in the appointment of electors. One is the vote of the voters on the day of election. That is the principal primary step. Another is the meeting of the board of canvassers, receiving the returns and declaring who has received most votes, and certifying their determination.

Mr. WARREN. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. CONGER. Allow me my ten minutes in quiet.

Mr. WARREN. I only want to understand whether the gentleman considers that a part of the election process?

Mr. CONGER. I may be thrown off my track by this obstruction from the gentleman from Massachusetts. Now let me proceed. Section 74 provides that for the purpose of canvassing and ascertaining the votes given for President and Vice-President of the United States the board of State canvassers shall meet on a given day for the purpose of ascertaining and determining and recording the votes and results of the election of the electors.

Section 75 provides, and it is the third step, that the secretary of state shall without delay cause a copy of the certified determination of the board of state canvassers declaring the persons elected as such electors—not appointed, but elected as such electors—to be transmitted and delivered by special message or otherwise to each of the persons so declared to be elected, which copy shall be certified under his hand and seal of office.

Then comes the fourth step. The first is the action of the voters; the second the meeting of the board of State canvassers, and their determination; the third the copy of the certified determination of the board of canvassers as to who was elected, and the fourth, the last and final act provided for by our Legislature, is to declare who are, according to the constitutional provisions of the United States, appointed. All the rest is preliminary to the certificate of the determination of the election, and then the electors are to meet, and the process will be found in the law which has been quoted:

The electors for President and Vice-President shall convene at the capitol of the State on the first Wednesday in December, and if there shall be any vacancy in the office of elector, occasioned by death, refusal to act, neglect to attend by the hour of twelve at noon of that day, * * * then the electors shall proceed to fill such vacancy by ballot and plurality of votes, and when all the electors shall have been—

We come now to the time when, under the law of Michigan, the appointment provided for in the Constitution of the United States is complete—when all the electors shall appear and vacancies shall have been filled as above provided, they shall proceed to perform the duty of such electors as required by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Now, all these processes the learned gentleman forgot to refer to, but he says the election itself is a final and perfect appointment under the Constitution, or perhaps the determination of the canvass is an appointment, or perhaps the certificate of the secretary of state is an appointment. These, together with the action of the electors when they have met in the electoral college, are all necessary to qualify those persons who have been elected to perform the duties of such electors as required by the Constitution, and that makes the appointment complete.

The State of Michigan was entitled to eleven electors. The office of eleven electors was to be filled by the law. If not filled by election under the return of the canvassers, or by the certified determination of the secretary of state, the law goes on to provide how the offices shall be filled and the appointment under the constitution completed. Will the gentleman pretend that there were not eleven electoral offices? Will the gentleman pretend that when the electors were assembled there should not have been eleven persons to fill those electoral offices? But one person staid away. He failed to attend, as the returns sent to the President of the Senate show; he failed to attend the electoral college up to the hour of twelve o'clock noon on the day when the electors were to meet.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BUCKNER obtained the floor.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentlemen on the other side please, I do not know that any other gentleman on our side wishes to speak on this subject, and I suggest that they allow me to finish what I have to say.

Mr. TUCKER. I have no objection myself. I only want to say this——

Mr. CONGER. I will not, then, ask the indulgence of the House further.

Mr. TUCKER. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I only want to give my reason. I understand the rule under the act to be that no member can by leave of the House occupy more than ten minutes. That was my apprehension, and therefore I confined myself to the ten minutes.

Mr. CONGER. I have said all I care to say. The law is plain enough.

Mr. BUCKNER. If the gentleman desires, I will yield him a portion of my time.

Mr. PAGE. I object to any yielding.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. CLYMER.) It can only be done by unanimous consent if at all, of which the Chair is in doubt.

Mr. BUCKNER. The proposition of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] who has just taken his seat, that the appointment of an elector is made by the governor, is a proposition that I undertake to say never was heard of, never was advanced, never was known or decided, and in fact never was dreamed of until now. And not only so; it is against all the reason, all the propriety of the provision of the Constitution so to hold.

Now, sir, it is a very remarkable fact that this enlightened commission evaded this question when there was no proof of the ineligibility of the elector Humphreys, and when they are called upon to face the facts in Louisiana then it is that they suddenly find out that the appointment of electors is not made by the people, but by the governor and canvassing officers.

Let me say, Mr. Speaker, to the credit of the profession elsewhere and the honor of the judiciary of Rhode Island, where three of the judges were republicans and two were democrats, that they put their seal of condemnation unanimously upon this dogma and this doctrine of this high commission by which they expect to elect Rutherford B. Hayes. That was at a time when there was no motive on the part of these judges to pervert the law to unholy and nefarious purposes. The gentleman says that all this canvassing of returns made the appointment and not the election upon the day of the election by the people. Now, sir, this question came up, as we all know who have read the recent history of this country, before the supreme court of Rhode Island, composed of five judges; the very question that is here involved; and on that question, in opposition to what the gentleman from Michigan now asserts with so much positiveness as being the law, every judge held that the appointment is the election by the people. And not only that, but they say that an ineligible appointment by the people cannot be filled, and the Legislature was called in that State to fill that appointment.

Mr. FOSTER. How was it in Missouri?

Mr. BUCKNER. No such case arose in Missouri. I want to read that opinion for the enlightenment of the gentleman from Michigan; and I am sorry that the very distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARFIELD] who sit upon this commission are not here. I hope they will read it and inwardly digest it at some future time.

We think—

I read from the opinion in that case—

We think a centennial commissioner who was a candidate for the office of elector and received a plurality of the votes does not, by declining the office, create such a vacancy as is provided for in General Statutes, chapter 11, section 7. Section 7 is as follows—

Let me say that this section is as broad as the Michigan statute—

"If any electors chosen as aforesaid shall, after their said election, decline the said office or be prevented by any cause from serving therein, the other electors, when met in Bristol in pursuance of this chapter, shall fill such vacancies, and shall file a certificate in the secretary's office of the person or persons by them appointed."

Now, in another part of this opinion, it had been decided that the office of United States centennial commissioner was an office of profit and trust under the General Government. The opinion proceeds:

Before any person can decline under this section he must first be elected, and no person can be elected who is ineligible, or, in other words, incapable of being elected. "Resignation," said Lord Cockburn, C. J., in The Queen vs. Blizard, Law Rep. 2 Q. B., 55, "implies that the person resigning has been elected into the office he resigns. A man cannot resign that which he is not entitled to and which he has no right to occupy."

We think the disqualification is not removed by the resignation of the office of trust unless the office is resigned before the election. The language of the Constitution is that no person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector. Under our law (Gen. Stats., chapter 11, sections 1 and 2) the election by the people constitutes the appointment.

And, sir, under your law, too; and you never heard anything else until it was necessary to make an adverse opinion in order to fraudulently elect Rutherford B. Hayes.

The duty of the governor is to "examine and count the votes and give notice to the elector." He merely ascertains—he does not complete—the appointment. A resignation therefore after the election is too late to be effectual.

We think the disqualification does not result in the election of the candidate next in vote, but in a failure to elect.

Now, further, the American Law Register, from which I am quoting this opinion and which is edited by some of the most distinguished lawyers of the United States, among them Judge Cooley, says in reference to this very question:

The presidential electors being elected by the people derive their title to the office from the vote given on the day of the election. If not qualified to be chosen then they cannot afterward qualify. The certificates they receive of their election confer no title to the office, nor authority to exercise its prerogatives.

They may compel the issuance of the certificates by an appeal to the courts, but it will hardly be said that the courts can confer upon them the title to the office; neither can the governor or other officer who issues the certificate, since the law has not conferred upon him the power of appointment. Not being capable of being chosen at the time the choice was to be made, the candidate could by no after-act give validity to the choice. The Constitution does not say that no person holding an office under the United States shall vote, as an elector, for President and Vice-President, but that no such person shall "be appointed an elector." If at the time of the appointment the candidate is holding an office under the United States, the appointment is in violation of this provision of the Constitution, and is void. The language is not that he shall not hold, but that he shall not "be appointed," and operates upon the very first step in the process of holding. He can hold only by appointment, and the Constitution says he shall not be appointed. The ruling in the principal case upon this point seems to be clear both on principle and on authority.

And yet in the face of this opinion of a Rhode Island supreme court, composed of three republicans and two democrats, delivered under circumstances when there was no inducement to swerve them from the path of honesty, of truth, and of law, and corroborated and confirmed by every respectable authority in Europe and America, we witness the melancholy and alarming spectacle of three judges of our highest judicial tribunal, selected by a large majority of both Houses of Congress because of their supposed honesty, learning, impartiality, and freedom from partisan bias, refusing to hear evidence to prove that two of the Louisiana electors were ineligible under the Constitution, and thus in effect deciding that the State can nullify a plain and positive requirement of the Constitution. A more infamous judgment was never made in the history of American jurisprudence.

Well, gentlemen, I do not wonder that you upon the other side of the House hang your heads in shame when you see such attempts made by judges of the Supreme Court to wrest the law from its true purpose and to nullify the Constitution of the United States in order to serve a partisan end.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CHITTENDEN. Mr. Speaker, the question before the House seems to me to be absolutely free of all difficulty. The law of Michigan provides that the electors shall fill the vacancies of such "as refuse to act." The law of Michigan does not provide that under the Constitution of the United States electors can or shall undertake to determine the eligibility of those who refuse to act. I ask the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER,] who is one of the ablest lawyers in this House, to recognize the fact that the law of Michigan provides that the electors shall fill the vacancies of such as refuse to act, for whatever else there is in the law, there is no qualification of the language quoted which is broad enough to cover the whole ground. There is no question of the eligibility of the elector who refuses to act that can possibly under the Constitution of the United States be brought into the case. I beg pardon of the two hundred lawyers of this House for having ventured to say a word upon this subject; but I appeal to the common intelligence whether the question is worth discussing for one moment. If we have not got through with the commission, if we want to vent our wrath or our compliments upon the commission, let us like straightforward men have the commission before us. But in regard to the rightful authority of the electors of Michigan to fill a vacancy in the case under consideration there can be no question.

Mr. BRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say a word upon this subject. It is all embraced in a nutshell. I think that there is no confusion in relation to the legal proposition, if gentlemen will give their attention to well-settled and well-defined legal principles. There are three things which are necessary to constitute a valid election: first, a plurality of votes by legal voters; second, an eligible person to be elected; third, the observance of the forms of law in relation to the election. If there has been a failure in either one of these legal propositions there must be a failure in the election. There may be legal voters, they may cast their votes for an ineligible person, but by so doing they fail to transmit a trust to a person that is capable of taking and capable of exercising the trust. When the vote is once legally given and the trust legally deposited in one capable of executing it, then the law provides that the trust shall not die with the trustee, that the trustee shall not defeat the will of the people, but that the trust shall be transmitted by law into the hands of some other person to be executed.

Then, Mr. Speaker, to come directly to the point. If in this case of Mr. Hanchett, he was ineligible and incapable of holding the trust, why there was no trust created by voting for him, and of course no trust which could be transmitted to any other person by any other appointment that could be made and known to the law.

Now if there be any legal gentleman either here or elsewhere who can answer this proposition I would like to hear him. He surely can produce, in that case, some legal book that will sustain the adverse proposition that a person incapable of receiving a trust has power to transmit that which the law does not intrust him with. If that be so it is conclusive of this question. Mr. Hanchett never was vested with the trust of the people, and being ineligible, incapable of casting the vote, why the appointing power remained unexercised in the people; it was not transmitted by law to the governor; it was not transmitted by law to the electoral college. They had no power of appointment; they were only the depositaries of the trust which had been vitalized and derived from the people in the appointment which they had made, and not otherwise. I repeat, if that be so, it is conclusive of the question.

Then the question comes up, Mr. Speaker, can we reach the matter here? Why not? The return of the certificate does not reach the eligibility of the elector; it is the Constitution of the United States that reaches that. It is the Constitution which lays the ax to the root of the tree; it is the Constitution which deposits the trust with us to see that it be faithfully executed, and if so we can go behind and there is no bulwark in State laws that can prohibit the exercise of that power.

The law which we have passed, permit me to remark, is plain in its intendment in relation to evidence. What is it? The first proposition is directory and mandatory to the President of the Senate. The second proposition is directory, and as I maintain, mandatory upon the electoral commission. And although the term "may" is used in connection with petitions, depositions, and other papers, that term is a legal term and denotes privilege, power, duty. It is a legal and not an arbitrary discretion that is to be exercised. As a legal discretion the term "may" is just as mandatory as the term "shall." An appellate court will reverse just as quickly for an erroneous exercise of a legal discretion as it will reverse for the violation of law in any other particular.

Now, whenever this commission refused to go behind the certificates they violated a provision of the law under which they were acting and nullified it as much as if it had been repealed. According to a well-established principle, whenever any part of a law which is incorporated in an act and is necessary to its existence and without which the will of the Legislature would not have sanctioned any part of the law, it renders the whole law void. (Cooley's Const. Lim., 177.) That being so, the previous findings of the commission were without warrant of law and in violation of the law under which they pretended to be acting. The law intended to open all the doors and invited them to explore all the fields of evidence and find the truth for themselves, instead of stopping at the presumption of truth from the certificates of a returning board whose moral putrescence filled the land with its stench and scandalized the very name of republican liberty.

But I intended simply to call the attention of the House to this important fact in the case at present under consideration, that the people by their votes create the electoral trust, but that they did not and could not in this instance, because it is asserted the party was ineligible and incapable of taking and transmitting the trust. It was, therefore, a failure to communicate the trust, and the case was simply a non-election, without any curative power in the certificate of the governor or the legal members of the electoral college to create an elector whose predecessor did not derive a legal authority from the people. This an ineligible elector could not do. As he could take nothing, he could give nothing; and the vote should not be counted.

Mr. FOSTER. The remarks that I propose now to submit I expected to make during the pendency of the discussion on the Louisiana question.

Mr. Speaker, the gravity of the present condition of the country as it relates to the selection of a President is such as to create in the minds of the thoughtful and patriotic the deepest solicitude.

By the patriotic action of Congress the joint high commission was created, which is to determine questions of law and of fact in relation to the count of the electoral vote of the States when more than one certificate of election had been sent up to be counted.

This commission has now decided that the eight votes of the State of Louisiana shall be counted for Hayes and Wheeler. That decision is before this House for consideration.

The friends of Tilden and Hendricks honestly believe this decision to be contrary to the law and the facts. They express themselves as believing that a great wrong has been done them.

The friends of Hayes and Wheeler are equally honest in their belief that the decision of the commission is right and just.

It was clear from the beginning that one side must be victorious, and the other side defeated.

For one, I looked upon the passage of the act creating this commission as the grandest act of American history.

I intended to stand by it, whether Hayes won or lost. If Governor Tilden had been successful, I should have heartily and honestly acquiesced in the finding, and his administration would have had my support in all things when it was consistent for me to support it. It is equally the duty of Mr. Tilden's friends, especially those who supported the measure creating the commission, now to carry out its findings in good faith. To this course all good men will agree they are bound by the sacred tie of personal honor.

Mr. ATKINS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. FOSTER. Certainly.

Mr. ATKINS. Does the gentleman maintain that the question is now closed and that Hayes is elected?

Mr. FOSTER. I was arguing in favor of carrying out the finding of the commission in relation to Louisiana.

Mr. ATKINS. The question is not yet fully settled; Oregon is to be heard from.

Mr. FOSTER. This is not a time for mere party exultation. The exultation of the patriot over our escape from the dangers that threatened the peace, prosperity, and happiness of the people of this great country is fitting and proper. In the triumph of peace over disorder and possible civil war, both the successful and defeated parties can unite in exultation. While I do not rejoice simply in a party sense, I do rejoice that one of the purest and most patriotic of our fellow-citizens is to guide the affairs of the people for four years to come.

Representing as I do the district in which Governor Hayes resides, and being a life-long acquaintance of his, I but speak the opinion of all persons who know him when I say that his administration will be wise, patriotic, and just. Notwithstanding whatever else may be said to the contrary here or elsewhere, the people of all sections of the country may confidently expect from him not only fair but generous consideration.

His letter of acceptance is the expression of a man of the broadest and loftiest patriotism. I feel certain I shall be sustained by his acts when I say that his highest ambition will be to administer the Government so patriotically and wisely as to wipe away any and all necessity or excuse for the formation of parties on a sectional basis and all traces of party color lines; that thereafter and forever we shall hear no more of a solid South or a united North. The flag shall float over States, not provinces; over freemen, and not subjects.

When Governor Hayes appealed to the people of the South in his letter of acceptance he addressed them as "my countrymen," and why not his countrymen? And is not the South an integral part of the nation? Are not Southern States the equal of those in the North, East, or West?

It has been said sneeringly and for the purpose of stirring the wild passions of the human heart to bad actions, "that the South under Governor Hayes must submit to an unconstitutional surrender to the republican party." No, sir; no such demand will be made. All that will be expected is the patriotic co-operation of southern patriots in the great work of restoration through the Union, the Constitution, and the enforcement of the laws.

In this great work the representative men of the South have already distinguished themselves for patriotism and statesmanship during the pendency of the present crisis in our history.

Mr. WARREN. I desire to say a single word upon this question. I begin by the admission that I think in equity and in fairness the State of Michigan ought to have her whole vote counted, the vote of all her electors, for Mr. Hayes. But we are here under an oath which requires us to support the Constitution of the United States. Much as I desire that the vote of this elector, Crossman, should be received, I cannot see how it can be consistently with the Constitution and laws. It is not denied, but it is fully admitted, that Mr. Hanchett was a commissioner of the United States and was ineligible as an elector.

Mr. CONGER. That admission has never been made; it is denied entirely.

Mr. WARREN. I have not heard anybody say that that man was not appointed a commissioner.

Mr. CONGER. It is denied in the record, and denied by all.

Mr. WARREN. I do not know but the gentleman from Michigan now denies it, but I did not hear him deny it when he was upon the floor and objected to my asking him a question.

Mr. CONGER. If the gentleman will allow me——

Mr. WARREN. I cannot yield further. I understand the proof is clear and complete from the man's own testimony that he was a United States commissioner. If so, he was ineligible by the express declaration of the Constitution. If that be so, then the office of elector in his case never was filled by the votes of the people at the time and in the manner provided by the Legislature of the State pursuant to the Constitution. The State therefore chose one less elector than it was entitled to.

The question is, how may that defect be remedied? There was no difficulty in pursuing the course marked out by the supreme court of Rhode Island in a substantially similar case. The Legislature acting upon the subject, having been called together for the purpose, could have provided for filling the vacancy; I call it a vacancy for convenience. In Vermont exactly the same course was pursued.

In the State of Michigan there is no provision in the statute for filling out the whole number of electors where there is a failure to elect one or more of them because of the ineligibility of the persons voted for. The only way, therefore, was for the Legislature to do it by special law, and it failed to do it. The electoral college of that State, without the slightest authority of law, has treated this case as coming within one of the contingencies provided by the statutes of Michigan, and, as I understand, put one Mr. Crossman in the place of the ineligible Mr.

Hanchett. That they had no right or authority to do; and the consequence is that Mr. Crossman is not a legal elector, and we, acting under our oaths, have no right to count his vote, for I hold it to be unquestionable, the decision of the electoral commission to the contrary notwithstanding, that the determination of the qualifications of an elector, the determination of the question whether a person borne on the roll of the electoral college is a minor or an alien or a United States officer-holder, must rest with the Houses of Congress that count the vote. There being, therefore, no doubt that we are bound to go into the question—the House having gone into the question—the result being clearly proved, we cannot vote otherwise than to exclude this man's vote; and much as I regret to do it, much as I dislike to have any question of the result of this election determined upon technicalities or even upon so high a matter as a constitutional disqualification which the people of the State have accidentally failed to observe, still I have no alternative but to give my vote in that way unless the discussion shall disclose some defect in the proof of the fact of Mr. Hanchett's ineligibility. I should be only too glad to discover such defect of proof and give the State the benefit of the doubt.

Mr. LAWRENCE. Mr. Speaker, we are dealing now with a naked question of law, and it ought to be determined by this House, not with a view to any particular emergency, but with a view to subserving the public interests and adopting a rule of sound policy.

It is assumed that there was an elector in the State of Michigan, receiving a majority of the votes of the people, who was ineligible, and that by reason of his ineligibility his election was a nullity, and that because there was no election there was no vacancy, there having been no incumbent; and that the Legislature has failed to provide for such a case as this.

Mr. Speaker, the Constitution of the United States devolves upon the Legislature of each State the duty of appointing electors. An act of Congress has determined the time when the election shall be held in the States; and inasmuch as vacancies may afterward occur by resignation, by death, by failure to act, by a tie vote upon the choice of electors, the act of Congress provides that the Legislature of each State may provide for vacancies occurring after the day of the election. The Legislature of Michigan then had power to provide for filling vacancies; and the question which we have to consider is simply this: Upon a fair reading of the statutes has the Legislature of Michigan provided for filling such a vacancy as this, or rather is this a vacancy for which the Legislature has provided?

The statute of Michigan provides for an election of electors of President and Vice-President by popular vote. Section 74 of the general law of that State provides a canvassing board whose duty it is to count the votes as sent up from the several counties and to declare the result. Section 75 provides that—

> The secretary of state shall, without delay, cause a copy of the certified determination of the board of State canvassers, declaring the persons elected as such electors, to be transmitted and delivered by special message or otherwise, to each of the persons so declared to be elected, which copies shall be certified under his hand and seal of office.

It is important to be borne in mind in this case that the canvass was made and this elector alleged to be ineligible was declared to be elected. Following the provision I have already read, section 84 of the General Statutes of the State of Michigan declares:

> The electors of President and Vice-President shall convene at the capital of the State on the first Wednesday of December; and if there shall be any vacancy in the office of an elector, occasioned by death, refusal to act, neglect to attend by the hour of twelve o'clock at noon on that day, or on account of any two of such electors having received an equal and the same number of votes, the electors present shall proceed to fill such vacancy by ballot and plurality of votes.

The language of the statute is, "If there shall be any vacancy in the office of an elector occasioned by death, refusal to act, neglect to attend." This refers to the electors who have been declared elected by the canvass authorized by the statute, no matter whether they are eligible or ineligible. This statute was intended to cover every case of vacancy that could arise, without regard to the cause of the vacancy or the manner in which it had arisen.

Mr. HUBBELL. The gentleman will allow me to ask whether there is any evidence before this House to prove that the elector Hanchett was ineligible?

Mr. LAWRENCE. I will come to that. Of course there is no such proof, because this House is incapable of taking the proof; and more than that the board of canvassers in the State of Michigan was not clothed with the judicial power to take proof upon that question; and because they were not, the statute says they shall declare elected that person who shall have received a majority of the votes cast for electors.

Mr. HUBBELL. Does the gentleman think that the fact of an elector testifying that sixteen years ago he acted as an officer is any evidence that he is now an officer?

Mr. LAWRENCE. Why, Mr. Speaker, the House is not authorized to inquire into the qualifications of electors. It is not competent for us as a returning board (for that is all we are) to make the inquiry at all. Of course, then, there is no legal proof before us.

Mr. SAVAGE. Does the gentleman mean to say that the provision of the Constitution which declares that certain officers shall be ineligible to act as presidential electors is a dead letter?

Mr. LAWRENCE. I mean to say that it is a directory provision, and that, if a person shall be elected notwithstanding the constitutional provision, he is a good officer and his acts are valid. I mean to say what every court in this country has said and what no one has ever controverted. I here defy any gentleman upon this floor to produce a single respectable case in this country which controverts the position that, if an ineligible person takes an office and acts, his acts are valid. And I now here defy any gentleman upon this floor to produce a single respectable case in this country which controverts the position, and that an ineligible officer, if he takes office and acts, that his acts are invalid. There is but one court that has ever held the inquiry can be made by the governor or canvassing officer, and there is a uniform current of authority against that so overwhelming it sinks into utter insignificance and is utterly valueless.

Mr. SAVAGE. Will the gentleman show one respectable authority which says that a disqualified person under the Constitution could hold an office an exercise its functions?

Mr. LAWRENCE. I will; several of them. The gentleman needs enlightenment, and I am glad to enlighten him. Yes, sir; I say that it has been decided in Missouri, in Pennsylvania, in California. Does the gentleman want any more cases?

Mr. SAVAGE. Will the gentleman state one case?

Mr. LAWRENCE. I have them here.

Mr. SAVAGE. Well state them.

Mr. LAWRENCE. I will.

Mr. SAVAGE. Read and tell us what has been decided.

Mr. LAWRENCE. In the case of St. Louis County vs. Sparks, 10 Mo., 121—and I commend this to the attention of my friend from Missouri, (Mr. BUCKNER,) who seems to have overlooked the law of his own State as determined by the courts—the court says:

> A statute prescribing qualifications to an office is merely directory, and, although an appointee does not possess the requisite qualifications, his appointment is not therefore void unless it is so expressly enacted.

In Commonwealth vs. Cluley, 56 Pa. State Reports, 270, it is shown Cluley received a majority of votes as a candidate for sheriff against McLaughlin, the minority candidate. McLaughlin instituted quo warranto proceeding to oust Cluley on the ground that he was ineligible. His honor Judge Strong, now upon this commission, one of the ablest and best men in this country, said in deciding that case:

> The votes cast at an election for a person who is disqualified from holding an office are not nullities; they cannot be rejected by the inspectors, nor thrown out by the return judges; the disqualified person is a person still, and every vote thrown for him is formal.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. SAVAGE. Every authority the gentleman has quoted is for me and against him.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. Mr. Speaker, will the American people accept that iniquitous decision rendered by the electoral commission, founded, as it is claimed to be, upon the technical ground of a want of power to inquire into the existence of frauds conceded by the record, which are the most infamous, glaring, and offensive ever perpetrated upon a free people?

The returning board of Louisiana is under the law of that State a close corporation, authorized to perpetuate itself in power by filling any vacancies that may occur among its members. The four members of that board who officiated in counting the vote at the late presidential election are men who have been shown in repeated investigations to be of the most depraved, despicable, and abandoned characters and have received the merited condemnation of both Houses of Congress and of the entire country. Their proceedings in canvassing the returns at the late election are shown by incontrovertible evidence to have been conducted without any regard to truth or justice or law; and the result which they reached, sustained as it has been by a partisan majority of the electoral commission, will select the President of the United States; it is conceded by every fair man to be a willful falsification of the actual vote of the State and a wicked and deliberate lie.

The counsel before the commission representing the democratic party, in a formal offer of evidence, proposed to prove this and more than this. They proposed to prove that certain of the papers upon which the board professed to act were forgeries, conceived and designed by the board itself, and perpetrated by men they had employed for that purpose. They also proposed to prove that the affidavits upon which the board professed to act were deliberate perjuries, committed by men engaged by that board and their co-conspirators to commit them. They also proposed to prove the board transcended even the broad limit of the Louisiana statute by which it was created, and acted without any jurisdiction whatever. They also proposed to prove that the members of this board went into the open political market, and offered to make up the returns in the interest of either party that would pay for them.

All this evidence the commission refused to hear, alleging that it was without power to examine into any of the questions to which it related, admitting that, although true, it would not affect their conclusions and thus proclaiming to the world that the great Republic of the United States was compelled to hug the fraud of these villains to its bosom, and accept as its Chief Magistrate a man whose claim to the presidential position was founded upon this festering iniquity. Such a conclusion will be a disgrace to the country, the consciousness of which in the hearts of the people will make the administration connected with it hateful to every honest man, and present us to the civilized world as a disgraced and dishonored Government.

Our country can stand against the world in arms, and neither foreign attack nor reckless internecine strife can give us any just cause of alarm for the permanency of our institutions; but when the vile outcasts of society in an unfortunate State of the Union are upheld in their possession of political power, and their frauds in a presidential election are accepted by the Federal Government as justly controlling the election, we have abandoned all adhesion to those great moral principles the observance of which can alone preserve the form or substance of American freedom.

The decision of this commission is a libel upon the Government and a deliberate falsification of its laws and of its powers; and the high and distinguished men who made it will find that it has power enough to drag them and their characters down to the level of the miserable wretches whose action they approve and commend. In the better days of the Republic Judge Story said, in a solemn opinion in the Supreme Court of the United States:

Fraud will vitiate any, even the most solemn, transaction; and an asserted title to property founded upon it is utterly void."

But that was in a day when returning boards were unknown, when military despotisms had not suspended legitimate State authority, and political passions had not soiled the pure ermine of our judges. The law now is the same that he pronounced it to be. Title acquired to any kind of property by fraud, whether to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, or title acquired by fraud to the office of justice or judge, constable or governor, are simply void, and none of them could stand for a moment in a court of justice; but title acquired, says this commission, to the office of President of the United States by fraud, no matter how plainly that fraud may be proved, no matter how infamous may be the character of the men by whom it is perpetrated, and no matter how enormous that fraud may be, is a perfectly valid title to be observed and respected by all men, and the fraud is to be sanctified and embalmed in the political history of the country.

Sir, as an American citizen I spurn such a doctrine and trample this base and infamous decision under my feet. I voted against giving it the approval of this House, for if I voted otherwise I could not look my honest constituency in the face.

Had this commission heard the facts, as they were ordered to do, according to my understanding of the bill under which they were organized, had they taken the evidence offered to them and then decided upon that evidence, I should have felt constrained to give my acquiescence to whatever conclusion they might have reached; but the fact that they have refused to hear any evidence whatever, together with their systematic partisan votes upon every proposition, has satisfied me that their conclusions had been reached before they were qualified as members of the commission.

The leaders of the radical party may, through such means, enjoy a temporary triumph. They will probably inaugurate their candidate, but his seat will not be an easy one, for the receiver of stolen goods is as bad as the thief, and an honest people will visit the men who have thus outraged law, right, justice, and honor, by such measure of retributive justice as was never yet experienced by any political party on the face of the earth.

The Supreme Court of the United States has ever been regarded in this country and Europe as a conspicuously wise, dignified, and impartial tribunal. It has been looked up to as almost sacred. When the country learned that the electoral commission was to be in part composed of judges taken from that court, joy and satisfaction filled the hearts of the people and the conspirators shrank with fear, believing that justice and right were about to triumph. The belief was universal that those judges would give the great questions to be submitted to them as members of the commission an elevated, conscientious consideration; that if fraud existed it would be exposed and condemned; that a conclusion would be reached which every man would be compelled to acknowledge honest and equitable. But to the surprise and disgrace of the country that belief, that sanguine expectation has proved a delusion, and the fact is apparent that the decisions of the commission have been partisan and mercenary.

It is the merest mockery to assert that the electoral vote of Louisiana was rightfully cast for Hayes and Wheeler. Every intelligent man who is at all conversant with the history of the late election in that State knows full well that their claim to that vote is unfounded and fraudulent. As well might it be said that the vote of Massachusetts had been cast for Tilden or that the vote of Maryland had been cast for Hayes. The result of the election in Louisiana was a clear, decided democratic majority. The vote was the largest by 16,000 ever polled in the State. A greater per cent. of the population voted on the 7th day of November last in Louisiana than in any other State in the Union. This is to some extent to be accounted for by the illegal votes cast through the fraudulent manipulations of republican supervisors; but the chief reason why the great body of the people voted is obvious and unmistakable. They were impelled by a sense of wrong, of injustice, and of an oppression which had taxed their forbearance to the utmost extremity. A drunken judge by his midnight order in a cause in which he had no jurisdiction had forced upon them a governor who has since been kept in power against their protest by the military arm of the Government.

It does not lie in the mouth of the republican party to charge that murder, riot, and intimidation prevented a free and fair election. That party had full control of the State. An extreme radical governor was at the head of affairs, a tool in the hands of vicious advisers, and was ever ready to do their bidding and carry out their nefarious schemes. He was aided and sustained by the State constabulary, and these were backed up by United States soldiers. In addition to this force United States deputy marshals were scattered all over the State, eight hundred or more being on duty in New Orleans alone. But this is not all. The courts of the State and their officers were in the hands of the republicans. They had full power and authority to make arrests, institute prosecutions, and secure the conviction of guilty parties. If the various offenses of which gentlemen talk so eloquently on this floor have been committed, I demand to know why the offenders have not been arrested; I demand to know why the records fail to show that prosecutions have been put on foot for their punishment. The imputation that democrats have by intimidation, riot, and murder prevented a peaceful and fair election falls to the ground a malicious slander upon the people of that unhappy and outraged Commonwealth.

Not only did the republicans have control of the civil and military power of the State, but they had control of its entire election machinery also. The governor appointed the supervisors of registration and election for the several parishes, and we have the authority of the special committee of which Hon. WILLIAM R. MORRISON is chairman for the statement that many of the supervisors were appointed from the police and custom-house employés—men of the most disreputable character; so disreputable indeed that even Governor Kellogg disavowed their appointment and saddled the responsibility upon his lieutenant-governor. These men were sent to the various parishes with instructions to register and vote the full strength of their party. Here is a circular that was sent to every supervisor in the State. This one was addressed to the parish of Assumption. The animus that prompted it is so apparent that it needs no comment.

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN PARTY OF LOUISIANA, ROOMS JOINT COMMITTEE ON CANVASSING AND REGISTRATION,
MECHANICS' INSTITUTE, September 25, 1876.

DEAR SIR: It is well known to this committee that, from examination of the census of 1875, the republican vote in your parish is 2,200 and the republican majority is 900.

You are expected to register and vote the full strength of the republican party in your parish.

Your recognition by the next State administration will depend upon your doing your full duty in the premises, and you will not be held to have done your full duty unless the republican registration in your parish reaches 2,200 and the republican vote is at least 2,100.

All local candidates and committees are directed to aid you to the utmost in obtaining the result, and every facility is and will be afforded you; but you must obtain the results called for herein without fail. Once obtained, your recognition will be ample and generous.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. J. M. A. JEWETT,
Secretary.

SUPERVISOR OF REGISTRAION,
Parish of Assumption, Louisiana.

They were not content with a registration of the actual voters, so that a fair expression of public opinion might be obtained. Their purpose was to secure the election of Hayes and Wheeler at all hazards, by fair means or foul. To this end they made up registration-lists of the living and the dead; of men who were not then and never had been citizens of Louisiana. They even swelled the registration of colored voters to the number of nearly twenty thousand more than resided in the State.

Money and troops were used, frauds were practiced, and the unbridled passions of bad men had full sway. Nothing was left undone to consummate the unholy purpose those wicked conspirators had engaged to accomplish. The election came and passed and to their utter horror the face of the returns in the hands of republican officials showed that the Tilden and Hendricks electors had been appointed by majorities ranging from six to nine thousand.

On the 7th, 8th, and 9th of November it was apparent to every one that the democratic candidates had been triumphantly elected. The country had been thoroughly canvassed and the contest had been characterized by more earnestness and bitterness than had ever been witnessed before. The people settled down into quiet and repose, satisfied then as they always had been theretofore with the popular choice, and awaited the inauguration of the successful candidates. But this repose was of short duration. Party leaders and political schemers commenced plotting to defeat the popular will and by the most shameful and disreputable manipulations to induct the defeated candidate into the Chief Executive office of this Government.

They foresaw that if their party failed then it would be a failure for all time; that it would go down to oblivion's grave, never again to be resurrected.

In their desperation and as a last resort they proclaimed that Louisiana and Florida had appointed Hayes and Wheeler electors, and at once began the work of producing that result, in the face of existing facts which would have caused most men to shrink from such an undertaking as immoral and dishonest.

The election returns of Louisiana went into the hands of the returning board showing on their face a majority of nearly 8,000 for the Tilden electors. They came from the hands of that board showing a majority of nearly 4,000 for the Hayes electors. What brought about this change? Can any honorable man doubt that it was the result of fraud, forgery, and perjury? By it Rutherford B. Hayes is to be made President of the United States. Contemplate the Chief Magistrate of this great country—successor to Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, and Lincoln—holding title to that exalted position through fraud, and through fraud alone!

One word as to the personnel of the returning board of Louisiana which threw out 13,000 votes in that State for no other reason than to manufacture a majority for the Hayes electors, an irresponsible board created by an usurping Legislature and made self-perpetuating for party purposes. We saw the members of that board arraigned at the bar of this House for contempt. It may well be doubted whether any tribunal or other body of officials in this or any other country can be pointed out of whom more that is bad and less that is good can be truthfully said.

Wells, Anderson, and Kenner, a trio who will live in history as the most nauseating festers of republican corruption—a perpetual sorrow and humiliation to every American patriot—Wells, a defaulter to his State, a man without character for truth and veracity, who has covered himself all over with infamy by his conduct as a member of that board; Anderson, without character for integrity, branded by a special committee of this House with having defrauded his State while serving her in a representative capacity; Kenner, of whom it were superfluous to say more than that he was indicted for larceny and secured a dismissal of the prosecution after admitting his guilt, when he was promptly made a member of the returning board. This trio and the negro Casanave, whose docile ignorance and stupidity peculiarly fit him for the position of an instrument in their hands, constitute the board who are authorized, as it is claimed, to pass upon the election returns of one of the States of this Union, and to determine what shall and what shall not be counted.

The following table taken from certified copies of duplicate returns made by commissioners of election at each voting-place in the State shows how the vote stood when it went to the hands of the returning board:

Tilden electors received the following votes, to wit:

McEnery	83,712
Wickliffe	83,880
St. Martin	83,676
Poché	83,529
De Blanc	83,667
Seay	83,842
Cobb	83,579
Cross	83,652

and the Hayes electors received the following votes, to wit:

Kellogg	77,152
Burch	77,154
Joseph	74,889
Sheldon	74,844
Marks	75,221
Levissee	75,370
Brewster	75,457
Joffrion	75,597

The board entered upon its duty of canvassing and compiling the vote with a purpose to change the result of the election in Louisiana by throwing out a sufficient number of parishes and polls for that purpose. Previous to its first meeting, the following dispatch passed over the wires from the attorney of the board:

NEW ORLEANS, November 16, 1876.

Hon. J. R. WEST, Washington, D. C.:

Returns to date leave us majority, throwing out five parishes.

JOHN RAY.

And on the next day the United States marshal, a republican, sent the following dispatch:

The witnessing committee so selected by the President having refused to co-operate with a committee of their political opponents in an effort to have the vacancy in said board filled, and in other efforts to see that the board of canvassers made a fair count of the vote actually cast, the United States marshal sent the following dispatch to the administration United States Senator of Louisiana:

NEW ORLEANS, November 17, 1876.

Hon. J. R. WEST, Washington, D. C.:

Louisiana is safe. Our northern friends stand firmly by us. The returning board will hold its own.

J. R. G. PITKIN.

And on the 3d of December the United States Marshal Pitkin sent the following dispatch in cipher, and, on oath, says he derived the information as to the result from J. Madison Wells:

NEW ORLEANS, December 3, 1876.

Hon. J. R. WEST, Washington, D. C.:

Democratic boast entire fallacy. Have northern friends on way North. Answer telegram of this morning; also, have Senate anticipate House on sending committee to investigate outrages. Have seen Wells, who says: "Board will return Hayes sure. Have no fear."

J. R. G. PITKIN.

And this board, faithful to the predictions and promises thus made and faithful to the conspiracy that had for its object the election of Hayes and Wheeler, in utter disregard of right, without the semblance of law or authority, nullified the popular will by rejecting the votes of 13,000 voters in that State. The act was wanton, vicious, and wholly inexcusable, and yet a partisan majority of the electoral commission sanctioned the fraud and approved the wrong. This House did a righteous act that the country will appreciate and applaud when it repudiated and condemned that erroneous and outrageous decision.

I regard the present as the most critical and dangerous period in the country's history. Never before have our republican institutions been put to as great a test as they are now undergoing. Never before have they been so boldly menaced. Gentlemen may sugar-coat the pill as they please; they may present the issue in any form, dressed in any garb that may suit their taste, but the truth is not to be disguised that this is a conflict between constitutional liberty and centralism. We cannot, if we would, shut our eyes to the fact that there is in this country a powerful party who seek the overthrow of our institutions. We see the evidences of it on every hand. Prominent members of the republican party have foreshadowed that policy by various resolutions in this House and in the Senate during the present Congress. They have even ingrafted the idea in the Cincinnati platform upon which Governor Hayes stands and to which he is committed.

It is but a few years since a newspaper styled the Imperialist, as I remember, was published in the city of New York. Its title fully explains its hostility to our present form of government. The projectors of the scheme, finding the people not in a frame of mind to join in the proposed conspiracy against the Government, withdrew it from circulation. Yet, notwithstanding its withdrawal, the policy it proclaimed continues to have advocates, and to-day has the sanction of the leaders of the republican party of the country.

So much has been written and said upon this subject by various gentlemen that I cannot refer to all in the limited time allotted to me, but must content myself with mentioning a few of the most remarkable utterances. I hold in my hand a published letter by William Giles Dix, of Massachusetts, to President Grant in the year 1875, in which the following language is used:

You became President in consequence of the national victory in which you bore a share so honorable and eminent; but, Mr. President, let me entreat you to consider that it was a national, not a federal, victory you won, and that national victory signified the defeat of the Federal Constitution.

Here we have the declaration of a gentleman of scholarly attainments, who avows his hostility to federalism. He names the issue fairly and discusses it ably. But I quote another and more significant passage from the same letter:

Mr. President, since you will not lead, I challenge you to follow. If you will not accept the challenge, then if I shall live I will do all that honorably and earnestly I can to make a national Government and a national Constitution the watchwords of a triumphant national party at the next presidential election.

I do not know how far Mr. Dix was authorized to speak for the republican party, but it is evident that by this letter he foreshadowed its policy. The Cincinnati convention, by which Governor Hayes was nominated, announces, among other things, that—

The United States of America is a nation, not a league.

This was the first time, so far as I have been able to ascertain, that any one of all the various parties ever existing in this country had the temerity to declare that this Government was not a league. What is a league?

It is an alliance or confederation between sovereign states. That is what the fathers and founders of this Government intended and claimed to have established, and their work as such has since received the sanction of mankind and excited the admiration of the world until the republican party rejected it.

The distinguishing feature of this Government is that it is a government of checks and balances; that it is a union of States, not a union of the people. The Constitution was adopted by a majority of States in convention assembled, and not by a majority of the popular vote; and to each one of these States is guaranteed a republican form of government, with the power to regulate and control its own affairs in its own way, provided always they do nothing to violate late the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, what is the object of this new departure? It is the overthrow of our present form of government; that and nothing else.

These are the features of our government that have excited the deadly hostility of the leading spirits of the republican party. They are jealous of the large liberty and sovereign power the people exercise. They see that the only hope they can have of retaining control of the government is to withdraw from the people their sovereignity, to obliterate State lines, abolish local government, and to centralize power in the hands of the rulers, by whatever name they may be called. Already have they commenced the agitation of this question. The National Republican, the organ of the extreme wing of the republican party, in its issue of the 2d of February, referring to the late war, holds the following language:

But since that day there has been a marked change in the sentiment of the people in this respect, and it may be safely asserted that there is now a large majority in favor of a strong National Government, with powers acting directly upon the people, without regard to State lines and limits, whose jurisdiction shall extend to the control of every interest of a national character, unimpeded and unaffected by considerations arising from claims of State sovereignty—a thing which cannot exist in the way of the common welfare, but must yield to the will of the true sovereign.

* * * * * * *

And in view of the sad experiences of the past and the present, it will not be cause for surprise if, upon proceeding to the task of establishing a permanent adjustment of powers between the States and the nation, early to be made, there is decreed such a distribution and modification as will clothe the General Government with full jurisdiction of the election proceedings and all matters appertaining to the Presidency, and a considerable extension of the term of that office.

When the opportunity shall be offered I propose to discuss this question further. The people may as well look the issue squarely in the face. Their rights are imperiled. The Government of their fathers is menaced by an insidious and dangerous foe. If it be not restrained we are to have a centralized, quasi-republican government first and monarchy afterward.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. GORHAM, its Secretary, notified the House that that body was now ready to meet the House and proceed with the counting of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, the objections submitted in the joint meeting to the vote of the elector Crossman present several questions for the consideration of the House. Under the law of the State of Michigan was there a vacancy to which the elector Crossman could be appointed? Was Hanchett, the elector voted for on the 7th of November, ineligible? Did he hold an office of profit or trust under the United States, and did the vacancy to which Crossman was appointed by the college arise from Hanchett's non-attendance or from his ineligibility? If ineligible to appointment, what effect can it have upon the vote of the college?

Under the Constitution and law, what power in counting has either House to make judicial investigation and decide upon the right of an elector whose vote has been cast and duly certified and returned according to law?

What statements or evidence will each House consider sufficient proof to justify its rejection of a vote thus cast and certified?

In considering some of these questions let me first call attention to the testimony presented to the House in regard to the ineligibility of Hanchett. There is no legal or competent evidence, none which would be admitted or be considered by any respectable court to show that Hanchett held any office of trust. There is the mere verbal statement that Hanchett was appointed; there is no evidence of any commission, nor that he qualified as required by law, no record evidence of any appointment, no copy of the record of the court has been produced. Hearsay and verbal statements cannot be made competent or legal evidence by the vote of a majority of the committee on the privileges, powers, and duties of the House. Disregarding the rules of law, papers, hearsay statements and incompetent testimony may go upon the record and be submitted to the House, but they do not thereby become legal proof or entitled to be considered competent evidence by either House.

If Mr. Hanchett's appointment had been shown, the fact is clearly proved that he did not for a long time perform the duties of the office and did not consider himself as such commissioner.

But laying aside these considerations, which, I think, ought to be decisive of this question, I hold there is no power in this House under the Constitution and laws of the United States to go into a judicial inquiry as to the competency or the ability of the electors to exercise their office. You have no more right than have the inspectors or judges of an election when, after the polls are closed, they count all the votes which have been put into the ballot-box. They have no right to throw out or reject votes actually cast unless the constitution and law of their State expressly invests them with such power. The duty of canvassers, say the courts, is simply to count, not to decide upon the legality of the votes that have been cast.

Where in the law, where in the Constitution do you find any power in this count of the electoral votes to throw out votes that had been actually cast and certified to the President of the Senate, by the electors of a State, and by the executive authority as required by the law?

Mr. SPRINGER. Will the gentleman allow me to answer his question? If a member of Congress were returned as an elector——

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I will not stop for that. That has been repeated half a dozen times in other places. I challenge you to find such power conferred in any law of the United States. The judicial power of the United States is by express terms of the Constitution vested in the Supreme Court and inferior courts. The law may authorize the counting. It may be performed by the Houses or by a tribunal authorized for that purpose, or by the President of the Senate, or whoever is authorized under the Constitution and the law to count. The constitutional duty here performed is not a canvass even. It is a count which means the enumeration of the votes that are cast, and not a judicial inquiry into the right of the electors to cast the votes.

Did not the supreme court of Florida, which you on your side applaud, decide that under the law and constitution of Florida the canvassing board must canvass the votes that were cast and had no power to exercise judicial functions? And if the canvassing board of a State in counting the votes after they are cast can exercise no judicial power, where in the Constitution do you find the right to exercise that power? You are simply to make an arithmetical enumeration of the votes that are certified by the proper authorities and are sent up here to be counted as appears upon their face.

Mr. SPRINGER. Will the gentleman allow me to answer his question? I would ask the gentleman whether he could have voted as an elector himself, while at the same time he was a member of Congress?

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. That is foreign to the question.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is the question.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. The question is not whether I could properly act and might not be restrained by legal process from acting, but what can be done by the two Houses under the law when the alleged ineligible elector has voted in the college of his State. Can you invade the secrecy intended by the Constitution in requiring the vote to be by ballot? Can you arraign the electors at your bar and require them each to disclose for whom he voted? Can you make a judicial investigation as to the eligibility of electors?

Upon the question as to the effect of an ineligible elector's vote I desire to cite two other authorities in addition to those presented by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LAWRENCE] a few moments ago.

The principle of colorable election holds not only in regard to the right of electing but of being elected. A person indisputably ineligible may be an officer de facto by color of election. (Baird vs. Bank of Washington, 11 S. and R., 414.)

It is a general principle of the law that ministerial acts of an officer de facto are valid and effectual when they concern the public and the rights of third persons, although it may appear that he has no legal or constitutional right to the office. (People, 1 Gil., 529; 5 Gil., 107.)

And this principle is applicable to all cases, unless in the law and the constitution under which the officer or body is acting there is an express provision that the act shall be absolutely void. The Constitution prescribes certain qualifications for an elector. It does not declare that the vote of a disqualified elector shall be void.

Mr. Speaker, I turn to the Constitution itself, and I ask what power is given to decide disputed elections except in cases of contest before either House for a seat therein, when each House is the judge of the election and return of its own members? Do you find any power anywhere in the Constitution authorizing this House to go into an inquiry and decide upon the rights of a citizen to hold an office? Can a legislative body perform judicial functions? Does the presidential count imply the examination of witnesses on the one side and the other? Can mere canvassers—counters—weigh and decide and, as the canvassing board, it is alleged, in Florida attempted to do, throw out votes after such consideration and hearing? We have no such power. This Congress, this House, the two Houses, are not omnipotent. They are bodies created by the Constitution and have no power only as conferred by the Constitution, and their acts are void like the acts of any other body when unauthorized by the Constitution.

If Mr. Hanchett was ineligible—to show which I deny there is any competent proof before the House—his exercise of the duties of the office would not have invalidated his vote so far as this count is concerned. Under the Constitution and laws of the United States there would have been no legal right in this House at this count to have inquired into his eligibility, and no right to reject his vote if he had acted with the college instead of Crossman, who was appointed to fill the vacancy occasioned by his absence.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"

Mr. COCHRANE. Mr. Speaker, I cannot allow this occasion to pass without denouncing in the strongest terms the action of the majority of the joint commission in giving the electoral vote of Louisiana to Hayes and Wheeler. I voted for the electoral bill and I did so with no little pleasure and satisfaction. The people of the whole country hailed the measure as a harbinger of peace. The business interests of the country were suffering by reason of the uncertainty arising out of the late election. Civil war was thought by many to be imminent. Under these alarming circumstances the joint committee of the two Houses presented the electoral bill signed by every member of the committee except Mr. MORTON. Such democrats from the House as Mr. PAYNE, Mr. HEWITT, and Mr. HUNTON, and from the Senate Mr. THURMAN and Mr. BAYARD gave to the bill their most earnest and cordial support. The discussion upon the bill, now a part of the record of Congress, was one of the most remarkable in the history of the House and Senate. The bill was passed by a very large majority, and a sigh of relief went up from our whole people. The dark clouds had disappeared and honest men of all political parties rejoiced in the thought that the commission soon to be created would determine who had been fairly elected President of the United States, Tilden or Hayes. The animus of the republican leaders however soon became apparent. Instead of selecting unbiased conservative men to serve upon the commission they selected, at least in two instances, the most bitter partisans—men who had opposed the bill, denied its constitutionality, and were in every way hostile thereto. The democratic party did not follow this vicious example, but selected men recognized as among the most conservative of the party and all of whom had earnestly advocated the bill. I have neither the time nor inclination to follow the action of the commission in detail. The vote of Florida was given to Hayes by the decision of the eight republican commissioners. Standing upon the merest technicalities and ignoring and disregarding the facts, they gave to Mr. Hayes the electoral vote of a State the majority of whose people had voted for the Tilden electors. This action of the commission merited and received the condemnation of all honest men; but better things were hoped for when Louisiana was reached. All of these hopes, however, have been blasted. The partisan majority upon the commission have again declared that the voice of the majority of the people of a State shall be disregarded and that a premium shall be placed upon corruption and fraud. Fraud and villainy on the part of the returning board were alleged, but evidence of the same was excluded. Perjury, forgery, and bribery were alleged, proof of the same offered. But no; the eight partisan commissioners were there to declare Hayes elected and they proposed to carry out that purpose, although in so doing they trampled upon the Constitution of the United States, disregarded the constitution and laws of the State of Louisiana, and violated the letter and spirit of the law by which the commission was created. They have done their work; counted the vote of Louisiana for their President, but in so doing have blackened the page of American history and cast a shadow upon the civilization, intelligence, and honesty of our day. In the name of the great democracy of my State, and not democracy alone, but of all who love truth and honesty, I do here solemnly enter of record my protest against the outrage which these eight partisans have committed.

In conclusion, I only desire to repel the statement made by some republican papers that the democratic party means to resort to revolutionary measures. I desire to assure gentlemen upon the other side, in spite of the garbled statements of newspapers as to what they allege has occurred in caucus, that neither the democratic party nor any of its members will resort to revolutionary action. If there is any one thing which has marked the career of my party, it is its adherence to the Constitution of the United States and obedience to law. It will be in the present what it has been in the past. A few words more, Mr. Speaker, and I will close. The American people will never ratify or indorse the gigantic fraud which has been perpetrated. Four years of usurped power yet remain for the republican party and then its scepter will depart from it forever.

Mr. BANKS. It does not appear to me, although I am not as well acquainted with the merits of this question and the law upon which it rests as other gentlemen, that there is any substantial proof of the appointment of Mr. Hanchett as a commissioner of the United States. If I heard the testimony rightly as it was read, there is nothing that relates to such an appointment but what he says himself. He states that he was notified that he would be appointed, and subsequently that he had been appointed, and he thinks a form of oath was inclosed to him which he supposes he must have taken, but of which he has no recollection whatever.

There is no testimony, no proof at all that he qualified as a commissioner, or that he ever received a commission; not the slightest.

Mr. LAWRENCE. There is no proof that the court appointed him.

Mr. BANKS. That is shown by the testimony that is presented in support of the objection; but in addition to that there is no proof that he ever qualified if he was even appointed or received a commission. Now, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] asks if his colleague, Mr. BURCHARD, could have been appointed an elector, he being a member of Congress. Well, I suppose if a man was told by somebody that he was or would be a member of Congress thirteen years afterward he should say that he thought he might have served, that on that statement of facts, which is precisely the case before us, the gentleman's colleague would not be disqualfied for a presidential elector if he was properly elected to that office. The fact is that there is no proof at all, not a shadow of proof, that this man was appointed or that he accepted the office of commissioner and was qualified for that position by taking the oath prescribed by law for that office. If he did he terminated his office when more than nine years since he refused to serve in that capacity. Being told that he was appointed thirteen years ago, or being appointed for a temporary purpose he terminated his appointment more than nine years ago by refusing to serve in that office. Now, he was appointed a commissioner for a special purpose, and nine years ago refused to serve on the ground that he was not a commissioner, which he was not, and so far as the testimony shows never had been, and if moreover he had moved into another part of the State that was a termination of his official career. There is no proof however, at all, that this man ever was a commissioner of the United States for the State of Michigan, or that he had any right to act. There is not a scintilla of evidence to show that he would now have a legal right to act as a commissioner of the United States in the State of Michigan.

Now in regard to his appointment as elector. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has stated as a legal proposition that he was not appointed an elector. Well, sir, what was done by the State of Michigan in regard to his appointment as an elector? The people of Michigan voted for him as a candidate for elector. He had 25,000 majority for that office over his competitor. He was declared elected by the proper officers. He was commissioned as an elector by the governor of the State. That constitutes an appointment so far as the State is concerned. I do not mean to say that upon those facts alone he would be qualified to cast a vote for President and Vice-President. It might have happened that after his appointment by the people of Michigan it was found that he in some manner was disqualified for holding the office. But that disqualification must be shown. It has not been shown, and there is no allegation here that his disqualification is shown and that he ceased to be an elector because he was found to be disqualified. If he had gone on, having been appointed by the people of Michigan and commissioned by the governor, he had acted as an elector and voted for a candidate who was found to be elected, in such a case his disqualification as an elector would have no effect at all, because it was not shown. But it does not seem to have been the fact in this case. No disqualification has been shown, if it ever existed, as I say it did not.

Then, upon this ground alone, he being regularly appointed, commissioned, and recognized by the Government, it was for him to appear or not to appear at the place and time appointed. He did not appear. He refused to serve. He neglected to give his vote or to attend at the time appointed. Then, under the law of Michigan, as several gentlemen have stated, the electoral college of that State had a perfect right to fill the vacancy thus occasioned. The college of electors having authority to fill vacancies in case the persons appointed did not appear at the time appointed by law, the electors who were present would have an undoubted right to decide whether or not a vacancy existed, and if found to exist to take the proper measures to fill it as provided by law.

There is nothing to show, not a particle of evidence, not a scintilla of proof, that this man was ever appointed to the office of commissioner of the United States, except the admission that he makes himself, that he thinks that he was informed that he would be appointed, and that he thinks he may have taken the oath according to the form sent to him, but that he has no recollection of it. Beyond that there is no testimony to prove that he was appointed or had ever qualified as a commissioner, or became under the law an officer of the United States. If that had been the facts the record of his appointment and qualification could be easily produced. It has not been produced. On these grounds I have no hesitation in voting against the objection.

Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"

Mr. SPARKS. I did not expect to detain the House with any remarks of mine upon the question now under consideration, and would not have done so except for remarks which have been made by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. FOSTER.] I was forcibly impressed by the remarks and fully believe the statement made by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] that it is not expected that anything will or can be accomplished by the objections offered in the present case. In fact, sir, it seems to me that nothing is accomplished by any objection offered in any case. It makes no difference what the basis of the objection is, it is ignored, dodged, or evaded, and the court goes on to the consummation of a gigantic fraud, while truth and the honest votes of the people are denied a hearing. The case now under consideration has this of substance in it: A man in Michigan held an office under the Government of the United States and admitted before one of the select committees of this House that such was the fact; that at the time of his appointment and now he was and is a United States commissioner. The Constitution says that "no man shall be appointed an elector who was then holding an office of trust or profit under the Government of the United States." But this is a light case. It seems to make little difference when it is predetermined that the object is to be accomplished, that is, that Hayes is to be inaugurated, whether the Constitution stands in the way or not.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] has given us quite a little dissertation upon the patriotism of the republican candidate for the Presidency, and he tells us that he will make an excellent, good President. My opinion is that he will be inaugurated; and if he is we all, of course, would like for him to make a good officer. But, sir, I doubt the patriotism of any man who will take the highest office in the Republic when it is thrust upon him by fraud, and this man knows that if he gets the Presidency it comes to him by and through undisguised fraud. He may make an excellent President notwithstanding all this, but he has to wade through too much filth in attaining it to inspire the confidence that he will do so.

I was struck some time ago by the remarks of the gentleman from New York, [Mr. TOWNSEND,] who in speaking of Governor Tilden sneeringly alluded to him as the "little man of Gramercy Park." Now, sir, after this patriotic citizen (Mr. Hayes) is inaugurated let us picture the "little man of Gramercy Park" visiting him. The White House and its surroundings are duly appreciated. The distinguished honors of the high office, are commented upon, its emoluments and powers fully discussed, and all that. But when the visitor takes up his hat to go he says: "Sir, one quarter of a million more of the people of this country (your fellow-citizens and mine) voted that all this should be mine than voted that it should be yours." Now, Mr. Speaker, on an occasion like this whose shoes would you rather fill, those of the man in possession or those of the visitor? I confess, sir, that I would rather be in those of "the little man of Gramercy Park." And, sir, further and stronger than that, he could say to his host "I had a clearly defined and unmistakable majority of the electoral votes of this country but through your rascally, scoundrelly, fraudulent returning boards you have defrauded me of them and thereby taken my honestly won office from me."

Sir, have I overdrawn this picture? Am I not right in this? And has not the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] told us so through a report of his concurred in by his political associates? Has he not told us that this identical Louisiana returning board is a fraud? Has he not declared that its "acts were illegal, arbitrary, &c.?" And has he not insinuated that its members were a villainous, unprincipled set of scoundrels? I am not using his language, but in substance I insist that he has done this.

Why, sir, look at it; this man Wells, the president of that board, the soul and spirit of the whole thing, is shown in this report—signed by Mr. FOSTER, of Ohio, and Mr. Phelps, of New Jersey, leading republicans, and indorsed, I believe, by one of the eminent commissioners, [Mr. HOAR]—to have been a perjurer. It is not said in these words, but it is fairly deducible from the language of the report. I have no time to read it, but will simply direct attention to the report known as the Foster report, second session of the Forty-third Congress. Now let any man read it and he will see that these republicans in that report clearly indicate their conviction that this man Wells committed perjury in making an affidavit that was false in respect to intimidation, &c., in a certain parish, Rapides, I think.

Mr. WELLS, of Mississippi. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SPARKS. No, sir, of course not; I have not time, and if I should answer you it would do you no good. You would still go it blindly and vote wrong anyhow.

I pass now, sir, to another authority in relation to the infamy of this president of the Louisiana returning board. It is the letter of Lieutenant-General Sheridan, which was read in the House some time ago at the instance of my friend from Ohio, [Mr. BANNING,] chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, in which General Sheridan denounces him as a "dishonest, corrupt man," a "trickster," and "a man without one honest friend," &c. And, sir, the Lieutenant-General is a well-known republican, a gentleman whose acts do not all meet my approval, and yet among his faults, whatever they have been, lying is not one of them.

And again, sir, it is proven that the presiding genius of this board is a forger, for the proof of which I refer to the testimony taken before the committee of the House on the "privileges, powers," &c., of the House. Littlefield, one of the clerks of the board, positively swears that by Wells's order the original return from Vernon Parish was secretly changed and altered by erasing 128 votes from the Tilden electors and adding them to the Hayes electors, besides other alterations and forgeries committed upon that return. This original return I now have on behalf of that committee in my possession for safe-keeping, and it clearly shows all that I have alleged with respect to the alterations and changes. And that it was done by Wells or by his connivance or direction is shown not only by Littlefield's testimony but by certified statements and copies of papers from the board accompanying it.

Again, sir, it is charged that he is a swindling, corrupt scoundrel, and that he corruptly attempted to sell out the vote of Louisiana for money. I refer to the testimony of Maddox, taken before that same committee, in which he positively swears to these facts and is corroborated partly by other testimony, but specially by Wells's genuine letters (admitted to be such) now in possession of the committee; two of them addressed to Maddox, and one addressed to his friend Senator WEST.

Sir, I challenge any man to read these letters, taken in connection with Maddox's testimony, and come to any conclusion other than that he was corruptly attempting to put up the vote of Louisiana in the market to the highest bidder.

It is also shown, sir, that in that board, whose final count and determination was secret and closed to all persons but the members and their chosen tools as clerks, four of said clerks were then under indictments (three of them being for perjury) and an additional one charged with murder.

Such is a fair statement of one of these returning boards whose acts are decided by our "high commission" to be beyond scrutiny or investigation, and the result of which, aided by the certificate of a pretended governor who according to the report of a republican congressional committee is himself a usurper and the creature of a gigantic fraud, is to inaugurate this patriotic gentleman into the Presidency; and he and his friends who have urged it now accept the situation without a blush.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS. I desire to occupy a few minutes upon this question. It is quite surprising to me to witness the ease with which our friends on the other side roll the word fraud under their tongue, at the very time they are attempting to defraud the people of the State of Michigan of one of its electors who received a majority of 25,000 votes; and that, too, upon the purest and most naked technicality that was ever submitted to a tribunal of this kind, if this House is a tribunal.

It is claimed that the electoral college of Michigan had no power to fill the vacancy occasioned by the absence of Mr. Hanchett on the day appointed for the electoral college to meet and cast its votes. That is the whole question before the House, a pure naked legal question. It is conceded here by the evidence produced, evidence provided by the laws of the United States—here permit me to say that there is no law of the United States providing for any other evidence—it is conceded and proved by the evidence provided for by the law of the United States that Hanchett was duly elected an elector of the State of Michigan and duly authorized and qualified, so far as the legal evidence before this House is concerned, that is, the certificate of the governor of the State, to act as such elector.

This certificate of the governor verifies and authenticates the action of the State board of canvassers.

What evidence is there, then, to disqualify him from exercising that right? Upon what evidence are we discussing the question here? The supreme court of the State of Michigan has held, and it is the settled law of that State, that the certificate of the board of canvassers is prima facie evidence of the right of a person to hold the office, and that it cannot be controverted except by a judicial tribunal, or by the voluntary surrender of the office. I will read an extract from a decision in 16 Michigan Reports:

> The certificate of election, whether rightfully or wrongfully given, confers upon the person holding it the prima facie right of holding for the term; and this prima facie right is subject to be defeated only by his voluntary surrender of the office, or by a judicial determination of the right.

Assuming for the sake of argument that Mr. Hanchett was ineligible, which I deny, he received that certificate; and the evidence before the electoral college was that he was entitled to act as an elector. In his absence the electoral college exercised the power which had been conferred upon it by the Legislature—a power which cannot be questioned by this House, because it is a matter of constitutional right—and elected to this office Mr. Crossman, whose vote is here objected to.

Now, the proceedings there were all regular. The evidence provided for by law, the evidence recognized by our supreme court as evidence of the right of Mr. Hanchett to hold the office, had been granted, and he was entitled to exercise the franchises of the office. He absented himself, and another person was duly elected in the manner prescribed by the statute. Therefore I insist that, whether Mr. Hanchett was ineligible or eligible, the question does not and cannot arise here.

But let us glance for a moment at the evidence submitted here to show his ineligibility. What is it? That in 1863 for a special purpose he accepted an authority from the circuit court of the eastern district of the State of Michigan to act as commissioner; that he performed the duty for which he accepted the office, the only duty he ever did perform in regard to the office. He was appointed for a particular locality—for the city of Owasso, in the county of Shiawassee—under the provision of the act of 1817 which authorized the circuit courts to appoint officers for different localities. He performed that duty in 1863; but in 1865 he left that county; he removed to another portion of the State, and from that time to this has never exercised or performed any of the duties of the office of circuit court commissioner in that district. The question is then, is he ineligible? Was he ineligible on the 7th day of November last? I claim that he was not, under the law. He was appointed for a particular duty in a particular place; he performed that duty and removed from that place; and he has not held the office, exercised its franchises, or performed its duties since 1863. If the evidence brought here can be used at all, if there is any mode by which that evidence can be brought in here, any rule which will permit it to come in, still it does not prove that on the 7th day of November last he was holding and de facto exercising the office of circuit court commissioner for the eastern district of Michigan.

I claim, therefore, that in fact there is no evidence here to warrant the assumption that Mr. Hanchett was ineligible. I claim, further, that even if he was ineligible his certificate, regularly issued, was sufficient evidence for the electoral college to act upon; that the office of elector to which he was chosen was vacant when he did not appear at the time and in the manner specified by law, and therefore the other electors had a legal and just right to do exactly what they did: to elect Mr. Crossman as his successor; and Mr. Crossman's vote is just as much entitled to be counted by the two Houses of Congress as any other vote from the State of Michigan.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield for a few moments to my colleague, [Mr. CAMPBELL.]

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I gave a cheerful and earnest support to the bill creating the electoral commission, believing it the best way of escape out of what seemed an inextricable difficulty in which the result of the late presidential election had become involved. The composition of the commission was well calculated to inspire the hope that fraud should not be shielded by mere legal technicalities, and that we should have an equitable and unpartisan judgment, accompanied by such good and sufficient reasons for the conclusions reached as to meet the approval of fair-minded men of all parties.

But, Mr. Speaker, I confess that the action of the commission in refusing to consider the evidence of fraud in the election in the State of Louisiana has not met my hopes and expectations. My disappointment is not that by the judgment of the commission the candidate of the one or other of the parties is placed in the presidential chair, but because from all the information I have in reference to the election in that State, I am forced to the conclusion that it is not only tainted with fraud, but so saturated with corruption that equity and good conscience demand that the vote of that State should be excluded from the count—to count it for either candidate is to offer a premium for corruption and fraud. Mr. Speaker, while I accept as a finality and shall acquiesce in the judgment of the commission, I cannot, in view of all the facts connected with the case and of my sense of duty, sanction by my vote the conclusions reached by the commission.

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish to say a few words in reply to the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. CONGER.] He advanced the position that the appointment of an elector consists of various acts: first, the election by the people; second, the canvass of the votes by the returning board; and, thirdly, the certificate of the governor.

To show the absurdity of that proposition, it is only necessary to call the gentleman's attention to the act of Congress which provides that—

> Electors of President and Vice-President shall be appointed in each State on the Tuesday next after the the first Monday in November in every fourth year succeeding every election of President and Vice-President.—Revised Statutes, section 131.

This is the time provided by law for the appointment of electors, and no other time is provided for their appointment except in a subsequent section (134) providing for the contingency of a failure to make a choice on the day prescribed by law. In such a contingency the electors may be appointed on a subsequent day in such manner as the Legislature of the State may direct.

Not only does the statute fix the appointment upon the day of the popular election, but the decisions of all the courts that have ever passed upon this question are to the same purport, and particularly the decision of the supreme court of Rhode Island in the case of Mr. Corliss, an elector voted for at the last election. The court in that case held:

The language of the Constitution is that no person holding an office of honor, trust, or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector. Under our law the election of the people constitutes the appointment. The duty of the governor is to examine and count the votes and give notice to the electors. He merely ascertains; he does not complete the appointment.

This is the unanimous decision of the supreme court of Rhode Island; and it is in harmony with the law that has always been recognized in this country that the appointment of electors is made by the people, and not by returning boards.

Mr. CONGER. But that is a different statute from ours in Michigan.

Mr. EAMES. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. EAMES. The case of Rhode Island has been referred to by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WARREN] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BUCKNER.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I yielded for a question; not for a speech.

Mr. EAMES. Then I will simply make this statement: there were two questions determined by that court——

Mr. SPRINGER. I cannot yield unless the gentleman desires to ask me a question.

Mr. EAMES. The gentleman will allow me to say that the statements made on the floor as to the decision in Rhode Island are not entirely accurate. The language of the statute of Rhode Island upon which the decision was made differs from the law of Michigan.

Mr. SPRINGER. Well, if the gentleman desires it he can have the whole decision printed in the RECORD and then every gentleman can read it for himself.

Now, one word in reference to the election of ineligible persons to office. The Senate of the United States in the case of General Shields, who was chosen a Senator from the State of Illinois, held that his election was entirely void for the reason that the Constitution of the United States provided that no person shall be a Senator who shall not have been nine years a citizen of the United States when elected. General Shields not having been, when elected, a citizen of the United States for nine years, the Senate declared the election void and the seat vacant. (1 Bartlett, 606.)

I wish to make one further remark in reply to my colleague from Illinois, [Mr. BURCHARD,] who has expressed such a horror of going behind the returns, and thinks it wholly unconstitutional to do so.

In the year 1800 a bill passed both Houses of Congress, but failed to become a law on account of a disagreement between the Houses as to whether it should require both Houses to reject an electoral vote or both to count it. It received the sanction, however, of both Houses of Congress in its main features. Several of the leading members of Congress at that time were members of the Federal convention that framed the Constitution of the United States or members of the State Legislatures that ratified it. John Marshall, afterward Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, was also a member of Congress at that time, which was only eleven years after the adoption of the Constitution; and he with others equally distinguished as expounders of the Constitution supported the bill of 1800, which provided a mode of counting the votes for President and Vice-President, and created a grand committee similar to the electoral commission and with like powers. Section 8 of that bill is as follows:

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the grand committee shall have power to inquire, examine, decide, and report upon the constitutional qualifications of the persons voted for as President and Vice-President of the United States; upon the constitutional qualifications of the electors appointed by the different States, and whether their appointment was authorized by the State Legislature or not or made according to the mode prescribed by the Legislature; upon all petitions and exceptions against corrupt, illegal conduct of the electors, or force, menances, or improper means used to influence their votes, or against the truth of their returns, or the time, place, or manner of giving their votes.

The powers of this grand committee were the powers of the two Houses of Congress, and were such powers and such only as the Constitution of the United States conferred on them, for the act of legislation could neither enlarge nor limit the powers which the Constitution conferred.

This bill, although it did not become a law, for the reasons I have stated, was nevertheless a legislative interpretation and recognition of the power of the two Houses to go behind the certificates of the governor and the action of the returning boards, when counting the electoral vote. The grand committee had expressly power to compel the attendance of witnesses and to punish witnesses for refusing to appear when summoned. This bill received the sanction of both Houses of Congress in the year 1800, and for seventy-seven years neither House of Congress has, by formal action, sanctioned a different doctrine until the Senate approved the decision of the electoral commission in the Florida case, and subsequently in the Louisiana case yesterday. The doctrine that no evidence can be received by the two Houses aliunde the papers laid before them by the President of the Senate is a new heresy, invented for a particular purpose and for this occasion only. If the governor of Illinois and the canvassing board of that State had from partisan motives thrown out the votes of a half dozen counties in my colleague's district, and had certified to the election of the Tilden electors, we should have heard such a demand from republicans for going behind the returns as would have aroused the moral sentiment of the nation, and would have caused even judges of the Supreme Court to read the Constitution and to determine the powers of the two Houses quite differently from what is laid down in the decisions in the Florida and Louisiana cases.

But, further, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] has himself gone behind the returns in voting to reject the electoral votes of one of the States of this Union. In the case of Georgia four years ago my colleague on the joint committee, [Mr. HOAR,] now a commissioner of this joint commission, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That in the judgment of the House of Representatives the votes reported by the tellers as having been cast by the electors of the State of Georgia for Horace Greeley, of New York, for President of the United States ought not to be counted, the said Horace Greeley having died before the said votes were cast.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. There was no such person.

Mr. SPRINGER. How did my colleague find that out? He did not learn it from the face of the returns. O, no, that fact was aliunde the papers laid before the two Houses. He had to go to the graveyards of the country and there upon the tombstone of Horace Greeley read the date of his death. That was the only evidence he had. It was a historical fact, as the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] remarked at the time. The gentleman from Massachusetts and my colleague [Mr. BURCHARD] took cognizance of that fact then without proof, although it did not appear upon the face of the certificate, and voted against counting 3 votes from the State of Georgia for Horace Greeley.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. How did I vote on the Louisiana case?

Mr. SPRINGER. I will come to the Louisiana case. The gentleman asked how he voted in the case of Louisiana four years ago. I will tell him. When the vote of Louisiana was reached Senator Boreman of West Virginia submitted the following objection:

I object to counting any votes from the State of Louisiana for reasons set forth in the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections submitted to the Senate on the 10th instant, and printed as Report No. 417 of Forty-Second Congress, third session.

The report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the Senate was aliunde the papers laid before the two Houses by the President of the Senate.

The gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. GARFIELD,] when the two Houses separated, offered a resolution in the House, as follows:

Resolved, That in the judgment of this House none of the returns reported by the tellers as electoral votes of the State of Louisiana should be counted.

And this resolution was adopted without division; but before it was adopted, Mr. Speer, of Pennsylvania, offered a substitute, as follows:

Resolved, That the vote of the electors of the State of Louisiana, certified to by H. C. Warmoth, governor, should be, in the judgment of this House, counted.

On the vote on Mr. Speer's substitute there were yeas 59, nays 85, and among the nays I do not find the name of my colleague from Illinois, [Mr. BURCHARD,] but I do find the name of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARFIELD] and that of the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. HOAR.] I find nearly all the republican members of the House at that time voting to reject the votes of the State of Louisiana, and thus going behind the returns to do so. The yeas and nays on Mr. Speer's resolution may be of interest at this time to illustrate how easy and constitutional it was only four years ago for gentlemen to go behind the returns and reject the vote of a State, duly certified so far as the face of the returns was concerned, and upon evidence aliunde the papers laid before the two Houses by the President of the Senate. The vote on agreeing to Mr. Speer's resolution was as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Acker, Adams, Ambler, Archer, Arthur, James B. Beck, Boles, Braxton, Burchard, Carroll, Crossland, Dodds, Dox, DuBose, Duke, Farnsworth, Finkelnburg, Getz, Giddings, Golladay, Haldeman, Hancock, Handley, Hanks, Hay, Hereford, Herndon, Hibbard, Holman, Kerr, Ketcham, McIntyre, Manson, McClelland, McHenry, McKinney, Merrick, Morgan, Silas L. Niblack, Perry, Potter, Price, Randall, Read, Ellis H. Roberts, William R. Roberts, Sion H. Rogers, Shober, Slocum, Speer, Storm, Terry, Voorhees, Waddell, Warren, Wells, Willard, Williams of New York, and Winchester—59.

NAYS—Messrs. Averill, Barry, Beatty, Bigby, Bingham, James G. Blair, Buckley, Buffinton, Bunnell, Burdett, Roderick R. Butler, Coburn, Coghlan, Conger, Cotton, Darrall, Dawes, Donnan, Dunnell, Eames, Elliott, Farwell, Charles Foster, Wilder D. Foster, Frye, Garfield, Hale, Halsey, Harmer, Harper, George E. Harris, John B. Hawley, Joseph R. Hawley, Hays, John W. Hazelton, Kellogg, Lamport, Lowe, Maynard, McJunkin, McKee, Merriam, Moore, Morey, Morphis, Leonard Myers, Orr, Packard, Palmer, Isaac C. Parker, Peck, Pendleton, Perce, Peters, Platt, Poland, Porter, Prindle, Rainey, Rusk, Sargent, Sawyer, Scofield, Sessions, Sheldon, Shoemaker, H. Boardman Smith, John A. Smith, Sprague, Starkweather, Stevenson, Stoughton, Stowell, St. John, Sypher, Thomas, Washington Townsend, Turner, Twichell, Tyner, Upson, Wakeman, Waldron, Wallace, and Williams of Indiana—85.

NOT VOTING—Messrs. Ames, Banks, Barber, Barnum, Erasmus W. Beck, Bell, Biggs, Bird, Austin Blair, Boarman, Bright, Brooks, Benjamin F. Butler, Caldwell, Campbell, Clarke, Cobb, Comingo, Conner, Cox, Crebs, Creely, Critcher, Crocker, Davis, Dickey, Duell, Eldredge, Ely, Esty, Forker, Henry D. Foster, Garrett, Goodrich, Griffith, Hambleton, John T. Harris, Havens, Gerry W. Hazelton, Hill, Hoar, Hooper, Houghton, Kelley, Kendall, Killinger, King, Kinsella, Lamison, Lansing, Leach, Lewis, Lynch, Marshall, McCormick, McCrary, McGrew, McNeely, Benjamin F. Meyers, Mitchell, Monroe, Negley, William E. Niblack, Packer, Hosea W. Parker, Edward Y. Rice, John M. Rice, Ritchie, Robinson, John Rogers, Roosevelt, Seeley, Shanks, Shellabarger, Sherwood, Slater, Sloss, Worthington C. Smith, Snapp, Snyder, Stevens, Sutherland, Swann, Taffe, Dwight Townsend, Tuthill, Van Trump, Vaughan, Walden, Wheeler, Whiteley, Whitthorne, Jeremiah M. Wilson, John T. Wilson, Wood, and Young—96.

So the resolution was not agreed to; but the question recurring on the resolution of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARFIELD] to reject the vote of Louisiana, it was passed in the affirmative without division. A similar resolution was passed in the Senate. Senator Trumbull, of Illinois, offered at that time the following as an amendment:

Resolved, That the votes of the electors declared to have been elected as aforesaid by the governor of the State of Louisiana are entitled to be counted.

The resolution, to which Senator Trumbull's was an amendment, was offered by Senator Carpenter, of Wisconsin, and is as follows:

Resolved, That, all the objections having been considered, no electoral vote purporting to be that of the State of Louisiana be counted.

The proceedings in the Senate on the Trumbull amendment and the Carpenter resolution were brief but are nevertheless instructive at this time. I quote from the House compilation on Counting the Electoral Vote, page 405:

Mr. TRUMBULL. I ask for the yeas and nays. It is an important question whether a return in all respects in conformity with law shall be received.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is debate.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 20, nays 35; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Casserly, Cooper, Fenton, Ferry of Connecticut, Hamilton of Maryland, Johnston, Kelly, Machen, Ransom, Rice, Saulsbury, Schurz, Sprague, Stevenson, Stockton, Thurman, Tipton, Trumbull, and Vickers—20.

NAYS—Messrs. Ames, Anthony, Boreman, Caldwell, Carpenter, Chandler, Clayton, Cole, Conkling, Corbett, Cragin, Edmunds, Ferry of Michigan, Flanagan, Frelinghuysen, Gilbert, Hamlin, Harlan, Hill, Hitchcock, Howe, Logan, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Norwood, Nye, Pool, Ramsey, Robertson, Sawyer, Scott, Sherman, Stewart, and West—35.

ABSENT—Messrs. Alcorn, Blair, Brownlow, Buckingham, Cameron, Davis, Goldthwaite, Hamilton of Texas, Lewis, Osborn, Patterson, Pomeroy, Pratt, Spencer, Sumner, Wilson, Windom, and Wright—18.

So the amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. Carpenter.]

Mr. THURMAN. I call for the yeas and nays on that.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 33, nays 16; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Ames, Anthony, Boreman, Caldwell, Carpenter, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Corbett, Edmunds, Ferry of Michigan, Flanagan, Frelinghuysen, Gilbert, Hamlin, Harlan, Hill, Hitchcock, Howe, Logan, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Norwood, Nye, Pool, Ramsey, Robertson, Sawyer, Scott, Sherman, Stewart, and West—33.

NAYS—Messrs. Bayard, Casserly, Cooper, Ferry of Connecticut, Hamilton of Maryland, Johnston, Kelly, Machen, Ransom, Saulsbury, Sprague, Stevenson, Stockton, Thurman, Tipton, and Vickers—16.

ABSENT—Messrs. Alcorn, Blair, Brownlow, Buckingham, Cameron, Clayton, Cragin, Davis, Fenton, Goldthwaite, Hamilton of Texas, Lewis, Osborn, Patterson, Pomeroy, Pratt, Rice, Schurz, Spencer, Sumner, Trumbull, Wilson, Windom, and Wright—24.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution is agreed to; and the Secretary will at once communicate to the House of Representatives this action of the Senate.

An examination of these votes will reveal the fact that every republican member of the present electoral commission four years ago went behind the returns, voted to reject the votes of Louisiana or Georgia, regularly certified as were the Kellogg returns of this election, and upon evidence aliunde the papers laid before the two Houses by the President of the Senate.

The republican members being in a large majority in both branches of Congress said then upon their oaths that the votes of the State of Louisiana should not be counted, and went behind the certificate from that State, regular in form, in order to do that.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Why did you not say how I voted?

Mr. SPRINGER. I have already exonerated my colleague from voting against counting the vote of Louisiana, but he did go behind the returns in the case of the State of Georgia, and voted to throw out the three votes from that State cast for Horace Greeley. That is enough to convict my colleague of inconsistency on this point. Republicans then went behind the returns, and my colleague went behind them to exclude votes cast for a dead man, but now he objects on constitutional grounds to going behind the returns to count votes for a live man whose electors were truly and fairly chosen by the people of Louisiana, but fraudulently counted out by a corrupt, illegal, and infamous returning board.

I yield whatever time I have remaining to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. JENKS.]

Mr. JENKS. I desire to offer as a substitute for the proposition of the gentleman from Virginia the following:

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas the fact being established that it is about twelve years since the alleged ineligible elector exercised any of the functions of a United States commissioner, it is not sufficiently proven that at the time of his appointment he was an officer of the United States: Therefore,

Resolved, That the vote objected to be counted.

Mr. JENKS. Mr. Speaker, with reference to that resolution I have only this to say, that the law as announced by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] and those who have corresponded with him in views, I fully corroborate without any abatement or qualification whatever. But when it appears this man whose vote is objected to has not for twelve years exercised any of the functions of the office of United States commissioner and himself doubtless had forgotten he had been such until after the election, it seems to me the spirit of the Constitution does not require we should exclude the count of that vote. Upon these grounds, and not because I do not approve and fully sustain the position legally taken by the gentleman from Virginia, I offer this substitute.

The question being taken on the substitute offered by Mr. JENKS, it was agreed to.

The question was then taken on the resolution as amended, and it was agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. I object to the preamble.

The SPEAKER. That has already been voted upon as part of the substitute. The Chair thinks the objection of the gentleman from Michigan comes too late.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I desire a separate vote on the preamble.

The SPEAKER. The preamble and resolution would have been susceptible of a separation if the demand had been made in time. But the demand is made too late.

Mr. JENKS moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution, as amended, was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. I ask that the Senate be notified of the action just taken by the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has directed that that shall be done. The law is very explicit on that point.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. I was prevented by the fall of the hammer from completing the remarks which I had intended to address to the House on the subject of the electoral vote of Louisiana. I ask that I may be allowed to extend my remarks when they are printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry: Whether in the present condition of the business of the House it would be competent for the House to receive a report of one of the regular appropriation bills from the Committee on Appropriations at this time?

The SPEAKER. That would not be in order unless unanimous consent is given.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask for unanimous consent. My only object in making this request is to have the bill printed. I have been seeking to obtain the floor for this purpose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will at any time and at all times recognize the gentleman from Indiana when he thinks he is permitted to do so under the rules of the House. Yesterday there was objection made to the Chair laying before the House a report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills that certain bills had been duly enrolled.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Appropriations be permitted to report the sundry civil appropriation bill for printing only.

Mr. WADDELL. Can that be done, even by unanimous consent, without violation of the law?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I object. The law forbids it. I think we can go on and finish the pending business and then pass the appropriation bills.

Mr. COX. We do not want an extra session.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will then ask that by unanimous consent the sundry civil bill, without being reported from the Committee on Appropriations, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for the information of the House, so that it may be taken up at the earliest moment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that the sundry civil bill now agreed upon by the Committee on Appropriations may be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for the information of the House.

Mr. WILSHIRE. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. HOLMAN. Who objects?

The SPEAKER. The Chair stated there was objection.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is well for the House to know who objected.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. WILSHIRE] rose in his place and objected.

Some time subsequently,

Mr. WILSHIRE said: I desire to withdraw my objection to printing the sundry civil appropriation bill in the RECORD. I was not aware till after I had made the objection that there was no appropriation for printing it in the usual way to be put upon the files.

The SPEAKER. If there be no further objection, authority is given for the publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the sundry civil appropriation bill as agreed upon by the Committee on Appropriations. The gentleman from Indiana will notice that the Chair is compelled to put it in that way, because the bill has not been reported to the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is true. The objection was to making the report. I desire to say that, as soon as legislative business can be proceeded with in the House, I will ask permission to report this bill and that its consideration be proceeded with at once.

There being no further objection, the sundry civil appropriation bill, as agreed upon by the Committee on Appropriations, was ordered to be printed in the RECORD. It is as follows:

A bill making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated for the objects hereinafter expressed, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, namely:

PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING.

For the public printing, for the public binding, and for paper for the public printing, including the cost of printing the debates and proceedings of Congress in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and for lithographing, mapping, and engraving for both Houses of Congress, the Supreme Court, the Court of Claims, and the Departments, and for the necessary materials, $1,300,000; and out of the sum hereby appropriated, printing and binding may be done by the Congressional Printer to the amounts following, namely:

For printing and binding for the State Department, $15,000; for the Treasury Department, $180,000; for the War Department, $72,000; for the Navy Department, $39,000; for the Interior Department, $135,000; for the Agricultural Department, $9,000; for the Department of Justice, $6,000; for the Post-Office, $105,000; for the Congressional Library, $15,000; for the Supreme Court of the United States, $20,000; for the Court of Claims, $10,000; and for debates and proceedings of Congress, $694,000; and of the sums hereby appropriated for the several Departments, the courts, and for the debates and proceedings in Congress, there shall only be used for the several purposes herein provided the sums specified, and the unexpended balances shall not be used for any other purposes; and there shall be taxed against the losing party in each and every cause pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, or in the Court of Claims of the United States, the cost of printing the record in such case, which shall be collected, except when the judgment is against the United States, by the clerks of said courts respectively, and paid into the Treasury of the United States; but this shall only apply to records printed after the 1st day of October next.

To purchase of the proprietors of the Congressional Globe all the stereotyped plates, the bound and unbound volumes of the said Globe and the copyright of the same, together with the fire-proof building, (located in the rear of the building situated on Pennsylvania avenue and known as the Globe office,) $100,000.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

For life-saving and life-boat stations:

For salaries of ten superintendents and one assistant superintendent of the life-saving stations at the following points, namely: On the coasts of Long Island and Rhode Island, $1,500; and on the coast of New Jersey, $1,500; assistant to the superintendent on the coasts of Long Island and Rhode Island, $500; for superintendents on the coast of Massachusetts, on the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire, on the coasts of Virginia and North Carolina, on the coasts of Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia, on the coasts of Lakes Erie and Ontario, on the coasts of Lakes Huron and Superior, and on the coast of Lake Michigan, and for superintendent for the houses of refuge on the coast of Florida, each $1,000, $8,000; in all, $11,500.

For one hundred and fifty keepers of stations, at $200 each, $30,000.

For five keepers of houses of refuge on the coast of Florida, $2,400.

For pay of crews of experienced surf-men at such stations and for such periods as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem necessary and proper, $146,000.

For compensation to volunteers at life-boat stations, $8,160.

For fuel for one hundred and fifty-five stations and houses of refuge, repairs and outfits for the same; supplies and provisions for houses of refuge and for shipwrecked persons succored at stations; traveling expenses of officers under orders from the Treasury Department; and contingent expenses, including freight, storage, repairs to apparatus, medals, stationery, advertising, and miscellaneous expenses that cannot be included under any other head of life-saving stations, life-boat stations, and houses of refuge on the coasts of the United States, $40,000.

Revenue-cutter service:

For the pay of captains, lieutenants, engineers, and pilots, and for rations for the same, and for pay of petty officers, seamen, cooks, stewards, boys, coal-passers, and firemen, and for rations for the same, and for fuel for vessels, repairs and outfits for same, ship-chandlery and engineers' stores for same, traveling expenses of officers traveling on duty under orders from the Treasury Department, commutation of quarters, and contingent expenses, including wharfage, towage, dockage, freight, advertising, surveys, labor, and miscellaneous expenses which cannot be included under special heads, $874,891.10.

JUDICIARY.

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court and circuit and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia; and also for jurors and witnesses and expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned, of prosecutions for offenses committed against the United States; for the safe-keeping of prisoners, and for defraying the expenses which may be incurred in the enforcement of the act of February 28, 1871, relative to the right of citizens to vote, or any acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, $2,500,000.

For the support and maintenance of convicts transferred from the District of Columbia, $8,000.

For detecting and punishing violations of the intercourse acts of Congress, and frauds committed in the Indian service, in allowing such increased fees and compensation of witnesses, jurors, and marshals and in defraying such other expenses as may be necessary for this purpose, $8,000.

For the detection and prosecution of crimes against the United States, $25,000.

For payment of the necessary expenses incurred in defending suits against the Secretary of the Treasury or his agents for the seizure of captured or abandoned property, and for the examination of witnesses in claims against the United States pending in any Department, and for the defense of the United States in the Court of Claims, $25,000.

Reform School of the District of Columbia:

For the superintendent, assistant superintendent, matron, two teachers, for medicines and physicians' fees, gardener, farmer, baker, night-watchman, seamstress, laborer, and laundress, and four female servants, and for fuel, clothing, and incidentals, $10,000.

For improvements and repairs, $5,000, no part of which shall be expended in the purchase of land.

Metropolitan police:

For salaries and other necessary expenses of the Metropolitan police for the District of Columbia, $150,000: Provided, That a like sum shall concurrently be paid to defray the expenses of the said Metropolitan police force out of the treasury of the District of Columbia. The duties devolved and the authority conferred upon the board of Metropolitan police by law, for police purposes in said District, shall extend to and include all public squares or places; and said board is hereby authorized and required to make appropriate rules and regulations in relation thereto.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

That the Secretary of the Treasury shall reserve of any of the revenues of the District of Columbia not required for the actual current expenses of schools, the police, and the fire department, a sum sufficient to meet the interest accruing on the 3.65 bonds of the District during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1877, and apply the same to that purpose; and in case there shall not be a sufficient sum of said revenues in the Treasury of the United States at such time as said interest may be due, then the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to advance from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated a sum sufficient to pay said interest, and the same shall be re-imbursed to the Treasury of the United States from time to time as said revenues may be paid into said Treasury, until the full amount shall have been refunded.

For payment of judgments heretofore rendered in the Court of Claim in favor of the following-named persons, and for the amounts respectively following their names, to wit: Thomas W. Sweeney, $768.81; Horatio Page, $4,453.22; Francis Cole, $208.25; John Campbell, $102.47; Albert Gittings, $133 57; Edward M. Schaeffer, $200; E. S. Houston, for the use of J. H. Bemis, $425.79; in all, $6,292.11.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

For casual repairs of the Interior Department building, $5,000.

Government Hospital for the Insane:

For the support, clothing, and medical and moral treatment of the insane of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, and Revenue Cutter service, and of all persons who may have become insane since their entry into the military or naval service of the United States and who are indigent, and of the indigent insane of the District of Columbia, in the Government Hospital for the Insane, $145,000; and one-half of the expense of the indigent persons who may be hereafter admitted from the District of Columbia shall be paid from the treasury of said District: Provided, That hereafter such indigent persons shall be admitted only upon order of the executive authority of the said District.

That all sums herein appropriated, or that may be hereafter appropriated, for the support, in whole or in part, of any asylum, charitable or reformatory institution, or society in the District of Columbia, shall be expended under the authority and control of the commissioners of said District, who shall have power to make such regulations in respect thereto as they may deem expedient.

For general repairs and improvements absolutely necessary for the buildings of the institution, $5,000.

Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb:

For the support of the institution, including salaries and incidental expenses, the maintenance of the beneficiaries of the United States, and $500 for the books and illustrative apparatus, $48,000. And the accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized, in the settlement of the accounts of the disbursing agent for the said institution, to give credit for voucher No. 5 in the first quarter of 1876, and for vouchers Nos. 41 and 48 in the second quarter of the same year; said vouchers being receipts for moneys paid for fuel for the use of said institution, if the said accounting officers shall find that said vouchers were for expenditures made for the benefit of said institution.

For the completion of the work on the erection, furnishing, and fitting up the buildings of the institution in accordance with plans heretofore submitted, and for repairs on buildings already completed, $40,000.

Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-in Asylum:

For the support of the Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-in Asylum, over and above the probable amount which will be received from pay patients, $16,000.

To complete the iron railing and general repairs, $2,000.

CAPITOL EXTENSION.

Capitol extension: For work on the Capitol, and for general care and repair thereof, $40,000.

For improving the Capitol grounds and for paving roadway and footwalks in the Capitol grounds, $100,000.

For lighting the Capitol, and grounds about the same, including Botanical Garden; for gas, pay of lamp-lighters, gas-fitters, plumbers and plumbing, lamps, lamp-posts, matches, materials for the electrical battery, and repairs of all kinds, $30,000, to be expended under the direction of the Architect of the Capitol.

SURVEYS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

For survey of the public lands and private land claims, $50,000: Provided, That the sum hereby appropriated shall be expended in such surveys as the public interest may require, under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and at such rates as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe, not exceeding the rate herein authorized: Provided, That no lands shall be surveyed under this appropriation, except, first, those adapted to agriculture without artificial irrigation; second, irrigable lands, or such as can be redeemed and for which there is sufficient accessible water for the reclamation and cultivation of the same not otherwise utilized or claimed; third, timber lands bearing timber of commercial value; fourth, coal lands containing coal of commercial value; fifth, exterior boundary of town sites; sixth, private land claims. The cost of such surveys shall not exceed $10 per mile for standard lines, (and the starting point for said survey may be established by trian gulation,) $7 for township and $6 for section lines, except that the Commissioner of the General Land Office may allow for the survey of standard lines in heavily timbered land a sum not exceeding $13 per mile.

That an accurate account shall be kept by each surveyor-general of the cost of surveying and platting every private land claim, to be reported to the General Land Office with the map of such claim; and that a patent shall not issue nor shall any copy of any such survey be furnished for any such private claim until the cost of survey and platting shall have been paid into the Treasury of the United States by the party or parties in interest in said grant or by any other party: And provided further, That before any land granted to any railroad company by the United States shall be conveyed to such company, or any persons entitled thereto under any of the acts incorporating or relating to said company, unless such company is exempted by law from the payment of such cost, there shall first be paid into the Treasury of the United States the cost of surveying, selecting, and conveying the same by the said company or persons in interest.

CONTINGENT EXPENSES OF SURVEYORS-GENERAL.

For rent of office of the surveyor-general of Louisiana, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,000.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Florida, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,000.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Minnesota, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Dakota, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Colorado, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of New Mexico, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of California, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $2,000.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Idaho Territory, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Nevada, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Oregon, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Washington Territory, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Nebraska and Iowa, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Montana Territory, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Utah Territory, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Wyoming Territory, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

For rent of office of surveyor-general of Arizona Territory, fuel, books, stationery, and other necessaries, $1,500.

EXPENSES OF THE COLLECTION OF REVENUE FROM SALES OF PUBLIC LANDS.

For salaries and commissions of registers of land offices and receivers of public moneys, at ninety-eight land offices, $365,483.21.

For incidental expenses of the land offices, $40,175.

For expenses of depositing money received from the sale of public lands, $10,000.

To meet expenses of suppressing depredations upon timber on the public lands, $5,000.

Miscellaneous charitable institutions:

For the support of the National Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, Washington City, District of Columbia, including salaries and incidental expenses, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $10,000.

To aid in the support of the Children's Hospital, Washington, District of Columbia, $5,000.

For the National Association for the Relief of the Colored Women and Children of the District of Columbia, $10,000.

For the Freedmen's Hospital and Asylum in Washington, District of Columbia, namely: For subsistence, $18,000, salaries, and compensation, as follows: Of surgeon, $1,400; of one surgeon and dispensary clerk, $1,000; of engineer, $720; matron, $216; nurses and cooks, $1,800; fuel and light, $3,000; clothing, $3,500; rent of hospital buildings, $2,000; medicines and medical supplies, $1,500; and miscellaneous expenses, $1,000; in all, $34,136.

Smithsonian Institution:

For preservation and care of the collections of the national museum, $13,000.

For fitting up the Armory building for storage of articles belonging to the United States, including those transferred from the international exhibition, and expense of watching the same, $2,500.

Geological and geographical surveys:

For the continuation of the geological and geographical survey of the Territories of the United States, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, by Professor F. V. Hayden, $50,000, to be immediately available.

For the completion of the geographical and geological survey of the Rocky Mountain region, including the preparation and publication of maps, charts, and other illustrations necessary for the reports of said survey, by J. W. Powell, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $20,000, to be immediately available.

UNDER THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Public buildings:

Court-house and post-office, Atlanta, Georgia: For continuation of the building, $15,000.

Subtreasury and post-office, Boston, Massachusetts: For purchase of additional land condemned by the courts of the State of Massachusetts, including interest and expenses incident, $181,554.

Custom-house and post-office, Cincinnati, Ohio: For continuation of building, $325,000.

Custom-house and post-office, Fall River, Massachusetts: For purchase of additional land, and continuation of building, $20,000.

Custom-house and post-office, Hartford, Connecticut: For continuation of building, $50,000.

Custom-house and subtreasury, Chicago, Illinois: For continuation of building, $400,000.

Court-house and post-office, Grand Rapids, Michigan: For completion of the building, $20,000.

Court-house and post-office, Trenton, New Jersey: For completing, grading, fences, and furnishing the building, in full for the same, $14,000.

Post-office and court-house, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: For continuation of building, $325,000.

Court-house and post-office, Raleigh, North Carolina: For completion of building and furnishing, $5,300.

Appraisers' stores, San Francisco, California: For continuation of building, $50,000.

Subtreasury building, San Francisco, California: For completion of building, including additional story, $20,000.

Court-house and post-office, Saint Louis, Missouri: For continuation of building, $400,000.

Court-house and post-office, Parkersburgh, West Virginia: For completion of building, fences, grading, approaches, and furniture, $5,000.

Court-house, custom-house, and post-office, Evansville, Indiana: For completion of building, $20,000.

Court-house, custom-house, and post-office, Nashville, Tennessee: For continuation of building, $13,000.

Custom-house and post-office, Port Huron, Michigan: For fencing, grading approaches, and entire furniture, $10,000.

Treasury building, Washington, District of Columbia: For annual repairs, $20,000.

Repairs and preservation of public buildings: For repairs and preservation of public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $100,000.

LIGHT-HOUSE ESTABLISHMENT.

Salaries of keepers of light-houses: For salaries of nine hundred and ninety-one light-house and light-beacon keepers and their assistants, $594,600.

Expenses of light-vessels: For seamen's wages, rations, repairs, salaries, supplies, and incidental expenses of twenty-three light-ships and seven relief light-vessels, $230,000.

Expenses of buoyage: For expenses of raising, cleaning, painting, repairing, removing, and supplying losses of buoys, spindles, and day-beacons, and for chains, sinkers, and similar necessaries, $300,000.

Expenses of fog-signals: For repairs and incidental expenses in renewing, refitting, and improving fog-signals and buildings connected therewith, $40,000.

Inspecting lights: For expenses of visiting and inspecting lights and other aids to navigation, including rewards paid for information as to collisions, $4,000.

Supplies of light-houses: For supplying the light-houses and beacon-lights on the Atlantic, Gulf, Lake, and Pacific coasts with oil, wicks, glass chimneys, chamois skins, spirits of wine, whiting, polishing powder, towels, brushes, soap, paint, and other cleansing materials, and for expenses of gauging, testing, transportation, delivery of oil, fuel, and other supplies for light-houses and fog-signals, for books for light-stations, and other incidental and necessary expenses, $350,000.

Repairs of light-houses: For repairs and incidental expenses of refitting and improving light-houses and buildings connected therewith, and for expenses of repairing and keeping in repair illuminating apparatus and machinery, $275,000.

Lighting and buoyage of the Mississippi, Missouri, and Ohio Rivers: For maintenance of lights on the Mississippi, Ohio, and Missouri Rivers, and such buoys as may be necessary, $125,000, to be expended under the direction of the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army.

Light-houses, beacons, and fog-signals.

For erection of pier-head lights on the northern and northwestern lakes, $10,000.

For protecting the site at Grosse Point light near Chicago, Illinois, $5,000.

For establishing a day-beacon on Anita Rock, San Francisco Harbor, California, $2,300.

For establishing day-beacons on the coasts of Maine, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts, $10,000.

For commencing the construction of a light-house at Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior, Michigan, $25,000.

For purchase of additional land, and moving the light-house at Egg Island, New Jersey, $5,000.

For establishing and replacing day-beacons on the coasts of New Hampshire, Maine, and Massachusetts, $10,000.

For rebuilding light-house at Muscle Bed Shoal, Rhode Island, $6,000.

For light-station at Conimicut, Rhode Island, $5,000.

For protecting the site of light-house at Absecom, New Jersey, $5,000.

For rebuilding the frame beacon erected near main light at Tybee Island, Georgia, $3,000.

For building a dwelling and repairing a station at Cape Canaveral, Florida, $4,000.

For protecting the site of Cape Saint Blas light-station, Florida, $2,000.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING.

For labor and expenses of engraving and printing, namely: For labor, (by the day, piece, or contract,) including labor of workmen skilled in engraving, transferring, plate-printing, and other specialties necessary for carrying on the work of engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, the pay for such labor to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury at rates not exceeding the rates usually paid for such work; and for other expenses of engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States; for paper for notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, including mill expenses, boxing, and transportation; for materials other than paper required in the work of engraving and printing; for purchase of engravers' tools, dies, rolls, and plates, and for machinery and repairs of the same, and for expenses of operating macerating machines for the destruction of the United States notes, bonds, national-bank notes, and other obligations of the United States authorized to be destroyed, $800,000.

COAST SURVEY.

Survey of the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf coasts: For every purpose and object necessary for and incident to the continuation of the survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and the western coast of the United States, and the Mississippi River to the head of ship navigation, with soundings and observations of deep-sea temperatures in the Gulf Stream and the Gulf of Mexico, and observations of currents along the same coasts, the continuation of the survey of the Pacific coasts of the United States, with soundings and observations of deep-sea temperatures in the branch of the Japan Stream off, and observations of other currents along, the same coasts, and the preparation, engraving, lithographing, and issuing of charts, the preparation and publication of the Coast Pilot and other results of the coast survey, the purchase of materials therefor, and including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, and pay and subsistence of engineers for the steamers engaged on those coasts, $350,000.

Repairs of vessels, Coast Survey: For repairs and maintenance of the complement of vessels used in the Coast Survey, $30,000.

Publishing observations, Coast Survey: For continuing the publications of observations, and their discussion, made in the progress of the coast survey, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, the publication to be made at the Public Printing Office, $6,000.

General expenses, Coast Survey: General expenses of the Coast Survey, in reference to the Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific coasts of the United States, namely: For rent of buildings, (excepting the workshops for standard weights and measures,) for offices, workrooms, and workshops, $13,600.

For rent of suboffice in San Francisco, California, $2,000.

For rent of fire-proof buildings, for the safe-keeping and preservation of the original astronomical, magnetic, hydrographic, and other records, the original topographical and hydrographic maps and charts, the engraved plates, instruments, and other valuable articles of the Coast Survey, $5,000.

For fuel for all the offices and buildings, $2,000.

For the transportation of instruments, maps, and charts, the purchase of new instruments, books, maps, and charts, and for gas and other miscellaneous expenses, $9,400.

Metric standard of weights and measures: For construction and verification of standard weights and measures for the custom-houses of the United States and for the several States, and of metric standards for the same, $3,000.

For rent of workshops in building No. 215 South Capitol street, $400.

For rent of fire-proof rooms in building for the safe-keeping and preservation of finished weights, measures, balances, and metric standards, $1,000.

For fuel and lights, $300.

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTS.

Transportation of United States securities: For transportation of notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, $25,000.

Expenses of national currency: For paper, engraving, printing, express charges, and other expenses, $150,000.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to have the records of captured and abandoned property examined and information furnished therefrom for the use and protection of the Government, $2,500.

For expenses in detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons engaged in counterfeiting Treasury notes, bonds, national-bank notes, and other securities of the United States, and the coinage thereof, and for detecting other frauds upon the Government, $100,000, to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

For compensation in lieu of moieties in certain cases under customs-revenue laws, $100,000.

Propagation of food-fishes: For introduction of shad into the waters of the Pacific and Atlantic States, the Gulf States, and of the Mississippi Valley, and of salmon, whitefish, and other useful food-fishes into the waters of the United States to which they are best adapted, and for continuing the inquiry into the causes of the decrease of food-fishes of the United States, $40,000.

Illustrations for report on food-fishes: For preparation of illustrations for the Report of the United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries, $1,000.

For fuel, light, water, and miscellaneous items required by the janitors and firemen in the proper care of the buildings, furniture, and heating-apparatus, such as brooms, mops, brushes, buckets, wheelbarrows, shovels, saws, hatchets, hammers, &c., for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $280,000.

For furniture and repairs of furniture and carpets for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $75,000.

For heating, ventilating, and hoisting-apparatus, and repairs of same, for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $50,000.

For pay of custodians and janitors for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $75,000.

For vaults, safes, and locks, and repair of same, for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $25,000.

For photographing, engraving, and printing plans for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $1,000.

UNDER THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

Armories and arsenals:

For repairs and preservation of grounds, buildings, and machinery of the arsenal at Springfield, Massachusetts, $10,000.

Rock Island arsenal: For a rolling-mill and forging-shop (shop F) for the armory at Rock Island arsenal, Rock Island, Illinois, $50,000.

For an iron-working and finishing shop (shop G) for the arsenal, $30,000.

For general care, preservation, and improvement of sewers, new roads, care and preservation of water-power, of permanent buildings and bridges, including painting, building fences, and grading grounds, and repairs and extension of railroads, and for care and preservation of the Rock Island bridge, and expense of operating and maintaining the draw, $20,000.

For repairs of arsenals, and to meet such unforeseen expenditures at arsenals as accidents or other contingencies during the year may render necessary, $30,000.

Surveys of northern and northwestern lakes and Mississippi River:

For continuing surveys of Lakes Erie and Ontario; determination of points in aid of State surveys and construction of maps; continuation of triangulation south from Chicago and east to Lake Erie; survey of the Mississippi River; and miscellaneous, $75,000: Provided, That the proceeds of the sale of the steamers belonging to the survey of the northern and northwestern lakes shall be placed in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation for said survey, and the whole amount shall be immediately available.

That upon the happening of the contingency on which the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue bonds of the United States in payment to James B. Eads on account of the improvement by a system of jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi River, under and by virtue of the provisions in the act of March 3, 1875, entitled "An act making appropriations for the repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to pay the sum that shall become due to the said James B. Eads in money instead of the issue of such bonds, and the sum necessary for said purpose is hereby appropriated.

BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS IN AND AROUND WASHINGTON.

Improvement and care of public grounds: For filling in and improving grounds south of Executive Mansion, $3,000.

For ordinary care and extension of greenhouses at the nursery, $1,000.

For ordinary care of Lafayette Square, $1,000.

For care of and improvement of reservation No. 3, (monumental grounds,) $1,000.

For annual repair of fences, $1,000.

For manure, and hauling of the same, $1,000.

For painting iron fences, $2,000.

For repair of seats, $500.

For purchase and repair of tools, $500.

For trees, tree-stakes, lime, and whitewashing, $1,000.

For removing snow and ice, $1,000.

For flowers, pots, twine, and Italian lycopodium, $500.

For abating nuisances, $500.

For care of and repairs to fountains in the public grounds, $500.

For improving various reservations, $2,000.

For purchase of stock for the nursery, and care of the same, $500.

For ordinary repairs to Benning's and the Anacostia and Chain bridges, $1,000.

For pedestal for the statue of General George H. Thomas, the unexpended balance of the sum appropriated for this purpose in the act of July 31, 1876, is hereby re-appropriated and rendered available.

For the naval monument, the unexpended balance of the sum appropriated to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy for the purpose of completing the statue of "Peace," platform, steps, and circular basin of the naval monument contracted for by the officers of the Navy with Franklin Simmons, by act of July 31, 1876, is hereby re-appropriated and rendered available.

For repairs of the Executive Mansion, refurnishing the same, and fuel for the same, and for care and necessary repairs of the greenhouses, $17,000.

For lighting the Executive Mansion, namely, for gas, pay of lamp-lighters, gas-fitters, plumbers and plumbing, lamps, lamp-posts, matches, and repairs of all kinds, fuel for watchmen's lodges, and for greenhouses at the nursery, $15,000: Provided, That the superintendent of meters at the Capitol shall hereafter take the statement of the meters of the several Department buildings in the city of Washington, and render to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department the consumption of gas each month in said buildings respectively.

For repairing and extending water-pipes, purchase of apparatus to clean them, and for cleaning the springs that supply the Capitol, Executive Mansion, and War and Navy Departments, $3,000.

Washington aqueduct: For engineering, maintenance, and general repairs, $15,000.

For repairs and care of the telegraph to connect the Capitol with the Departments and the Public Printing Office, $500.

Signal Office:

For expenses of the observation and report of storms by telegraph and signal for the benefit of commerce and agriculture throughout the United States; for manufacture, purchase, or repair of meteorological and other necessary instruments for telegraphing reports; for expenses of storm-signals, announcing probable approach and force of storms; for continuing the establishment and connection of stations at life-saving stations and light-houses; for instrument shelters; for hire, furniture, and expenses of offices maintained for public use in cities or ports receiving reports; for river reports; for books, periodicals, newspapers, and stationery; and for incidental expenses not otherwise provided for, $300,000.

Construction, maintenance, and repair of military telegraph lines: For the construction and continuing the construction, maintenance, and use of military telegraph lines on the Indian and Mexican frontiers; for the connection of military posts and stations, and for the better protection of immigration and the frontier settlements from depredations, especially in the State of Texas and the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, and the Indian Territory, under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1875, $15,000.

For geographical surveys of the territory west of the one hundredth meridian, and for preparing, engraving, and printing the cuts, charts, plates, and atlas-sheets for geographical surveys west of the one hundredth meridian, $20,000; which shall be immediately available.

Collection and payment of bounty, prize-money, and other claims of colored soldiers and sailors: For salaries of agents and clerks; rent of offices, fuel, lights, stationery, and similar necessaries; office furniture and repairs; transportation of officers and agents; telegraphing and postage, $10,000.

For payment of costs and charges of State penitentiaries for the care, clothing, maintenance, and medical attendance of United States military convicts confined in them, $15,000.

For publication of the official records of the rebellion, both of the Union and confederate armies, $10,000; to be paid to persons only who are not otherwise employed by the Government.

For care and support and medical treatment of seventy-five transient paupers, medical and surgical patients, in the city of Washington, under a contract to be made with such institutions as the Surgeon-General of the Army may direct, $15,000; to be expended under his direction.

Support of National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers:

For current expenses, including construction and repairs, namely, for Central branch, Eastern branch, Northwestern branch, Southern branch, and for outdoor relief and incidental expenses, $880,000.

For the support of the Leavenworth military prison, at Leavenworth, Kansas, $40,000.

State, War, and Navy Department building:

For continuation of the east wing of the building, and for working-material for the north wing, $350,000; which shall be immediately available, and expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

For furnishing artificial limbs or appliances, or commutation therefor, and for transportation, $100,000.

For providing surgical appliances for the relief of persons disabled in the military or naval service of the United States not otherwise provided for, $3,000.

For preparation of illustrations to complete the second edition of the Medical and Surgical History of the War, Part III, $25,000.

Navy-yards and stations:

For repairs at the different navy-yards and stations, and preservation of the same, $150,000.

Department of Agriculture:

For labor, manure, repairing concrete walks and laying new concrete walks, purchase of trees for arboretum, and for tools and repairs of mowing-machines; in all, $5,000.

GENERAL MISCELLANEOUS.

To pay Shepherd S. Everett for clerical services in the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives, rendered necessary by reports of the commissioners of claims, $400.

To pay Frank W. Millar, page to Sergeant-at-Arms room, House of Representatives, from the 4th day of December, 1876, to March 4, 1877, at the rate of $2.50 per day, $227.50.

That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and are hereby, authorized and directed to audit and pass the accounts of such newspapers as published an advertisement for proposals for Indian goods, medical supplies, and groceries, in August and September, 1876, on the basis of the agreements made with the publishers of those newspapers by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs at the time the insertion of the advertisement was ordered; and that the amounts thus found to be due be paid out of the appropriations for the support of the Indian service for the current fiscal year available for payment for advertising.

To pay William C. Nicholls, late assistant treasurer at Chicago, Illinois, at the rate of $5,000 per annum, for the first twenty-seven days in July, 1875, less the amount paid him as cashier for that period, at the rate of $2,500 per annum, $184.94.

To enable the clerk of the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives to revise, correct, and continue the land map (known as the Centennial map) prepared for the use of said committee, $1,000, and said clerk shall supervise the publication and sale of said map at cost price.

To pay S. S. Strachan for services under the Doorkeeper of the House for the month of August, 1874, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, $111.60.

That the sum of $375,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be appropriated to pay the amount due to mail contractors for mail service performed in the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Tennessee, and Virginia in the years 1859, 1860, 1861, and before said States respectively engaged in war against the United States; and the provisions of 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States shall not be applicable to the payments herein authorized: Provided, That any such claims which have been paid by the Confederate States government shall not be again paid.

The total sum appropriated by this bill is $14,948,595.46.

MICHIGAN ELECTORAL VOTE.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe a message has been sent to the Senate notifying that body of the action of the House on the objection to one of the electoral votes of the State of Michigan.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has directed the Clerk to communicate to the Senate the resolution adopted by the House.

Mr. HALE. Has the Senate been notified that the House is ready to receive the Senate to proceed with the counting of the electoral vote?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has directed that the Senate be informed of the resolution of the House that the vote be counted.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senate understand that the House is ready to receive that body to proceed with counting the electoral vote, until so notified in terms?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain such a motion.

Mr. HALE. I make that motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine moves that the Clerk be directed to notify the Senate that the House is now ready to receive that body in joint meeting to proceed with the further counting of the electoral vote.

The motion was agreed to.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. CABELL. I ask leave of the House to have printed in the RECORD some remarks, which I would have addressed to the House this morning on the subject of the electoral vote of Louisiana if I had succeeded in obtaining the floor.

Mr. PAGE. I object.

After an interval,

Mr. PAGE. I will withdraw the objection, having been solicited to do so by several gentlemen. I understand that there are a number of other gentlemen who desire a like privilege.

There was no objection, and the leave was granted.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I ask the same privilege.

There was no objection, and the leave was granted.

Mr. DE BOLT. I ask a like privilege.

There was no objection, and the leave was granted.

Mr. PAGE. I move that any gentlemen who have remarks, if they desire to present them, on the casting of the vote of Louisiana have leave to have them printed as a part of the debates in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. [Cries of "No, no!"] If you grant leave to some, why not give the right to everybody?

Several members objected.

COUNTING THE ELECTORAL VOTES.

At four o'clock and forty-five minutes p. m. the Doorkeeper announced the Senate of the United States.

The Senate entered the Hall, preceded by its Sergeant-at-Arms and headed by its President pro tempore and its Secretary, the members and officers of the House rising to receive them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate took his seat as Presiding Officer of the joint meeting of the two Houses, the Speaker of the House occupying a chair upon his left.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint meeting of Congress for counting the electoral vote resumes its session. The two Houses retired to consider separately and decide upon the vote of the State of Michigan. The Secretary of the Senate will read the resolution adopted by the Senate.

The Secretary of the Senate read the resolution of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved, That the objection made to the vote of Daniel L. Crossman, one of the electors of Michigan, is not good in law and is not sustained by any lawful evidence.
Resolved, That said vote be counted with the other votes of the electors of said State, notwithstanding the objections made thereto.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk of the House of Representatives will now read the resolution adopted by the House of Representatives.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives read the resolution adopted by the House, as follows:

Whereas the fact being established that it is about twelve years since the alleged ineligible elector exercised any of the functions of a United States commissioner, it is not sufficiently proven that at the time of his appointment he was an officer of the United States: Therefore,
Resolved, That the vote objected to be counted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Neither House having concurred in an affirmative vote to reject a vote of the State of Michigan, the entire vote of that State will be counted.

Senator ALLISON, (one of the tellers.) In the State of Michigan 11 votes were cast for Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, for President, and 11 votes for William A. Wheeler, of New York, for Vice-President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Having opened the certificate from the State of Minnesota, the Chair directs the reading of the same by the tellers in the hearing and presence of the two Houses. A corresponding certificate received by mail is also submitted to the tellers.

Mr. STONE (one of the tellers) read the certificate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there objections to the certificate of the electoral vote of the State of Minnesota? If there be none the vote of that State will be counted. The tellers will announce the vote of the State of Minnesota.

Mr. STONE, (one of the tellers.) In the State of Minnesota 5 votes were cast for Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, for President, and 5 votes for William A. Wheeler, of New York, for Vice-President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Having opened the certificate from the State of Mississippi the Chair directs the reading of the same by the tellers in the hearing and presence of the two Houses. A corresponding certificate received by mail is also submitted to the tellers.

Senator ALLISON, (one of the tellers) read the certificate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there objections to the certificate of the electoral vote of the State of Mississippi? If there be none the vote of that State will be counted. The tellers will announce the vote of the State of Mississippi.

Senator ALLISON, (one of the tellers.) In the State of Mississippi 8 votes were cast for Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, for President, and 8 votes for Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, for Vice-President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Having opened the certificate from the State of Missouri, the Chair directs the reading of the same by the tellers in the hearing and presence of the two Houses. A corresponding certificate received by mail is also submitted to the tellers.

Mr. STONE (one of the tellers) read the certificate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there objections to the certificate of the electoral vote of the State of Missouri? If there be none the vote of that State will be counted. The tellers will announce the vote of the State of Missouri.

Mr. STONE, (one of the tellers.) In the State of Missouri 15 votes were cast for Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, for President, and 15 votes for Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, for Vice-President.

Senator WHYTE. I propose that by unanimous consent the reading of the certificate of the appointment of the messengers and also of the certificate of the governor of the appointment of the electors be dispensed with and that the tellers merely read the vote as cast in the electoral colleges, unless some gentleman calls for the reading of the certificate, and that unless some gentleman calls for the reading of the certificates the count shall be proceeded with until there is some State that is objected to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the suggestion of the Senator from Maryland? The Chair hears none, and the tellers will now read only the list of votes attached to the certificates of electors, omitting the certificate of the governor and of the appointment of the messenger.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I suppose the certificate will be printed in full, as a matter of course?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be printed in full.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Very well, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Having opened the certificate from the State of Nebraska, the Chair hands it to the tellers, who will announce the vote of that State.

Senator ALLISON, (one of the tellers.) In the State of Nebraska 3 votes were cast for R. B. Hayes, of Ohio, for President, and 3 votes for W. A. Wheeler, of New York, for Vice-President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there objections to counting the vote of Nebraska? The Chair hears none.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Having opened the certificate from the State of Nevada, the Chair hands it to the tellers, who will announce the vote of that State. Is there objection to the counting of the vote of that State?

Mr. SPRINGER. I submit the following objection to the counting of the vote of one of the electors of the State of Nevada.

The Clerk of the House read the objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. If there be no objection I ask that the evidence accompanying this objection may be printed in the RECORD, so that we may have an opportunity to examine it. I hope there will be no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to dispensing with the reading of the testimony and to its being printed in the RECORD?

Mr. HUBBELL. I object.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will state that when the two Houses shall separate I think a recess will be taken until to-morrow morning, and in the mean time the evidence will be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair cannot entertain a motion to take a recess.

Mr. SPRINGER. I did not make the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the Chair misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. HUBBELL. I withdraw the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further objection? The Chair hears none. Are there further objections to the certificates of the State of Nevada? The Chair hears none.

The objection submitted by Mr. SPRINGER to the counting of one of the votes of Nevada, and the evidence accompanying the same, are as follows:

The undersigned Senators and Representatives object to the vote of R. M. Daggett as an elector from the State of Nevada upon the grounds following, namely:

That the said R. M. Daggett was on the 7th day of November, 1876, and had been for a long period prior thereto, and thereafter continued to be a United States commissioner for the circuit and district courts of the United States for the said State, and held therefore an office of trust and profit under the United States, and as such could not be constitutionally appointed an elector under the Constitution of the United States.

Wherefore the undersigned say that the said R. M. Daggett was not a duly appointed elector, and that his vote as an elector should not be counted.

And the undersigned hereto annex the evidence taken before the committee of the House of Representatives on the powers, privileges, and duties of the House to sustain said objection.

W. H. BARNUM, Connecticut;
WILLIAM A. WALLACE, Pennsylvania;
FRANK HEREFORD, West Virginia;
Senators.

J. R. TUCKER, Virginia,
JOHN L. VANCE, Ohio,
WM. A. J. SPARKS,
JNO. S. SAVAGE,
LEVI MAISH,
G. A. JENKS,
WILLIAM M. SPRINGER,
Representatives.

COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES,
Washington, February 9, 1877.

R. M. DAGGETT, sworn and examined.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Question. Were you a candidate for the office of presidential elector in the State of Nevada at the presidential election in November, 1876?

Answer. I was.

Q. Were you present in the college at the time of the vote for President and Vice-President?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you cast a vote for President and Vice-President?

A. I did.

Q. For whom did you vote?

A. I voted for Hayes and Wheeler.

Q. Mr. Hayes for President, and Mr. Wheeler for Vice-President?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you the messenger who brought the vote to Washington by the appointment of the college?

A. I am.

Q. Did you hold any office under the United States prior to the election?

A. Yes.

Q. What office was that?

A. I was clerk of the Federal courts, the district and circuit courts of the State of Nevada.

Q. When were you appointed?

A. I think in 1868.

Q. Was that under the State government?

A. Yes; Nevada became a State in 1864, I believe.

Q. Do you hold that office now?

A. I do not.

Q. Who holds that office?

A. I think it is a man named McLean.

Q. When was he appointed?

A. I don't know exactly when he was appointed.

Q. By whom were you appointed?

A. I was appointed first by Associate Justice Field of the circuit court, and subsequently by Judge Sawyer of the circuit court, and by Judge Hillyer for the district.

Q. The appointment was made not by the judge but by the court, was it not?

A. Made by the judge.

Q. In court?

A. No, I believe not; it may have been.

Q. Where were you when you received the appointment?

A. I was in Virginia City for the circuit court.

Q. How was the appointment notified to you?

A. It was sent to me by mail.
Q. Did you appear in court and take the oath and give the bond required by law?
A. Yes, sir; subsequently.
Q. You were the keeper of the records of the court; was not your appointment made a matter of record in that court?
A. I presume so.
Q. And your qualification was also entered upon the record?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you cease to be the clerk of the court, or cease to perform its duties?
A. I ceased on the 6th day of November, the day before the election.
Q. What made you cease to perform its duties?
A. Because it was a question in my mind whether I would be eligible as an elector if I continued to hold the office, and I therefore resigned.
Q. How did you resign?
A. I resigned by telegraph.
Q. A telegram to whom?
A. To Judge Sawyer in San Francisco, and also to Judge Hillyer in Carson. I was then living in Virginia City.
Q. Where is Virginia City?
A. It is about twelve miles from Carson.
Q. Carson is the capital where the Federal court holds its sessions?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where is the telegram which you sent to either of those judges?
A. I do not know. It is not with me; I did not bring it.
Q. Have you got a copy of the telegram?
A. I think not.
Q. Who has? To whom did you send it?
A. I sent it to Judge Sawyer.
Q. Directed to what point?
A. To San Francisco.
Q. Does he live in San Francisco?
A. Well, he is judge of the district comprising those three States: California, Nevada, and Oregon.
Q. Does he reside in San Francisco?
A. Most of the time.
Q. You say you sent a telegram to another judge? Whom?
A. Judge Hillyer, of Carson, the district judge.
Q. And you have no copy of that telegram?
A. I have not. I did not think of saving it.
Q. Did you ever receive an answer to that telegram?
A. I received an answer from Judge Sawyer the same day, about an hour afterward.
Q. Where is that telegram?
A. I left it in Virginia City; I did not think of bringing it. I believe I have it.
Q. Why did not you bring it?
A. Well, I did not know that there would be any question about it.
Q. Did not you know what you were sent for?
A. I was only subpœnaed here two or three days ago.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. You telegraphed Judge Sawyer on the 6th of November?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you not give the exact words of the telegram?
A. I think I can.
Q. Give the exact words then.
A. I think the telegram read this way: "Honorable Alonzo Sawyer, San Francisco: I have this day filed my resignation as clerk of the circuit court of the ninth circuit, and request the acceptance of my resignation." I, at the same time that I sent that telegram to Judge Sawyer, sent to Carson my resignation.
Q. No; do not say you sent your resignation. I am only asking about the telegram to Judge Sawyer. Have you given the whole of that?
A. Yes, sir; I think that is about the substance of it, and I think pretty nearly the words.
Q. You received from him an answer?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. On the same day, about an hour afterward?
A. An hour or two afterward.
Q. That you have got, I suppose?
A. I think it is among my papers in Virginia City.
Q. Do you remember the exact words of that?
A. Pretty nearly.
Q. Give them.
A. "Your resignation as clerk of the circuit court is accepted. Alonzo Sawyer."
Q. Have you ever had any other communication with Judge Sawyer on the subject?
A. I have not.
Q. You have never written him?
A. I never have.
Q. Nor received a letter from him?
A. Never.
Q. You did not send to him a copy of your written resignation?
A. By telegraph?
Q. No; you say you wrote something; you did not send him a copy of that?
A. No. Do you mean, send it by mail?
Q. Yes, or any way.
A. I did send it.
Q. How?
A. I sent it to Carson the same day.
Q. I am talking about Judge Sawyer. Did you send to Judge Sawyer any copy or any paper?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you send him?
A. My resignation.
Q. In what form?
A. In the usual form of resignations.
Q. You sent him a copy of your written paper?
A. My written paper, my resignation, you mean?
Q. Yes; do not you understand me? Did you send Judge Sawyer anything in the world but the telegram?
A. Yes.
Q. What else?
A. I sent him my resignation.
Q. You mean a written paper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you send him the original that was filed, or a copy?
A. I sent him the original; I only made one.
Q. You made one; then you did not file it?
A. I sent it down to be filed.
Q. You sent it to him to file, by mail?
A. I did not send it to San Francisco.
Q. Where did you send it?
A. I sent it to Carson.
Q. Now I think I get an answer. Did you send anything to Judge Sawyer?
A. Yes.
Q. What?
A. I sent that resignation.
Q. That paper?
A. Yes.
Q. To Judge Sawyer, at San Francisco?
A. I did not say that I did send it to San Francisco?
Q. Well, he was there, was he not?
A. He was there that day, I think.
Q. Then that day you did not send it. Did you send it to San Francisco the next day?
A. I did not send it to San Francisco.
Q. At all?
A. Not at all.
Q. Did you ever send the original paper anywhere?
A. Yes.
Q. Where did that go?
A. To Carson.
Q. How did you send that?
A. I sent it by mail.
Q. You mailed it in Virginia City, direct to Carson, did you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you mail it in Virginia City?
A. I mailed it on the 6th.
Q. What time, or hour, on the 6th?
A. Along about eleven o'clock in the day.
Q. When did the next post leave Virginia City for Carson?
A. At about half past two in the afternoon.
Q. You say you telegraphed to Judge Hillyer?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you that telegram?
A. They were very much alike, except the change of name.
Q. As near as you can remember, were they exactly the same?
A. Yes, sir; precisely the same, with such changes as there would necessarily be in telegraphing to a different person.
Q. Did you receive an answer from him?
A. I did not.
Q. He never answered you at all?
A. No.
Q. By letter or telegraph?
A. No.
Q. Has the circuit court ever been in session since that time?
A. Yes.
Q. When?
A. On the 6th of November.
Q. In session where?
A. In Carson City.
Q. Were you there?
A. I was not.
Q. When were you next after the 6th of November in the court?
A. I have not been there since.
Q. Personally, therefore, you do not know who transacted the business as clerk in the circuit court on the 7th day of November?
A. I do not.
Q. Did you yourself give any directions about the business of the court to be transacted on that next day?
A. I did not.
Q. Have you ever since?
A. I have not.
Q. Who is doing the business of the clerk?
A. There is a clerk there, Mr. McLean; I have forgotten his first name.
Q. Do you know whether he has been appointed by the circuit court?
A. Yes; I am certain he has.
Q. Well, you understand that he has?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When was he appointed?
A. That I do not know exactly.
Q. What month?
A. O, he was appointed in November.
Q. Do you know that?
A. Yes.
Q. You know that?
A. Well, I do not know it, because I never saw the appointment.
Q. And you have never seen any record of his appointment?
A. No, I never have.
Q. Was Mr. McLean your deputy?
A. No, he was not.
Q. Did your deputy make the entries and keep the minutes of the court until Mr. McLean took possession of the office?
A. I presume he did; I do not know. I never was there afterward.
Q. Did you make any communications to him?
A. I did not.
Q. Where is the paper that you call your written resignation?
A. It must be on file in Carson, in the clerk's office.
Q. That is to say, as far as you know?
A. So far as I know.
Q. Give the language, as near as you can, of that written paper which you call your resignation?
A. I think it was addressed to Judge Sawyer, and ran about in this style: "Having been nominated as presidential elector, I hereby tender my resignat'on as clerk of the circuit court, ninth circuit, and trust the resignation may be immediately accepted." I think that is about the purport of it.
Q. You inclosed that in an envelope, did you?
A. Yes.
Q. Directed to whom?
A. To Judge Sawyer.
Q. At Carson City?
A. At Carson City.
Q. It was sealed up, directed to Judge Sawyer, and put into the mail?
A. Yes.
Q. Judge Sawyer was then in San Francisco?
A. Yes; he was then in San Francisco.
Q. Do you know of your own knowledge that Judge Sawyer has ever been in Carson City since?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you there?
A. I was not.
Q. Do not you know what I mean by your own knowledge? Did you see him?
A. No; I did not see him.
Q. Very well, you do not know of your own knowledge that he has ever been there since?
A. Not by seeing him.

Q. That is your knowledge. You do not know then, of your own knowledge, that Judge Sawyer ever saw that package or letter?
A. I do not.
Q. You do not know, of your own knowledge, that it is not now in the post-office?
A. I do not.
Q. Have your accounts as clerk ever been settled?
A. Yes, I think so.
Q. You think so; do you know?
A. I did not attend to the business much; my deputy always did it.
Q. What deputy?
A. Mr. Edwards.
Q. Is he still there?
A. He is in Carson.
Q. Is he still in the office of the clerk?
A. I do not know.
Q. Do you know whether he has ever been out of it?
A. I do not know; I presume he was out of it after I resigned.
Q. Do you know that he was ever out of it? Were you there? Do you know whether he did not attend in court every day and transact business?
A. I do not of my own knowledge.
Q. Did not you as clerk receive money to be deposited to your credit in bank?
A. Frequently.
Q. In what bank?
A. I have forgotten where the deposits were made. We shifted them around quite often.
Q. In different banks?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Give us the names of some of them.
A. The Bank of California, and Wells, Fargo & Co.
Q. What amount of money had you standing in your name or to your credit as clerk of the circuit court of the United States?
A. I think not a dollar.
Q. It had all been previously paid out?
A. Yes.
Q. Paid out for what purposes?
A. Paid out in the regular course of business.
Q. You think there were no moneys on deposit to your credit as clerk at that time?
A. I think not; I am not positive.
Q. Has your bond ever been discharged?
A. Not that I know of.
Q. I repeat now what I asked you before: Have your accounts as clerk, to your knowledge, ever been settled?
A. We made our quarterly settlements.
Q. That is not an answer to my question.
A. You mean since that time?
Q. Have your accounts ever been finally settled?
A. Well, I do not know that there was any accounts to settle.
Q. You received fees?
A. I received fees.
Q. And you were paid through fees?
A. Paid through fees.
Q. Up to a certain amount or all the fees?
A. Up to a certain amount.
Q. Very well, then, there must have been, of course, an account to be kept of the amount of fees received, and, so far as they exceeded the limit, you paid them over to the treasury, did you not?
A. I should have done so had they ever exceeded the amount.
Q. When were your periodical accounts regularly settled?
A. They were settled semi-annually.
Q. In what months?
A. In June and December, the 31st.
Q. Then you settled an account on the 31st of June, 1876?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you ever settled an account since?
A. I have not.
Q. Could you state, if you were asked, the items on different sides of the account?
A. O, no, I could not.
Q. Have you ever had any communication with Mr. Edwards since the 6th of November?
A. I have not; I have never been in Carson since but once; that was at the meeting of the college, and I did not see him.
Q. Did you have any communication with him on the 6th of November?
A. No, sir. I was in Virginia City.
Q. When first after the 6th of November did you visit Carson City?
A. Not until the meeting of the college.
Q. That was on the 6th of December?
A. I think so.
Q. In what business have you been engaged since?
A. Well, I am in the mining business principally, and always have been.
Q. Do you say that the circuit court has been in session since the 6th of November?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it not the district court?
A. The circuit court was in session also.
Q. Are you sure?
A. I am pretty positive.
Q. What are the times for the meeting of the circuit court in Nevada?
A. I don't remember just now; they made some changes, I think, in the last Congress.
Q. As the law stood on the 1st of November what was the time for the meeting of the court, not the district but the circuit court?
A. My opinion is that the circuit court was to meet on the 6th of November; that is my impression now and that is what I thought at the time.
Q. Your impression from what?
A. From the law. The first Monday, I think, in November.
Q. You can easily tell, cannot you, by looking at the law?
A. Yes, I can tell.
Q. I wish you would tell us, then, before you leave the city.
A. I will do so.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. You did not file the paper that you call your resignation in the clerk's office on the 6th of November.
A. I transmitted it for filing—or rather to the judge.
Q. To Judge Sawyer at Carson?
A. Yes.
Q. He was that day at San Francisco?
A. I understood that he was.
Q. Well, you got a telegram from him from there?
A. Yes.
Q. How long would it take Judge Sawyer to come by the quickest route from San Francisco to Carson?
A. Twenty hours, I believe.
Q. Coming by steamer?
A. No, by rail.
Q. You do not know when he did come?
A. I do not.
Q. Then if he had left San Francisco on the 6th he would not get to Carson until what time?
A. He could have got there on the 7th.
Q. What time on the 7th?
A. It would have been along in the evening.
Q. When you communicated with the judges, as you say, on the 6th, did you communicate to your deputy, Edwards, that you were no longer clerk of the court?
A. I did not.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. You did not exercise the duties of the clerk since the time of your telegram?
A. I have not.
Q. And they have been performed, as I understand, by a successor appointed by the court?
A. Yes.
Q. Your recollection is that the district and circuit court were then in session that day in Carson City?
A. I believe that was the day fixed for it.
Q. Where do I understand you to say Judge Sawyer was?
A. He was in Carson.
Q. Is there a railroad from Virginia City to Carson?
A. Yes.
Q. How far is it in time by rail?
A. Well, the railroad is a little long and pretty crooked, about twenty-four miles; they make it generally in about two hours and a half, sometimes a little less.
Q. The telegram was sent at what time to Judge Hillyer?
A. I think along about noon sometime.
Q. You put your resignation in the mail before the hour of sending the mail from Virginia City to Carson?
A. Yes, in order that it might reach there on that day, the 6th.
Q. Do you remember whether the envelope was addressed to your deputy or a clerk or to the judge himself?
A. It was addressed to the judge himself.
Q. And you sent a resignation to each judge, if I understand?
A. To each.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. Not a written paper to each?
A. Yes; I sent a resignation to each.
Q. The telegram you said you sent to each?
A. I sent the resignation also.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. Then you sent a resignation to each of the judges through the mail on the 6th?
A. Yes; and at the same time I telegraphed them that I had so sent it.
Q. And Judge Hillyer was then, as I understand, holding court at Carson City?
A. The circuit court, I think, was to meet.

By Mr. MAISH:

Q. He was the district judge?
A. Yes, sir; but I had understood that Judge Sawyer was in San Francisco; I had learned it from some source, and therefore telegraphed to him there.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. Let me see if I understand you about this resignation directed to the district judge. Did you send exactly the same paper to the district judge that you had sent the circuit judge?
A. Not the same paper.
Q. Was it a copy of the same paper?
A. Pretty nearly.
Q. Can you give the contents of the paper?
A. A moment ago I gave it, and the other was pretty nearly a copy of it, with the exception of such changes as would necessarily be made.
Q. Did you put that in an envelope directed to somebody?
A. I did.
Q. How was it directed?
A. To Judge Hillyer.
Q. Give the direction altogether.
A. "Hon. E. W. Hillyer, U. S. District Judge, Carson City."
Q. Was the inside also directed in the same way to Judge Hillyer?
A. Yes.
Q. With the same designation of office and everything else as in the other?
A. Yes.
Q. You do not know whether he ever received that letter or not?
A. I think he told me he had received it.
Q. That is not evidence. Do you know it in any way?
A. O, no.
Q. You think that he afterward told you he had received it?
A. Yes, in Virginia City.
Q. When do you think he told you?
A. Well, probably a week after, or possibly two weeks.
Q. You do not know that Judge Hillyer was in Carson City on the 6th or 7th of November, do you? Knowledge is what I ask for.
A. I was not there.
Q. Well, you do not know then in any way that they were received, either of them?
A. That seems to be the kind of information you want. I do not.
Q. And if he did receive that letter to him, you do not know when he received it?
A. Of course not; I don't know that he received it at all unless I take his word for it.
Q. And you have no information of his having received it within two weeks?
A. What kind of information?
Q. From him?
A. I tell you, I think he told me so.
Q. Within two weeks he told you that he had received it; that was the information, was it not?
A. Yes, sir. He talked about sending the bankruptcy letters down; they were in Virginia City; that is the reason I happened to be there. He said he would send Mr. McLean up and remove the bankruptcy records; they had been in Virginia City for seven years, and I had been attending to that branch of the business.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. In your possession?
A. In my possession.

By Mr. FIELD:

Q. And remained in your possession until when?
A. They were locked up until Mr. McLean came up, some two or three days afterward.

Q. They remained in your possession until two or three weeks after?
A. No, not so long.
Q. For how long?
A. Well, some days.
Q. Some days after the 7th of November they remained in your possession?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then you gave them up?
A. Yes.
Q. Were those records locked up on the 6th of November?
A. Yes, they were always locked up.
Q. Did they remain locked; had they been touched?
A. Not that I know of.
Q. Who had charge of them?
A. I had.
Q. Nobody else under you?
A. Mr. Strother, the register in bankruptcy, had an office in the same place, and sometimes he had access to the documents.
Q. Was that bankruptcy business going on all the time from the 6th of November to the 6th of December?
A. It was not. There was no work done in the office or in any part of the office.
Q. Where was that bankruptcy business going on?
A. It was not going on at all.
Q. There was none?
A. There was none.
Q. But Mr. Strother remained there, did he not?
A. He was a register in bankruptcy in the same office?
Q. And he was there all the time?
A. Not all the time.
Q. Well, he was off and on?
A. Off and on.
Q. From the 6th until the present time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was he kept in office by Mr. McLean?
A. He is a register in bankruptcy, appointed by the judge.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. When did you mail your letter to Judge Hillyer?
A. I mailed it about the time I sent the dispatch, or pretty soon afterwards.
Q. What time did you send the dispatch?
A. Some time about twelve o'clock; between eleven and one some time.
Q. When did the mail leave Virginia City for Carson?
A. I think there are two mails, one in the morning and one at 2.30 p. m., or at 1.30—I am not sure which—along in the afternoon.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. Is there any special provision of law in regard to the appointment of district or circuit clerks in Nevada?
A. No.
Q. Nothing but the general provision that the clerk shall be appointed for each district court by the judge thereof, and that the clerk shall be appointed for the circuit court by the circuit judge of the same?
A. Yes.
Q. Your appointment was made by the judge?
A. Yes.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you put on to the two letters that you sent to Carson City the proper postage-stamps?
A. Yes.
Q. What time would these letters reach Carson in the ordinary course of the mail?
A. They ought to have reached there along in the evening of the 6th, about five or six o'clock.
Q. Did the fees of the office or either of your offices ever exceed the limits fixed by law?
A. No. I lost $500 a year running the office for eight years.
Q. At the time you resigned, was there any excess of fees above the limit prescribed by law?
A. O, no.
Q. You would owe the Government nothing, then?
A. O, no.

By Mr. BURCHARD:

Q. What do you mean?
A. Well, there was nothing in the office. I had to pay the rent—the Government did not; that is what was the matter—and I kept it on to accommodate a deputy.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. You have spoken of the time of mailing these letters. Are you certain you mailed them in time for the evening mail on the 6th?
A. That was my purpose in putting them in; I presumed so at the time; I did not doubt it at the time. Exactly at what time the cars went I am now unable to say, but I put them in the office on the supposition that I would get them there in time.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You signed your name to both resignations?
A. I did.

By Mr. TUCKER:

Q. How many hours does it take the mail to go from Virginia City to Carson?
A. About two hours and a half; sometimes a little less; it is twenty-four miles by rail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now withdraw to its Chamber that the two Houses may separately consider and decide upon this objection.

The Senate at five o'clock and forty-five minutes p. m. withdrew to their Chamber.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I move that the House take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. GARFIELD. I hope the gentleman will let us go on.

Mr. PAGE. If gentlemen on the opposite side of the House are really anxious to get through with the appropriation bills the only way to do it is to go on with the counting to-night until Oregon is reached.

The House divided on the motion of Mr. WOOD, of New York; and on a division there were—ayes 66, noes 82.

Before the result of this vote was announced,

Mr. WOOD of New York, Mr. VANCE of Ohio, and others called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was then taken; and there were—yeas 97, nays 88, not voting 105; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Atkins, John H. Baker, Banning, Blackburn, Bland, Bright, John Young Brown, Samuel D. Burchard, Cabell, Candler, Cate, Chittenden, John B. Clarke of Kentucky, John B. Clark, jr., of Missouri, Clymer, Cochrane, Collins, Cook, Cox, Culberson, Darrall, De Bolt, Durham, Eden, Ellis, Field, Finley, Forney, Foster, Franklin, Gause, Hale, Andrew H. Hamilton, Henry R. Harris, Hartzell, Abram S. Hewitt, Hill, Hoar, House, Humphreys, Hunton, Hurd, Jenks, Kehr, Kelley, Knott, Lamar, Lane, Levy, Lewis, Lynde, Mackey, Maish, Metcalfe, Money, Morrison, Mutchler, Payne, John F. Philips, Poppleton, Rea, Reagan, John Reilly, James B. Reilly, Rice, Riddle, William M. Robbins, Roberts, Sayler, Schleicher, Singleton, A. Herr Smith, Southard, Sparks, Springer, Stanton, Stenger, Stone, Terry, Thompson, Thornburgh, Martin I. Townsend, Washington Townsend, Tucker, Turney, John L. Vance, Waddell, Waldron, Alexander S. Wallace, Warner, Warren, Erastus Wells, Wigginton, Alpheus S. Williams, Benjamin Wilson, Fernando Wood, and Yeates—97.

NAYS—Messrs. William H. Baker, Ballou, Banks, Blair, Blount, William R. Brown, Horatio C. Burchard, Buttz, Cannon, Cason, Conger, Crapo, Crounse, Cutler, Danford, Davy, Denison, Dunnell, Eames, Evans, Flye, Fort, Freeman, Garfield, Haralson, Hardenbergh, Benjamin W. Harris, Harrison, Hatcher, Hathorn, Haymond, Henderson, Hoge, Holman, Hoskins, Hubbell, Hunter, Hyman, Joyce, King, Lapham, Lawrence, Leavenworth, Lynch, Magoon, McCrary, McDill, Miller, Monroe, Nash, New, Norton, Oliver, O'Neill, Packer, Page, William A. Phillips, Pierce, Plaisted, Platt, Potter, Powell, Pratt, Rainey, Sobieski Ross, Rusk, Sampson, Savage, Seelye, Sinnickson, Smalls, Stevenson, Stowell, Strait, Tarbox, Tufts, Van Vorhes, Wait, Charles C. B. Walker, John W. Wallace, Watterson, G. Wiley Wells, White, Andrew Williams, Charles G. Williams, James Wilson, Alan Wood, jr., and Woodburn—88.

NOT VOTING—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Ainsworth, Anderson, Ashe, Bagby, George A. Bagley, John H. Bagley, jr., Bass, Beebe, Belford, Bell, Bliss, Boone, Bradford, Bradley, Buckner, Burleigh, John H. Caldwell, William P. Caldwell, Campbell, Carr, Caswell, Caulfield, Chapin, Cowan, Davis, Dibrell, Dobbins, Douglas, Durand, Egbert, Faulkner, Felton, Frye, Fuller, Gibson, Glover, Goode, Goodin, Gunter, Robert Hamilton, Hancock, John T. Harris, Hartridge, Hays, Hendee, Henkle, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Hooker, Hopkins, Hurlbut, Frank Jones, Thomas L. Jones, Kasson, Kimball, Franklin Landers, George M. Landers, Le Moyne, Lord, Luttrell, MacDougall, McFarland, McMahon, Meade, Milliken, Mills, Morgan, Neal, O'Brien, Odell, Phelps, Piper, Parman, John Robbins, Robinson, Miles Ross, Scales, Schumaker, Sheakley, Slemons, William E. Smith, Stephens, Swann, Teese, Thomas, Throckmorton, Robert B. Vance, Gilbert C. Walker, Walling, Walsh, Ward, Wheeler, Whitehouse, Whiting, Whitthorne, Wike, Willard, James Williams, Jere N. Williams, William B. Williams, Willis, Wilshire, Woodworth, and Young—105.

So the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at six o'clock and ten minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

AFTER RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at ten o'clock a. m.

SALE OF TIMBER LANDS IN ALASKA.

Mr. WALLING. On Friday last I submitted a report from the Committee on Public Lands in relation to the sale of certain timber lands in Alaska. At the same time I submitted a request that it be printed in the RECORD, but in the noise and confusion the request I suppose was not heard, and it has not been so printed. I now ask consent for that purpose.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Is it long?

Mr. WALLING. It is not very lengthy. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD in order that the facts it contains may be more directly brought to the attention of those interested.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that consent was given, but it was not understood at the time.

Mr. CONGER. Is it the report of a committee?

Mr. WALLING. It is a report from the Committee on Public Lands.

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

The report is as follows:

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill H. R. No. 4260, reported as a substitute H. R. No. 4560, and accompanied the same with the following report:

A memorial, signed by several merchants and business men of San Francisco, was presented to this House during the first session of the present Congress, asking that they be permitted to purchase, at the Government price per acre, a tract of land in the Territory of Alaska, on the islands lying between Sitka and the mainland, for the purpose of enabling them to establish ship-yards and lumber manufacture. This memorial was subsequently followed by a bill introduced at the request of the same parties, who had incorporated themselves, under the laws of the State of California, as the Alaska Ship-Building and Lumber Company. The proposed bill conferred the authority on that corporation to make the purchase mentioned in the memorial.

The committee, being satisfied from the character of the persons whose names were attached to the memorial, and from representations made in relation to the project, that the enterprise was backed by good faith and by the ability and determination (if permitted) to carry it out, have, after such investigation as it has been possible to make, embodied their recommendations in H. R. 4560, as a substitute for H. R. 4260.

Alaska was ceded to the United States in 1867. Although glowing representations were made of the value of the Territory and of its ability to support a large population and varied industries, ten years of opportunity have yielded no return beyond the seal-fisheries of the islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, under lease to the Alaska Commercial Company. Population has diminished until at the present time, except the native Indians and a few traders, there are no inhabitants remaining who have the means of getting away. The Indians even, who previous to the cession had been taught to respect the laws of civilization and in some slight degree to appreciate its advantages, are lapsing into their former ways, with the added corruptions, physical and moral, rather fostered than repressed by the cupidity or license of the few whites who barter for their peltry.

All these facts abundantly appear from the reports and exhibits attached to Executive Document No. 83, made by the Secretary of the Treasury to the first session of the present Congress, on the "Seal-Fisheries in Alaska." Attached to that document is a careful, scientific, and extended report, made by Professor Henry W. Elliott, a special agent of the Government sent to Alaska for the purpose of obtaining information in regard to the resources and condition of that Territory. He says:

"In this report I have endeavored to give a concise description of the agricultural character of the territory as I have seen it, which thus far might be truthfully summed up in saying that there are more acres of better land lying now as wilderness and jungle in sight, on the mountain-tops of the Alleghanies, from the car-window of the Pennsylvania road, than can be found in all Alaska; and when it is remembered that this land, wild, in the heart of one of our oldest and most thickly populated States, will remain as it now is, cheap and undisturbed, for an indefinite time to come, notwithstanding its close proximity to the homes of millions of energetic and enterprising men, it is not difficult to estimate the value of the Alaskan acres, remote as they are, and barred out by a most disagreeable sea-coast climate, leaving out altogether the great West, and the vast agricultural regions of British America."

In giving more particular description the country is grouped into sections, of which the southern and (agriculturally) most valuable, called "the Sitkan district," extends in its northwesterly and southeasterly dimensions between 55° and 60° of north latitude, about three hundred and fifty miles in the coastwise direction. It is within this district that the memorialists propose to make their experiment of ship-building and lumbering. Of this region the report continues, (page 10 of report:)

"The Sitkan district.—Starting from Portland Canal and running north to Cross Sound and the head of Lynn Canal the eye glances over a range of country made up of hundreds of islands, large and small, and a bold mountainous coast, all everywhere rugged and abrupt in contour, and with exception of highest summits, the hills, mountains, and valleys, the last always narrow and winding, are covered with a dense jungle of spruce and fir, cedar, and shrubbery, so thick, dark, and damp that it is traversed only by the expenditure of great physical energy, and a clear spot, either on islands or mainland, where an acre of grass might grow by itself, as it does in the little "parks" far in the interior, cannot be found. In these forest jungles, especially on the lowlands and always by the water-courses, will be found a fair proportion of ordinary timber of the character above designated. The spruce and fir, however, are so heavily charged with resin that they can be used for nothing but the roughest work; the cedar is, however, an excellent article.

* * * * * * *

"Here, under the powerful influence of the great Pacific, winter is never anything but wet and chilly, seldom ever giving the people a week's skating on the small lake back of Sitka. Day after day there are high winds and drizzling rains, with breaks in the leaden sky showing gleams of clear blue and sunlight; and here the agriculturist or gardener has like cause for discouragement, for nothing will ripen; whatever he plants grows and enters on its stages of decay without perfecting. It must, moreover, be remarked that there is but very little land fit even for this unsatisfactory and most unprofitable agriculture, i. e., properly drained and warm soil enough for the very hardiest cereals. There is not one acre of such tillable land to every ten thousand of the objectionable character throughout the larger portion of this area, and certainly not more than one acre to a thousand in the best regions. Grass grows in small localities or areas, wherever it is not smothered by forests and thickets, in the valleys over this whole Sitkan district. Its presence, however, is not the rule, but the exception, so vigorous is the growth of sh and timber; and even did it grow in large amount, the curing of hay is simply impracticable. Although the winters are mild, still there is not enough ranging ground to support herds of cattle throughout the year and have them within control."

After describing the other districts, the report concludes with the following summary, (page 48:)

"In view of the foregoing, what shall we say of the resources of Alaska, viewed as regards its agricultural or horticultural capabilities?

"It would seem undeniable that owing to the unfavorable climatic conditions which prevail on the coast and in the interior, the gloomy fogs and dampness of the former, and the intense protracted severity of the winters, characteristic of the latter, unfit the Territory for the proper support of any considerable civilization.

"Men may, and undoubtedly will, soon live here in comparative comfort, as they labor in mining-camps, lumber and ship-timber mills, and salmon factories, but they will bring with them everything they want except fish and game, and when they leave the country it will be as desolate as they found it.

"Can a country be permanently and prosperously settled that will not in its whole extent allow the successful growth and ripening of a single crop of corn, wheat, or potatoes, and where the most needful of any domestic animals cannot be kept by poor people?

"The Russians, who have subdued a rougher country and settled in large communities under severer conditions than have been submitted to by any body of our people as yet, were in this Territory, after some twenty years at least of patient, intelligent trial, obliged to send a colony to California to raise their potatoes, grain, and beef. The history of their settlement there and forced abandonment in 1842 is well known.

"We may with pride refer to the rugged work of settlement so successfully made by our ancestors in New England, but it is idle to talk of the subjugation of Alaska as a task simply requiring a similar expenditure of persistence, energy, and ability. In Massachusetts, our forefathers had a land in which all the necessaries of life and many of the luxuries could be produced from the soil with certainty from year to year; in Alaska their lot would have been quite the reverse, and they could have maintained themselves there with no better success than the present inhabitants."

The foregoing extended extracts give the latest and most authentic information in regard to this country. It would seem very apparent that this region must remain for an indefinite period in the future, as it has remained hitherto, a worthless waste, unless some inducements are held out to attract associated capital to develop, by large experimental outlays of energy and money, the possibility of turning this inhospitable and uninviting domain to some national use. If the enterprise proposed by the memorialists should prove remunerative, there will remain to the Government millions of acres of similar lands, which would find a market and furnish employment to thousands of mechanics and laborers.

It is unnecessary to refer in this report to the beneficial results that would follow the establishment of ship-building, for it is conceived that, independent of this, it would be to the advantage of the Government to know that climatic and physical obstacles can be so far overcome as that any industry can be successfully and profitably prosecuted in that latest and most questionable of our national real-estate speculations. It is proposed to do this, not only without expense to the Government, but by a sale at the Government price of land now worthless, and which must always remain so until enterprises like this are established.

The island of Kou, upon which the memorialists propose to establish their ship-yard, and upon which and on the shores of the adjacent waters they desire to purchase timber lands, is one of the islands composing the Alexander Archipelago, separated from Baranof Island, on which Sitka is situated, by Chatham Strait; to the east lie successively Kekou Strait, Kaprianhoff Island, Wrangel Strait, Mitgoff Island, Souchoi Channel, and then the main-land. So far as known, it is valueless, except for a belt of timber that fringes its shores and extends up its narrow valleys.

The bill reported herewith authorizes the Alaska Ship-Building and Lumber Company to purchase 100,000 acres of timber lands on this island and neighboring shores, upon paying Government price therefor, and no timber or other material is to be removed from any lands until paid for. The entire number of acres is to be selected and paid for within ten years. Surveys are to be made at the expense of the company, to be credited in payment on the lands purchased, and the company undertakes, within two years, to establish a ship-yard, and complete within that time at least one ship of twelve hundred tons burden, and thereafter to prosecute ship-building vigorously. The guarantee that this will be done lies in the fact that it will be necessary to make a large outlay to build a single ship—so large that, if possible, they must continue that industry or lose the capital invested. If the construction of ships can be profitably continued, this preliminary investment will be sufficient to insure a further prosecution of the enterprise; if unprofitable, the Government ought not to insist upon its further continuance. The survey and the entry and payment of the lands will be made through the land office at Olympia, in Washington Territory. The bill reserves the right in Congress to alter, amend, or repeal the act at any time.

The duty of the United States to the aboriginal inhabitants of that locality has been considered in several reports made by Government agents sent to investigate the condition and resources of Alaska and its inhabitants. They concur in the opinion that (excepting at the fur islands and stations of the Alaska Commercial Company) the withdrawal of the supervision exercised under the former government has been most deleterious, and that no hope of a better state of things can be justly entertained while the Territory is suffered to remain in its present abandoned and lawless condition. Whatever enterprises shall attract an industrious population, and give remunerative employment to such of those people as will labor, will be a step toward their subjection to better influences, and will be evidence to them that the United States is at length willing, not only to encourage industry, sobriety, and morality, but to repress the worse than natural vices into which they are relapsing.

For these and other reasons that will suggest themselves without further extending this report, the committee recommend the legislation proposed by the House bill 4560.

DEFECTIVE LAND ENTRIES.

Mr. LAWRENCE. Mr. Speaker, on the 6th of January I introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4315) for the relief of the holders of defective entries of land. I have several times endeavored to report it to the House, but objection was as often made, and I now ask leave to have printed in the RECORD the bill and some remarks on it, merely for the information of the House. I may be able to report it when there is no time for discussion, and it may be useful to put some facts on record now for the information of the House.

The SPEAKER. If there is no objection, leave will be granted.

No objection was made, and leave was granted accordingly.

The bill is as follows:

A bill for the relief of the holders of defective entries of land.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in all cases where an entry has been or may be made by any person, other than corporations, in good faith, at the proper local land office, of any tract of land lawfully subject to entry, which may be informal, irregular, defective, or void, and whenever such entry shall be canceled, the person or persons having made such entry, their heirs, devisees, or assigns shall have the first and preferable right to make a lawful entry of, and procure a patent for, such lands, within one year after notice of such cancellation, as herein required; but nothing herein shall divest any right heretofore acquired.

Whenever any entry or patent shall be canceled, the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall give notice thereof by mail, if practicable, to the person claiming the land under such entry, or, if it be impracticable to ascertain the name and post-office address of such person, then notice shall be given by publication in such manner as said Commissioner may deem proper.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office shall have power to prescribe all proper rules and regulations to carry this act into effect.

Mr. LAWRENCE. This bill was carefully considered by the Judiciary Committee, to which it was referred, and I was authorized to report it to the House with a recommendation that it do pass.

I have made several efforts to do so, but as the committee had not been regularly called, I was met in each case with the one objection which prevented the bill from being acted on by the House. It is a bill of very great importance. I have submitted it to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and I have his approval of it in a letter from which I make the following extract:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January 8, 1877.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowedge the receipt of your letter of this date, calling my attention to the bill introduced by you in the House January 7, 1877, and printed on pages 9 and 10 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 8, 1877, (H. R. No. 3134,) entitled "A bill for the relief of the holders of defective entries of land." I have carefully examined the bill and think it very desirable that the same should become a law. If enacted, provision will be made whereby persons who have made entries in good faith, or their heirs, devisees, or assigns will be enabled to obtain the land, and in many instances secure valuable improvements which they have made thereon, which otherwise might be lost. I, however think proper to call attention to the following provision in the bill, namely: "Whenever any entry or patent shall be canceled, the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall give notice thereof by mail, if practicable, to the person claiming the land under such entry, or, if it be impracticable to ascertain the name and post-office address of such person, then notice shall be given by publication in such manner as said Commissioner may deem proper;" and to remark that the publication provided for should be uniformly made, embracing in each land district all the canceled entries where the name and post-office address are unknown.

* * * * * * * *

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner.

Hon. WILLIAM LAWRENCE,
House of Representatives.

In the letter the Commissioner also calls attention to the fact that the publication of notice "will involve considerable expense," and he says that "if this provision is retained the passage of the bill should be accompanied by an appropriation of at least $10,000 to defray the same; otherwise it will be impracticable to execute this requirement, there being no funds applicable for the payment of such expense."

This, however, does not affect the merits of the bill and is entirely a matter to be considered when the proper appropriation bills shall be before the House.

I have received a statement which will show the necessity of the bill, as follows:

DEFIANCE, OHIO, November 8, 1876.

DEAR JUDGE: I beg leave to send you this epistle containing the statement of a matter in which I am interested and in which I most respectfully solicit your kindly influence at Washington City, in the event that you should deem my case as therein stated entitled to relief at the hands of the officers of the United States. That statement is as follows: On the 16th day of November, 1849, one Barney Arnold, by virtue of land warrant No. 52186, issued to him for his services in the war with Mexico, entered the south half of the northwest quarter of section No. 29, in township No. 1 north, of range No. 4 east, containing eighty acres of land subject to sale at the land office at Lima, Ohio.

He went on to the land immediately and commenced to improve it, and made an improvement thereon by improving part of it. It was subsequently levied upon by an execution against him and sold to one Ezra I. Smith by the sheriff of Paulding County, and Arnold afterward deeded the same tract to Smith, the purchaser, who afterward sold and conveyed it to me; and for several years past a disabled soldier of our late war has been living upon it and improving and cultivating it as its owner under a contract made by me for its sale and conveyance to him.

We have been paying taxes for it for a great many years, in fact ever since the year after it was entered by Arnold, and we have been informed within a month that a gentleman of the name of Charles D. Gilmore, esq., of Washington City, entered it at the land office at Chillicothe on the 2d of October, 1875, in the name of one James H. Chandler, of Missouri, under an act authorizing a soldier who has entered eighty acres in Missouri as a homestead, and filed his final proof of settlement and cultivation to enter eighty acres more of other public land. And I hope that you will permit me to observe, parenthetically, here that this Mr. Gilmore has entered a great deal of such land in Defiance, Henry, Paulding, and Fulton Counties, in this State, for persons supposed to reside in Arkansas and Missouri. Not wishing to permit a difficulty of this kind to pass to my heirs by descent, I wrote to the General Land Office at Washington City in order to procure an exemplified copy of the patent which I supposed the General Government had made for the conveyance of the land to Arnold, and I received a reply thereto on yesterday of which I beg leave to transmit you a copy. It is as follows, with its various initials, figures, &c.:

47. 1621 F. C. L.

[Refer in reply to this initial. H.]

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., October 30, 1876.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 7th inst., you are informed that the entry of the S. ½ of N. W. ¼ sec. 29, 1 N., R. 4 E., Ohio, which was made November 16, 1849, by the location of warrant No. 52186, 160 acres, in the name of Barney Arnold, appears to have been canceled on the 14th of February, 1852, for the reason, as alleged, that said location was illegal because it covered more than one legal subdivision; and that said warrant was transmitted on the same date to the register at Defiance, Ohio, for delivery to the said locator.

The sum of $1.60, received with your said letter, is herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

— —

I never heard tell of the return of the land warrant until the reception of this communication from the Land Office at Washington, and deem it exceedingly strange if it was received by the register of the land office then located at this place, that I was not informed of it, as I was then well acquainted with Abner Root, esq., our mutual friend, I think, and feel satisfied that he would have mentioned it to me if he had received it. Yet there is a possibility that he may have received it and not mentioned it to Arnold or myself; but it has never been returned to Arnold or myself. The United States still retains it. It then appears, from the statement which I have herein made, that Arnold was actually improving his land and did improve it, and that those now claiming under him kept on improving it in ignorance of the cancellation of the entry and in perfect confidence that the United States Government would convey it, in its own good time, to Arnold; and that, if any error was made in the description of the land when entered by entering it as the S. ½ of N. W. qr. in one description of 80 acres, instead of entering it as the S. W. qr. of the N. W. ¼, and the southeast quarter of the N. W. ¼, in two forty-acre lots, it was made through the neglect of the agents of the United States at the Defiance land office, and not through Barney Arnold, and it thus presents a strong claim for equitable relief at least.

I understand the reason assigned at the General Land Office for the cancellation of the entry to be this, that if Arnold had entered that identical tract of land by two descriptions—that is, in forty-acre lots—his entry would have been valid; but because he entered it by a single description it is invalid.

This would certainly present a strong case for the consideration of a court of equity to have Mr. Chandler declared the trustee of Arnold's assignees, in the fee-simple of the land.

This view is greatly strengthened by the fact that we were in the actual, open, and notorious possession of the land at the time and long before Chandler entered it; and, whatever our claim or right in the land may be, I presume he must be held to a full knowledge of it and of our rights. Again no wrong was done and no injury inflicted upon the United States by entering the land according to its description as entered, a south half which, as given, embraces the two descriptions by which it might have been entered according to its legal subdivisions in forty-acre lots, by north and south lines.

I am inclined to believe that in the earlier and, perhaps, better days of our institutions the General Land Office regarded the law as purely directory, looking rather to convenience and the essence of equity than the technicality of law, so as to do justice and avoid the just reproach of the common law, "qui hæret in litera, hæret in cortice," which would attach to a too strict observence of non-essentials.

Entries of land were permitted at an early day by the General Land Office by just such descriptions as Arnold's, and conveyances made therefor.

Thus:

September 15, 1835, a patent was issued by President Jackson to Frederick Ingle for the S. ½ of N. E. qr. of sec. 28, T. 5 N., R. 4 E., as I think will be found by turning to page 167 of vol. 1 of record of patents in the General Land Office.

And October 16, 1835, a patent was issued to Samuel Slater for the S. ½ of N. E. qr. of sec. 32, T. 6 N., R. 1 E., as recorded in same vol., page 475.

And on the same day another patent was issued to Thomas P. Rodman for the N. ½ of S. W. ¼ of sec. 21, T. 5 N., R. 5 E., recorded, perhaps, on page 8 of same vol.

President Van Buren issued patents as follows:

March 15, 1837, to Samuel N. Bucher for N. ½ of S. W. qr. of sec. 11, T. 5 N., R. 4 E.

March 20, 1837, to Chancy Pardy for S. ½ of N. W. qr. of sec. 5, T. 5 N., R. 2 E.

March 18, 1839, to William Swigton for S. ½ of N. W. qr. of sec. 5, T. 5 N., R. 4 E., recorded vol. 13, page 448.

The two latter descriptions are, so far as the subdivision of the section is concerned, precisely as Arnold's.

President Taylor issued patents as follows:

To Daniel English for S. ½ of S. W. qr. of sec. 34, T. 5 N., R. 4 E., on certificate No. 15954.

To John Regil for N. ½ of N. W. qr. sec. 34, T. 4 N., R. 3 E., on certificate No. 16406.

President Tyler issued one to Alfred W. Wilcox for the following, among other described tracts: N. ½ of S. W. qr. of sec. 22, T. 5 N., R. 4 E., recorded, perhaps, in vol. 24, p. 281.

President Fillmore issued one to Jacob Harman for the following, among other tracts: S. ½ of N. W. qr. sec. 36, T. 4 N., R. 2 E., and by same to same for another tract by a similar description.

And coming down later, a patent was issued by President Grant, on the 6th of October, 1874, to John Crozzar, jr., for the N. ½ of S. W. qr. of sec. 20, T. 4 N., R. 2 E., under the homestead act.

All of these entries are in the same land district as Arnold's; and I might here cite almost an indefinite number of other cases in which patents issued on just such entries as Arnold's; but I shall not tire your patience by doing so. It seems to me at least that my case is one to which the applications of the communis opinio of Littleton would be proper; and we might apply to it the language of Ellenborough, C. J., as used in Isherwood vs. Oldknow, 3 Maule and Selwyn, 397: "It has been sometimes said communis error facit jus, but I say communis opinio is evidence of what the law is; not where it is an opinion merely speculative and theoretical, floating in the minds of persons, but where it has been made the groundwork and substratum of practice;" and there seems to me to be much good sense in this saying.

Now, as the United States was neither put to an inconvenience nor a loss by the use of the description by which the Arnold entry was made, and inasmuch as a great many entries were before that time made, as well as since then, by similar descriptions, approved by the authorities, and patents issued for them to such an extent as to be the settled practice of the Land Office, I beg leave to suggest that an abrupt refusal to follow it further, after, by years of silence, permitting Arnold and others to repose on the ratification of the purchase, would inflict a great injury on me; and to avoid this the sale to Mr. Chandler ought to be set aside and a patent issued in the name of Arnold for the land.

Hoping that you can, by a representation of all the facts to the proper authority, procure this relief, I remain as ever, your friend,

A. S. LATTY.

Hon. WILLIAM LAWRENCE.

I have also received a letter on the subject of this bill from a gentleman long connected with the General Land Office, as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 5, 1877.

DEAR SIR: I have sent several copies of your bill (H. R. No. 4315) to parties in the West and asked them to urge their members to secure its passage. It will relieve a great many persons who have large equities but who are unfortunately without legal remedy. I know of no bill now before Congress which will work greater benefit without opening the door to any danger of fraud. It is a principle which the General Land Office has heretofore sought to establish, but which could not be done in the absence of law. I sincerely hope you will urge it to its passage.

Very truly,

W. W. CURTIS.

Hon. WILLIAM LAWRENCE,
House of Representatives.

I propose at the proper time to introduce a bill also, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in all cases in which any tract of the public lands subject to sale by private entry at any land office of the United States of America has been entered in one body of eighty acres by the description of a south half or a north half of any quarter section containing one hundred and sixty acres, by virtue of any land warrant duly issued by virtue of any act of Congress, the entry thereof by the description of a south half or a north half of such quarter section, as the case may be, shall be as good and valid in law and equity as if said land warrant had been located upon, or said land had been, by virtue thereof, entered in said land office by the description of two quarter quarter-sections of forty acres each; and in all such cases a patent shall be issued for such south half or north half, as the case may be, to the person or persons who would be entitled to the fee-simple in such land if the same had been entered in two quarter quarter-sections of forty acres each, and such patent, when so issued, shall be taken and held both in law and equity to convey the fee-simple in such land to such person or persons as fully and effectually as if said land had been entered by said two descriptions.

SEC. 2. That in all cases in which a valid land warrant has been heretofore located in the proper land office, upon any public land subject to sale therein by private entry, and such location was afterward by the proper officer in the General Land Office declared to be vacated on account of any defect in the description by which said land was located, and a deed of conveyance was afterward executed therefor to a bona fide purchaser, either by the locator of said land or by the order, decree, judgment, or proceeding of any court of law or equity of the United States or any State in any action, suit, or proceeding instituted therein, and to which said locator was a party, the proper officer of the land office shall permit the person or persons who would be entitled to the fee-simple in such land by virtue of said conveyance, order, decree, or judgment of court, if said entry had not been vacated, to enter the same kind and quality of land of any public land subject to sale at private entry at any land office, and a patent shall issue to such person therefor as in other cases.

SEC. 3. This act and all proceedings under it shall be carried into effect under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

And now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the necessity for the bill to which I first called attention of the House is so great and its justice so clear that if it shall be understood there can be no objection to it. So soon as it may be practicable I will ask the House to pass it.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAMILTON, of Indiana, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (H. R. No. 429) for the relief of Charles C. Campbell, of Washington County, Virginia;

An act (H. R. No. 859) for the benefit of Andrew Williams, of Weakley County, Tennessee;

An act (H. R. No. 4251) making appropriations for the consular and diplomatic service of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes; and

An act (H. R. No. 4576) to provide for changing and fixing the boundaries of certain property ceded to the Government of the United States by the city of Memphis, Tennessee.

Mr. HARRISON, from the same committee, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (H. R. No. 7) to provide for the sale or exchange of a certain piece of land in the Wallabout Bay, in the State of New York, to the city of Brooklyn.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CROUNSE. I would like to have printed a report from the Committee on Public Lands to accompany a bill.

Mr. CONGER. Whatever can be done by unanimous consent, and that is not strictly speaking business, I will not object to. But I must object to any business being done at this time.

The SPEAKER. Objection being made, the request is not granted.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the regular order.

Mr. CLYMER. It is evident there is not a quorum present; and I move that there be a call of the House.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. CLYMER, there were—ayes 28, noes 63.

Mr. CLYMER. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois, and Mr. CLYMER were appointed.

Before the count for tellers was concluded—

Mr. CLYMER said: I withdraw the call for a further count.

So the motion for a call of the House was not agreed to.

ELECTORAL VOTE OF NEVADA.

The House resumed the consideration of the following objection to the counting of one of the electoral votes from the State of Nevada:

The undersigned Senators and Representatives object to the vote of R. M. Daggett as an elector from the State of Nevada upon the grounds following, namely:

That the said R. M. Daggett was on the 7th day of November, 1876, and had been for a long period prior thereto, and thereafter continued to be a United States commissioner for the circuit and district courts of the United States for the said State, and held therefore an office of trust and profit under the United States, and as such could not be constitutionally appointed an elector under the Constitution of the United States.

Wherefore the undersigned say that the said R. M. Daggett was not a duly appointed elector, and that his vote as an elector should not be counted.

And the undersigned hereto annex the evidence taken before the committee of the House of Representatives on the powers, privileges, and duties of the House to sustain said objection.

W. H. BARNUM, Connecticut;
WILLIAM A. WALLACE, Pennsylvania;
FRANK HEREFORD, West Virginia;
Senators.

J. R. TUCKER, Virginia,
JOHN L. VANCE, Ohio,
WM. A. J. SPARKS,
JNO. S. SAVAGE,
LEVI MAISH,
G. A. JENKS,
WILLIAM M. SPRINGER,
Representatives.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask that the evidence accompanying this objection be read.

The evidence as already published in the RECORD was partly read, when

Mr. HALE said: As there is now a full House, I ask that the further reading of the evidence be dispensed with.

Mr. SHEAKLEY. I object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is apprised that there is very little more to be read.

The reading of the evidence was then concluded.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to submit the resolution which I send to the Clerk. After it has been read, I wish to make an explanation.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the vote of R. M. Daggett, one of the electors of the State of Nevada, be counted, the objections to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. SPRINGER. In making the copies of the objection as laid before the joint convention and as sent to the Senate, the Clerk made a mistake in the name of the office. The person whose vote is objected to holds the office of clerk of the district court; but the objections were to the effect that he held the office of commissioner of the circuit and district court. Therefore the evidence does not sustain the objections. The error cannot be corrected by this House because the Senate has passed upon the objection as it went to that body. Hence I have offered this resolution that the vote be counted, notwithstanding the objection.

Two or three gentlemen had desired to speak upon this question, [cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"] and I am unwilling that they should be prived of the opportunity; therefore I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. DURHAM.]

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, I believe that during the four years I have been a member of Congress I have never before undertaken to speak when I was satisfied the mind of the House was made up; nor would I do so now if I could have had a few minutes yesterday to say a few things in regard to the great wrong which I think has been done to the State of Louisiana and the whole United States by the decision made by the commission and confirmed yesterday by the Senate. I shall detain the House but a few moments upon the present question; and certainly I cannot be charged with troubling the House a great deal since I have been a member.

I voted against the bill creating this commission. I did it upon two grounds: First, that there was no warrant in the Constitution for creating a body outside of the two Houses for the purpose of counting the electoral votes; and in the second place I regarded the measure as inexpedient. I have not changed my opinion either as to the constitutionality or as to the expediency of that act under which we are now operating; but while I then entered my solemn protest against its passage I desire to say now in all good faith, as was said yesterday by one of my colleagues, that I intend to stand by the act and see that it is carried out in good faith. I believe that it is the duty of the democratic party of this House and of Congress to see that the act is fairly carried out. It is the law of the land let it be constitutional or unconstitutional; and Congress must abide by this act until it is declared unconstitutional by the courts of the country.

I am not disappointed in the judgment of this tribunal. With all due respect to the gentlemen who constitute the tribunal I will say that I believe it was utterly impossible for them as members of this commission to rise above party, party spirit, party agitation, party tactics, and to give any other decision than that which they have given. Consequently I impute no criminality to those gentlemen who as members of the republican party have joined in making that decision. Educated in that party, believing in the correctness of its principles and policy, it was not within their power to rise to the dignity of the occasion and make a different decision from that which they have made. I looked for this result. The most deplorable portion of the whole bill was that feature which forced a portion of one of the co-ordinate departments of the Government of the United States into the pit and mire of party politics.

I did object that you should have taken one or more of the supreme judges of the United States and required them to exhibit their predilections and party education. I do not intend to reflect upon those judges; for I say in all candor to those who may differ with me on this question that I have not more odium to heap upon the judges of the Supreme Court of the United States for this the worst decision that has ever been uttered by any tribunal in the United States than I have for the other members. I repeat that I have no more malediction to hurl against these Supreme Court judges than I have against any other member who constituted the majority of that joint commission, on account of this great crime against the people and their rights. They were republicans, educated as republicans, and it was natural, as I said before, they should not rise above their education so far as grave political questions are concerned. Whatever may be thought of this decision the result shows that they did not rise above partisan considerations.

One other remark so far as the subject under consideration is involved. Here and now I enter my solemn protest against the doctrine promulgated by the majority of that joint commission and sustained by the republican party in this House, and that is that you can elect a man as an elector who is incompetent by the very terms of the Constitution itself, then that he can resign and you can supply his place with another man. What is an election? There is no controversy about the provision of the Constitution that any man who is a Senator or a Representative, or who holds any office of honor or profit under the United States, cannot be appointed an elector. What is an appointment? The groundwork of the whole thing is the casting of the ballots by the people. The election by the people is the groundwork beyond all doubt. Not, I state, because it applies to this case, but I am now combating that dangerous doctrine as laid down by this high commission that because a man may have received even 25,000 majority, as in the case of the elector in the State of Michigan, after the ballots are cast and before he comes to cast his vote as elector for President he can resign and have his place supplied, thereby thwarting the very prohibition of the Constitution itself, and violating its spirit and its essence as well as its letter.

Mr. CONGER. If election alone constitutes appointment of electors, how about the case where the Legislature appoints?

Mr. DURHAM. It is the basis of it, for how can you make appointment without election; how can you supply a place unless there have been votes for somebody? Answer me that.

Mr. CONGER. How in those States where the Legislature appoints directly without any election, or how where they authorize the governor to appoint without election?

Mr. DURHAM. That is constitutional. I am speaking of the law as in this case. I undertake to say, and that is my deliberate judgment, there is in the Oregon case a nullity. There has been no election of the elector, and as this will appear in the Oregon case, I have taken the position in that case there were but two electors elected and no more, and that the defect could not be remedied, the omission could not be supplied, there was no vacancy to fill in the case of the other elector. I do not hold the doctrine with some of my associates on this floor that the next highest man comes in. I believe the spirit of the Constitution is where an ineligible man is voted for it is as it were voting for a man who is dead, or for a man who could not be voted for; and there was an omission and no election at all, and there was no vacancy to be supplied, as in the case of Oregon or any other like case.

I will be pardoned for saying that in this Nevada case this man who was elected as an elector not being a United States commissioner but on the contrary the clerk of the court is not ineligible, but on the contrary is eligible, for the reason that he had in good faith tendered his resignation the day before the election and that resignation was accepted. I will never consent to disfranchise a State upon a mere technicality. Where a State has voted for a man incompetent and ineligible under the very terms of the Constitution itself, then I say there is no right to supply his place.

The authorities on this point are abundant. Cushing in his Parliamentary Law says:

If an election is made of a person who is ineligible, that is, incapable of being elected, the election of such person is absolutely void, &c.

See also Patterson vs. Miller, 2 Met. Ky. R., 493; Morgan vs. Vance, 4 Bush Ky. R., 323.

These are my views, and under the circumstances I deem it my duty to state them, though briefly done.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CHITTENDEN. Mr. Speaker, we all knew perfectly well, the whole world knew when the bill for the electoral commission became a law that one side or the other would be bitterly disappointed in the end. Now since neither side is quite happy, there seems to be occasion for all patriotic men to stand firmly together. No thoughtful observer of events can deny that the politics of several of our States are in great confusion. War in its direst aspect, civil war, carpet-baggers, returning boards of doubtful virtue, rogues of every name mixed up with great events and great questions—greater than ever before have been encountered in the history of America—have done their worst, and yet every loyal heart may be thankful that there is not one sign showing that as a people we are worse to-day than our fathers. On the contrary the signs all point in the opposite direction. The same holy writ which my ever humorous colleague [Mr. COX] brought into play so successfully yesterday also says that the supreme Ruler "makes the wrath of man to praise him, and the remainder he restrains."

Now, sir, the wrath and indignation suppressed and restrained on this floor to-day and yesterday reflect and illustrate as nothing ever yet has done in the history of Congress the growing intelligence and the rising moral power of the American people. If the party to which I belong has, as you think, conspired with a swamp patriot of dubious antecedents to place a usurper in the White House in the week after next, you by your conduct have shown that you are not afraid to trust the issue with the people. And you are right. What boots it that seven or eight of the tribunal of fifteen, created for a temporary purpose, may have mistaken their solemn duty under the Constitution and the laws? They shall die to-morrow as a power, and as sure as the sun shall continue to warm and fertilize the earth, if the view you take of their decision is right, the party in power will be put down and you will be lifted up. God reigns forever, and the spirit that has been manifested here in view of this great disappointment shows that the American people and their representatives are intelligent and patriotic enough to accept the situation and accept the decision of a power which they themselves created to avoid an impending calamity.

Now, Mr. Speaker, my simple point is that there is nothing to be gained by the further discussion of this Nevada obstruction; and I hope that we may, in view of the greater questions at issue, proceed to vote and go on with our work.

Mr. TARBOX. It seems alike vain and fruitless to urge objections of this character. The electoral commission has decided substantially that the provision of the Constitution which inhibits the appointment of a Federal office-holder to the office of a presidential elector is virtually abrogated. To be sure, sir, in the Florida case the commission decided that they would entertain evidence as to the eligibility of an elector. But in that case there was not sufficient evidence to prove the ineligibility. In the Louisiana case, where there was evidence by which the fact could be established, they decided it was not within the competence of the commission to take evidence and determine the fact. So, sir, the principle established seems to be, and by it we are compelled to abide—for the Senate sustains the commission—that where there is not evidence sufficient to establish the fact of ineligibility then evidence may be considered and acted upon, but where there is evidence sufficient to show the ineligibility, then no evidence can be entertained; the effect of which in either case and upon either proposition is that any objection which the House may urge is futile. The law is ruled in our favor when we have no facts and against us when the facts are with us.

But, sir, I rose for the purpose of making another suggestion which occurred to me while listening on yesterday to the striking remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. FOSTER,] who, I suppose, can speak from a peculiar knowledge of that which he affirms. He assumed to foreshadow to us the official spirit which will animate the incoming Chief Executive; and he told us that "the people of all sections of the country may confidently expect from him (Hayes) not only fair, but generous consideration." Most gracious sovereign! This sounds to me very much like patronizing the American people. I had cherished the prejudice, sir, that the President of the United States was a public agent and a public servant, not a patron of the people nor the fountain of power. The people of this country do not ask from those who discharge their public trusts generosity or favor. No, sir; they ask but fidelity and justice. I wish the gentleman had been more explicit. Fair-seeming generalities are apt to deceive. He assured us further, sir, that "the flag shall float over States, not provinces; over freemen, not subjects." I wish the gentleman had told us in plain words whether President Hayes, when he comes to the exercise of his great functions, proposes to recognize the government known as the Nicholls government in Louisiana and permit that government, if it can, to support its authority without Federal intervention. Had he done that, we should have had something tangible to tie to.

But, sir, I have confidence in the policy that President Hayes will pursue. I do not depend on his generosity. I do not depend upon his just inclinations. I have a reliance stronger than that, sir, and that is the public sentiment of the American people. No ruler in this country can have a policy of his own and carry it out successfully for any length of time against the plain will of the American people. Much less, sir, can a man wield the scepter in opposition to the public sense of the country when he comes into the possession of that scepter in opposition to the will of the majority of the American people. And so, sir, while we confront that most anomalous fact in republican history—a Chief Magistrate inducted into power in despite of and over the majority of the public will of the country—yet I have faith that public opinion, operating by its moral forces, shall so control the action of the man who occupies the post of highest authority in the land that he must obey its mandate, and rule with his stolen scepter of power only in accordance with the recorded will of his countrymen as declared in the late election; and in that is our hope of public justice, safety, and honor.

Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Speaker, I have heard some regrets expressed by those who gave this bill their support when pending in this House. I am not one of those who share in those regrets. I gave this measure when pending before this body my support. I did it in good faith, and I still stand by that action. If the judges of the Supreme Court, who are members of this commission, have done anything which would show that they do not deserve that confidence which I placed, as a member of this body, in their integrity, it is they who are responsible and to blame for it, and not myself; and I have no regrets at having placed that confidence in the judges of the Supreme Court.

The responsibility rests with them, and not with this House, and not with those who supported this measure when it was pending before this House.

But, sir, there are a few facts which I wish to call the attention of the House to in relation to some propositions of law which have been laid down in this body during the last day or two. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] entertained us with a discussion undertaking to show that the appointment of an elector of the United States was not made at the time the people voted for electors, on the Tuesday after the first Monday in the month of November; at least he said that that was the law so far as the State of Michigan was concerned, and he went on to show us the different steps necessary to be taken in the State of Michigan in order to constitute the "appointment" spoken of in the Constitution and laws of the United States so far as an elector is concerned. The Constitution provides that "Congress may determine the time of choosing electors." They have undertaken to do it. By the act of 1792 they provide "that the electors of President and Vice-President shall be appointed in each State on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November."

Now, sir, if the State of Michigan does not comply with that act by making the appointment complete on that day, in every case except two excepted cases, which are when there has a vacancy occurred, or when an election has been held on that day and the State has failed to make a choice—with those two exceptions, if the appointment is not complete on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, then the State of Michigan has not appointed a single elector, and is not entitled to vote at all on that day. If the appointment of electors was not complete and perfect on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November last year, then there were no electors appointed from the State of Michigan, and they are not entitled to vote.

But the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LAWRENCE] undertook to claim that the de facto officer, as he argued, was the party who was entitled to cast the vote, and in answer to a question which I propounded to him, he as good as claimed that the provision in the Constitution which provides that no Senator or Representative or other person holding an office of trust or profit under the Government of the United States shall be appointed an elector was a dead letter in the Constitution and did not amount to anything. In support of his proposition he cited two authorities, one of which I have not been able to find this morning on sending to the Library for it, but the other authority I have before me. It is a case where a party has been appointed to an office by the circuit court of the State of Missouri. His appointment was only to last for one year. At the expiration of that year the court appointed another person under a statute which required that the person appointed should be a householder and the appointee was not a householder. Now under these circumstances the person first appointed refused to give up the office and was by force turned out of its occupation and the proceeds and control of the office were turned over to the other party. The party thus dispossessed of the office commenced an action, not against the person who had been appointed in his place, but against the county court, and instead of an action of quo warranto, an action of mandamus. The court uses this language:

It has been long held that a mandamus may be issued to restore a person to an office to which he is entitled. (4 Bacon, 500.) But we are not prepared to say that this was a proper case for the interference of the circuit court by mandamus. Various considerations incline us to this opinion. The office was already filled by one who was de facto an officer, at least; and it appears to be law that when an office is already filled by a person who is in by color of right, a mandamus is never issued to admit another person, the proper remedy being an information in the nature of a quo warranto. (The People vs. The Corporation of New York, 3 Johns. Ca., 79; Angell and Ames on Corporations, 565; The King vs. Mayor of Colchester, 2 Durn and East.) It would not be just that Wise's right to the office should be determined on a proceeding to which he was no party. He was the proper person to vindicate his own rights, and a quo warranto was the proper mode under the circumstances to try the validity of his appointment.

Now, here was a case in which the court simply decided that it had no jurisdiction to decide the case, and that is the authority brought here by the gentleman from Ohio with such a flourish of trumpets and the statement that no authority in the United States can be found to contradict his position. It is true the court does go on to talk about de facto officers and all that sort of thing, but no sane man ever supposed that that had anything to do with or any application to the election of the presidential electors until this case came up. These are the authorities gentlemen on the other side of the House rely upon as proof of the correctness of the position they occupy in this matter. I believe that if the other authority were here it would be as far from sustaining the gentleman from Ohio as the one I have called attention to.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I desire to say a word in regard to the effect of choosing an elector for President and Vice-President who is not eligible to fill the position. We seem to have adopted the notion here that if a man be elected to an office who is ineligible to that office for some reason or other the election is void, and the acts of that individual, if he assumes the office and goes into the discharge of its duties, must be void. Sir, there is not greater legal nonsense that has ever been uttered by man since society was organized.

Suppose a man be elected to this House, who is declared ineligible by the Constitution; he is an alien for instance; he receives the certificate; he comes here and takes the oath; a bill is brought before the House; the vote is even except for his vote; he votes for the bill and it is passed and it becomes a law; will the lawyers of this House tell me that that law is void because it was subsequently ascertained that this man was ineligible. Suppose that he votes for a Speaker and his vote elects, will it be said that a Speaker has not been elected?

Take the case of those States where the judiciary is elected. A man not naturalized but a resident is chosen to the office of judge. He qualifies, so far as his oath can qualify him, and he goes on for a year discharging the duties of a judge. A thousand cases pass under his jurisdiction and his decisions go upon the record. Is there a lawyer in this House who will stand up here and tell us that the action of that judge is void? Any man would say that a lawyer who would talk in that way was talking nonsense.

Now, sir, coming directly to the point of the matter under discussion, I have no hesitation in saying that if the voters of a State elect an alien as an elector, and that alien under his oath casts his vote for President and Vice-President, that vote must be counted under the Constitution, the people of a State cannot thus be cheated of their vote. It would be competent for the Government of the United States to pass a law to test the capability and eligibility of a man elected in advance of his casting his vote for President and Vice-President. But if the people elect, if the elector qualifies and discharges his duty by voting for President and Vice-President, the matter has then passed beyond the power of a party in the House of Representatives to howl the effect of that vote off the record. It cannot be done. Common sense says to the contrary; the usages of the courts say to the contrary; the usages of the world say to the contrary. Society could not exist upon such a basis. You never would know whether your case was a success or a failure if after its decision the competency of the court could be tried, or the eligibility or appointability of the judge could be questioned.

This commission has done a great many bad things, so my friends on the other side say; but our friends will feel better when they have taken time to think over it. They will find that this commission has not only done what as State rights democrats they ought to be in favor of their doing, but this commission has done what, if they had not done, the world would have sneered and laughed at and despised them for not doing. We had better not be misled.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has found "a vacuum" where an attempt was made to elect a man, and the people did elect a man who was not eligible. Now that gentleman ought to know that "nature abhors a vacuum." Common-sense abhors this vacuum, [laughter;] I mean the one that he points out. I use the term in no disrespect to the gentleman from Virginia, for I thoroughly admire his legal acumen and his personal intelligence. But his argument is one of those arguments which common sense will call a vacuum.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I had not intended, Mr. Speaker, to say anything upon this question. I desire, however, to reply briefly to the legal proposition of the gentleman from New York, [Mr. TOWNSEND.] It seems to me that his conclusion rests upon a confusion of ideas or a wrong application of the principle enunciated. Because certain officers as officers de facto are permitted to exercise authority, and their acts are held to be valid, ab inconvenienti, the gentleman concludes that the act of an ineligible elector is likewise valid. What public convenience would thereby be subserved? The proper choice of President conduces to public good, and the elector is concerned alone in making that choice, and is concerned in no other affairs of the public.

Now if a President of the United States is installed into office by virtue of the illegal votes of ineligible electors, while he so remains President of the United States de facto, not de jure, his acts would be held to be valid as a matter of public convenience. But that doctrine applies only as a matter of public convenience. The doctrine by no means applies to the selection of an elector, which is but a part of the intermediate process of choosing a President. On the contrary public policy requires and the Constitution has expressly declared that the electors have certain qualifications and be not "ineligible," in the language of the Constitution. If an elector who is ineligible can have his vote considered binding because he has acted at a particular time in the process of making up the vote which is finally to be declared by a further process, if that is to be the doctrine, then anybody or anything may be made an elector, and a President of the United States may be installed into office upon the declaration of votes so given. A President may be thus declared elected who is ineligible to hold the office under the express provisions of the Constitution. Where is the public convenience in this?

If you cannot inquire whether a man be or be not eligible for elector at any time after he has cast a vote in the electoral college of the State, then you cannot inquire whether what purports to be an electoral vote was given by a man or not. If the returning board of a State shall choose to return as elected some unintelligent being, or an idiot or lunatic, and the vote of that being as an elector be recorded, and you can have no power to inquire into its validity, afterward you can have no power to determine whether there be any legality in the vote, and must, therefore, count it for President of the United States.

I say therefore that the doctrine of public convenience which the gentleman from New York [Mr. TOWNSEND] has enunciated does not apply to the case of the choice of an elector, which is an intermediate process in reaching the election of a President.

The question was then taken upon the resolution submitted by Mr. SPRINGER; and it was adopted.

Mr. SPRINGER. I submit the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk inform the Senate that the House of Representatives are now ready to receive the Senate in joint meeting and to proceed with the count of the electoral vote.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests that the resolution be modified so as to notify the Senate of the action of the House upon the objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. That may be added.

The SPEAKER. With this modification the resolution will be adopted, if there be no objection.

There was no objection.

COUNTING THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

At eleven o'clock and forty minutes a. m., the Doorkeeper announced the Senate of the United States, who then, headed by their President pro tempore and accompanied by their Sergeant-at-Arms and Secretary, entered the Hall, the members and officers of the House rising to receive them.

Thr PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate took his seat as presiding officer of the joint meeting of the two Houses, the Speaker of the House occupying a chair upon his left.

Senators INGALLS and ALLISON, the tellers appointed on the part of the Senate, and Mr. COOK and Mr. STONE, the tellers appointed on the part of the House, took their seats at the Clerk's desk, at which the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House also occupied seats.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint meeting of Congress for counting the electoral vote resumes its session. The two Houses acting separately having determined the objection submitted to the certificate from the State of Nevada, the Secretary of the Senate will report the resolution of the Senate.

Mr. GORHAM, Secretary of the Senate, read as follows:

Resolved, That the vote of R. M. Daggett be counted, with the other votes of the electors of Nevada, notwithstanding the objections made thereto.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk of the House will now report the resolution of the House.

Mr. ADAMS, Clerk of the House, read as follows:

Resolved, That the vote of R. M. Daggett, one of the electors of the State of Nevada, be counted, the objections to the contrary notwithstanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Neither House having decided to reject the vote objected to from the State of Nevada, the full vote of that State will be counted. The tellers will announce the vote of the State of Nevada.

Mr. STONE, (one of the tellers.) The State of Nevada casts 3 votes for Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, for President of the United States, and 3 votes for William A. Wheeler, of New York, for Vice-President.

The count then proceeded. In accordance with the unanimous agreement adopted yesterday in the joint meeting, the certificates were not read in full, but the result of the electoral vote in the following States was announced; and there being no objections to the votes, they were counted as follows:

New Hampshire, 5 votes for Hayes and Wheeler.
New Jersey, 9 votes for Tilden and Hendricks.
New York, 35 votes for Tilden and Hendricks.
North Carolina, 10 votes for Tilden and Hendricks.
Ohio, 22 votes for Hayes and Wheeler.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Having opened a certificate received by messenger from the State of Oregon, the Chair hands the same to the tellers to be read in the presence and hearing of the two Houses, with the corresponding one received by mail.

Senator MITCHELL. I ask that all the papers in this case be read in full.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They will be so read.

Mr. STONE, (one of the tellers) read the certificate and accompanying papers, as follows:

CERTIFICATE No. 1.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Oregon, County of Multnomah, ss:

We, J. C. Cartwright, W. H. Odell, and J. W. Watts, being each duly and severally sworn, say that at the hour of twelve o'clock m. of the (6th) sixth day of December, A. D. 1876, we duly assembled at the State capitol, in a room in the capitol building at Salem, Oregon, which was assigned to us by the secretary of state of the State of Oregon. That we duly, on said day and hour, demanded of the governor of the State of Oregon and of the secretary of state of the State of Oregon certified lists of the electors for President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon, as provided by the laws of the United States and of the State of Oregon; but both L. F. Grover, governor of the State of Oregon, and S. F. Chadwick, secretary of state of said State, then and there refused to deliver to us, or either of us, any such certified lists or any certificate of election whatever. And being informed that such lists had been delivered to one E. A. Cronin by said secretary of state, we each and all demanded such certified lists of said E. A. Cronin, but he then and there refused to deliver or to exhibit such certified lists to us, or either of us. Whereupon we have procured from the secretary of state certified copies of the abstract of the vote of the State of Oregon for electors of President and Vice-President at the presidential election held in said State November 7, A. D. 1876, and have attached them to the certified list of the persons voted for by us and of the votes cast by us for President and Vice-President of the United States, in lieu of a more formal certificate.

W. H. ODELL.
J. W. WATTS.
JOHN C. CARTWRIGHT.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 6th day of December, A. D. 1876.

[SEAL.]

THOS. H. CANN,
Notary Public for State of Oregon.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF OREGON, SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
Salem, December 6, 1876.

I, S. F. Chadwick, do hereby certify that I am the secretary of the State of Oregon and the custodian of the great seal thereof; that T. H. Cann, esquire, resident of Marion County, in said State of Oregon, was on the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, a notary public within and for said State, and duly commissioned such by the governor of the State of Oregon, under its great seal, and was duly qualified to act as such notary public by the laws of this State, as it fully appears by the records of this office; that as said notary public the said T. H. Cann had, on the day aforesaid, to wit, December 6, A. D. 1876, full power and authority, by the laws of the State of Oregon, to take acknowledgments of all instruments in writing, and administer oaths; that the annexed certificate is made in conformity with the laws of this State; that the signature thereto of T. H. Cann is the genuine signature of T. H. Cann, notary public; that the seal affixed to said acknowledgment is the official seal of said T. H. Cann, notary public; and that full faith and credit should be given to his official acts as notary public aforesaid.

In witness whereof I have hereto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Oregon the day and year first above written.

[SEAL.]

S. F. CHADWICK,
Secretary of the State of Oregon.

Abstract of votes cast at the presidential election held in the State of Oregon November 7, 1876, for presidential electors.

Counties.	W. H. Odell.	J. W. Watts.	J. C. Cartwright.	Henry Klippel.	E. A. Cronin.	W. B. Laswell.	D. Clark.	F. Sutherland.	B. Carl.
Baker	318	319	319	549	550	549	1	1	1
Benton	615	615	615	567	567	567	77	77	77
Clackamas	949	950	950	724	724	724	17	17	17
Clatsop	432	432	432	386	385	386	....	....	....
Columbia	157	156	157	179	179	179	22	22	22
Coos	571	571	571	512	516	515	....	....	....
Curry	131	131	131	124	124	124	3	3	3
Douglas	1,002	1,002	1,003	847	847	847	43	43	43
Grant	315	314	316	279	279	277	3	3	3
Jackson	585	585	586	827	840	840	5	5	5
Josephine	209	209	209	252	252	252	4	4	4
Lane	949	949	949	946	946	946	33	33	33
Lake	173	173	173	258	258	258	....	....	....
Linn	1,323	1,324	1,323	1,404	1,404	1,404	140	141	140
Marion	1,780	1,782	1,781	1,154	1,154	1,153	24	23	22
Multnomah	2,124	2,122	2,122	1,525	1,528	1,525	2	2	2
Polk	607	608	608	542	542	542	54	55	54
Tillamook	119	119	119	76	76	76	1	1	1
Umatilla	486	486	486	742	742	742	42	42	42
Union	366	366	366	525	525	525	32	32	32
Wasco	491	491	493	621	621	619	....	....	....
Washington	693	692	693	423	424	423	....	....	....
Yamhill	811	810	812	674	674	674	6	6	6
Total	15,206	15,206	15,214	14,136	14,157	14,149	509	510	507

Simpson, 1; Gray, 1; Saulsbury, 1; McDowell, 1.

SALEM, STATE OF OREGON:

I hereby certify that the foregoing tabulated statement is the result of the vote cast for presidential electors at a general election held in and for the State of Oregon on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1876, as opened and canvassed in the presence of his excellency L. F. Grover, governor of said State, according to law, on the 4th day of December, A. D. 1876, at two o'clock p. m. of that day, by the secretary of state.

[SEAL.]

S. F. CHADWICK,
Secretary of State of Oregon.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF OREGON, SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
Salem, December 6, 1876.

I, S. F. Chadwick, secretary of the State of Oregon, do hereby certify that I am the custodian of the great seal of the State of Oregon. That the foregoing copy of the abstract of votes cast at the presidential election held in the State of Oregon November 7, 1876, for presidential electors, has been by me compared with the original abstract of votes cast for presidential electors aforesaid, on file in this office, and said copy is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of the said original abstract of votes cast for presidential electors.

In witness whereof I have hereto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Oregon the day and year above written.

[SEAL.]

S. F. CHADWICK,
Secretary of the State of Oregon.

List of votes cast at an election for electors of President and Vice-President of the United States in the State of Oregon held on the 7th day of November, 1876.

FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

W. H. Odell received fifteen thousand two hundred and six (15,206) votes.

J. W. Watts received fifteen thousand two hundred and six (15,206) votes.

J. C. Cartwright received fifteen thousand two hundred and fourteen (15,214) votes.

E. A. Cronin received fourteen thousand one hundred and fifty-seven (14,157) votes.

H. Klippel received fourteen thousand one hundred and thirty-six (14,136) votes.

W. B. Laswell received fourteen thousand one hundred and forty-nine (14,149) votes.

Daniel Clark received five hundred and nine (509) votes.

F. Sutherland received five hundred and ten (510) votes.

Bart Curl received five hundred and seven (507) votes.

S. W. McDowell received three, (3,) Gray one, (1,) Simpson one, (1,) and Salisbury one (1) vote.

I, S. F. Chadwick, secretary of state in and for the State of Oregon, do hereby certify that the within and foregoing is a full, true, and correct statement of the entire vote cast for each and all persons for the office of electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon at the general election held in said State on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1876, as appears by the returns of said election now on file in my office.

[SEAL.]

S. F. CHADWICK,
Secretary of State of Oregon.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Oregon, County of Marion, ss:

We, W. H. Odell, J. C. Cartwright, and J. W. Watts, electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon, duly elected and appointed in the year A. D. 1876, pursuant to the laws of the United States, and in the manner directed by the laws of the State of Oregon, do hereby certify that at a meeting held by us at Salem, the seat of government in and for the State of Oregon, on Wednesday, the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, for the purpose of casting our votes for President and Vice-President of the United States—

A vote was duly taken, by ballot, for President of the United States, in distinct ballots for President only, with the following result:

The whole number of votes cast for President of the United States was three (3) votes.

That the only person voted for for President of the United States was Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio.

That for President of the United States Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, received three (3) votes.

In testimony whereof we have hereunto set our hands on the first Wednesday of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

W. H. ODELL.
J. C. CARTWRIGHT.
J. W. WATTS.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Oregon, County of Marion, ss:

We, W. H. Odell, J. C. Cartwright, and J. W. Watts, electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon, duly elected and appointed, in the year A. D. 1876, pursuant to the laws of the United States and in the manner directed by the laws of the State of Oregon, do hereby certify that at a meeting held by us at Salem, the seat of government in and for the State of Oregon, on Wednesday, the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, for the purpose of casting our votes for President and Vice-President of the United States—

A vote was duly taken, by ballot, for Vice-President of the United States, in distinct ballots for Vice-President only, with the following result:

The whole number of votes cast for Vice-President of the United States was three (3) votes.

That the only person voted for for Vice-President of the United States was William A. Wheeler, of New York.

That for Vice-President of the United States William A. Wheeler, of New York, received three (3) votes.

In testimony whereof we have hereunto set our hands on the first Wednesday of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

W. H. ODELL.
J. C. CARTWRIGHT.
J. W. WATTS.

SALEM, OREGON, December 6, 1876—12 o'clock m.

This being the day and hour fixed by the statutes of the United States and of the State of Oregon for the meeting of the electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon, the electors for President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon met at Salem, the seat of government of said State of Oregon, at twelve o'clock noon of the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, said day being the first Wednesday in December.

Present, W. H. Odell and J. C. Cartwright.

The meeting was duly organized by electing W. H. Odell chairman and J. C. Cartwright secretary.

The resignation of J. W. Watts, who was on November 7, A. D. 1876, duly elected an elector of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon, was presented by W. H. Odell, and, after being duly read, was unanimously accepted.

There being but two electors present, to wit, W. H. Odell and J. C. Cartwright, and the State of Oregon being entitled to three electors, the electors present proceeded to and did declare that a vacancy existed in the electoral college, and then and there, under and by virtue of the provisions of section fifty-nine, (59,) title nine, (9,) chapter fourteen, (14,) of the General Laws of Oregon, (Deady and Lane's Compilation,) the said electors, W. H. Odell and J. C. Cartwright, immediately, by viva voce vote, proceeded to fill said vacancy in the electoral college.

J. W. Watts received the unanimous vote of all the electors present, and was thereupon declared duly elected to the office of elector of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon.

Whereupon the said electors, on motion, proceeded to vote by ballot for President of the United States.

The whole number of votes cast for President of the United States was three (3) votes.

The only person voted for for President of the United States was Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio.

For President of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, received three (3) votes.

The said electors then, on motion, proceeded to vote by ballot for Vice-President of the United States.

The whole number of votes cast for Vice-President of the United States was three (3) votes.

The only person voted for for Vice-President of the United States was William A. Wheeler, of New York.

For Vice-President of the United States, William A. Wheeler, of New York, received three (3) votes.

The electors, on motion, then unanimously, by writing under their hands, appointed W. H. Odell to take charge of and deliver to the President of the Senate, at the seat of Government, Washington, D. C., one of the certificates containing the lists of the votes of said electors for President and Vice-President.

On motion, it was ordered that one of the certified copies of the abstract and canvass of the entire vote of the State of Oregon, cast at the presidential election held November 7, A. D. 1876, for electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for Oregon, as certified and delivered to the electors by S. F. Chadwick, secretary of state of the State of Oregon, be attached to each certificate and return of the list of persons voted for by the electors here present for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The electors then adjourned.

W. H. ODELL,
Chairman.
JOHN C. CARTWRIGHT,
Secretary.

We hereby certify that the within and foregoing is a true, full, and correct statement of all the acts and proceedings of the electors of President and Vice-President for the State of Oregon at a meeting of said electors held at Salem, in the State of Oregon, on the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, at 12 o'clock noon of said day.

W. H. ODELL, Elector.
JOHN W. WATTS, Elector.
JOHN C. CARTWRIGHT, Elector.

SALEM, OREGON, December 6, 1876.

We, the duly appointed and elected electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon, do hereby designate and appoint W. H. Odell to take charge of and deliver to the President of the Senate of the United States, at the seat of Government, to wit, at Washington, District of Columbia, before the first Wednesday in January, A. D. 1877, the certificates and papers relating to the vote for President and Vice-President of the United States, cast by us at Salem, in the State of Oregon, on the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876.

W. H. ODELL.
J. C. CARTWRIGHT,
J. W. WATTS.

Ballots.

For President of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio.
(Indorsed) W. H. ODELL.
For President of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio.
(Indorsed) JNO. C. CARTWRIGHT.
For President of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio.
(Indorsed) J. W. WATTS.
For Vice-President of the United States, William A. Wheeler, of New York.
(Indorsed) W. H. ODELL.
For Vice-President of the United States, William A. Wheeler, of New York.
(Indorsed) JOHN C. CARTWRIGHT.
For Vice-President of the United States, William A. Wheeler, of New York.
(Indorsed) J. W. WATTS.

To the honorable Electoral College in and for the State of Oregon for President and Vice-President of the United States:

Whereas I, J. W. Watts, did receive a majority of the legal votes cast for presidential electors at an election held for President and Vice-President of the United States on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1876, as appears from the official returns on file in the secretary of state's office in and for said State; and whereas there has arisen some doubts touching my eligibility at the time of such election: Therefore, I hereby tender my resignation of the office of presidential elector.

Very respectfully,

J. W. WATTS.

SALEM, OR., December 6, 1876.

During the reading,

The PRESIDING OFFICER said: Does the Senator from Oregon desire the reading of the tabular statement accompanying the papers?

Senator MITCHELL. I do not think it will be necessary to read all the figures, but simply the results. I presume the whole will go into the RECORD.

Mr. LANE. I object to any portion being omitted.

The reading was concluded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Having opened another certificate received by messenger from the State of Oregon, the Chair hands it to the tellers to be read in the presence and hearing of the two Houses, handing also the corresponding one received by mail.

Senator INGALLS (one of the tellers) read as follows:

CERTIFICATE NO. 2.

STATE OF OREGON, EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Salem, December 6th, 1876.

I, L. F. Grover, governor of the State of Oregon, do hereby certify that, at a general election held in said State on the seventh day of November, A. D. 1876, William H. Odell received 15,206 votes, John C. Cartwright received 15,214 votes, E. A. Cronin received 14,157 votes for electors for President and Vice-President of the United States. Being the highest number of votes cast at said election for persons eligible, under the Constitution of the United States, to be appointed electors of President and Vice-President of the United States, they are hereby declared duly elected electors as aforesaid for the State of Oregon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State of Oregon to be affixed this the day and year first above written.

[SEAL.] LA FAYETTE GROVER,
Gov. of Oregon.

Attest:
S. F. CHADWICK,
Secretary of State of Oregon.

This is to certify that on the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, E. A. Cronin, one of the undersigned, and John C. Cartwright and William H. Odell, electors, duly appointed on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1876, as appears by the annexed certificate, to cast the vote of the State of Oregon for President and Vice-President of the United States, convened at the seat of government of said State, and for the purpose of discharging their duties as such electors; that thereupon said John C. Cartwright and William H. Odell refused to act as such electors; that upon such refusal the undersigned, J. N. T. Miller and John Parker, were duly appointed electors, as by the laws of Oregon in such cases made and provided, to fill the vacancies caused by the said refusal; that thereupon the said electors, E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker proceeded to vote by ballot, as by law provided, for President and Vice-President of the United States, they being duly qualified to act as such electors, and the electoral college of said State having been duly organized; that upon the ballots so taken Rutherford B. Hayes, of the State of Ohio, received two (2) votes for President, and Samuel J. Tilden, of the State of New York, received one (1) vote for President, and that William A. Wheeler, of the State of New York, received two (2) votes for Vice-President, and Thomas A. Hendricks, of the State of Indiana, received one (1) vote for Vice-President; that the said votes were all the votes cast and the said persons were all the persons voted for. And we further certify that the lists hereto attached are true and correct lists of all the votes given for each of the persons so voted for for President and Vice-President of the United States.

Done at the city of Salem, county of Marion, and State of Oregon, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1876.

E. A. CRONIN,
J. N. T. MILLER,
JOHN PARKER,
Electors for the State of Oregon, to cast the vote of said State for President and Vice-President of the United States.

List of all the persons voted for by the electoral college of the State of Oregon, and of the number of votes cast for each person, at the city of Salem, the seat of government of said State, on Wednesday, the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, as provided by law, for President of the United States:

Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, received two (2) votes 2
Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, received one (1) vote 1

Attest:

E. A. CRONIN,
J. N. T. MILLER,
JOHN PARKER
Electors.

List of all the persons voted for by the electoral college of the State of Oregon, and of the number of votes cast for each person at the city of Salem, the seat of government of said State, on Wednesday, the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, as provided by law, for Vice-President of the United States:

William A. Wheeler, of New York, received two (2) votes 2
Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, received one (1) vote 1

Attest:

E. A. CRONIN,
J. N. T. MILLER,
JOHN PARKER,
Electors.

We, the undersigned, duly appointed electors to cast the votes of the State of Oregon for Presidential and Vice-President of the United States, hereby certify that the lists of all the electoral votes of the said State of Oregon given for President of the United States, and of all the votes given for Vice-President of the United States, are contained herein.

E. A. CRONIN,
J. N. T. MILLER,
JOHN PARKER,
Electors.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any objections to the certificates from the State of Oregon?

Senator MITCHELL. On behalf of the Senators and Representatives whose names are signed thereto, I present an objection to the lists and certificates signed by E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker, claiming to be electors from the State of Oregon, and to the votes cast by them respectively for President and Vice-President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary of the Senate will read the objection submitted by the Senator from Oregon.

The objection was read, as follows:

The undersigned, Senators and members of the House of Representatives of the United States, object to the lists of the names of the electors E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker, one of whom, E. A. Cronin, is included in the certificate of La Fayette Grover, governor of Oregon, and to the electoral votes of said State, signed by E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker, being the certificate second presented by the President of the Senate to the two Houses of Congress in joint convention, for the reasons following:

1. Because neither of said persons, E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, nor John Parker, was ever appointed elector of President and Vice-President by the State of Oregon, either in the manner directed by the Legislature of such State or in any other manner whatsoever.

2. Because it appears from the records and papers contained in and attached to the certificate of W. H. Odell, John C. Cartwright, and John W. Watts, as presented by the President of the Senate to the two Houses of Congress in joint convention, that said W. H. Odell, John C. Cartwright, and John W. Watts were duly and legally appointed electors for President and Vice-President by the State of Oregon in the manner directed by the Legislature thereof, and duly cast their votes as such.

3. Because it does not appear from the face of the certificate of La Fayette Grover, governor of the State of Oregon, attached to and part of the returns of the votes cast by E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker, that such certificate was issued by the governor to the three persons having the highest number of votes for electors for the State of Oregon, and were duly chosen and appointed by said State, according to the laws thereof; but was issued by him to the persons whom he deemed to be eligible to said appointment, although one of such persons, E. A. Cronin, was not appointed thereto according to the laws of said State.

4. Because it appears from the certificate of S. F. Chadwick, secretary of state, under the seal of the State attached to and made a part of the returns, and certificate of W. H. Odell, John C. Cartwright, and John W. Watts, that said persons, W. H. Odell, John C. Cartwright, and John W. Watts, received the highest number of votes at the election on the 7th day of November, 1876, for the office of electors of President and Vice-President; and that the secretary of state on the 4th day of December, following, officially declared in pursuance of law that they, Odell, Cartwright, and Watts, had received the highest number of votes; and that therefore the certificate of the governor in so far as it omitted to certify the name of John W. Watts as one of the electors appointed, and in so far as such certificate contained the name of E. A. Cronin as one of the electors appointed, fails to conform to the act of Congress in such case made and provided, and the laws of Oregon in that behalf, and that such certificate is, as to said Cronin, without authority and of no effect.

5. Because it appears from both certificates that W. H. Odell and John C. Cartwright, a majority of the electoral college, were duly appointed electors by the State of Oregon in the manner directed by the Legislature thereof; that their record presented to the President of the Senate, and by him to the two Houses of Congress, shows that a vacancy in the office of elector existed on the day fixed by law for the meeting of the electors, and that such vacancy was filled by the appointment of John W. Watts.

JOHN H. MITCHELL,
A. A. SARGENT,
United States Senators.
WILLIAM LAWRENCE,
HORATIO C. BURCHARD,
JAMES W. McDILL,
Members House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further objections to the certificates from the State of Oregon?

Senator KELLY. I present objections to the electoral vote for President and Vice-President as cast by J. C. Cartwright, W. H. Odell, and J. W. Watts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection will be read by the Clerk of the House.

The objection was read, as follows:

In the matter of the electoral vote of the State of Oregon for President and Vice-President of the United States:

The undersigned United States Senators and members of the House of Representatives make the following objections to the papers purporting to be the certificates of the electoral votes of the State of Oregon signed by John C. Cartwright, William H. Odell, and John W. Watts:

I.

The said papers have not annexed to them a certificate of the governor of Oregon as required to be made and annexed by sections 136 and 138 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

II.

The said papers have not annexed to them a list of the names of the said Cartwright, Odell, and Watts as electors, to which the seal of the State of Oregon was affixed by the secretary of state, and signed by the governor and secretary as required by section 60 of chapter 14, title 9, of the general laws of Oregon.

III.

The said John W. Watts therein claimed to be one of the said electors was, in the month of February, 1873, appointed a postmaster at La Fayette, in the State of Oregon, and was duly commissioned and qualified as such postmaster, that being an office of trust and profit under the laws of the United States, and continued to be and act as such postmaster from February, 1873, until after the 13th day of November, 1876, and was acting as such postmaster on the 7th day of November, 1876, when presidential electors were appointed by the State of Oregon; and that he, the said John W. Watts, was ineligible to be appointed as one of the said presidential electors.

IV.

When the governor of Oregon caused the lists of the names of the electors of said State to be made and certified, such lists did not contain the name of said John W. Watts, but did contain the names of John C. Cartwright, William H. Odell, and E. A. Cronin, who were duly appointed electors of President and Vice-President of the United States in the State of Oregon on the 7th day of November, 1876.

V.

It was the right and duty of the governor of Oregon, under the laws of that State to give a certificate of election, or appointment as electors, to John C. Cartwright, William H. Odell, and E. A. Cronin, they being the three persons capable of being appointed presidential electors who received the highest number of votes at the election held in Oregon on the 7th day of November, 1876.

VI.

The said John C. Cartwright and William H. Odell had no right or authority in law to appoint the said John W. Watts to be an elector on the 6th day of Decem ber, 1876, as there was no vacancy in the office of presidential elector on that day

VII.

The said John C. Cartwright and William H. Odell had no right or authority in law to appoint the said John W. Watts to be an elector on the 6th day of December, 1876, inasmuch as they did not on that day compose or form any part of the electoral college of the State of Oregon as by law constituted.

VIII.

The said John C. Cartwright and William H. Odell had no authority to appoint the said John W. Watts to be an elector on the 6th day of December, 1876, because the said Watts was still on that day the postmaster at La Fayette, in the State of Oregon, and was still on that day holding the said office of profit and trust.

JAMES K. KELLY, of Oregon,
HENRY COOPER, of Tennessee,
LEWIS V. BOGY, of Missouri,
J. E. McDONALD, of Indiana,
J. W. STEVENSON, of Kentucky,
Senators.
DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, of New York,
J. R. TUCKER, of Virginia,
LAFAYETTE LANE, of Oregon,
G. A. JENKS, of Pennsylvania,
ANSEL T. WALLING, of Ohio,
HIESTER CLYMER, of Pennsylvania,
P. D. WIGGINTON, of California,
E. F. POPPLETON, of Ohio,
JNO. L. VANCE, of Ohio,
FRANK H. HURD, of Ohio,
J. K. LUTTRELL, of California,
Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further objections to the certificates from the State of Oregon?

Mr. LAWRENCE. I present additional objections to the certificates and papers purporting to be certificates of the electoral votes of the State of Oregon cast by E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker.

Mr. GORHAM, the Secretary of the Senate, read the objection, as follows:

The undersigned, Senators and members of the House of Representatives of the United States, object to the certificates and papers purporting to be certificates of the electoral votes of the State of Oregon cast by E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker, and by each of them, and to the list of votes by them and each of them signed and certified as given for President of the United States and for Vice-President of the United States, for the following reasons:

1. The said E. A. Cronin, J. N. T. Miller, and John Parker were not, nor was either of them, appointed an elector of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon.

2. For that W. H. Odell, J. C. Cartwright, and J. W. Watts were duly appointed electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon, and as such electors, at the time and place prescribed by law, cast their votes for Rutherford B. Hayes for President of the United States and for William A. Wheeler for Vice-President of the United States, and the lists of votes signed, certified, and transmitted by such electors to the President of the Senate are the only true and lawful lists of votes for President and Vice-President of the United States.

3. That the said W. H. Odell, J. C. Cartwright, and J. W. Watts received the highest number of all the votes cast for electors of President and Vice-President of the United States by the qualified voters of the State of Oregon at the election held in said State on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1876, and the secretary of state of the State of Oregon duly canvassed said votes, and made and certified under his hand and the great seal of the State of Oregon and delivered to said W. H. Odell, J. C. Cartwright, and J. W. Watts two lists of the electors of President and Vice-President of the United States elected by the qualified voters of said State at said election, and showing that said W. H. Odell, J. C. Cartwright, and J. W. Watts were the persons having the highest number of votes of said qualified voters at such election and were elected, which certificate is dated the 6th day of December, A. D. 1876, and which has been read before the two Houses of Congress; by reason of all which said Odell, Cartwright, and Watts were the lawful electors of President and Vice-President of the United States for the State of Oregon.

JOHN H. MITCHELL,
A. A. SARGENT,
Senators.
WILLIAM LAWRENCE,
EUGENE HALE,
GEO. W. McCRARY,
N. P. BANKS,
Members of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further objections to the certificates from the State of Oregon? If there be no further objections, the certificates objected to, with the accompanying papers, together with the objections, will now be submitted to the commission for its judgment and decision. The Senate will now retire to its Chamber.

At twelve o'clock and fifty minutes p. m. the Senate withdrew.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislative Assembly of Dakota Territory, that settlers upon the public lands set apart for Sioux Indians by executive proclamations of January 11, 1875, and May 20, 1875, be re-imbursed for their improvements made thereon, to the Committee on Public Lands.

Also, resolutions of the Importers' and Grocers' Board of Trade, of New York, indorsing the bill to provide remedies for overcharge of duties on tonnage and imports, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of citizens of Rose Hill, Nebraska, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, the petition of citizens of Kansas, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BLAND: A paper relating to the establishment of a post-route from Cuba, Crawford County, to Vienna, Maries County, Missouri, to the same committee.

By Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois: Two petitions from citizens of Illinois, for cheap telegraphy, to the same committee.

By Mr. FINLEY: A paper relating to the establishment of a post-route from Orlando, Orange County, to Barton, Polk County, Florida, to the same committee.

By Mr. HANCOCK: The petition of H. C. Wood, M. D., of Philadelphia; J. M. Toner, M. D., of Washington; and J. R. Chadwick, M. D., of Boston, to have printed the subject catalogue of the National Medical Library, to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia: The petition of citizens of Augusta County, Virginia, for the repeal of bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. HENKLE: The petition of W. E. Wysham, of Maryland, for the removal of his political disabilities, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HOSKINS: The petition of 68 citizens of Waverly, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. HUMPHREYS: The petition of citizens of Indiana, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HUNTER: The petition of citizens of Woodey's Corner, Parke County, Indiana, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. LEAVENWORTH: The petition of R. G. Wynkoff and 32 other citizens of Onondaga County, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. MAGOON: Joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, favoring the repeal of the act demonetizing silver and the passage of a law for the coinage of the old standard silver dollar and making it a legal tender, to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. O'NEIL: Remonstrance of owners and agents of steamships against the passage of the bill (S. No. 1056) concerning commerce and navigation, to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. PACKER: Three petitions, signed respectively by W. O. Hickok, John E. Patterson, A. Boyd Hamilton, and 49 others; James S. Stewart and 49 others; and Dougherty Brothers & Coy and 45 others, all citizens of Harrisburgh, Pennsylvania, for an appropriation of $100,000 to be expended in the erection of a new post-office building in that city, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. PHILLIPS, of Kansas: The petition of citizens of Kansas, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SMITH, of Georgia: Two petitions for post-routes, one from citizens of Calhoun County, Georgia, for a route from Arlington, Calhoun County, to Keyton; the other from citizens of Miller County, Georgia, for a route from Colquitt to Horns Cross Roads, to the same committee.

By Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina: Papers relating to the petition of Elizabeth Sherrill for a pension, to the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions.

By Mr. WALDRON: The petition of Margaret Colbur n and others of Ypsilanti, Michigan, that pensioners be paid from the date of their discharge and that the limitation of the statute as to applications, for pensions be removed, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. A. S. WILLIAMS: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Detroit, Michigan, favoring the erection of a light-house and fog-signal upon Stannard Rock, Lake Superior, to the Committee on Commerce.

IN SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 21, 1877—10 o'clock a. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate resumes its session.

Mr. SARGENT, (at eleven o'clock and thirty-five minutes a. m.) Mr. President, would it be in order to report from the Committee on Appropriations the deficiency bill, that it may be printed?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would not.

At eleven o'clock and thirty-eight minutes a. m. Mr. G. M. ADAMS, Clerk of the House of Representatives, appeared below the bar, and said:

Mr. President, the House of Representatives has passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the vote of R. M. Daggett, one of the electors of the State of Nevada, be counted, the objections to the contrary notwithstanding.

I am also directed to inform the Senate that the House of Representatives are now ready to receive the Senate in joint meeting to proceed with the count of the electoral votes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will now repair to the Hall of the House of Representatives.

The Senate accordingly proceeded to the Hall of the House of Representatives.

The Senate returned to its Chamber at twelve o'clock and fifty minutes, and the President pro tempore resumed the chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate having returned from the joint meeting upon objections submitted to the double certificates from the State of Oregon, which were, with the papers, submitted to the commission, the Senate resumes its legislative business.

ELECTORAL VOTE OF OREGON—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MITCHELL. I beg to make a report from the Committee on Privileges and Elections in reference to the inquiry into the Oregon electoral vote. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would state that he has been informed the printing can now proceed in the usual manner.

Mr. KERNAN. I do not think it ought to be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. DAVIS. Did I understand the Senator to say in the RECORD?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. DAVIS. Is not that very unusual? Of course there is no objection to printing the report in the usual way, but to have it printed in the RECORD is another question.

Mr. KERNAN. It is very long and would take a great deal of space, from what I know of it.

Mr. MITCHELL. I think there should be no objection to the report being printed in the RECORD.

Mr. SARGENT. Reports of committees in both Houses have been printed in the RECORD this session on account of the necessity of their being printed there to be of any use. I remember the report from the House side on Louisiana which covered about one hundred pages was printed in the RECORD. There are special reasons this year why the reports on both sides should be printed in the RECORD in order that they may get the ear of the tribunal.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon desires the report to be printed in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. WITHERS. I object.

Mr. DAVIS. O, yes; there are three or four objections.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate. Shall the report made by the Senator from Oregon be printed in the RECORD?

Mr. KERNAN. I desire to be heard a moment on the question of printing the report in the RECORD. Such reports have not been printed in the RECORD heretofore as I understand.

Mr. LOGAN. Will the Senator from New York yield to me to allow me to present a memorial?

Mr. KERNAN. I too have morning business to present. I suggest that we be allowed to submit petitions and memorials first, and then I may resume the floor upon this question, as I desire to be heard upon it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the introduction of morning business at this time?

Mr. MITCHELL. I will state that I am compelled to go before the electoral commission immediately and I should like to have this matter disposed of.

Mr. KERNAN. Then I have a word to say upon the question.

Mr. DAVIS. I rise to a question of order. Is not morning business in order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Three or four minutes remains of the morning hour as the Chair observes by looking at the clock; and morning business is in order.

Mr. MITCHELL. I supposed I had the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is in order.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mine is morning business, the report of a committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair understands.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the morning hour should be extended a half hour, because there is a great deal of morning business that we ought to get rid of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Petitions and memorials are first in the order of morning business. Is there objection to extending the morning hour to receive morning business?

Mr. WINDOM. Subject to a call for the regular order or for appropriation bills, of course. I am not willing to consent to extend the morning hour unless we can have some understanding that we shall have a night session in case the morning business is extended.

Mr. SHERMAN. The morning hour need not be extended beyond half an hour, and there is morning business which should be presented.

Mr. WINDOM. I will not object to that provided we can have a night session if we do not pass the post-office and legislative appropriation bills this afternoon. If we can get them through to-day we need not have a night session. Can we have an understanding of that kind?

Mr. MORRILL. There is no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the understanding that the legislative and post-office appropriation bills shall be proceeded with to-day until completed?

Mr. DAVIS. I hardly think the chairman proposes to make that rule now. Let us wait and see what we can do in the progress of the bills.

Mr. WINDOM. I propose that there be a night session unless those two bills can be disposed of before the evening adjournment. If that can be agreed to I have no objection to the extension of the morning hour for half an hour.

Mr. DAVIS. I suggest to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that we move on and see what progress we may make. It may be that it will not be necessary to go into a night session.

Mr. WINDOM. The point is I am unwilling to agree to an extension of the morning hour unless we can have an understanding that we shall have a night session if it is necessary, and if it is not necessary it will not be done.

Mr. DAVIS. I suggest to the Senator that probably we can pass the appropriation bills in to-day's session, without a night session, by remaining here until five or six o'clock.

Mr. WINDOM. If we can do that, then there will be no necessity for a night session. The Senate certainly understands that we should have a night session unless those bills can be passed to-day; and I only ask for an agreement to hold a night session on that condition.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to extending the morning hour half an hour?

Mr. WEST. The proposition was put a little differently a moment ago.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota desires it to be understood that, in case the bills named by him are not concluded, namely, the legislative and post-office appropriation bills, there shall be an evening session.

Mr. DAVIS. I suggest to my friend, the chairman of the committee, that later in the day we can see whether that be necessary. Only an extension of half an hour is asked.

Mr. WINDOM. Then I must object to the extension of the morning hour for half an hour.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota objects to the extension of the morning hour, and the morning hour has expired.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have an important report which I desire to make; and if necessary I will move to postpone the present and all prior orders for the purpose of presenting it. It would take but a moment to make the report, and it must be made to-day in order to have it printed.

Mr. WEST. If we extend the morning hour that it should be for a definite period, because discussion on the Oregon question might run us into a discussion of three or four hours. Let the Senator from Ohio make a definite proposition to extend the morning hour.

Mr. SHERMAN. We should have a specified time, say not exceeding fifteen minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would remind the Senator from Ohio that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] has the floor also on the question of a report from a committee.

Mr. WINDOM. I will not object to an extension of the morning hour for fifteen minutes; but I desire to express the hope that if we do not finish the appropriation bills we may have consent for an evening session.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will vote with the Senator for that with great pleasure if it is necessary. I desire to make a report now while I am on the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator from Oregon insists upon the floor the Chair must recognize him, as he has presented a report from a committee which is under consideration.

Mr. MITCHELL. I cannot yield, because I must go before the commission in a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The understanding is that the morning hour has been extended for fifteen minutes, if there be no objection. The Chair hears none.

Mr. MITCHELL. I now ask consent that the report on the Oregon electoral votes which I presented be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let that order be made.

Mr. KERNAN. I object.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I want to add five minutes more to the time allowed for morning business. There is an important bill, which concerns the State Department, that it is important to pass today. I ask that the extension be for twenty minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania desires five minutes additional, fifteen minutes having been agreed upon. Is there objection to the extension? The Chair hears none. The Senator from Oregon asks the printing of his report in the RECORD.

Mr. MITCHELL. I wish to say just one word in reference to this matter. I find in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of Febuary 10, in the House proceedings, the whole of the report made by the House Committee on Louisiana Affairs, and a much longer report I think than the one presented by myself from the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. I certainly hope that the objection to the printing of this report in the RECORD will be withdrawn by the Senator from New York.

Mr. KERNAN. Mr. President, I feel bound to object to this report being printed in the RECORD on behalf of the minority. I dissent from the report, the conclusions of fact, and the conclusions of law. It is very long. I do not know how many pages it would take of print; but it would take some hours to read it I am satisfied. The decision of the commission, made since this investigation was commenced by the committee, excludes the consideration of evidence taken before the committee, and no part of it can be necessary in their deliberations. The evidence is really not yet closed, unless it is being closed now. There is a little evidence that I desire to produce whenever the investigation is closed by the majority. I understand that the chairman of the committee says that now I can produce it. The report of the majority is not a document that ought to be printed in the RECORD. The reason, as I understand, why those other reports were printed in the RECORD was that there was no appropriation for printing reports in the ordinary way. There is an appropriation for that purpose now; and this report should be printed in the ordinary way; and it should not encumber the RECORD. It would be very unjust to have a report of that character printed in the RECORD as a part of the proceedings of the Congress of the United States. Therefore I think the precedent should never have been established except from necessity, owing to the want of means, and we should not now print in the RECORD what would make an immense document.

Mr. MITCHELL. I know not what the reason was that led to the printing of the House Louisiana report in the RECORD. I do know as a matter of fact that it is in the RECORD; and if the democratic party had the benefit of having their report printed in the RECORD, no matter what the cause was, the same privilege should be accorded to the other side, it seems to me, and I earnestly hope that the objection will not be insisted upon.

Mr. DAVIS. I believe it is known that the cause of printing different reports in the RECORD, both in the Senate and in the House, was because there was an appropriation for printing the RECORD and the appropriation was exhausted for printing reports or doing other printing for Congress. I believe, and I submit to the Chair, that it is out of order to print anything in the RECORD except by unanimous consent, unless the matter is read at the desk. I make the point of order, among other things, that unless any paper is read at the desk, unless unanimous consent is given, it cannot go into the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Any question made in regard to printing shall be submitted to the Senate. The Senate has a perfect right to dictate in what manner a paper shall be printed. The Chair will therefore submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. I submit to the Chair whether or not it has not been the usage of the Senate that no matter should go into the RECORD unless it was read at the desk, unless unanimous consent was given. I ask whether that has not been the usual course in the Senate? I do not believe there is any positive rule on the subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the new rule, as the Senator will see, when a question is raised as to printing it shall be submitted to the Senate; and in several cases where it has been asked that papers be printed the question has been submitted to the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. I know there is a new rule on the subject, but I have just examined that rule, and, in my judgment, it does not cover the case now before us. My recollection is that the usage previously has been that a paper had to be read at the desk to be printed in the RECORD, unless unanimous consent was given to its publication.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is correct. The Senator from Oregon has asked that the report be printed in the RECORD, which is not the ordinary mode of printing the reports of committees. The rule requires reports of committees to be printed, and when a question is raised as to the manner in which a report is to be printed, that question is left to the Senate, in case an objection is made. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from West Virginia to Rule 55, referring to the reports of committees; that is, ordinary printing; but the Senator from Oregon has asked that the report be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. WALLACE. Is not the request of the Senator from Oregon in fact a motion to print additional numbers of the report, and must not that motion under the rule go to the Committee on Printing? Is not that the effect of it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would not so rule. It is not the case of the printing of additional numbers.

Mr. WALLACE. Does it not bring the additional expense? Is it not an addition to the number to be printed by law?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon has not asked that the ordinary number be printed under the rule, and the number in the RECORD would be the ordinary number; so that it would not be an extra number. If, in addition, the Senator from Oregon asked that the report should be printed under the rule, the point made by the Senator from Pennsylvania would be well taken.

Mr. WRIGHT. It seems to me the point of order made by the Senator from West Virginia is this: It is asked that this paper be printed in the RECORD without being read; the Senator from Oregon asks that the paper may go into the RECORD by a vote of the Senate, without having unanimous consent, as the paper has not been read. The point is whether that can be done by a vote of the Senate or otherwise than by unanimous consent, unless the paper shall be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will answer the Senator from Iowa that the Senator from West Virginia has not made that point of order. The Senator from West Virginia made the point of order that the paper could not be printed in the RECORD without having been read.

Mr. DAVIS. Without first being read at the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia has not insisted on the reading of the report. If the Senator from West Virginia makes that point, the Chair will of course rule that it must be read.

Mr. DAVIS. I dislike very much to make a suggestion of that kind. Of course the report could be printed in the RECORD in that way, but we know it would take up a great deal of time. I hoped that the Senator from Oregon would have his report printed in the ordinary way, without pressing his request to have it printed in the RECORD; and as that may lead to the necessity of its being read at the desk, I hope, now that he sees there is opposition to printing it in the RECORD, and as it cannot be done, that he will not insist on it further.

Mr. MITCHELL. With all deference to the Senator from West Virginia, I know it can be done. I insist on it because I can have the report read or make it part of my remarks. I know there is objection to printing it in the RECORD, and I know where that objection comes from. There being objection and objection coming from the source it does, I will withdraw my request and let the report be printed in the ordinary way.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be printed under the rule.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a resolution of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, in favor of an appropriation for the erection of a light-house and steam fog-signal on Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, praying that a portion of the Crow Indian reservation may be restored to the public domain and opened up for settlement; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of the Importers and Grocers' Board of Trade of New York, in favor of the passage of House bill No. 4250, to provide remedies for overcharge of duties on tonnage and imports; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of Captain J. N. Stout and 62 others, of Lenawee County, Michigan, praying Congress to pass an act giving to soldiers pensions from the date of their discharge; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the Legislature of Dakota Territory, in favor of the passage of a law re-imbursing the settlers upon the lands set apart by executive proclamation of January 11, 1875, and May 20, 1875, for their improvements made thereon; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. LOGAN presented a memorial of the Board of Trade of the city of Chicago; which was read and referred to the Committee on Commerce, as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, by order and on behalf of the Board of Trade of the city of Chicago, and representing in large measure the marine interests of the great lakes, beg leave to respectfully represent unto your honorable bodies that a dangerous reef of rocks, known as Stannard's Rock, exists in Lake Superior directly in the usual course of vessels navigating those waters, above Marquette, and that no appropriate light or other appliance exists to indicate the location of said rock and warn mariners of the danger to which they are exposed: Therefore,

Your memoralists respectfully pray your honorable bodies that you will, at the present session, make the necessary appropriation, as asked by the Light House Board, and authorize the early construction of a suitable light-house at the place indicated, to the end that the perils of navigation, incident to the exceedingly dangerous character of this obstruction, may be abated.

And your memoralists will ever pray, &c.

D. H. LINCOLN, President.

Attest:

CHARLES RANDOLPH, Secretary.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, February, 1877.

Mr. KERNAN presented the petition of John Cobb, praying for indemnity out of the Geneva award fund for damages sustained by acts of the cruiser Alabama; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the petition of John Owens, administrator of the goods, chattels, and credits of John H. Verdon, late of the city of New York, praying for indemnity out of the Geneva award fund; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY presented a resolution of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, in favor of a light-house and fog-signal on Stannard's Rock, in Lake Superior; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I present a memorial of the executives of various States and Territories, together with scientific men interested in the subject, assembled to consult upon the practical and concerted means for the arrest of the prevalent locust or grasshopper plague, praying for the appointment of a commission to consist of three entomologists and two practical men of experience with the locusts, to examine into the history, nature, and habits of the insects, &c. I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and that it be printed in the RECORD.

The memorial was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the undersigned, executives of various States and Territories, together with scientific men interested in the subject, assembled to consult upon practical and concerted means for the arrest of the prevalent locust or grasshopper plague, respectfully represents that various portions of the country have been devastated by the insects known as locusts or grasshoppers, at divers periods of the past, for one hundred and fifty years; that during the past twenty years the number and ravages of these insects have increased with alarming rapidity; that many of the settlers in the Western States and Territories have suffered a total loss of crops from the ravages of one species (the Rocky Mountain locust) for four years in succession, and are in consequence reduced to great poverty and distress; that these insects, as history shows, confine their devastation to no one State or section of the country, but have overrun no less than sixteen States and Territories during the year 1876; that by their swift migrations from State to State, destroying millions of dollars of the farmers' hard earnings, crippling the progress of the border States, and retarding the settlement of the Territories, these destructive insects have become a national plague; and it is our profound conviction that an evil which, by impairing the prosperity of agriculture threatens the source of productive industry, deserves the prompt and thorough consideration of the National Government.

Your memorialists therefore respectfully ask—

First. That a commission be appointed by your honorable body at the earliest practicable moment, to consist of three entomologists and two practical men of experience with the locusts, to be appointed by the chief of the geological and geographical survey of the Territories, and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, the duty of which commission it shall be to examine into the history, nature, and habits of the insects, and to suggest such means of destroying them, and such remedies against their ravages, by the offer of bounties for the destruction of their eggs or otherwise, as their investigations shall prove most practicable. And for this purpose that the sum of $25,000 be added to that part of the sundry civil appropriation bill providing for said survey of the Territories, in order to pay the salaries and expenses of such commission.

Second. That the Signal Service be authorized and required to take regular observations of the movements of the insects, of the time, direction, and extent of their flights, the time of the hatching and departure of the young locusts, and other particulars concerning them; and that the information thus obtained of the appearance and progress of the swarms, and such other observations as may prove of practical service, be published with the daily weather reports; and that General Meyer be provided with such additional means and assistance as shall be adequate to the demands of such enlarged operations.

Your memorialists ask this in view of the ravages of the past, and with grave apprehensions for the future, arising from the increased numbers of the pests and the enlarged area in which they have deposited their eggs. They believe that by reason of the winged and evasive movements of the locusts, the limitless field of their operations, and the predatory and mysterious character of their incursions, as well as their countless numbers, these insects constitute an enemy too formidable to be successfully encountered by any single State or community; and they are fully persuaded that the evil has swollen into a scourge of national dimensions, requiring the interposition of the General Government. Your memorialists moreover believe that if it is within your legitimate province to improve our rivers and interior harbors in order to facilitate the movement of crops, the rescue of those crops from the rapacity of a common enemy cannot be less an object of your rightful care, and that the same public policy which encourages internal commerce equally justifies the preservation of those important agricultural products without which there can be no commerce.

All of which is respectfully submitted, and your favorable action thereon urgently solicited. And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

C. H. HARDIN, Governor of Missouri.
PROFESSOR C. V. RILEY,
State Entomologist of Missouri.
JOHN L. BEVERIDGE, Governor of Illinois.
PROFESSOR CYRUS THOMAS,
State Entomologist of Illinois.
SAMUEL J. KIRKWOOD, Governor of Iowa.
THOMAS A. OSBORN, Governor of Kansas.
SILAS GARBER, Governor of Nebraska.
ROBERT W. FURNAS,
Ex-Governor of Nebraska.
ALVIN SAUNDERS, Ex-Governor of Nebraska.
PROFESSOR C. D. WILBER, Nebraska.
PROFESSOR A. D. WILLIAMS, Nebraska.
JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Governor of Minnesota.
PENNOCK PUSEY, Minnesota.
PROFESSOR ALLEN WHITMAN, Minnesota.
JOHN L. PENNINGTON,
Governor of Dakota Territory.
B. F. POTTS, Governor of Montana Territory.

Mr. MCMILLAN presented a memorial of the Board of Trade of the city of Minneapolis, Minnesota, praying for the establishment of a post-route and military road from Fort Lincoln to Deadwood City, in the Black Hills; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, in relation to the coinage of the silver dollar; which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved by the senate, (the assembly concurring,) That the Senators and Representatives of the State of Wisconsin in Congress are requested to use all proper endeavors to secure the repeal of the law known as the act demonetizing silver, and to secure such laws as may be necessary to establish the coinage of the old standard silver dollar, and to make it legal-tender for all debts, public and private.

Approved February 16, 1877.

HARRISON LUDINGTON,
Governor.
C. D. PARKER,
President of the Senate.
J. B. CASSADAY,
Speaker of the Assembly.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, in favor of an appropriation to aid in the completion of the Sturgeon Bay and Lake Michigan Ship-Canal and harbor, and to extend the time for the completion thereof; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WHYTE presented the petition of John Saunders, of Baltimore, Maryland, praying for the removal of his political disabilities; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CLAYTON presented a petition of officers and citizens of Garland County, Arkansas, praying for the passage of a bill granting to that county a certain portion of the Hot Springs reservation for the use of a court-house; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of citizens of Plain Township, Wood County, Ohio, praying that there may be a pension granted to Robert Spoors; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Ohio, praying the passage of the act allowing pensioners the amount of arrears to which they would be entitled by a removal from the statutes of the unjust limitation which has debarred many from receiving their just dues, and that they shall be entitled to receive in all cases a pension from the date of discharge of the soldier; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition, very numerously signed, of citizens of Warren, Ohio, praying an appropriation for the improvement of the outer harbor at Ashtabula; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of citizens of Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3370) to amend the statutes in relation to damages for infringement of patents, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Lancaster, Ohio, praying for the repeal of the tax on banks and banking; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Missouri; which was read and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, as follows:

STATE OF MISSOURI, ss:

I, Michael K. McGrath, secretary of state of the State of Missouri, hereby certify that the annexed pages contain a full, true, and complete copy of a concurrent resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, entitled "Concurrent resolution instructing Senators and Members of Congress to prevent the removal of Sioux Indians to the Indian Territory," approved February 8, 1877, as appears by comparing the same with the original roll of said resolution now on file, as the law directs, in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal of office. Done at office, in the city of Jefferson, this 13th day of February, A. D. 1877.

[SEAL.] MICH'L K. MCGRATH,
Secretary of State.

Concurrent resolution instructing Senators and Members of Congress to prevent the removal of Sioux Indians to the Indian Territory.

Whereas an attempt is being made, by parties acting under some pretended authority from the Government of the United States, to remove the savage tribes of Sioux Indians from their present location and to settle them in the Indian Territory, bordering on the States of Missouri, Kansas, Texas, and Arkansas;

And whereas, by such removal and the location of said savage tribes in the said Indian Territory, great injustice and injury would be done to the cause of civilization and to the trade and business of Saint Louis and Kansas City;

And whereas by locating the said wild tribes of Indians in Indian Territory a large area of the most fertile and productive lands of the Southwest would be permanently withdrawn from settlement or occupation by any useful class of citizens and converted into a haunt of marauders and outlaws, to the serious detriment and peril of the inhabitants upon our western borders;

Resolved by the house of representatives, (the senate concurring therein,) That our Senators be instructed and our Representatives in Congress requested to use all their influence to prevent the removal of said tribes to the Indian Territory.

Resolved, That the secretary of state be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States.

Approved February 8, 1877.

Mr. DAWES presented the petition of Adelia E. Ball and Edwin P. Ball, administrators for the extension of a patent granted to William Ball, deceased, May 27, 1856, for operating steam-stamps; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. WALLACE presented a memorial of citizens of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, remonstrating against the passage of the bill (S. No. 1056) concerning commerce and navigation and the regulation of steam-vessels and sailing-vessels; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented two petitions of citizens of Harrisburgh, Pennsylvania, praying for an appropriation for the erection of a post-office building at that place; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented the petition of Lieutenant George W. Leamy, Ninth Pennsylvania Veteran Cavalry, praying for a pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. U. S. GRANT, jr., his Secretary, announced that the President had on yesterday approved and signed the act (S. No. 1141) to encourage and promote telegraphic communication between America and Europe.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SARGENT, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

Mr. HEREFORD, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4301) for the relief of A. W. Plymale, of West Virginia, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. WITHERS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2847) granting a pension to Lucinda Starnes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. MERRIMON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3745) to prevent the sale and use of adulterated and explosive illuminating oils and other fluids, reported it with amendments.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Finance, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. No. 1267) to aid in the resumption of specie payments; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. WRIGHT. The Committee on Claims have had under consideration the bill (S. No. 1193) for the relief of John W. Schoenecker, James T. Porter, and Henry Finnegrass, and I call the attention of the Committee on Appropriations to the report that I now make. The appropriation asked for the benefit of these persons is recommended by the Treasury Department, and it is recommended by the committee that it be included in the deficiency bill. The Committee on Claims find that the claim ought to be allowed, and they make a favorable report upon the claim and recommend the passage of the bill. I am instructed, however, in reporting the bill with a favorable recommendation to move that the bill with the papers be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Committee on Claims will be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and it will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, if there be no objection.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of T. A. Walker, praying to be re-imbursed for the amount of certain moneys paid by him for clerk-hire while acting as register of the United States land office at Des Moines, Iowa, submitted a report, accompanied by a bill (S. No. 1268) for the relief of Thomas A. Walker.

The bill was read twice by its title, and the report was ordered to be printed.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1909) for the relief of John W. Chickering, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3483) to restore John Pulford, lieutenant-colonel United States Army, (retired,) to his former rank on the retired list, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1231) for the relief of the board of trustees of the Antietam National Cemetery, reported it without amendment.

Mr. OGLESBY. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1765) respecting the limits of reservations for town sites upon the public domain, to report it without amendment, and to say that the committee recommend the passage of the bill without amendment. It is an important subject and ought to be acted upon at this session.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3681) for the relief of B. B. Connor & Brother, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3566) to authorize the board of trustees of the city of Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, to enter and purchase for the use of said city certain public lands, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1205) to authorize the board of trustees of the city of Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, to enter and purchase for the use of said city certain public lands, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. SPENCER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred a resolution of the Legislature of Kansas in favor of payment for losses sustained by citizens of that State through depredations committed by guerrilla bands during the year 1861 and thereafter, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee was discharged from its further consideration.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 605) for the relief and re-appointment of Captain Thomas B. Hunt, assistant quartermaster in the United States Army, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

BILL INTRODUCED.

Mr. DENNIS asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1269) relating to the Washington City and Point Lookout Railroad Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Finance to report an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes. I call the attention of the committee to this amendment. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON and Mr. HOWE submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them to the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. No. 631) providing for the adjudication and issue of patents in mission-land cases in the State of Oregon and the Territories of Washington, Idaho, and Montana; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. No. 7) to provide for the sale or exchange of a certain piece of land in the Wallabout Bay, in the State of New York, to the city of Brooklyn;

A bill (H. R. No. 429) for the relief of Charles C. Campbell, of Washington County, Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 859) for the benefit of Andrew Williams, of Weakley County, Tennessee;

A bill (H. R. No. 4251) making appropriations for the consular and diplomatic service of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. No. 4576) to provide for changing and fixing the boundaries of certain property ceded to the Government of the United States by the city of Memphis, Tennessee.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I ask the Senate now to take up the bill to carry out the provisions of the treaty with Mexico. The government of Mexico has made a very great effort to pay a large sum of money to the Government of the United States, and it is thought desirable at the State Department that the transaction should be closed before the present Administration goes out. I move that the Senate take up the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. DAVIS. Let the bill be read, subject to objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion has been made and a single objection will prevent going to the Calendar.

Mr. WITHERS. Let the bill be read by its title.

The Chief Clerk read the bill (H. R. No. 4629) to provide for the distribution of the awards made under the convention between the United States of America and the republic of Mexico, concluded on the 4th day of July, 1868, by its title.

Mr. WITHERS. There is objection to the consideration of that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Virginia object to the motion?

Mr. WITHERS. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As the Senator objects to the motion of the Senator from Pennsylvania, the Chair cannot entertain it.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 901.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The twenty minutes allowed for morning business have expired. Is there objection to the motion of the Senator from Indiana? The Chair hears none.

Mr. WEST. What is the question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would remind Senators that the rule is that when a motion is made to go to the Calendar within the morning hour a single objection prevents the Chair from entertaining a motion for that purpose, and that is why the Chair puts the question, is there objection to the motion?

Mr. WEST. How much of the morning hour is left?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has stated that the twenty minutes have expired.

Mr. WEST. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana calls for the regular order.

Mr. McDONALD. I hope the Senator will yield to me.

Mr. WEST. I should like to oblige the Senator, but it is impossible for me to do so.

Mr. McDONALD. It would take but a moment to consider the bill.

Mr. WEST. What is the proposition?

Mr. McDONALD. It is a small bill for the relief of a very honest man, J. E. Robertson, of Indianapolis, Indiana.

Mr. WEST. I am sure that would give rise to debate. I am compelled to call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana declines to yield, the time having expired granted by the Senate. If there be no objection, the Chair will lay before the Senate the business on his table.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, communicating, in answer to a Senate resolution of February 13, 1877, a statement of appropriations and expenditures, civil and miscellaneous, of the Department of State from March 4, 1789, to June 30, 1876; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a letter of the Secretary of War, communicating information upon the expediency and utility of constructing a harbor of refuge from ice floods upon the Ohio River in what is known as Mill Bottom, above the city of Newport, on the Kentucky shore, opposite the city of Cincinnati, and recommending an appropriation for that purpose; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from Colonel B. H. Grierson, protesting against the restoration to his former rank and position of Thomas J. Spencer, late lieutenant Tenth United States Cavalry; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in answer to a Senate resolution of December 29, 1876, a statement of Osage ceded lands sold by the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad Company prior to February 25, 1874; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

AGREEMENT WITH SIOUX INDIANS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. No. 1185) to ratify an agreement with certain bands of the Sioux Nation of Indians, and also with the Northern Arapaho and Cheyenne Indians.

The amendment of the House of Representatives was on page 1, line 6, after the word "confirmed," to insert the following:

Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize the removal of the Sioux Indians to the Indian Territory, and the President of the United States is hereby directed to prohibit the removal of any portion of the Sioux Indians to the Indian Territory until the same shall be authorized by an act of Congress hereafter enacted.

The amendment was concurred in.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills from the House of Representatives were severally read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

The bill (H. R. No. 2695) for the relief of S. T. Marshall, of Lee County, Iowa—to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (H. R. No. 4418) to pay William L. Scruggs, late minister at Bogota, from October 10 to November 21, 1876—to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The bill (H. R. No. 631) providing for the adjudication and issue of patents in mission-land cases in the State of Oregon, and the Territories of Washington, Idaho, and Montana—to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Finance:

A bill (H. R. No. 776) for the relief of James J. Waring, of Savannah, Georgia; and

A bill (H. R. No. 2830) for the relief of Charles Mason.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

A bill (H. R. No. 2697) supplementary to the act entitled "An act to carry into effect the convention between the United States and China, concluded on the 8th day of November, 1858, at Shanghai," approved March 3, 1859, and to give the Court of Claims jurisdiction in certain cases;

A bill (H. R. No. 3654) to relieve William F. Russell, of Florida, of political disabilities;

A bill (H. R. No. 4552) to remove the political disabilities of James Austin McCreight, of Alachua County, Florida;

A bill (H. R. No. 4675) to remove the political disabilities of Henry H. Lewis, of Maryland;

A bill (H. R. No. 4676) to remove the political disabilities of Henry B. Tyler, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4677) to remove the political disabilities of William B. Mackall, of Virginia; and

A bill (H. R. No. 4678) to relieve Charles H. Levy, of the State of Louisiana, of his political disabilities.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF BALTIMORE.

The bill (H. R. No. 2690) to refund to the mayor and city council of Baltimore certain moneys illegally assessed and collected for internal-revenue tax was read twice by its title.

Mr. WHYTE. I ask the Senator of Louisiana to allow me just one moment to ask for the passage of this bill, to which there can possibly be no objection. It is to refund to the city of Baltimore a sum of money which under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States was illegally exacted. The court has said that the money should be refunded and it is simply to refund $13,000 which was paid in 1862 under the internal-revenue law. It had the unanimous report of the Committee of Ways and Means in the House. It will not take a minute.

Mr. WEST. I am sure the Senator from Maryland will not call upon me to make an invidious distinction in behalf of his constituents that I was not able to accord to other Senators.

Nothing but a sense of duty as a member of the Committee on Appropriations compels me to adhere strictly to the agreement. I propose myself to lay aside a measure in which I am much interested in order that the public business may proceed.

Mr. WHYTE. If the Senator from Louisiana will bear with me one moment I will state that if this bill should go to the committee it would have to be reported back, there would be a delay of perhaps three or four days, and the opportunity may be lost of getting the bill passed, whereas the bills moved by the Senator from Pennsylvania and the Senator from Indiana are on the Calendar and may be called up at any time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator object?

Mr. WEST. Yes, sir.

Mr. WHYTE. I appeal to the Senator.

Mr. WEST. I am sorry that I cannot oblige the Senator without doing injustice to another Senator. Let the bill lie over and the Senator can call it up to-morrow morning.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will lie on the table.

Mr. WHYTE subsequently said: I hope the Senater from Louisiana will give way and allow me to take up the bill from the House which was laid on the table a moment ago.

Mr. WEST. If the Senator will give me the assurance, now that the post-office bill is before the Senate, that the consideration of his bill will require no time, I shall yield.

Mr. WHYTE. It cannot possibly occupy more than three minutes.

Mr. WEST. Very well.

Mr. WHYTE. I move to take up the bill (H. R. No. 2690) to refund to the mayor and city council of Baltimore certain moneys illegally assessed and collected for internal-revenue tax.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the payment of $13,500 due the mayor and city council of Baltimore as interest from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company collected from that company illegally as an internal-revenue tax by Joseph J. Lewis, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, on the 9th day of January, 1864.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will call up the unfinished business, which is Senate bill No. 984.

Mr. WEST. I hope now to obtain the consent of the Senate that that bill, known as the railroad bill, may be laid aside without prejudice to its order of business as the unfinished business of the Senate, until the appropriation bills can be disposed of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to this understanding? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WEST. I move now that the Senate proceed to the considera tion of the post-office appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4187) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

The first amendment of the committee was in line 11, to increase the appropriation "for mail depredations and special agents" in the office of the Postmaster-General from $21,500 to $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 18, to increase the appropriation

"for preparation and publication of post-route maps" from $20,000 to $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 22, to increase the appropriation for advertising general mail-lettings of each State and Territory from $40,000 to $60,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 30, to insert the following:

For miscellaneous items in the office of the Postmaster-General, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 34, under the heading of "Office of the First Assistant Postmaster-General," to increase the appropriation for compensation to postmasters from $7,000,000 to $7,250,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 37, to increase the appropriation "for compensation to clerks in post-offices" from $3,290,000 to $3,390,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 45, to increase the appropriation "for payment to letter-carriers" from $1,750,000 to $1,900,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 53, to increase the appropriation for wrapping-paper from $20,000 to $22,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 58, to increase the appropriation for rent, light, and fuel from $390,000 to $420,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 61, to increase the appropriation for stationery from $45,000 to $55,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 62, to increase the appropriation for miscellaneous and incidental items in the office of the First Assistant Postmaster-General from $50,000 to $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 69, under the head of "Office of the Second Assistant Postmaster-General," to increase the appropriation "for transportation by railroad" from $9,000,000 to $9,600,000.

Mr. HAMLIN. After line 70 I move to add the words:

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the same may be used by the Postmaster-General to obtain proper facilities over the great trunk lines of railroads for the railway post-office service during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878.

Mr. BOGY. I must object to that amendment without some explanation of it.

Mr. HAMLIN. I will give the explanation which induced the committee to offer the amendment. I understand the increase recommended by the Appropriation Committee was founded on two reasons, designed to accomplish two purposes, both of which, I think, will meet the approbation of the entire Senate: First, to have a fund with which service can be placed upon newly constructed railroads. Last year when the appropriations were passed the Senator from Texas, [Mr. MAXEY,] who is not now in his seat, in connection with myself, called the attention of the Senate to the reduced appropriations, and stated to the Senate that the appropriations already made would not enable the Postmaster-General to place service upon roads that should be newly constructed, as the amount then embraced in the bill was only designed to cover existing roads. The results prove that we were correct. I regret that the Senator from Texas is now absent. Several hundred miles, I think, of new railroad during the past year were completed in that State, but the service could not be placed upon them for the reason that there was no appropriation with which to pay for the service; and the transportation of the mails side by side with the railroad is being carried on to-day. For such a reason I understand the Appropriation Committee have increased the amount. Secondly, we had inaugurated what was called a fast system of mails, by which, I think, between New York and Saint Louis, all the regions beyond and all the points radiating from the great trunk roads, and there was a saving (of course the longer the distance the more the saving) of from an hour to forty-eight hours in the delivery of the mails. It was said then that the diminution of the appropriation would destroy all the fast-mail service. It did it, and to-day we are transporting our mails upon a system that existed sixteen years ago, without the slightest advance within the last sixteen years; and the reduction last year accomplished that result.

It was believed by many that the amount paid the railroad companies was in excess of the service which they performed, and there was a commission raised for the purpose of investigating the railroad service. That commission was appointed. They are now doing their duty. They are gathering information from foreign governments in relation to the service. They have not completed their work, and I think they will furnish the legislative body with information that will be very useful. I can only speak my own judgment, but I feel a confidence when I say that from the information so obtained we shall be able to make a new system which shall be a saving to the Government in the transportation of our mails. The Senate will also recollect that at a subsequent period in the session, to meet the exigencies of the occasion, we adopted certain amendments upon the post-route bill to correct the evil. Now, that commission being in existence, I will say that the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads have come to the unanimous conclusion that it is not wise to-day to enter into a system of fast mails, because when we shall have obtained that information, the very best information that can be had in this country and in regard to foreign countries, we shall be ready to adopt a system which I think would be a saving. If we undertake to extend the fast-mail system to-day, we may find ourselves embarrassed when we shall have obtained this information. It is, therefore, I believe, the unanimous opinion of the Postal Committee that it is unwise to do that, but it is also, I think, the unanimous opinion of that committee that it is very wise to do precisely what this amendment of the Appropriation Committee have recommended, with the amendment which I, as their organ, have suggested, to wit, to put postal cars on the large trunk roads. That will not have any connection with fast mails. The amendment as it comes from the Appropriation Committee does not cover the ground.

Mr. WEST. Although it gives the money.

Mr. HAMLIN. It gives the money, but it does not give the power to use it, and the amendment which I have offered gives that power. Senators will recollect that the mails are now transported by weight. A forty-five feet car will carry as much weight as a sixty feet car, with a space in the sixty feet car set apart for distribution. Consequently every railroad in the country will run forty-five feet cars, and with forty-five feet cars the mail cannot be distributed along the line of the road. Let me illustrate. Between Baltimore and Saint Louis, between New York, over either the New York Central or Pennsylvania Railroad, and I take those great roads to illustrate the position, they are now running forty-five feet cars, which do not furnish the room by which the mails can be distributed. They will not furnish any other than the forty-five feet cars because they get the same compensation, such a car carrying as much bulk in weight, and they get their pay in that way, as the larger car.

This amendment proposes not to increase the speed of the mails until we have obtained the best information, but to enable the large trunk lines to place distributing postal cars upon the road; in doing which, while you do not increase the speed of the mail a single moment you will increase the delivery of the mail between the points I have named twenty-four hours. You thus add to the speed, because if the mails are distributed as they go along it saves the distributing in the offices at the termini of the road and at the principal points along the road. The very terminal point would not be benefited by this distribution, as they would only have to distribute, but every point beyond and every point radiating from these roads would be benefited. Every inch of your country beyond Saint Louis, north of Baltimore, or north of New York, would receive a benefit of twenty-four hours simply by placing such postal cars upon the road as would enable the distribution of your mail as it goes along the road.

I think, Mr. President, that the good sense of this body will admit and that the good sense of the American people will demand that the business communications of this country shall travel along our railroads as fast as the passengers may travel; but under the present arrangements the mails must go in bulk, lie over at Saint Louis, lie over at Baltimore, lie over at Cincinnati, lie over at Pittsburgh, lie over at your large points, and be distributed in the post-offices, and there they lie by until the next mail shall go.

It is economy to adopt this amendment. I have given this matter I think pretty careful attention. The additional force required in the post-offices to distribute is an equivalent, probably more than an equivalent, in the expense of distributing the mails as they go along.

For these reasons the Appropriation Committee have, in my judgment, wisely recommended an appropriation to meet these two necessities of the American people: first, that there shall be means to put mail service upon newly constructed roads and, secondly, that by distributing the mails upon the roads there will be a saving equivalent to what was one-half of the saving of the fast mails. For these reasons the Committee on Appropriations have seen fit to increase the appropriation from $9,000,000 to $9,600,000, and the amendment which I have offered simply gives power to the Postmaster-General, without making any more appropriation, to utilize the appropriation the committee have recommended.

Mr. BOGY. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine, or the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads rather, is not as extensive as the speech of my friend from Maine. It is very possible that I might agree with him so far as his speech goes, but I cannot sustain the amendment. That amendment gives the power to the Postmaster-General to use in a very indefinite way the sum of $250,000. It does not specify that the money shall be used for the purpose of putting these cars upon the roads upon which this distribution is to take place.

Mr. HAMLIN. The Senator is mistaken; it does specify that.

Mr. BOGY. Let the amendment be read again.

Mr. HAMLIN. It is to be used for postal-car service on "the great trunk lines," in the language of my amendment.

Mr. BOGY. Let the Clerk read the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. The amendment proposed is at the end of line 70 to insert:

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the same may be used by the Postmaster-General to obtain proper facilities from the great trunk lines of railroads for the railway post-office service during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878.

So as to read, if amended:

For inland mail transportation, namely: For transportation on star routes and by steamboats, and all other than railroad routes, $6,237,993; for transportation by railroad, $9,600,000; $250,000 of the same may be used by the Postmaster-General to obtain proper facilities from the great trunk lines of railroad for the railway-post-office service during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878.

Mr. BOGY. The $250,000 are to be used by the Postmaster-General to obtain the proper facilities, and what those are we do not know. It is to be a matter of discretion with him; and I am not myself prepared to say whether it would be proper to have the distribution spoken of. It is very possible it would be, but it is a change of the whole system.

Mr. HAMLIN. Not a bit.

Mr. BOGY. I am not disposed to change the postal system in a bill of this kind at this time. This would put in the hands of the Postmaster-General the sum of $250,000 to obtain postal facilities. What they are we do not know. It does not specify what they are. It may be in the special line of these railroads for the purpose of establishing fast mails, or in any other way that he may decide, which he may believe would facilitate the service. The proper way to make an appropriation is to specify the object of the appropriation, and not to leave it as a matter of discretion to the Postmaster-General.

I remember something about the fast lines, although I am not opposed to fast lines and I favor very much the rapid distribution of mail matter. Notwithstanding, it is a subject that has to be remarkably well guarded or it will lead to very great partiality. It must be guarded with great care. That is the reason why heretofore the fast-mail service has been unpopular. Although I think there are many good things to recommend it, yet it was always for the benefit of one or two places and greatly to the detriment of other places. Therefore the fast-mail service became unpopular, however good it may have been in itself. The same is true in regard to this proposition. It is putting an amount of money in the hands of the Postmaster-General to obtain proper facilities, without saying what they are.

With regard to the first point made by the Senator from Maine in his speech, that it is to enable the Postmaster-General to utilize new railroads that may be built, there cannot be much force in that argument. There are very few railroads being built now, and the sum is so large that it would cover a very large and extended line of railroads. There may be some little extension of railroads in Texas, but perhaps nowhere else. Of course I would be very much in favor of giving to that State all mail facilities possible, but the sum is too large for that purpose.

It seems to me that the whole amendment is very indefinite. It is not as well expressed or as definite as the speech made by my friend from Maine. He speaks a great deal better than he has prepared the amendment, and I would prefer that the amendment should be at least as good as his speech.

Mr. WITHERS. The objection which I have to the amendment suggested by the Senator from Maine to the amendment of the committee is that the idea which influenced the committee in adding to the amount appropriated by the sum of $600,000 was to furnish mail facilities along railroad lines which have now for the first time become open to mail transportation. The extent of that new service we were not of course able definitely to ascertain, but we supposed that this sum (at least that was my idea about it) would suffice to cover it. Now, if from the amount thus increased to furnish that service the sum of $250,000 shall be deducted for the purpose of increasing the facilities for fast-mail service, we diminish to that extent our ability to furnish mails along new lines. I think the whole amount appropriated would not probably be more than sufficient to furnish increased mail facilities to the people along new line, which to my view is a matter of a great deal more importance than the increased facilities for the fast mails alluded to by the Senator from Maine.

Mr. WEST. If the premises of the Senator from Virginia were correct, then the conclusion to which he would ask the Senate would be correct also; but I scarcely think he is in that regard correct.

Mr. WITHERS. I stated that it was not my understanding of it. Of course I cannot go begond that.

Mr. WEST. As I understand from the Postmaster-General, the increase recommended by the committee would accomplish both objects, with the amendment of the Senator from Maine.

Mr. WITHERS. If the Senator from Louisiana states that he has reliable information from the Department that the sum of $600,000 will discharge both services fully, will supply the mail service to all the new lines which demand and require it and leave a surplus sufficient to supply the additional facilities asked by the Senator from Maine, I have no objection to the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, I can answer that question. I can assure the Senator from Virginia that I have the information that from a computation made by the Department it is believed the gross sum will cover both purposes. I am so told, and I do not doubt it is correct.

If the Senator will pardon me one moment, I want to say a word and only a word, as I am usually pretty brief, in reply to the Senator from Missouri. I want to express my regret at the opposition of the Senator from Missouri to this amendment. I regret that any Senator in this body should not be willing to add a little of the postal facilities of the country to its great business interests, and it is certain that an opposition to this amendment, whether so designed or not, has that precise effect.

One word in relation to the powers of the Postmaster-General, and one word in relation to the phraseology of the amendment; which is not so accurate, clear, and distinct as what I say, says the Senator. Now, I say that that amendment does not give to the Postmaster-General one particle of power in addition to what he now has in relation to the management of the Post-Office Department; by which I mean to be understood that the management of the mails and the regulation of the mail service is a thing within his control. If you make an appropriation, not for fast mails, as my friend from Virginia stated, but for increased railway post-office service—and that is the amendment and it is in better language than I speak—it is not to be used for any other service than postal-railroad service, postal cars, railroad cars with post-offices in them. I know of no language that can define it more clearly. If you make the appropriation in gross, you compel the Postmaster-General to disburse that and designate the lines upon which it shall go, under the existing law that regulates the pay on weight. This simply removes that restriction in the law. It takes the restriction of weight away and allows him to put on a larger car and pay for the additional space we will use and which we must have if we are going to distribute the mail. It gives the Postmaster-General no additional power; it is to remove that restriction, without which your amendment is good for nothing. Is it not a sensible proposition that our mail ought to go along our great trunk roads without asking any greater rate of speed than the cars ordinarily go? That is all that the amendment does.

Mr. MAXEY. Mr. President, both the questions so well presented by the Senator from Maine have been the subject of very serious and laborious consideration by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. A paper which was sent to us, I believe, by the superintendent of the railway mail service threw more light upon this subject than any other that I have seen coming from any source. This is not, as the Senator from Missouri puts it, the fast-mail service at all, but it is simply for the purpose of putting on a car sixty feet in length, so arranged as to enable the mail to be distributed, en route, between New York and other great commercial points in the East and Chicago, Saint Louis, &c., in the West; so that when the mail reaches these last-named points it is ready distributed on the cars and is passed from the railway mail car to the trains passing west and south and thus no time is lost, instead of being distributed at Saint Louis, Chicago, and so on, as it would be without these facilities, and thus some twelve hours, according to the testimony which we had before us, was thereby saved each way, going and coming. So much then for that.

Now in regard to the appropriation for the additional mail service on new railways. The necessity of that, to my mind, is perfectly apparent. In the State of Texas alone, for example, since last year, there have been added between three hundred and five hundred miles of railway, the last calculation that I noticed was three hundred and thirty-eight miles; and work on new roads there is still going on. I will call attention—I see the Postmaster-General present—to a correspondence which took place between that officer and myself last summer. One hundred and ten miles of new railway were completed last fall, running through the town in which I live, and no arrangement had been made whereby the Postmaster-General was authorized to place the mail upon that new road, the effect of which was that a little hack went on a dirt road alongside the railroad, landing the mail at the termination of the eastern point of our road, Texarkana, about two days after the train got there. I called the attention of the Postmaster-General to that fact, and asked him if the service could not be put upon it. The Postmaster-General advised me that no appropriation had been made to secure that; and it was only through the courtesy of the railroad officers that it was done at all. Since then, by some arrangement made between the Postmaster-General and the railway officers, we have had that service. And this, I apprehend, is equally true of other new roads in Texas, made, as I have stated, within a year past; and new roads are being built or old ones extended all the time.

The last papers that I received from Texas state that the route connecting San Antonio with Galveston direct was completed. New railroads have been made and old ones extended in different parts of the State. It is a necessity in the interest of the people to make an increased appropriation for this railway mail service. Recurring to the time saved by distributing postal cars, I have to say that so far as Saint Louis and Chicago and all those large places are concerned, they are not particularly profited or benefited by placing these distributing mail cars on the roads. The Senator from Missouri, as a citizen of Saint Louis, is not interested in having a sixty-feet car put on the track, but, as a Senator from Missouri, he is interested in all that tends to benefit that portion of his State which lies west and south of Saint Louis, because the trains reach there, I think, at eight o'clock and fifty-five minutes in the morning; the mail is then transferred to the west and south-going trains, and goes right straight along, instead of being distributed at Saint Louis, for the reason that the mail is properly distributed on the cars en route to its destination, and it is for this reason, because our main mail from the North and East goes by Saint Louis, that the people of Texas are so interested in having these distributing cars, because by this means they get their mail about twelve hours earlier.

These are the reasons, and precisely like ones applying to other sections, which induce the Post-Office Committee to recommend these appropriations, and I am very much gratified indeed that the Committee on Appropriations saw proper to insert them. I believe them to be just, wise, and in the interest of the people.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I think it clear that the additional $600,000 should be added for mail service. The question is, how it should be used, I understand, and I ask the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads to correct me if I am wrong, that the intention of his amendment is not to put on additional trains of fast-mail lines, as they are termed, but to give additional mail facilities with the trains at present running. How? By adding, instead of a forty-five feet car, which is probably the length of the car that is now run, a sixty feet car, which will give an opportunity to distribute the mails to a greater extent than at present, as the trains pass along over the different roads, and thus prevent the delay at the terminal points for distribution.

Now, one question that is not clear in my mind is, what is meant by trunk lines—"the main trunk lines," I think, is the language? There are five or six or seven in the country, leading from the seaboard to the western rivers. I should like to see that made a little more definite. At the same time, I do not well see how this amendment can cover it. To a considerable extent it will be left to the judgment of the Postmaster-General. I ask the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads what, in his mind, is included in the main routes to the West, or the trunk lines?

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, I think the Senator from West Virginia could not have been in his seat when I first addressed the Senate, because I did illustrate the necessities of this amendment and the propriety of it in relation to the fast-mail service by an illustration of what I thought were the three prominent trunk lines that would receive the attention of the Postmaster-General and everybody else, to wit: Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from New York, by way of Baltimore, to Saint Louis; the Pennsylvania Central and the New York Central Railroads. I regard those as the three prominent trunk lines, and I cannot doubt if we will give the Postmaster-General an appropriation sufficient to enable him to give us postal cars, we will certainly have them on all those lines.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maine to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations will be read.

The next amendment was in line 72, to increase the appropriation for compensation to railway-post-office clerks from $1,125,000 to $1,300,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 74, to increase the appropriation for route-agents from $945,000 to $1,050,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 76, to increase the appropriation for mail-route-messengers from $147,000 to $153,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 78, to increase the appropriation for local agents from $100,000 to $114,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 80, to increase the appropriation for mail-messengers from $600,000 to $700,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 81, to increase the appropriation for mail locks and keys from $16,000 to $18,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 82, to increase the appropriation for mail-bags and mail-bag-catchers from $175,000 to $200,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 85, under the heading of "Office of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General," after the word "postage-stamps," to insert:

Of official stamps, and of newspaper and periodical stamps.

And in line 87, after the word "and," to strike out "twenty-six" and insert "fifty;" so as to make the clause read:

For manufacture of adhesive postage-stamps, of official stamps, and of newspaper and periodical stamps, $150,747.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out lines 90 and 91, in the following words:

For manufacture of official stamps and of newspaper and periodical stamps, $24,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 95, to increase the appropriation for the manufacture of stamped envelopes and newspaper-wrappers from $535,878 to $600,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 99, to increase the appropriation for pay of agent and assistants to distribute stamped envelopes and newspaper-wrappers and expenses of agency from $12,000 to $16,300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 100, to increase the appropriation for manufacture of postal cards from $250,000 to $300,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 108, to increase the appropriation for office envelopes and for dead-letter envelopes from $25,000 to $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 109, to increase the appropriation for ship, steamboat, and way letters from $5,000 to $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out lines 113 and 114, in the following words:

For miscellaneous items in the office of the Postmaster-General, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 177, under the heading of "Office of Superintendent of Foreign Mails," to increase the appropriation for transportation of foreign mails from $230,000 to $240,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 124, to insert the following:

For the commission appointed under the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the year ending June 30, 1877, and for other purposes," approved July 12, 1876, to continue and complete the service required of them by said act, $10,000.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, I want to add a very brief amendment to that section by inserting, after the word "act," in line 131, the following words:

And to include an examination of mail service, other than by railroad.

I offer that amendment because this commission, in making an investigation into the railroad service—I am very well satisfied that they will not do much with anything else—are already in possession of some information valuable to us, in relation to other kinds of service, and they simply want power to report it as they get it. I hope, therefore, that their powers will be enlarged to that extent.

Mr. DAVIS. I see no objection to that, except that it may continue the commission longer than the time named here.

Mr. HAMLIN. No, not an hour; not a minute.

Mr. DAVIS. With the declaration of the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads that it will not continue the existence of the commission, I see no objection to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The next amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was in section 2, line 3, to increase the total appropriation for the Post-Office Department from $2,338,460 to $4,395,375.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment which has just been read.

Mr. WEST. Before this amendment is disposed of changing the amount of the deficiency, I move to strike out lines 123 and 124 of the bill, and then the amount in section 2 will be changed by a reduction of that sum.

I would state that this method of appropriating money for the official postage-stamps of the Post-Office Department really amounts to nothing. It is of no benefit to them. They get no revenue from it and it only increases the aggregate of the bill without any object whatever. I would say to my colleagues on the committee, and also to one of the members of the Committee on Appropriations who served with me on the subcommittee, that I have ascertained this fact since we made this report, and the Post-Office Department are quite willing to have this matter stricken out, as it is really of no use to them, and we can thereby reduce the appropriation $750,000.

Mr. DAVIS. Reduce the deficiency, the Senator means to say.

Mr. WEST. Reduce the deficiency, I mean, of course. Therefore I move to strike out lines 123 and 124, in the following words:

For official postage-stamps for the use of the Post-Office Department, $750,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WEST. Now, Mr. President, in lieu of the sum of $4,395,375, in lines 4, 5, and 6, of section 2, I move to insert "$3,645,375," which is the deficiency with the $750,000 off. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment as now proposed.

The CHIEF CLERK. The proposed amendment to the amendment is to strike out, in lines 4, 5, and 6, the words "$4,395,375" and insert "3,645,375; so that the section will read:

SEC. 2. That if the revenue of the Post-Office Department shall be insufficient to meet the appropriations made by this act, then the sum of $3,645,375, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply deficiencies in revenue of the Post-Office Department for the year ending June 30, 1878.

Mr. DAVIS. That is, I take it, just the difference in the total amount of the deficiency made by striking out lines 123 and 124. I ask the Senator having charge of the bill if that is so?

Mr. WEST. You strike out of the body of the appropriation $750,000, and you reduce your deficiency by precisely that amount.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. WEST. Those are all the amendments that the Committee on Appropriations propose to offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is still open to amendment.

Mr. HAMLIN. I am directed by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads to submit the following amendment, to come in as an additional section:

That the sum of $500,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to continue the steamship mail service between San Francisco, Japan, and China, for one year with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, upon the terms specified under the act of February 17, 1865, and February 18, 1867, "for transporting a monthly mail from San Francisco, Japan, and China," at the same terms and conditions so far as applicable; and the Postmaster-General is directed to continue said service as herein provided.

Mr. DAVIS. That amendment, as the Senator from Maine has stated, comes from the Post-Office Committee. It was considered to some extent in the Committee on Appropriations, and, without saying what was the action there, I may say it was not recommended by that committee.

I believe that probably some encouragement ought to be given to this line; but I submit to the Senator who offers the amendment whether the amount is not too large. It is in effect continuing a former contract that was made when the line was established, to last ten years, I believe. I am disposed to believe that some encouragement ought to be given to this line, but I am not disposed to vote for so large an amount; and for one I shall have to oppose it if the amount remains as reported.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, if I were so disposed, I think I could occupy very considerable time in inviting the attention of the Senate to the consideration of this important question. It stretches away beyond any matter relating to postal affairs; it is connected with the commercial prosperity of the country in a very important manner. We occupy to-day the lamentable position of seeing upon the Atlantic nearly all our commerce carried in foreign bottoms, and this has been brought about through the aid which foreign governments have contributed to their own navigation interests, until they have almost literally driven our steamships from the ocean. I hope to see the time when a more liberal spirit will be manifested on our part so as to meet the action of foreign governments in a manner which the best interests of our commerce demand. There is no time, at this session, to go into a full examination of it; but for wise purposes Congress did enter into a contract with this company and agreed to pay them a certain sum of money for transporting the mails between our country and China and Japan, and that company have afloat to-day the best class of vessels to be found, I think, in any part of the world. They were all constructed for naval purposes; every one of them underwent the inspection of naval officers; and on one or two occasions a requisition has been made, when it was supposed there might be a necessity for their use, to have them in readiness. They have performed that service, and we have now a commerce between us and Asia which ought to increase annually; a commerce that comes nearer to us than to any of the European governments, and a commerce that can be made to subserve the best interests of our industries at home. It does seem to me most unwise to refuse to extend a feeble hand, a hand with a slight appropriation, to keep that commerce in the channel in which it belongs, and not allow it to be taken from us by the subsidized vessels of foreign countries. There being no time at this session in which this as a general subject could be considered, the committee deemed it wise only to recommend that the service be continued for a single year, when this, in connection with other subjects, will come up.

We had one other little line from here to Brazil; that is gone; and how are we situated there? Here are all these South American republics at our door; their commerce ought to be ours; we manufacture everything they want and of a better quality than they can get abroad. We ought to have a little sympathy with them from the very character of our institutions as assimilating to theirs; we ought to have an interest in them from our own selfish interests. We talk about a protective tariff. There is a mighty world that we might open up that would afford absolute protection to all our manufactures. That little line to Brazil I believe is no longer in existence. I am told an amendment will be offered in regard to that, and it will receive my most hearty support upon the same rule that I give to this amendment my support. That amendment was not submitted to the committee. If it had been, it would have received my favorable consideration.

It seems to me that we may now in the eye of economy, of the strictest economy, grant fair compensation for mail service; and I say to the Senator from West Virginia that while this company is running a vast number of lines—and you may divide this among them, though we do not deem it advisable to do so, and make the sum very much less for each—this sum is vastly less than would be a fair compensation for the mail service performed by them. True, you may tell me that that mail service does not replenish your Treasury. In reply I can point you to the hundreds of lines inland over the country supplying a sparse population with mails, under what is called "the star system," that do not yield a tenth part of the expense to the Government; and yet while that system affords mail facilities to a population sparsely situated, it aids in opening up and developing your country.

So in relation to this matter. While you do not receive from letters transported a sum adequate for the purpose, yet I do insist that there are other considerations which should come in, equally obligatory upon us as those which apply to what is called the star service on the non-paying routes. It is a subject prolific with thought. It is a subject in which the best interests of all the country are concerned, in my judgment.

But I have no disposition to consume the time of the Senate. I have stated very briefly the considerations which operated upon myself, and, I suppose, upon the committee which directed me to report the amendment.

Mr. BOGY. Mr. President, it was my intention some time ago to propose an amendment to the bill providing for a mail service from the city of New Orleans via different points in the West Indies, and on the coast of South America, and Rio De Janeiro in Brazil. I intended to propose an amendment providing for mail service from that city of $500,000. I think a mail service from the city of New Orleans to South America should be established. We have lost the trade of South America entirely. A letter cannot go now from the city of New York to South America without going by the way of England. The letter cannot go from the city of New Orleans to South America or to the West India Islands without going to the city of New York, and in some cases, going to England to come back to some of the West India Islands, and in every case if it is to be sent to some portion of South America; while the fact is that all the exports from this country to South America are from the valley of the Mississippi, and should find their outlet by the way of New Orleans; but, for the want of shipping facilities, those exports now are not exported, and the consequence is that South America is supplied with goods and everything else from Europe. The little republic of Argentine imports from England the amount of $6,000,000 a year, and from the United States less than $300,000 a year. I could go on citing one republic after another to which the same statement applies. The time has come when we must build up the trade of this country with that vast country there; but I have not had time to prepare my amendment. I have not had time to get the statistics, nor do I believe the Senate or the House are prepared at this time to favor a projét of that kind. It is nevertheless one which in time, I think, will be adopted.

Therefore I shall oppose at this time the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine to pay $500,000 for mail service from San Francisco to Japan; but if at the proper time during the next session of Congress the two items can be combined, I shall favor the amendment then if the one I have suggested meets with favor, because both are essentially necessary to this country. The trade between the west coast of Africa and China and Japan should be fostered. The trade between the valley of the Mississippi and South America should be fostered; and it cannot be fostered unless you first sustain the great facilities through which you create shipping facilities. Therefore I will object at this time to the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine; yet at the proper time I shall favor it. I think both objects are important, and both should, at a proper time, be adopted by Congress; but it requires time to mature an amendment; it requires time to get up the statistics to show the limited trade which now exists between us and that country and the vast trade which could exist under a proper system of legislation. I have no doubt myself that South America in time ought to be to the United States what the East Indies have been to England. It is a country of vast extent, of vast resources, and it will give us all its vast trade if we will take the proper steps to secure that trade. As the Senator has said, our institutions are similar, and I think are growing more similar every day. I think we are fast Mexicanizing and South Americanizing our institutions, and on this account I think there is sympathy between us and them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maine, [Mr. HAMLIN.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore put the question and declared that the ayes appeared to prevail.

Mr. BOGY. I call for a division.

Mr. HAMLIN. Let the question come up in the Senate on the amendment.

Mr. WEST. Reserve it for a special vote in the Senate.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I appeal to the Senator from Missouri to let the amendment pass without further question now.

Mr. HAMLIN. The question will come up in Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. We will reserve it. I cannot consent to its passing finally without having the yeas and nays upon it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator can have it reserved when the bill is reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any reserved amendments?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes. I wish to have reserved the last amendment offered by the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no other reserved amendments, the rest, will be concurred in in gross.

The amendments were concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the reserved amendment, being the amendment offered as in Committee of the Whole by the Senator from Maine, [Mr. HAMLIN.]

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask for the yeas and nays upon that amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the amendment.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

That the sum of $500,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to continue the steamship mail service between San Francisco, Japan, and China for one year with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company upon the terms specified under the act of February 17, 1865, and February 18, 1867, for transporting a monthly mail from San Francisco, Japan, and China, at the same terms and conditions, so far as applicable; and the Postmaster-General is directed to continue such service as herein provided.

Mr. INGALLS. I desire to vote understandingly upon this subject, and am not able at present with the information before the Senate to say whether I oppose the amendment or whether I favor it. I should like to have some information either from the chairman of the committee or from the Senator who proposed the amendment as to whether this is a new proposition or whether it is merely to carry out an existing contract?

Mr. BURNSIDE. It is a continuation of the old arrangement.

Mr. WEST. That is all.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I merely rose to say to the Senator from Kansas that this contract is a continuation of the old arrangement and provides for entering into a further and a new arrangement. I agree entirely with what the Senator from Missouri says on this subject, and shall vote for any amendment the Senator from Missouri may offer covering the point he has spoken of. I know of my own knowledge that the English people are driving our ships off the seas as rapidly as possible. They have even subsidized a line around the Cape for the trade of the west coast of South America, with a view of preventing that trade from coming across the Isthmus and attracting the attention of the people of the Mississippi Valley and the manufacturers of our country. They are doing everything under the sun they can to drive our steamship lines from the seas, and I shall vote cheerfully for any fair amendment which the Senator from Missouri may offer with a view to subsidizing lines that will get back to us the trade of South America, which I believe really belongs to us.

I see no reason why this amendment should not pass and why we should not continue this temporary subsidy, if you can call it a subsidy. It is simply a payment for carrying the mails, and, I think, not a large payment. Senators desire to see lines established in which their sections of the country are particularly interested, and I trust that, as this is a matter of interest to the whole country, and not to any one section merely, it will meet with favor on all sides.

Mr. DAWES. I may be mistaken about the matter, but I think we had a contract with the Pacific Mail to carry the mails to Japan and China which extended by its terms for ten years, for which we were to pay $500,000 a year for the whole service. That expires, I believe, with the expiration of this fiscal year.

Mr. WEST. No, it expired the 1st of January last.

Mr. DAWES. The whole purpose of the amendment, as I understand it, is to extend the contract one year—that is all—so that the whole service may not fall during any subsequent or different arrangement that it would be proper to enter into on the part of the Department and any service that it would be wise to contract for doing. The argument, as presented by the Senator from Maine, in favor of the extension of this contract for one year is that it is a temporary matter, leaving it open for the Department without a pressure of important necessity and without acting upon limited information to make a contract, so that they would not, as otherwise, be driven into making a contract under pressure, but may go on, as in the past, and complete a more permanent arrangement either with this line or some other line. I think that is the object of the amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. I have a very indistinct recollection that on some previous occasion the subject of the Pacific mail subsidy was before the Senate, and if I recollect correctly upon some reason, at that time adjudged to be sufficient, the contract that had been made with that company was abrogated. As this is confessedly a subject of very great importance and has for a long time engaged the attention of the people and Congress, it seems a little remarkable to me that this amendment should be reported by a member of the committee as an amendment to the bill after the main bill had itself been under consideration and reported with sundry other amendments.

Mr. HAMLIN. It came from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. INGALLS. The amendment is merely to carry out an existing contract, it is true, but it is an attempt to re-institute or re-inaugurate a contract that for sufficient reason has hitherto been abrogated. It seems to me that it requires some explanation before the Senate should be called to vote upon it.

Mr. DAWES. I do not pretend to be absolutely accurate in my statement, but I do not understand that the contract has been abrogated for any cause. I understand that it expired under its own limitation and was completed. I think that is the fact.

Mr. INGALLS. Let me ask the Senator if the Senate has not on a previous occasion, then, if those are the facts, declined to recognize the contract anew?

Mr. DAWES. The Senator from Louisiana has risen to answer the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. WEST. The confusion in the mind of the Senator from Kansas on this subject arises from the fact that there were two contracts, one, the original contract, for a monthly mail, passed in 1865 and completed in 1867, expiring on the 1st day of January, 1877. During the existence of that contract another contract was awarded by an act of Congress providing for a semi-monthly mail. Under circumstances that are well known to the Senate and to the community the semi-monthly contract was abrogated. The original contract of monthly service lapsed and expired on the 1st day of January, 1877, leaving us with no arrangement with any ocean-mail steamship company to carry our mails from San Francisco to China and Japan.

Mr. INGALLS. Does not this bill provide for the expenses of carrying the mails commencing with the fiscal year that begins July 1, 1877?

Mr. WEST. The bill does that, but the specific amendment provides for the continuation of the old monthly contract and paying no consideration of course, as there should not be any consideration paid, to the abrogation of the semi-monthly contract. It extends the monthly contract for the term of one year until, as the Senator from Massachusetts has correctly said, the Department and Congress can have power to make ample and necessary arrangements.

Mr. DAVIS. That is true; but the Senator well knows that the mail would be carried as all other mails are carried upon the ocean without any arrangement in the bill. In other words, if this amendment should fail, it would not necessarily prevent mails from being carried there as they always have been. It is true the compensation of this line is very limited, and probably they ought to have some encouragement from Congress, but at the same time it does not prevent the mails from being carried as usual, and they may have the same compensation that all other vessels obtain in carrying the mail.

Mr. WEST. In reply to what the Senator has stated I will say that as long as an American line of steamers run between San Francisco and Japan they will be compelled under the statutes of the United States to carry the mails for what is called sea passage, because if the Senator will refer to the Revised Statutes, I cannot remember exactly the section, no American vessel can clear unless the captain certifies to the fact under oath that he is carrying with him such United States mails as may have been offered to him. But is it not possible that we may be left in the same predicament that we have been left in by the Brazil line, and should that occur we have no other line and no other method of communicating with that country. There is another line of steamships, but that is a British line, and once you sacrifice your American line the British line can command its own terms and drive you all around the world to communicate with the trade of China.

Mr. COOPER. Is there not another line of American vessels?

Mr. WEST. No, sir; there is a line of British steamships under an American organization, but very adroitly brought into competition with our American line.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. I wish to make a suggestion, or rather an inquiry. I wish to know why it becomes necessary here to designate any particular ship or line of ships by which the mail is to be transported, and why the appropriation would not be equally effective without that designation, leaving it to the Postmaster-General to avail himself of such lines as he finds the cheapest and best for the public interest.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. BOGY. I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment, if in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will receive it.

Mr. BOGY. As it was written in a very great hurry I will read it myself. I move to add:

That the sum of $500.000 be, and is hereby, appropriated for a monthly mail service from New Orleans to Rio Janeiro; and the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into a contract for this purpose with any party or parties to carry such mails by American built and owned vessels of not less than two thousand tons burden, and of approved construction. and seaworthy.

Mr. WEST. I suggest to the Senator to add after "$500,000" the words "or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Mr. BOGY. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. SARGENT. My recollection is that when the Brazilian mail service was begun the contract with the Government of the United States was about one-fifth of the amount named in the amendment. I may be in error, however. I should like to say with reference to the Chinese service that some time since I submitted an amendment providing that in this contract not more than one Chinaman to fifteen registered tons should be transported upon these vessels. I was moved thereto because of my firm belief that the evils inflicted upon the Pacific coast arising from the unlimited influx of the Chinese are greater than any benefits which arise to that coast from our commerce with China. I am still of that opinion, but I think the effect of the adoption of my amendment, provided the provision as amended should be retained in the bill, would be to turn over the business of carrying Chinese to the English ships and that the evil would not be remedied at all, and consequently that no real good would be attained. In order to reach the evil which I had in view, it is necessary that there should be a general change of the law applying to all vessels landing that class of passengers, immigrants, coolies, or whatever they may be designated, upon our shores. I think there is no opportunity to procure legislation as extensive as the subject demands at this session, and the amendment which I proposed would not really I think, on reflection, accomplish my object. Therefore I shall not move it in the Senate.

I understand the proposition which comes from the Post-Office Committee is to continue the contract with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for one year longer, upon the same terms that they have done that service for nine years past. I shall give my vote for that proposition, although I have some doubts with reference to it. I realize the fact that it is necessary to have strong steamship lines in order to protect our commerce. They are the pioneers of commerce. By means of subsidy of this character England has carried her trade and her flag to all parts of the world. She is far more liberal in this respect than it is proposed by the amendment the United States Government shall be. The beneficial results have been seen in making the little island of England rich beyond computation, far surpassing for its area any other country on earth. I believe one of the great causes contributing to this result is the wide commerce of England, and one of the means by which that commerce has been attained has been by this system of subsidy to steamship lines from which other commerce grows up.

We have now to a very great extent, by means of this policy pursued by the Government, control of the commerce of the Pacific Ocean. The Atlantic is an English or European mill-pond, and nothing more. We scarcely venture out upon it with our own American lines. The case, however, is reversed in regard to the Pacific, and there the enterprise of our people, aided in this manner by our Government, has been able to seize upon the prominent lines of communication, and commerce is extended there on every hand. We have nearly as much control of the Pacific as England or any European power has of the Atlantic. The statistics show that there has been an increase of duties paid into the Treasury of the United States on account of the commerce built up by the Chinese mail line greater by a million and a half of dollars than the amount of subsidy which has been paid out by the Government to aid in maintaining that line. The Government has made money by it. I believe it would be wise policy for the Government to continue to do so, even if it did not make anything out of it, even if it should be out of pocket by the operation. There is a return to the tax-payers of the Government many fold the loss of the Government in this direction.

For these reasons influencing my mind I shall vote for the amendment.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, I do not know that I shall propose any amendment to this proposition, but it seems to me that subsidies are started for the purpose of building up commerce. I know on the face of it the appropriation is for carrying the mails, but the real purpose is the building up commerce. If this mail-route has cost five millions for the past ten years, it appears to me that the line ought to have reached a condition so healthy as to do the work for something less; and yet it is proposed that we shall pay the precise sum now that we paid ten years ago.

The Senator from California admits that the trade has largely increased. He claims that the Treasury of the United States has benefited by this subsidy by receiving a million and a half where we paid out but half a million. I do not quite so understand it. I suppose that that portion of the trade of China and Japan and the Indies has been transferred to the Pacific from the Atlantic and there has been a consequent diminution of the receipts on the Atlantic. To all this I do not object, but I should like to know for a certainty whether this service cannot be as well and faithfully performed for $300,000 as for $500,000. I have understood that there are other lines offering to carry the mail for the postage. I hardly think it would be fair for us to abandon a line which has built up large, fine steamships and confine them to nothing but the mere postage, and yet it does appear to me that after we have paid this large bonus as a subsidy for ten years the line ought to be able to get along with something less.

Mr. SARGENT. Unless I am in error, there has been no diminution whatever in the receipts of the custom-house upon the Atlantic side. There has been no apparent diminution of business in that direction, but rather an increase, while the gain at the port of San Francisco alone has been a million and a half of dollars more than the amount paid out to this line under this contract for carrying the mails.

Mr. MORRILL. But the Senator will see at once that the trade which goes overland by railroad is of necessity that trade which would have come the other way if it were not for this line.

Mr. SARGENT. I do not know that I concede that to be the case at all. Under the operation of this subsidy, for instance, teas have been very much cheapened. Every one knows that a cheaper article goes more largely into consumption, and that business grows up on account of the greater demand for articles of consumption. A good article of tea ten years ago was worth a dollar and a half and a dollar and seventy-five cents a pound, whereas now it is worth from eighty cents to a dollar a pound, on account of the facilities for getting it.

Mr. BOGY. Ten years ago we got no tea from Japan.

Mr. SARGENT. Ten years ago we got no Japan tea at all, and now we get it in large quantities. This line has developed business and made the articles of Asiatic production which go into consumption cheaper to the people who consume them; and the articles are necessaries of life.

Mr. MORRILL. As the Senator from California expressed some doubt why he proposed to vote for this proposition, I should like to ask him if he does not think that $300,000 would be ample compensation for the services to be rendered hereafter?

Mr. SARGENT. My doubt did not arise on account of the amount. The amount is about one-fourth that which England appropriated for the same purpose. I think the $500,000 which we have given all along is rather a starving amount. My doubt arose from another cause entirely, in which I know the Senator would not sympathize with me at all. I alluded, in speaking of the amendment, to the amendment which I proposed in regard to the conveyance of the Chinese. The Senator is remote from that question at present, at any rate, and I hope that his State always will be remote from it; but it presses upon us of the Pacific with terrible force, for reasons which I have elaborately given heretofore. My doubt sprang from the consideration whether we should not restrict the facilities for landing upon our shores the untold millions of Asia, who do not assimilate with our people, who have no love for our institutions, who do not come here to make a home, who impoverish our working-classes, and bring with them the traditional diseases and vices of paganism. Those are the matters upon which I have doubt, but the application of a restriction upon this line would not prevent these consequences occurring; for if such an amendment were placed upon this bill it would still leave the British ships to bring over Chinese in unlimited quantities and make a profitable trade for them in that direction. I see no object in doing that, although I did at the time I proposed the amendment and had it printed. I see no object in it now, because if they are to come they might as well come by means of one conveyance as another.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, I wish to say that this same company is now running a line from San Francisco to the Isthmus and another line from San Francisco I think up to the British possessions. The proposition as first presented to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads was to apply this sum for all foreign service, but there were no lines competing with them. There was no time for a general consideration of the subject, and the committee deemed it advisable simply to continue this contract for one year. Now, if you were to divide it among the three routes it would be a mere pittance indeed; but as there was no time to make any equitable adjustment, and for the fear that we would lose the service entirely and in the end our commerce upon the Pacific would be in that deplorable condition which we witness upon the Atlantic, where nine-tenths of it is done in foreign bottoms, we thought it wise to extend this contract for one year, and in the mean time to make such arrangements as should be wise and proper.

In relation to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Missouri to my amendment I want to say that I am for it, but it ought to have been a little more carefully prepared. I have had no time to look into the statutes; but when the contract with the Pacific Mail was entered into we had stipulations in the contract as to what the company should do. I have hastily drawn an addition to the Senator's amendment which will cover it, though probably not in as good terms as are employed in the statute. I will send it to the Chair, that the Senator may hear it read, and, if it meets his approval, that he may adopt it as part of his amendment to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed by Mr. BOGY to insert at the end of the pending amendment the following:

And that the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated for a monthly mail service from New Orleans to Rio Janeiro; and the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into a contract for this purpose with any party or parties to carry said mails in American built and owned vessels and of not less than two thousand tons burden, and of approved construction and seaworthy.

The amendment suggested by Mr. HAMLIN is to add to the amendment to the amendment the following:

Said steamships shall be built under the direction and inspection of some naval officer to be designated by the Secretary of the Navy; and the said steamships shall at all times be subject to the use of the Government when demanded at reasonable rates of charter-party therefor.

Mr. BOGY. I accept the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is accepted, and the question is on the amendment to the amendment as modified.

Mr. WEST. I suggest to the Senator from Maine that he extend the qualification of the ships so that ships already constructed may be used. The words are "shall be built."

Mr. HAMLIN. I will say "built or accepted." If they have got them already built it is just as well.

Mr. BOGY. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That modification will be made.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, there ought not to be fish made of one and flesh of another. Either the words "or so much thereof as may be necessary" ought to be stricken out of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOGY] to the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HAMLIN] or the same words should be inserted in the amendment proposed by the Post-Office Committee with regard to the service between San Francisco and Japan. As that amendment now reads there is an absolute appropriation of $500,000 for that specific service to a particular line of steamships. The amendment proposed to the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine provides "that $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, "shall be appropriated for the steamship service between New Orleans and Rio Janeiro. Therefore I suggest that what is sauce for one should be sauce for the other, and if we are to have a specific appropriation of $500,000 for the Pacific mail service there should be $500,000 specifically appropriated for that service from the mouth of the Mississippi River to Brazil.

Mr. HAMLIN. The Senator will see the difference. In the one case it is to extend an existing service that had its existence upon the terms and conditions stipulated in the contract, and it is proposed to inaugurate another service upon the same terms and conditions; while in the other case it is a new service, a new contract.

Mr. INGALLS. But if the Senator from Maine will permit me, the contract under which the Pacific mail steamship service has heretofore been performed has expired.

Mr. HAMLIN. Precisely.

Mr. INGALLS. That is not, then, a continuation of an old contract, but it is the institution of a new contract. Now it appears to me that if we are to make subsidies or to appropriate moneys for the transportation of the mails, it ought to be done at the least possible expense. If we are to appropriate a specific sum irrespective of the value of the service to be performed for the transportation of the mails from San Francisco to Japan, it is just as proper that we should appropriate the same sum for similar service from New Orleans to Brazil.

Mr. HAMLIN. I understand the Senator to wish to strike out the words "or so much thereof as may be necessary" in the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. SPENCER. I should like to inquire if an amendment is now in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the amendment made in Committee of the Whole, to which an amendment has been offered by the Senator from Missouri, [Mr. BOGY.] That being in the second degree, another amendment is not in order until the amendment to the amendment is disposed of.

Mr. INGALLS. What is the pending question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri. He having accepted the modification made by the Senator from Maine, it becomes his amendment. It will be reported as modified.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment to the amendment as modified.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole as amended, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. SPENCER. I move to strike out the words "Pacific Mail Steamship Company" wherever they occur in the amendment, and also in regard to the line between New Orleans and Brazil, if that is named, wherever it occurs, and insert "the Postmaster-General shall let to the lowest bidder."

Mr. INGALLS. If the Senator from Alabama will allow me, I will state to him that I have prepared an amendment in the way of a substitute to the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine, which, I believe, will meet his views; it certainly expresses my own. I propose to amend so that it shall read:

That the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to carry the mails between the United States and China and Japan upon the best attainable terms for monthly service, the same to be let as provided by law, to be carried in American built and owned vessels of not less than two thousand tons burden.

Mr. SPENCER. I withdraw my amendment in favor of the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. WEST. There is no objection to that amendment.

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator from Kansas will allow me to suggest that he had better fix some limit and say that the appropriation shall not exceed a certain amount.

Mr. INGALLS. I say "$500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Mr. DAVIS. For the two lines or for each case?

Mr. INGALLS. For the transportation of the mails between San Francisco, China, and Japan.

Mr. PADDOCK. I suggest to the Senator from Kansas that I understand this line carries the mail to the ports of other countries than those named in his amendment; for instance, to Australia.

Mr. DAVIS. The same line takes the mail also to Oregon, up the Columbia River, I believe, and to other places. The amendment ought to include all, if any.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the amendment submitted by the Senator from Kansas, [Mr. INGALLS.]

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out that portion of the amendment relating to the Pacific mail between China and Japan and San Francisco and insert:

That the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to carry the mails between the United States and China and Japan upon the best attainable terms for monthly service, the same to be let as provided by law, to be carried in American built and owned vessels of not less than two thousand tons burden.

Mr. DAWES. I do not desire to oppose the substitute just offered, but I desire to inquire of the Senator from Kansas if there is an existing law to authorize the letting?

Mr. INGALLS. I think there is.

Mr. SARGENT. I think the Senator is in error in that. The only existing law I know of is the one authorizing the contract to be made with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Mr. DAWES. That contract has expired, and that led me to make the inquiry.

Mr. SARGENT. That is the only existing law. There is no general law to which this amendment could attach, in my judgment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] to the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole as amended.

Mr. HAMLIN. I think the amendment of the Senator from Kansas needs a little amendment, and then I shall not be opposed to it. I think the law is defective, or in other words, I think there is no existing statute under which the Postmaster-General could make such a contract. If the Senator will add the words "and that the Postmaster-General be authorized to make said contract," so that the amendment shall contain the power to do that, I will not object to it.

Mr. INGALLS. The object desired by the Senator from Maine can very readily be obtained by striking out the words "the same to be let as may be provided by law;" so as to read:

That the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to carry the mails between the United States and China and Japan, upon the best attainable terms for monthly service, to be carried in American built and owned vessels of not less than two thousand tons burden.

However, if the Senator from Maine desires to incorporate his suggestion in additional language, I certainly shall have no objection.

Mr. HAMLIN. I suggest to strike out the words "the same to be let as provided by law," and insert the words:

And the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized to contract for such service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kansas accept the amendment?

Mr. INGALLS. Yes, sir. I do not know what it is, but I accept it.

Mr. HAMLIN. It is to authorize in terms the Postmaster-General to make the contract provided for.

Mr. MERRIMON. That is legislation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the amendment as modified.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

That the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to carry the mail between the United States and China and Japan, upon the best attainable terms for monthly service; and the Postmaster-General is hereby authorized to contract for such service, to be carried in American built and owned vessels of not less than two thousand tons burden.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment as modified to the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole as amended.

Mr. DAVIS. If the amendment to the amendment should be adopted, would it still be in order to amend the amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would be in order to strike out and add. The yeas and nays have been ordered on the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole as modified.

Mr. MERRIMON. I submit whether the proposed amendment is not in fact a violation of the rule which provides that no general legislation shall be incorporated into an appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It does not change the amount agreed to in committee.

Mr. MERRIMON. It provides, however, in fact that there shall be a mail carried between San Francisco and China and Japan. There is no existing law which provides for it, and without this provision the mail could not be carried under specific contract.

Mr. HAMLIN. I suggest that the amendment has been offered and acted upon in the Senate and the time has passed when the question could be raised, if it were a question to be raised.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was about to state that in Committee of the Whole the Senate agreed to a certain amount and like service embraced in the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas. Therefore, it is not a new proposition. The amount is not increased, nor is the nature of the service changed. The point of order was not made in Committee of the Whole, and it is too late to make it now.

Mr. MERRIMON. I submit whether the point of order cannot be raised at any time whenever the Senate wishes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the new rule as to the question of relevancy the Chair will submit to the Senate whether the amendment to the amendment is relevant under the rule. [Putting the question.] The ayes have it, and the Senate decides that the amendment to the amendment is relevant. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] to the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole as modified.

Mr. DAVIS. I move to strike out $500,000 and insert $300,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment is in the second degree. The Chair cannot entertain the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. HAMLIN. Let me suggest to my friend from West Virginia that such an amendment is unnecessary, it seems to me, because the amendment only calls for so much of the sum as shall be found to be necessary.

Mr. DAVIS. Still it is the difference of limit between $300,000 and $500,000, and I want to fix the limit definitely. If the amendment is not in order now, I ask if it would be in order if the pending amendment should be adopted.

Mr. HAMLIN. No.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would not unless the Senator should move to strike out and insert. If the Senate adopts the amendment it will remain as it is.

Mr. DAVIS. I move to strike out $500,000 and insert $300,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair cannot now entertain another amendment, because the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] is now in the second degree.

Mr. DAVIS. Do I understand that there is no way of reaching the object I desire?

Mr. CLAYTON. Vote down the amendment proposing $500,000.

Mr. DAVIS. With great deference to the Chair I think probably on reflection he will see that to strike out and insert would be in order either now or if the amendment should be adopted or rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What point of order does the Senator make?

Mr. DAVIS. I raise the point for the Chair to rule upon whether my motion to reduce the maximum amount from $500,000 to $300,000 would not be in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair cannot entertain the amendment. If the Senator should move to strike out the whole paragraph, it would then stand as a simple proposition; under what is known as the Carpenter rule it would be a proposition by itself, but to simply move to strike out $500,000 and insert $300,000 would be an amendment in the third degree, and could not be entertained.

Mr. DAVIS. Then I ask the Chair, if the amendment should be adopted, whether an amendment would be in order to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$300,000."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator should move to strike out a portion of what has been adopted and insert a little different language which would be different from what had been adopted, the Chair could entertain it.

Mr. HAMLIN. I beg the Chair to pause a moment. When the Senate have adopted an amendment in certain words and it becomes the judgment of the Senate, they cannot change it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair states that after the Senate have adopted it, if the Senator should move to strike out and insert other words, the Chair must entertain it. The rule says that when a motion is rejected to strike out and insert, a motion to strike out and insert other words can be entertained.

Mr. HAMLIN. Precisely; but when the Senate have agreed to an amendment inserting words, it stands in the judgment of the Senate and you must reconsider the vote to change it, and that is a rule as old as parliamentary law itself.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So it does. The Chair and the Senator from Maine do not disagree. The ruling of the Chair is that after this amendment has been adopted, if the Senator from West Virginia should move to strike out a portion of these words and insert other words, the Chair must entertain the motion.

Mr. HAMLIN. Then the Chair and the Senator from Maine do disagree most thoroughly.

Mr. INGALLS. Is it the understanding of the Chair that after this amendment shall be agreed to it is then beyond the power of the Senate to modify it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not. The Chair has not so ruled.

Mr. INGALLS. I misunderstood the Chair.

Mr. McDONALD. If the motion to strike out and insert is divisible I ask that the question be first taken on the motion to strike out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the amendment of the Senator from Kansas to strike out the amendment of the Senator from Maine and insert what he has proposed?

Mr. McDONALD. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair cannot divide that question. If that is the suggestion of the Senator from Indiana the Chair cannot entertain it. A motion to strike out and insert is indivisible. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kansas to the amendment to strike out and insert what has been read.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole as amended, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. DAVIS. Now I move to strike out $500,000 and insert $300,000 in the amendment that has just been voted upon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair cannot entertain that. If the Senator moves to strike out "five" and insert eight, it is an increase of the amount and may be entertained. The greater includes the less.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, I am going to raise no question of order here, but ask the Senate to vote down the motion. The amendment now stands at "$500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary." If there can be a contract made with the American line for any sum less, it can be done under this provision. It may be that it can be done for $400,000 and cannot for $300,000. I hope the Senator from West Virginia will not insist on his amendment, though it is one out of order from beginning to end.

Mr. DAVIS. My object, of course, can be reached by voting against the amendment, which is now to be voted on as a whole, as I understand it. I understood the Chair, when I made the inquiry of him whether or not the amendment could be amended after having been adopted by the Senate, to answer in the affirmative. Now I understand the Chair to say that if it is moved to increase the amount it can be done, but not if it is to diminish it. Am I correct in that?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has before stated precisely that if the Senator moved to strike out and insert other words in the amendment besides those already agreed to, the Chair could entertain it; but the Senator must understand that the agreement of $500,000 would include $300,000, as the greater includes the less. That is the parliamentary usage. If the Senator had moved to strike out and insert different language the Chair would have entertained the motion.

Mr. DAVIS. I have no wish except as to the amount. As to the ruling of the Chair, I believe it is correct in this instance. But, Mr. President, there are now two subjects presented here, one relating to the mail service from New Orleans and the other to the mail service from the Pacific coast. There are perhaps Senators who desire to vote for the one and against the other. Now can that be done or not under the ruling of the Chair? In other words, can a Senator move to have the vote taken on the two propositions separately, or can an amendment be offered to strike out the proposition relating to the Pacific mail?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator asks for a division of the two propositions, the Chair will entertain that.

Mr. DAVIS. Yes sir; I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment contains two ideas. The Senator did not before ask for a division of the question.

Mr. DAVIS. I asked the Chair if it be in order. I do ask for a division of the question. I do not wish to consume the time of the Senate; I only ask that the Senate divide the propositions.

Mr. BOGY. I hope there will be no division of this question. If it be necessary to establish a line from San Francisco to Japan, it is surely as necessary to have a line from New Orleans to South America.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from West Virginia insist on a division?

Mr. DAVIS. No, sir; I withdraw it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question then is on concurring in the amendment as amended, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not think that the yeas and nays were ordered upon that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They were ordered some time ago.

Mr. WEST. But the call was withdrawn, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the call insisted upon?

Mr. BAILEY. Yes, sir; I insist upon it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee insists on the yeas and nays being taken. The Secretary will call the roll.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 27, nays 18; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allison, Barnum, Bogy, Booth, Burnside, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Cameron of Wisconsin, Chaffee, Christiancy, Conover, Cragin, Dawes, Dennis, Ferry, Goldthwaite, Hamlin, Ingalls, Johnston, Kernan, McMillan, Morrill, Paddock, Patterson, Sargent, West, Windom, and Withers—27.

NAYS—Messrs. Alcorn, Bailey, Clayton, Cooper, Davis, Hereford, Hitchcock, McCreery, McDonald, Maxey, Merrimon, Randolph, Ransom, Robertson, Sherman, Spencer, Teller, and Wright—18.

ABSENT—Messrs. Anthony, Bayard, Blaine, Boutwell, Bruce, Cockrell, Conkling, Dorsey, Eaton, Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Gordon, Hamilton, Harvey, Howe, Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Kelly, Logan, Mitchell, Morton, Norwood, Oglesby, Saulsbury, Sharon, Stevenson, Thurman, Wadleigh, Wallace, and Whyte—30.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is still open to amendment.

Mr. WEST. I know of no further amendments to be offered.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WINDOM. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. McDONALD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. WINDOM. Mr. President, I am extremely anxious to yield to my good-natured friend from Indiana, but I dare not do it.

Mr. McDONALD. It will take but a minute.

Mr. WINDOM. The Senator says that the bill which he proposes to take up will occupy only a minute. If there is no obection from anybody else, I am willing to yield to him for a minute.

I give notice that I cannot yield any further.

J. E. ROBERTSON & CO.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask consent of the Senate now to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 901) for the relief of J. E. Robertson & Co., of Indianapolis, Indiana.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to proceeding to the consideration of the bill named by the Senator from Indiana? The Chair hears none, and the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read. It directs the payment to J. E. Robertson & Co., of Indianapolis, Indiana, of $432.96, or so much thereof as they shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that they have expended in the purchase of revenue-stamps used by them to stamp manufactured tobacco, upon which a tax had been previously paid under the revenue in force at the time of its manufacture and sale, but which was made liable to be stamped under the act of July 20, 1868, thus requiring a double tax on the same tobacco.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

Mr. WINDOM. I give notice that I cannot yield any further until this bill is disposed of.

The PRESIDNET pro tempore. The bill will be read and the amendments will be considered as they are reached in the reading.

Mr. WINDOM. Mr. President, I think I may facilitate the passage of this bill by explaining, in about three minutes, its general provisions. The amount of the bill as it passed the House was $14,979,345.50. The amount as reported by the Senate committee is $16,737,895.89. The increase as made by the Senate committee is $1,758,550.39. The amount of the bill for 1876–'77, the current year, is $15,717,933.30. So that the aggregate of this bill is greater than the appropriations for the current year by $1,019,962.59, and I will very briefly explain wherein this increase consists. Before doing so, however, let me state that the Committee on Appropriations, finding several hundred amendments, adopted a general principle which governs throughout the bill.

There are a great many changes of salaries, the old question which was fought over for two months during the last session of Congress. The Committee on Appropriations have simply reinstated the salaries in every case at what they are the current year; that is, they have taken the compromise measures, so to speak, of last summer as their guide. We have not in a single instance increased a salary over the amount which was fixed by the conferences of last summer. That general principle covers a very large number of the amendments in the bill. As a general rule, the committee have not increased the number of employés; but there are a few exceptions to that rule, to which I will call attention very briefly.

In the Senate, there is an increase of three laborers in the Engineers' Department, there being none during last summer to carry on the work of repairing the heating, ventilating apparatus, &c. In the State Department there has been no increase, but a slight change. There is an increase of two firemen and a reduction of ten charwomen, making a slight saving to the Government. In the Treasury Department, Secretary's Office, there is an increase of eight laborers, for which we have the recommendations of the Department showing that it is absolutely necessary. I will explain them more fully when we reach that point, if it is desired. In the Third Auditor's Office, there is an increase of three laborers. In the Sixth Auditor's Office, there is a considerable increase of the clerical force. Senators will remember that the Sixth Auditor settles all the accounts of the Post-Office Department. We are informed by the Postmaster-General and by the Sixth Auditor that there are some four hundred applications for money-order offices which are refused because there is not sufficient clerical force in the Sixth Auditor's office to settle their accounts; that there will be from one hundred to two hundred more applications during the next year for money-order offices that must be denied unless this increase be given. The money-order offices pay their own way and a small profit to the Government, so that this increase in the Sixth Auditor's Office for that and other purposes connected with the office is not really a charge upon the Government. The increase there is of three clerks of class four, four clerks of class three, nine clerks of class two, and two at $1,000. There is a reduction of three clerks of class one.

In the Treasurer's Office we have made some changes; that is, we have reduced eighteen counters and added some clerks over last year. The reduction in the cost to the Government by these changes is about $3,000. So that I presume that will not be challenged. In the Treasurer's Office, Bureau for the Redemption of National Currency, we have increased the force by two clerks of class four, two clerks of class three, and five clerks of class one. The expense of the Redemption Bureau is paid for by the banks of the country, who send their money there under the law for redemption. It was conclusively shown to the Committee on Appropriations that there is not enough clerical force to do the business, that the banks complain, and as they pay the expense, and not the Government, it is but fair that they have force enough to do the work promptly.

For the Register of the Treasury there is a slight increase of one clerk and one charwoman and a reduction of nine copyists, so that there is an absolute saving of money there.

In the Patent Office there is no change that adds any considerable sum. The reduction there is greater than the increase. In the Post-Office Department there is an increase of seven clerks of class three, five clerks of class two, ten clerks of class one, and ten copyists. When that part of the bill is reached, we have letters from the Department to present, which I think will prove most conclusively to the Senate that the committee has acted wisely in making the increase.

In the Attorney-General's Office one clerk had been omitted and he has been added. For the Solicitor of the Treasury one clerk who was omitted last year, we think by mistake, has been restored.

That is the whole of the increase of the clerical force in the bill over the force of the present year.

I have a statement which I hardly feel like taking the time of the Senate to read, explaining each and every item which goes to make up the increase over the bill of last year. The total increase over the bill of last year is $1,019,962.59; and the explanation of that increase and of several items that I have upon this paper before me, I will not take the time of the Senate to read, but will ask permission to print in the RECORD. I think it will be entirely satisfactory to the Senate.

Items of interest in bill as reported over appropriations for current fiscal year.

Compensation of Senators, $10,000. Increase rendered necessary by admission of Colorado.

Mileage of Senators, $6,000. Partly due to admission of Colorado Senators.

Officers, clerks, and employés of the Senate, $8,564. Due to addition of one clerk to Committee on Privileges and Elections, at $2,250, and to length of session.

Contingent, including clerks to committees during sesson, $15,821. Mainly due to long session: seven months estimated for next year and four months for this year.

Officers, clerks, and employés of the House, $3,570. Increase made by House of Representatives.

Contingent expenses of House of Representatives, $44,072. Increase made by House of Representatives.

Public buildings and grounds, $760. There is a deficiency this year.

State Department, $9,115. The whole of this increase is for printing and distributing Statutes at Large.

Treasury Department, including miscellaneous and contingent, $52,080. This increase is for eight laborers in Secretary's Office, three laborers in the Third Auditor's Office, fifteen clerks in Sixth Auditor's Office, and for clerical force in Treasurer's and Register's Offices.

Internal revenue, $15,000. Salaries and expenses of collection. This bill is $25,000 less than last year's appropriation for same purpose, including the deficiency appropriated at this session.

Mints and assay offices, $131,350. This increase is made up as follows: Fifty-five thousand dollars for repairs of machinery and apparatus of the mint and assay office at New York, and wages of workmen, &c., at mints and assay offices at other places.

District of Columbia, $26,500. This amount is merely a transfer from the sundry civil bill of last year, and is not an increase of appropriation.

War Department, $13,800. Of this amount $12,000 is for rent which was provided for in sundry civil bill last year. Balance is for fuel and increase of contingent in office of Secretary.

Post-Office Department, $87,040. Of this increase $12,800 is for furnishing and fitting up lower story of Post-Office Department, (new;) $20,000 for Postal Guide, provided for in sundry civil bill list. Miscellaneous, $3,000; balance increase of clerical force.

Department of Agriculture, $17,940. This increase is caused by adding $5,000 to item for collecting statistics, and $15,000 to item for purchase of seeds, plants, &c. A reduction of $2,000 in contingent and $60 for clerical force makes the $17,940 net increase.

United States courts, &c., $33,450. Of this amount $26,000 is for expenses of courts in Utah Territory, a portion of which was appropriated in another bill last year, and balance is for salaries of judges.

Department of Justice, $8,500. Increase is occasioned by adding Naval Solicitor, (omitted last year, but provided for in deficiency bill for that year,) and by adding one clerk of class four and one clerk of class one, and also $2,000 to the contingent fund.

Court of Claims, $500. This is for stationery, fuel, and other miscellanies which were deficient the current year.

To pay judgments of Court of Claims, $639,410.59. This amount is for judgments of the Courts of Claims which have been confirmed by the Supreme Court or in which the time for appeal has expired.

Total added, $1,123,472.59. Deduct reductions made in items from appropriations of current year, $103,510. Net increase, $1,019,962.59.

I move now that the five-minute rule be applied to this bill, although I suppose it is hardly necessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the five-minute rule being applied to the bill? The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

The first amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was in line 18, to increase the appropriation for hire of horses and wagons for the Secretary's Office of the Senate from $600 to $1,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 19, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the Chief Clerk of the Senate from $2,500 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 19, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of the principal clerk, principal executive clerk, minute and journal clerk, and financial clerk in the office of the Secretary of the Senate from $2,500 each to $2,592 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 26, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of the librarian and seven clerks in the office of the Secretary of the Senate from $1,800 each to $2,220 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 28, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the clerk of printing records from $2,000 to $2,220.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 29, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of five clerks in the Secretary's office of the Senate, from $1,800 each to $2,100 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 30, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the keeper of the stationery from $1,600 to $2,102.40.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 30, to increase the appropriation for the salary of one messenger in the Secretary's office from $1,200 to $1,296.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 36, to increase the appropriation for the salary of one special policeman from $1,200 to $1,296.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 37, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the secretary to the Vice-President from $2,000 to $2,102.40.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 41, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the clerk of the Committee on Claims from $2,000 to $2,202.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 43, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the clerk to the Committee on Commerce from $1,800 to $2,120.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 45, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the clerk to the Committee on the Judiciary from $1,800 to $2,220.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 47, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the clerk to the Committee on Private Land Claims from $1,800 to $2,220.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 48 the following words:

Clerk to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, $2,220.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 51, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant keeper of the stationery from $1,200 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 52, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of the Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper from $4,000 to $4,320.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 54, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant doorkeeper from $2,500 to $2,592.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 55, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the acting assistant doorkeeper from $2,000 to $2,592.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 56, to insert after the word "three" the words "messengers acting as;" so that it will read:

Three messengers acting as assistant doorkeepers, at $1,800 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 59, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant postmaster and mail-carrier from $2,000 to $2,088.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 60, to increase the appropriation for four mail-carriers from $1,000 each to $1,200 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 61, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the superintendent of the document-room from $1,800 to $2,160.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 63, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of two assistants in the document-room from $1,200 each to $1,440 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 65, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the superintendent of the folding-room from $1,800 to $2,160.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out after the word "dollars," in line 67, the following:

To enable documents in the folding room to be properly stamped on the outside of the envelope with the name of the document inclosed, $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to increase the appropriation for the salaries of twenty-one messengers, one of whom shall act as upholsterer, from $1,200 each to $1,440 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 74, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the chief engineer from $1,700 to $2,160.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 76, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of three assistant engineers from $1,200 each to $1,440 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 78, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant engineer in charge of the elevator from $1,200 to $1,440.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 79, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the conductor of the elevator from $900 to $1,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 81, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of two firemen from $900 each to $1,095 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 82, after the word "each" to insert the following:

Three laborers in the engineer's department, at $720 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 84, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of eight skilled laborers from $840 each to $1,000 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 85, to insert after the word "each" the following:

Ten laborers, at $720 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 86, to strike out before the word "laborers" the word "ten" and insert "twelve;" in line 87, after the word "session" to insert "(which words, 'during the session,' as used in this act, shall be held to mean seven months,);" and in line 88, after the word "at" to insert the words "the rate of;" so that the clause will read:

Twelve laborers, during the session, (which words, "during the session," as used in this act, shall be held to mean seven months,) at the rate of $720 each per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 92, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the telegraph-operator during the session from $600 to $700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 93, to increase the total appropriation for compensation, &c., of officers and employés of the Senate from $145,276 to $179,366.80.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 97, after the word "including" to strike out the word "two" and insert "five;" in line 100, to strike out "nine thousand five" and insert "fourteen thousand six;" so that the clause will read:

For stationery and newspapers, (including $5,000 for stationery for committees and officers of the Senate and $100 for postage-stamps for the Secretary of the Senate,) $14,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 102, after the word "for" to strike out "twenty-one" and insert "twenty-seven;" in line 103, before the word "dollars" to strike out "five" and insert "six;" and in the same line, after the word "session" to strike out "eighteen thousand nine hundred" and to insert "thirty-four thousand three hundred and forty-four;" so that the clause will read:

For twenty-seven clerks to committees, at $6 per day during the session, $34,344.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to increase the total appropriation for the salaries of fourteen pages for the Senate Chamber, three riding-pages, one page for the Vice-President's room, and one page for the office of the Secretary of the Senate, at the rate of $2.50 per day while actually employed, from $8,550 to $10,835; so that the clause will read:

For fourteen pages for the Senate Chamber, three riding-pages, one page for the Vice-President's room, and one page for the office of the Secretary of the Senate, at the rate of $2.50 per day while actually employed, $10,835.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 130, to increase the appropriation for miscellaneous items for the Senate, exclusive of labor, from $20,000 to $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 170, to increase the total appropriation for fuel and oil for the heating-apparatus; for furniture and repairs of furniture; for packing-boxes; for miscellaneous items, exclusive of labor, and for cartage, from $36,460 to $46,460.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the appropriations for the House of Representatives, line 167, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of assistant to chief clerk, assistant to enrolling clerk, resolution and petition clerk, newspaper clerk, superintendent of document-room, index clerk, and librarian, seven in all, from $1,800 to $2,000 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 169, to increase the appropriation for the salary of distributing clerk of the House of Representatives from $1,600 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to reduce the appropriation for the salary of stationery clerk of the House of Representatives from $1,600 to $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 175, to reduce the appropriation for the salary of one chief engineer from $1,700 to $1,440.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was line 176, to reduce number of assistant engineers from three to two.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 173, after the word "each" to insert "one page, at $2.50 per day during the session."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 185, to increase the salary of one telegraph-operator from $600 to $700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 213, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the superintendent of the folding-room from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 215, to increase the appropriation for the salary of one of the clerks in the folding-room from $1,600 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 217, after the word "dollars" to strike out the following words:

To enable documents in the folding-room to be properly stamped on the outside of envelopes with the name of the document inclosed, $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to increase the total appropriation for compensation of the officers, clerks, messengers, and others receiving an annual salary in the service of the House of Representatives from $173,820 to $174,990.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 246, to strike out before the word "dollars" the word "five" and insert the word "six;" and in line 247, after the word "session" to strike out the words "$22,050" and insert $26,712;" so that the clause will read:

For twenty-one clerks to committees, at $6 per day during the session, $26,712.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 283, to strike out after the word "the," where it occurs a second time, the word "pay" and insert "compensation;" and after line 284 to insert:

Provided, That any amount heretofore received as compensation or expenses shall be deducted therefrom.

So that the clause will read:

That there be and is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Hon. JOHN Y. BROWN the sum necessary to pay him the compensation and mileages of a member of the Fortieth Congress: Provided, That any amount heretofore received as compensation or expenses shall be deducted therefrom.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 304, to reduce the total appropriation for the Library of Congress from $27,140 to $26,640.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 333, in the appropriation for public buildings and grounds, before the word "gardener" to strike out "public" and insert "landscape;" and in the same line, after the word "thousand" to strike out "six" and insert "eight;" so that the clause will read:

For landscape gardener, $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 338, to increase the total appropriation for the salaries of a foreman and laborers employed in the public grounds from $13,000 to $15,456.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 344, to increase the appropriation for furnace-keeper in charge of the heating apparatus under the old Hall of the House of Representatives from $800 to $864.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to increase the appropriation for the salary for the person in charge of the heating apparatus of the Library of Congress, and other steam-heating apparatus in the central building, from $800 to $864.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 353, to increase the appropriation for the furnace-keeper at the Executive Mansion from $800 to $864.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 359, to increase the total appropriation for the furnace-keeper, night-watchman, one night-usher, two day-ushers, and two doorkeepers at the Executive Mansion from $7,700 to $7,764.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 385, after the words "1876" to strike out the words "September 15" and insert "to October 10;" and in line 386, after the word "1876" to strike out "$420" and insert "$760;" so that the clause will read:

That there be allowed and paid to the two watchmen in the Smithsonian grounds, the two laborers in the Capitol building, one public gardener, and one watchman in Lincoln Square, discharged by reason of the second section of the act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for other purposes, approved August 15, 1876, a sum equal to the amount of their respective pay from August 16, 1876, to October 10, 1876, $760.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 390, before the word thousand to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "fifty;" and in the same line, after the word "dollars" to strike out "and section 153 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, repealed, so far as the same relates to the salary of the President;" so that the clause will read:

For compensation of the President of the United States, $50,000.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. President, I shall not at this time ask a vote upon this amendment proposed by the committee. I do hope that by the time we get the bill into the Senate we shall perhaps have a fuller Senate than we have at present. I give notice, however, that I shall ask a vote of the Senate on this amendment touching the compensation of the Executive when the bill is reported to the Senate.

Mr. WINDOM. In view of the notice given by the Senator from Iowa, I hope the Senate will remain here an hour or two longer than usual, so that we may complete the bill this evening. I fear that we may be in want of a quorum when he shall ask for a vote. If we can pass the bill to-night it can go to a conference committee and a great deal of time may be saved, and if the commission should report the conference committee can act on the bill.

Mr. WRIGHT. One object I had in giving notice was that no one should be taken by surprise. I wish to have a full vote on that amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Why not take a vote upon it now?

Mr. SPENCER. I suggest to the Senator from Iowa that we take the vote now and dispose of it.

Mr. WRIGHT. If there be a quorum of the Senate here I have no objection to taking the vote now.

Mr. HAMLIN. We can get a quorum.

Mr. WINDOM. I do not wish to discuss this question. Every Senator understands it perfectly and I wish the vote on the amendment may be taken at once.

Mr. COOPER. Let it be reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. The amendment is in line 390, to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "fifty;" and strike out, commencing at the end of the same line, the words "and section 153 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, repealed, so far as the same relates to the salary of the President;" so that the clause will read:

For compensation of the President of the United States, $50,000.

Mr. WRIGHT. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 23, nays 18; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allison, Barnum, Booth, Boutwell, Bruce, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Cameron of Wisconsin, Chaffee, Conover, Cooper, Cragin, Dennis, Dorsey, Goldthwaite, Hamlin, McMillan, Paddock, Robertson, Sargent, Spencer, Teller, Windom, and Withers—23.

NAYS—Messrs. Alcorn, Bailey, Cockrell, Dawes, Ferry, Hereford, Hitchcock, Kernan, McCreery, McDonald, Maxey, Morrill, Randolph, Ransom, Wadleigh, Wallace, Whyte, and Wright—18.

ABSENT—Messrs. Anthony, Bayard, Blaine, Bogy, Burnside, Christiancy, Clayton, Conkling, Davis, Eaton, Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Gordon, Hamilton, Harvey, Howe, Ingalls, Johnston, Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Kelly, Logan, Merrimon, Mitchell, Morton, Norwood, Oglesby, Patterson, Saulsbury, Sharon, Sherman, Stevenson, Thurman, and West—34.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 398, to increase the appropriation for the salary of private secretary to the President of the United States from $3,150 to $3,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 402, to increase the total appropriation for compensation of officers in the office of the President of the United States from $12,400, to $12,750.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 405, to increase the appropriation for contingent expenses of the executive office, including stationery therefor, from $2,000 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 410, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of three assistant secretaries of State from $3,150 each to $3,500 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 411, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the chief clerk of the State Department from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 412, to increase the number of clerks of class four from ten to twelve.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 412, to reduce the number of clerks of class three from six to five.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 419, to increase the number of firemen in the State Department building from four to six.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 420, to reduce the number of charwomen from twenty to ten.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in lines 422 and 423, to increase the total appropriation for salaries of officers and employés in the office of the Secretary of State from $95,920 to $98,860.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 425, before the word "chief" to strike out "three" and insert "five;" and in line 426, to strike out "$8,400" and insert "$12,600; so as to make the clause read:

For five chiefs of bureaus and one translator, at $2,100 each, $12,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 431, after the word "repairs," to strike out "three" and insert "four;" in line 433, before the word "thousand" to strike out "seven" and insert "eight;" so that the clause will read:

For proof-reading, and packing the laws and documents for the various legations and consulates, including boxes and transportation of the same, $2,500; for stationery, furniture, fixtures, and repairs, $4,000; for books and maps, $2,000; in all, $8,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 434, to increase the appropriation for extra clerk hire and copying in the Department of State from $1,000 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 439, after the word "thousand" to insert "five hundred;" in line 441, after the word "foregoing" to strike out "one thousand two hundred and fifty" and insert "three thousand;" and in line 442, after the word "all" to strike out "17,250" and insert "19,500;" so as to make the clause read:

For contingent expenses, namely: For fuel, $10,000; for lights, $3,000; for repairs, $2,000; for care and subsistence of horses and repairs of wagons and harness, $1,500; and for miscellaneous items, not included in the foregoing, $3,000; in all, $19,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 445, to increase the appropriation for rent of stable and wagon-shed for the new State Department building from $500 to $600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 453 to insert the following clause:

For official postage-stamps for the State Department, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 459, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of two Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury from "$4,000 each" to "$4,500 each."

The amendment was agreed to,

The next amendment was in line 461, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the chief clerk and ex officio superintendent of the Treasury building from $2,500 to $2,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 463, to increase the appropriation for the salary of one chief of the divison of warrants, estimates, and appropriations from $2,500 to $2,750.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 465, to increase the appropriation for the salary of one assistant chief of division of warrants, estimates, and appropriations from $2,000 to $2,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 468, to increase the number of clerks of class four in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury from twenty to twenty-three.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 471, to increase the number of clerks of class three from sixteen to nineteen.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 471, to increase the number of clerks of class two from fifteen to eighteen.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 472, to reduce the number of clerks of class one from twelve to eleven.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 474, to strike out the words:

And five clerks at $900 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 475, to increase the number of laborers from twenty-eight to thirty-six.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 480, to increase the number of watchmen from fifty to sixty.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 484, before the word "firemen" to strike out "six," and in the same line after the word "firemen" to strike out at $720 each," and insert "$4,320."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 487, to increase the total appropriation for the compensation of officers and employés in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury from $263,560 to $287,070.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the clause making appropriations for the consolidated division of loans and currency, before the word "clerks" in line 496, to strike out the word "female;" in line 497, before the word "messengers" strike out "assistant;" in line 498, before the word "dollars," strike out the words "seven hundred and twenty" and insert "eight hundred and forty;" and in line 501, after the word "all" strike out "$87,965.50" and insert "$88,685.50;" so that the clause will read:

For the consolidated division of loans and currency, namely: One chief of division, at $2,500; two assistant chiefs of division, at $2,100 each; ten clerks of class four, and additional pay to three fourth-class clerks, namely, receiving clerk of bonds and two book-keepers, $100 each; six clerks of class three; three clerks of class two; four clerks of class one; thirty-five clerks, at $900 each; six messengers, at $840 each; six laborers, at $720 each; and six laborers, at $2.25 per day each; in all, $88,685.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the clause making appropriations for the Office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, line 506, after the words "Supervising Architect" strike out "$4,000" and insert "$4,500;" in line 507, after the word "photographer" strike out "$2,000" and insert "$2,250;" in line 508, after the word "dollars" insert "one principal clerk at $2,000;" in line 509, after the words "class four" strike out "at $1,800;" and in line 512, after the word "all" to strike out "$17,390" and insert "$20,140;" so that the clause will read:

Supervising Architect:

In the construction branch of the Treasury: For Supervising Architect, $4,500; chief clerk, $2,250; photographer, $2,250; one principal clerk, at $2,000; one clerk of class four, two clerks of class three, two clerks of class one; one clerk, at $900; and one messenger; in all, $20,140.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 515, after the words "First Comptroller of the Treasury" to strike out "$4,500" and insert "$5,000;" in line 517, before the word "hundred" to strike out "five" and insert "seven;" in line 518, after the word "thousand" to insert "one hundred;" and in line 521, after the word all" to strike out "$62,600" and insert "$63,700;" so the clause will read:

For First Comptroller of the Treasury:

For First Comptroller of the Treasury, $5,000; deputy comptroller, $2,700; four chiefs of division, at $2,100 each; four clerks of class four; ten clerks of class three; eight clerks of class two; four clerks of class one; six clerks, at $900 each; one messenger; and three laborers; in all, $63,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 524, after the words "Second Comptroller of the Treasury" to strike out "$4,500" and insert "$5,000;" in line 526, after the word "thousand" strike out "five" and insert "seven;" in line 527, after the word "thousand" insert "one hundred;" in line 529, before the word "clerks" strike out "eight female" and insert "nine;" in line 531, after the word "all" strike out "$83,200" and insert "$85,300;" so that the clause will read:

Second Comptroller of the Treasury:

For Second Comptroller of the Treasury, $5,000; deputy comptroller, $2,700; five chiefs of division, at $2,100 each; five clerks of class four; twelve clerks of class three; thirteen clerks of class two; eight clerks of class one; nine clerks, at $900 each; one messenger; and three laborers; in all, $85,300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 534, after the word "thousand" to strike out "five hundred;" in line 535, after the word "thousand" to strike out "five hundred" and insert "two hundred and fifty;" in line 536, after the word "thousand" insert "one hundred;" and in line 539, after the word "thousand" to strike out "$48,960" and insert "$48,410;" so that the clause will read:

Commissioner of Customs:

For Commissioner of Customs, $4,000; deputy commissioner, $2,250; two chiefs of division at $2,100 each; two clerks of class four; five clerks of class three; ten clerks of class two; nine clerks of class one; one messenger; and one laborer; in all, $48,410.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 545, before the word "clerks" to strike out "six" and insert "seven;" in line 546, before the word "clerks" strike out "ten" and insert "eleven;" and in line 547, after the word "all" to strike out "$49,730" and insert "$52,330;" so that the clause will read:

First Auditor:

For the First Auditor of the Treasury, $3,600; deputy auditor, $2,250; four chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; two clerks of class four; six clerks of class three; seven clerks of class two; eleven clerks of class one; one messenger; and two laborers; in all, $52,330.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 549, to strike out before the word "clerks" the word "two" and insert "three," and in line 551, after the word "all" to strike out "$13,600" and insert "$15,400;" so that the clause will read:

For the division of loans, namely: Three clerks of class four; three clerks of class three; two clerks of class two; and two clerks of class one; in all, $15,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 556, before the word "clerks" to strike out "five" and insert "six;" in line 557, before the word "clerks" to strike out "fifty" and insert "sixty;" in line 558, strike out "ten female clerks, at $900 each;" and in line 560, after the word "all" to strike out "$197,250" and insert "$204,000.50;" so that the clause will read:

Second Auditor:

For Second Auditor, $3,600; deputy auditor, $2,250; five chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; six clerks of class four; twenty-eight clerks of class three; sixty clerks of class two; thirty-five clerks of class one; one messenger; and eight laborers; in all, $204,050.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 565, before the words "clerks" to strike out "five" and insert "six;" in line 566, before the word "clerks" strike out "fifty" and insert "sixty;" in line 567, before the word "clerks" strike out "ten" and insert "five;" in line 568, before the word "laborers" to strike out "four" and insert "seven," and in line 570, after the words "in all" strike out "$174,050" and insert "$187,510;" so that the clause will read:

Third Auditor:

For Third Auditor, $3,600; deputy auditor, $2,250; five chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; six clerks of class four; fifteen clerks of class three; sixty clerks of class two; thirty-five clerks of class one; five clerks, at $900 each; one messenger; seven laborers; and one charwoman, at $480; in all, $187,510.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 574, before the word "chiefs" to strike out "two" and insert "three;" in line 576, before the word "clerks" to strike out "twelve" and insert "sixteen;" in line 576, before the word "clerks" to strike out "eight" and insert "nine;"

in line 577, before the word "clerks" to strike out "eight" and insert "nine;" in line 577, before the word "clerks" to strike out "eight" and insert "five;" in line 579, after the words "in all" strike out "$62,930" and insert "$71,230;" so that the clause will read:

Fourth Auditor:
For the Fourth Auditor, $3,600; deputy auditor, $2,250; three chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; two clerks of class four; sixteen clerks of class three; nine clerks of class two; nine clerks of class one; five clerks, at $900 each; one messenger; and two laborers; in all, $71,230.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 584, before the word "clerks" to strike out "five" and insert "six;" in line 585, before the word "clerks" strike out "four" and insert "five;" in the same line, before the word "clerks" strike out "five" and insert "six;" in line 586, before the words "clerks" strike out "five" and insert "three;" and in line 587, after the words "in all" strike out "$39,110" and insert "$41,510;" so that the clause will read:

Fifth Auditor:
For the Fifth Auditor, $3,600; deputy auditor, $2,250; two chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; two clerks of class four; six clerks of class three; five clerks of class two; six clerks of class one; three clerks, at $900 each; one messenger; and one laborer; in all, $41,510.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 594, before the word "clerks" to strike out "five" and insert "eight;" in line 595, after the word "fifty" insert "four;" in line 596, after the word "sixty" to insert "nine;" in line 597, before the word "clerks" strike out "forty" and insert "thirty-seven;" in line 598, before the word "assorters" strike out "eighteen" and insert "twenty;" in line 601, after the words "in all" strike out "$289,070" and insert "$311,870;" so that the clause will read:

Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department:
For compensation of the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, $3,600; deputy auditor, $2,250; eight chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; eight clerks of class four, and, additional to one clerk as disbursing-clerk, $200; fifty-four clerks of class three; sixty-nine clerks of class two; thirty-seven clerks of class one; one messenger; and nineteen laborers; twenty assorters of money-orders, $18,000; also fifteen female assorters of money-orders, at $900 each; in all, $311,870.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 607, before the word "dollars" to insert "two hundred;" in line 609, before the word "dollars" to strike out "two hundred and fifty" and insert "five hundred;" in line 614, after the word "thousand" insert "two hundred and fifty;" in line 614, after the word "each" strike out "ten" and insert "thirteen;" in line 615, before the word "clerks" strike out "eleven" and insert "thirteen;" in line 616, before the word "clerks" strike out "eight" and insert "nine;" in line 620, after the words "in all" strike out "$145,730" and insert "$156,680;" so that the clause will read:

Treasurer:
For compensation of the Treasurer of the United States, $6,000; Assistant Treasurer, $3,600; cashier, $3,600; assistant cashier, $3,200; chief clerk, $2,500; five chiefs of division, at $2,500 each; one principal book-keeper, at $2,500; one assistant book-keeper, at $2,400; two tellers, at $2,500 each; two assistant tellers, at $2,250 each; thirteen clerks of class four; thirteen clerks of class three; nine clerks of class two; eight clerks of class one; forty clerks, at $900 each: five messengers; five laborers, at $720 each; and seven laborers, at $240 each; in all, $156,680.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 623, after the word "namely" to strike out "thirteen" and insert "seventeen;" in line 624, before the word "clerks" to strike out "five" and insert "six;" in line 625, before the word "clerks" strike out "six" and insert "five;" in line 625, before the word "clerks" to strike out "eight" and insert "nine;" in line 628, after the words "in all" strike out "$164,000" and insert "$172,600;" so that the clause will read:

For the division of loans, namely: Seventeen clerks of class four; six clerks of class three; five clerks of class two; nine clerks of class one; one hundred counters and copyists, at $900 each; seven messengers; and twenty-six laborers; in all, $172,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 636, before the word "clerks" to strike out "two" and insert "four;" in line 637, before the word "clerks" strike out "two" and insert "four;" in line 638, before the word "clerks" strike out "thirty-five" and insert "thirty-six;" in line 639, before the word "clerks" strike out "twelve" and insert "fifteen;" in line 647, after the words "in all" strike out "$112,336" and insert "$123,336;" so that the clause will read:

For the force employed in redeeming the national currency, namely: For superintendent, $3,500; two principal tellers and one principal book-keeper, at $2,500 each; one assistant book-keeper, $2,400; and two assistant tellers, at $2,000 each; four clerks of class four; four clerks of class three; four clerks of class two; thirty-six clerks of class one; fifteen clerks, at $1,000 each; twenty-six clerks, at $900 each; two messengers; three assistant messengers; three employés, at $432 each; in all, $123,336.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 648, afer the words "six clerks of class four" to insert "one of whom shall receive $200 additional for services as disbursing clerk, and shall give bond in such amount as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine;" in line 651, before the word "clerks" to strike out "six" and insert "seven;" in line 652, before the word "clerks" strike out "nine" and insert "ten;" in line 653, before the word "copyist" strike out "eight" and insert "six;" and in line 654, after the words "in all" to strike out "$59,050" and insert "$60,450; so that the clause will read:

Register of the Treasury:
For compensation of the Register of the Treasury, $4,000; assistant register, $2,250; six clerks of class four, one of whom shall receive $200 additional for services as disbursing clerk, and shall give bond in such amount as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine; seven clerks of class three; ten clerks of class two; eight clerks of class one; six copyists, at $900 each; one messenger; and three laborers; in all, $60,450.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 656, before the word "chiefs" to strike out "four" and insert "five;" in line 657, before the word "clerks" to strike out "eight" and insert "nine;" in line 659, before the word "copyist" strike out "sixty" and insert "fifty-eight; in line 661, after the word "messengers" strike out "and;" in the same line, after the word "laborers" insert "and one charwoman at $380;" and in line 662, after the words "in all" strike out "$104,440" and insert "$106,800;" so that the clause will read:

For the division of loans, namely: Five chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; nine clerks of class four; eight clerks of class three; three clerks of class two; four clerks of class one; fifty-eight copyists and counters, at $900 each; four messengers; four laborers; and one charwoman, at $380; in all, $106,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 666, after the words "Comptroller of the Currency" to strike out "$4,500" and insert "$5,000;" in line 667, after the word "thousand" strike out "five" and insert "eight;" in line 668, after the word "thousand" to insert "two hundred;" in line 669, after the word "thousand" to strike out "four" and insert "eight;" in line 670, before the word "clerks" to strike out "six" and insert "eight;" in line 671, before the word "clerks" to strike out "ten" and insert "twelve;" and in line 675, after the words "in all" to strike out "$94,020" and insert "$102,820;" so that the clause will read:

Comptroller of the Currency:
For Comptroller of the Currency, $5,000; deputy comptroller, $2,800; four chiefs of division, at $2,200 each; one stenographer, at $1,800; eight clerks of class four; twelve clerks of class three; nine clerks of class two; eight clerks of class one; twenty-five clerks, at $900 each; three messengers; three laborers; and two night-watchmen, at $720 each; in all, $102,820.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 680, after the word "at" to strike out "$1,800" and insert "$2,000," and in line 682, after the words "in all" to strike out "$21,140" and insert "$22,340;" so that the clause will read:

For expenses of the national currency, namely: One superintendent, at $2,000; one teller and one book-keeper, at $2,000 each; and one assistant book-keeper, $2,000; fifteen clerks, at $900 each; and one messenger; in all, $22,340.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 694, before the word "clerks" to strike out "four" and insert "five;" in line 695, before the word "clerks" where it first occurs to strike out "five" and insert "six;" in the same line, before the word "clerks" where it occurs the second time strike out "five" and insert "six;" and in line 699, after the words "in all" to strike out "$37,940" and insert "$42,740;" so that the clause will read:

Bureau of Statistics:
For the officer in charge of the Bureau of Statistics, $2,400; chief clerk, $2,000; five clerks of class four; six clerks of class three; six clerks of class two; four clerks of class one; five copyists, at $900 each; one messenger; one laborer; and one charwoman, at $480; in all, $42,740.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after the word "dollars," in line 700, to insert the following:

And for the additional duties imposed upon the Bureau of Statistics by the legislation of the second session of the Forty-third Congress, the sum of $12,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, to be expended, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, in payment of the services of experts, and for other necessary expenditures connected with the collection of facts relative to the internal and foreign commerce of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 710, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the Chief of Bureau of Engraving and Printing from $4,000 to $4,500, and to increase the total appropriations for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing from $19,830 to $20,330.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 717, after the words "Commissioner of Internal Revenue" to strike out "$5,500" and insert "$6,000;" in line 719, after the word "dollars" to insert "two heads of division, at $2,500 each;" in line 720, before the word "heads" to strike out "seven" and insert "five;" in line 723, after the word "thousand" to strike out "four" and insert "eight;" in the same line, after the word "twenty" insert "five;" in line 724, before the word "clerks" strike out "thirty-five" and insert "forty;" in line 725, before the word "clerks" strike out "twenty-five" and insert "eighteen;" and in line 727, after the words "in all" to strike out "$244,410" and insert "$253,410;" so that the clause will read:

Commissioner of Internal Revenue:
For Commissioner of Internal Revenue, $6,000; one deputy commissioner, $3,200; two heads of division, at $2,500 each; five heads of division, at $2,250 each; one stenographer, $1,800; twenty-five clerks of class four; thirty clerks of class three; forty clerks of class two; eighteen clerks of class one; fifty clerks, at $900 each; four messengers; and ten laborers; in all, $253,410.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 736, before the word "thousand" to strike out "six hundred and seventy-five" and insert "eight hundred and forty," and in line 737, after the word "dollars" to strike out the following:

And from and after the 30th day of June next there shall be no more than one hundred and twenty collection districts; and it shall be the duty of the President, and he is hereby authorized and directed, to reduce the internal-revenue districts to not exceeding the number aforesaid, in the manner heretofore provided by law. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause a careful examination to be made of allowances to collectors of internal revenue under the provisions of section 3145 of the Revised Statutes, for collection of revenue in the several districts, and to equalize the same, and reduce the aggregate of such allowances not less than 5 per cent. on the amount of the same;

So that the clause will read:

For salaries and expenses of collectors, $1,840,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 758, to increase the appropriation for detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the internal-revenue laws, or conniving in such crime, including payments for information and detection, from $50,000 to $60,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 763, to strike out the words "and the several Executive Departments, according to the exigencies of the public service, to be apportioned by the Secretary of the Treasury;" so that the clause will read:

For temporary clerks for the Treasury Department, $60,000: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to any officer or employé of the Government as additional compensation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 775, to increase the appropriation for arranging and binding canceled marine papers, requisitions, and other important records; sealing ship registers; for foreign postage, newspapers, books, hand-stamps, and repairs of the same, from $10,000 to $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 783, to increase the appropriation for care and subsistence of horses for office and mail wagons, including feeding and shoeing, and for wagons, harness and repairs of same, from $3,000 to $3,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 786, to increase the appropriation for ice, buckets, file-holders, book-rests, labor, clocks, and repairs of the same, from $4,000 to $9,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 789, to increase the appropriation for coal, wood, grates, grate-baskets and fixtures, stoves and fixtures, blowers, coal-hods, hearths, shovels, tongs, pokers, matches, and match-safes, from $8,000 to $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 791, to increase the appropriation for gas, drop-lights and tubing, gas-burners, brackets and globes, candles, lanterns, and wicks, from $12,000 to $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 794, to increase the appropriation for carpets, oil-cloth, and matting, and repairs, cleaning, and laying of the same, from $5,000 to $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 799, to increase the appropriation for desks, tables, and chairs, and shelving for file-rooms, and cases, repairs of furniture, boxes, rugs, chair-covers and caning, cushions, cloth for covering desks, locks, screws, hand-saws, turpentine, and varnish, from $12,000 to $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 817, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant treasurer at New York from $7,200 to $8,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 819, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the deputy assistant treasurer at New York from $3,240 to $3,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 820, to increase the appropriation for the salary of cashier and chief clerk from $3,780 to $4,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 821, to reduce the appropriation for the salary of the chief of the coin division from $4,000 to $3,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 823, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief of note-payment division from $2,700 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 824, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the chief of the note-receiving division from $2,700 to $2,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 826, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief of check division from $2,700 to $2,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 827, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief of registered-interest division from $2,520 to $2,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 829, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief of coupon-interest division from $2,250 to $4,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 830, to increase the appropriation for chief of fractional-currency division from $2,250 to $2,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 832, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief of bond division from $2,160 to $2,250.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 834, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief of canceled-check and record division from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 835, to increase the appropriation for the salary of two clerks from $2,160 each to $2,250 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 836, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of six clerks from $1,980 each to $2,100 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 838, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of ten clerks from $1,800 each to $2,000 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 839, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of nine clerks from $1,620 each to $1,800 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 840, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of four clerks at $1,530 each to $1,700 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 842, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of four clerks from $1,440 each to $1,600 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 843, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of two clerks from $1,350 each to $1,500 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 845, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of ten clerks from $1,260 each to $1,400 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 847, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of five messengers from $1,200 each to $1,300 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 849, to increase the appropriation for the salary of keeper of building from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 850, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief detective from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 852, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant detective from $1,260 to $1,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 856, to increase the total appropriation for the office of the assistant treasurer at New York from $137,840 to $148,530.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 860, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant treasurer at Boston from $4,500 to $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 861, to increase the appropriation for the chief clerk in the office of the assistant treasurer at Boston from $2,430 to $2,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 863, to increase the appropriation for the salary of paying teller from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 864, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief interest clerk from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 865, to increase the appropriation for the salary of receiving teller from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 867, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the first book-keeper from $1,530 to $1,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 869, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the second book-keeper, depositor's accounts, from $1,350 to $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 870, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the currency clerk from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 872, to increase the appropriation for the salary of specie clerk from $1,350 to $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 873, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant specie clerk from $1,260 to $1,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 875, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of two coupon clerks from $1,260 each to $1,400 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 882, to increase the appropriation for the salary of messenger and chief watchman, from $1,000 to $1,060.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 884, to increase the total appropriation for the office of the assistant treasurer at Boston from $31,680 to $34,260.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 887, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant treasurer at San Francisco from $5,000 to $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 888, to increase the appropriation for the salary of cashier from $2,700 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 889, to increase the appropriation for the salary of bookkeeper from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 890, to increase the appropriation for assistant cashier from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 892 to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant bookkeeper from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 893, to increase the appropriation for the salary of stamp-clerk from $2,160 to $2,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 895, to increase the appropriation for the salary of one clerk from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 896, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of three night-watchmen from $1,000 to $1,200 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 897, to increase the appropriation for the salary of one day-watchman from $900 to $960.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 898, to increase the total appropriation for the office of the assistant treasurer at San Francisco from $21,230 to $24,260.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 901, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant treasurer at Philadelphia from $4,500 to $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 903, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the cashier and chief clerk in the office of the assistant treasurer, Philadelphia, from $2,430 to $2,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 904, to increase the appropriation for the book-keeper from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 905, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief interest-clerk from $1,710 to $1,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 907, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant book-keeper from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 908, to increase the appropriation for the salary of coin-teller from $1,530 to $1,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 909, to increase the appropriation for the salary of chief registered-interest clerk from $1,710 to $1,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 911, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant coupon-clerk from $1,440 to $1,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 912, to increase the appropriation for the salary of fractional-currency clerk from $1,440 to $1,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 914, after the word "thousand," to strike out "three hundred and fifty" and insert "five hundred;" and in line 916, after the word "thousand," to strike out "two hundred and sixty" and insert "four hundred;" so that the clause will read: "Two assistant registered-interest clerks, one at $1,500 and one at $1,400."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 917, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant coin-tellers from $1,260 to $1,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 918, to increase the appropriation for the salary of receiving teller from $1,170 to $1,300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 924, to increase the total appropriation for the office of assistant treasurer at Philadelphia from $37,120 to $39,550.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 927, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant treasurer at Baltimore from $4,500 to $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 928, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the cashier in the office of the assistant treasurer at Baltimore from $2,150 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 930, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of three clerks from $1,620 each to $1,800 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 931, to increase the appropriation for the salaries of three clerks from $1,260 each to $1,400 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 935, to increase the total appropriation for the office of assistant treasurer at Baltimore from $22,240 to $23,940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 939, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant treasurer at Saint Louis from $4,500 to $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 940, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the chief clerk and teller from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 942, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant teller from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 943, to increase the appropriation for the salary of book-keeper from $1,350 to $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 946, to increase the total appropriation for the office of assistant treasurer at Saint Louis from $14,720 to $15,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 950, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant treasurer at Chicago from $4,500 to $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 951, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the cashier from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 953, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the paying teller from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 954, to increase the appropriation for the salary of book-keeper and receiving teller from $1,350 each to $1,500 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 958, to increase the total appropriation for the office of the assistant treasurer at Chicago from $12,480 to $15,060.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 961, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant treasurer at Cincinnati from $4,500 to $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 962, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the cashier from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 963, to increase the appropriation for the salary of book-keeper from $1,620 to $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 965, to increase the appropriation for the salary of assistant cashier from $1,350 to $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 971, to increase the total appropriation for the office of assistant treasurer at Cincinnati from $14,230 to $15,260.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 974, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the assistant treasurer at New Orleans from $4,050 to $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 975, to increase the appropriation for the salary of cashier from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 976, to increase the appropriation for the salary of receiving teller from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 978, to increase the appropriation for the salary of book-keeper from $1,350 to $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 981, to increase the total appropriation for the office of assistant treasurer at New Orleans from $13,230 to $14,280.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1012, after the words "class three," to insert "one clerk of class two," and in line 1015, after the word "of," to strike out "fifteen thousand five" and insert "sixteen thousand nine;" so that the clause will read:

Office of the Director of the Mint:

For Director, $4,500; examiner, $2,000; one computer of bullion, $2,000; one assay clerk, $1,800; one clerk of class three; one clerk of class two; one translator, $1,200; one copyist, $900; one messenger; one laborer; making, in all, the sum of $16,960.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 1031 the following additional clause:

For fitting up an assay laboratory in the office of the Director of the Mint, $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 1032 the following additional clause:

To repair the machinery and apparatus of the coining mints and of the assay-office at New York, and to add some additional machinery, $55,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be available immediately.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1044, after the word "thousand" to strike out "four" and insert "five;" in line 1045, after the word "thousand" to insert "two hundred and fifty;" in line 1046, after the word "at" to strike out "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" in line 1048, after the word "and" to strike out "two clerks" and insert "one clerk;" in line 1049, after the word "dollars" to strike out "each;" and in the same line, after the word "all" to strike out "thirty-five thousand seven hundred" and insert "thirty-four thousand eight hundred and fifty;" so that the clause will read:

Mint at Philadelphia:

For salaries of the superintendent, $4,500; for the assayer, melter and refiner, coiner, and engraver, four in all, at $3,000 each; the assistant assayer, assistant coiner, and assistant melter and refiner, at $2,000 each; cashier, $2,500; chief clerk, $2,250; book-keeper and deposit clerk, at $2,000 each; weigh-clerk, $2,000; and one clerk, at $1,600; in all, $34,850.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1052, to increase the appropriation for wages of workmen and adjusters in the office of the Mint at Philadelphia from $250,000 to $320,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1054, to increase the appropriation for incidental and contingent expenses in the office of the Mint from $60,000 to $85,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1060, to increase the appropriation for the chief clerk of the mint at San Francisco, California, from $2,250 to $2,500; and in line 1063 to increase the total appropriation for assayer, melter, refiner, &c., in the nint at San Francisco, California, from $24,650 to $24,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1065, to increase the appropriation for wages of workmen and adjusters from $250,000 to $300,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1068, to increase the appropriation for material and repairs, fuel, lights, chemicals, and other necessaries from $75,000 to $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1075, under the head of "Mint at Carson, Nevada," after the word "weigh-clerk" to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" in line 1077, after the word "thousand" to strike out "six" and insert "eight;" and in line 1078, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "twenty-two thousand nine" and insert "twenty-three thousand five;" so as to read:

For salary of superintendent, $3,000; for assayer, melter and refiner, and coiner, at $2,500 each; chief clerk, at $2,250; cashier and book-keeper, at $2,000 each; weigh clerk, $2,000; voucher clerk and computing clerk, at $1,800 each; assayer's clerk, at $1,200; in all, $23,550.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1081, to increase the appropriation for wages of workmen and adjusters from $60,000 to $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1084, to increase the appropriation for materials and repairs, fuel, light, charcoal, chemicals, and other necessaries from $35,000 to $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the head of "Assay office at New York," in line 1098, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "five hundred;" in line 1101, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "two hundred and fifty;" and in line 1107, after the word "thousand" to strike out the words "one hundred and fifty" and insert "nine hundred;" so as to read:

For salary of superintendent, $4,250; for assayer, $3,000; for melter and refiner, $3,000; chief clerk, $2,500; weighing clerk, $2,500; paying clerk, $2,000; bar clerk, $1,800; warrant clerk, $2,250; two calculating clerks, at $1,800 each; assistant weigh clerk, $1,600; for assayer's first assistant, $2,250; for assayer's second assistant, $2,150; for assayer's third assistant, $2,000; in all, $32,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1109, to increase the appropriation for wages of workmen from $20,000 to $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1111, to increase the appropriation for acids, copper, coal, lead, &c., from $8,000 to $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1122, under the head of "Assay office at Helena, Montana," after the word "thousand" to insert the words "five hundred;" and in line 1123, after the word "each" to strike out "four" and insert "five;" so as to read:

For salaries of assayer in charge, and of melter, at $2,500 each, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1129, under the head of "Assay office at Boisé City, Idaho Territory," to increase the appropriation for salary of assayer, who shall perform the duties of melter, from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1131, to increase the appropriation for wages of workmen, fuel, crucibles, chemicals, &c., from $1,300 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the head of "District of Columbia," in line 1159, after the word "thousand," to strike out the words "seven hundred and fifty" and insert "five hundred;" and in line 1160, after the word "health-officer," to strike out the words "one thousand seven hundred and fifty" and insert "two thousand; so as to read:

Provided, That any two of the above-named offices may be filled by the same person at the discretion of the board; medical sanitary inspector, $1,500; health-officer, $2,000; four clerks, $4,800; five sanitary inspectors, $6,000, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the head of "Government in the Territories," in line 1181, after the word "judges," to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1182, after the word "secretary," to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in line 1184, after the words "in all," to strike out the words "twelve thousand three" and insert "fourteen thousand five;" so as to read:

Territory of Arizona:

For salary of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, $3,000 each; secretary, $2,000; interpreter and translator in the executive office, $500; in all, $14,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1191, after the word "at," to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1192, after the word "secretary," to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in line 1193, after the word "dollars," to strike out the words "eleven thousand eight hundred" and insert "fourteen thousand;" so as to read:

Territory of Dakota:

For salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; and secretary, at $2,000, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1201, after the word "at," to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1203, after the word "at," to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" in the same line, after the word "dollars," strike out the words "eleven thousand eight hundred" and insert "fourteen thousand;" and in line 1204, after the word "dollars," insert the following:

And the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department are hereby authorized to audit and settle the accounts of Mason Brayman for salary as governor of Idaho Territory from September 18, 1876, the date of his assuming the duties of said office, to November 13, 1876, the same as if he had taken the oath of office in said Territory instead of the District of Columbia.

So as to read:

Territory of Idaho:

For salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; and secretary, at $2,000, $14,000. And the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department are hereby authorized to audit and settle the acounts of Mason Brayman for salary as governor of Idaho Territory from September 18, 1876, the date of his assuming the duties of said office, to November 13, 1876, the same as if he had taken the oath of office in said Territory instead of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1219, after the word "at," to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1221, after the word "at," to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in the same line, after the word "dollars," to strike out the words "eleven thousand eight hundred" and insert "fourteen thousand;" so as to read:

Territory of Montana:

For salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; and secretray, at $2,000, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1228, after the word "at," to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1230, after the word "at," to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in line 1232, after the word "dollars," to strike out the words "twelve thousand three" and insert "fourteen thousand five;" so as to read:

Territory of New Mexico:

For salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; secretary, at $2,000; and interpreter and translator in the executive office, at $500, $14,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1241, after the word "at," to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1243, after the word "at," to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in the same line, after the word "dollars," to strike out the words "eleven thousand eight hundred" and insert "fourteen thousand;" so as to read:

Territory of Utah:

For salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; and secretary, at $2,000, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1252, after the word "at" to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1254, after the word "at" to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in line 1255, after the word "dollars" to strike out the words "eleven thousand eight hundred" and insert "fourteen thousand;" so as to read:

Territory of Washington:
For the salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; and secretary, at $2,000, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1263, after the word "at" to strike out the words "two thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1265, after the word "at" to strike out the words "one thousand eight hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in the same line to strike out the words "eleven thousand eight hundred" and insert "fourteen thousand;" so as to read:

Territory of Wyoming:
For salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; and secretary, at $2,000, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the head of "War Department," in line 1275, after the word "thousand" to strike out the words "two hundred and fifty" and insert "five hundred," and in line 1282, after the word "thousand" to strike out the words "one hundred and thirty" and insert "three hundred and eighty;" so as to read:

For compensation of the Secretary of War, $8,000; one chief clerk, at $2,500; one disbursing clerk, at $2,000; two chief clerks of division, at $1,800 each; six clerks of class four; four clerks of class three; four clerks of class two; twelve clerks of class one; eight messengers; seven laborers; and six watchmen for the Northwest Executive Building; in all $69,380.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1289, to increase the appropriation for the purpose of examining the rebel archives, and having copies furnished for the Government, from $5,000 to $6,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1297, after the word "one" to strike out "six" and insert "eight," and in line 1298, after the word "and" to strike out the words "ninety-two thousand six hundred and forty" and insert "ninety-four thousand three hundred and twenty;" so as to read:

In the office of the Adjutant-General:
One chief clerk, at $2,000; eleven clerks of class four; seventeen clerks of class three; forty-one clerks of class two; one hundred and fifty-one clerks of class one; eight messengers, at $840 each; in all, $294,320.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1301, to increase the appropriation for the contingent expenses of the office of the Adjutant-General from $8,000 to $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1308, after the word "three" to strike out the words "one thousand six hundred dollars;" in the same line, after the word "two" strike out the words "female copyists, at $900 each" and insert "clerks of class one; one messenger;" and in line 1310, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "five thousand two hundred" and insert "six thousand six hundred and forty;" so as to read:

In the Bureau of Military Justice:
One chief clerk, $1,800; one clerk of class three; two clerks of class one; one messenger; in all $6,640.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1316, after the word "dollars" to strike out "five" and insert "seven;" in line 1317, after the word "four" to strike out the word "ten" and insert "nine;" in line 1318, after the word "twenty" insert "four;" in line 1319, after the word "one" strike out "twenty-five" and insert "twenty," and in line 1326, after the word "and" to strike out the words "forty-six thousand one" and insert "fifty-two thousand four;" so as to make the clause read:

One chief clerk, at $2,000; seven clerks of class four; nine clerks of class three; twenty-four clerks of class two; forty-eight clerks of class one; twenty copyists, at $900 each; one female messenger, at $30 per month; one messenger, at $840; two assistant messengers; six laborers; one engineer, at $1,200; one fireman; five watchmen; and one draughtsman, at $1,800; in all, $152,480.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1352, after the word "dollars" to strike out the words "one clerk" and insert "two clerks;" in line 1354, after the word "two" to strike out "four" and insert "six;" and in line 1355, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "sixteen thousand one" and insert "twenty thousand three;" so as to read:

One chief clerk, at $2,000; two clerks of class four; two clerks of class three; two clerks of class two; six clerks of class one; one messenger; one laborer; in all, $20,360.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1367, after the word "dollars" to strike out the word "four" and insert "six;" in line 1368, after the word "three" to strike out the word "ten" and insert "fourteen;" in line 1369, after the word "two" to strike out the word "twelve" and insert "nine;" and in line 1370, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "fifty-three thousand two" and insert "fifty-eight thousand eight;" so as to read:

Chief clerk, at $2,000; six clerks of class four; seven clerks of class three; fourteen clerks of class two; nine clerks of class one; one messenger; two watchmen three laborers; in all $58,840.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1372, to increase the appropriation for contingent expenses in the office of the Paymaster-General from $2,000 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the clause making appropriations for the office of the Chief of Engineers, line 1374, after the word "dollars" to strike out the word "three" and insert "four;" in line 1376, after the word "two" to strike out the word "four" and insert "three;" and in line 1377, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "twenty-three thousand four hundred" and insert "twenty-four thousand;" so that the clause will read:

One chief clerk, at $2,000; four clerks of class four; three clerks of class three; three clerks of class two; three clerks of class one; one messenger; two laborers; in all, $24,080.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1384, to increase the appropriation for contingent expenses of the office of the Chief of Engineers from $2,000 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1388, in the appropriations for the War Department buildings to increase the compensation of one engineer in the War Department building from $1,000 to $1,200; and in line 1389, to increase the total appropriation, one engineer, four watchmen, and two laborers in the War Department buildings, from $5,320 to $5,520.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1392, to increase the appropriation for labor, fuel, light, and miscellaneous items for the War Department buildings from $6,000 to $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the head of "Navy Department," in line 1414, to increase the compensation of the chief clerk of the Navy Department from $2,250 to $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1418, to increase the total appropriation for compensation of the Secretary of the Navy, chief clerk, one disbursing clerk, &c., from $31,170 to $31,420.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1449, after the word "three," to strike out the words "one clerk" and insert "two clerks;" and in line 1451, after the words "in all," to strike out the words "eight thousand one" and insert "nine thousand five;" so as to read:

Bureau of Ordnance:
For chief clerk, $1,800; draughtsman, $1,800; one clerk of class three; two clerks of class two; one messenger; and one laborer; in all, $9,560.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1474, after the word "two," to strike out the word "two" and insert "three;" and in line 1475, after the words "in all," to strike out the words "thirteen thousand five" and insert "fourteen thousand seven;" so as to read:

Bureau of Provisions and Clothing:
For chief clerk, $1,800; one clerk of class four; two clerks of class three; two clerks of class two; three clerks of class one; one messenger; and one laborer; in all, $14,760.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1486, after the word "for," to strike out the word "four" and insert "five;" and in line 1487, after the words "in all," to strike out the words "four thousand five hundred and seventy" and insert "five thousand two hundred and ninety;" so as to read:

For one superintendent of the building occupied by the Navy Department, and for five watchmen and two laborers; in all, $3,290.
For incidental labor, fuel, lights, and miscellaneous items for said building, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1489, after the word "for," to insert the words "incidental labor;" and in line 1490, after the word "building," to strike out the word "three" and insert "five;" so as to make the clause read:

For incidental labor, fuel, lights, and miscellaneous items for said building, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the head of "Department of the Interior" in line 1494, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the chief clerk of the Department from $2,250 to $2,500; and in line 1502, to increase the total appropriation for compensation of employés in the office of the Secretary of the Interior from $62,650 to $62,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1510, after the word "and," to strike out the word "twenty-four" and insert "twenty-eight;" and in line 1512, after the word "direct," to strike out the words "seventeen thousand two hundred and eighty" and insert "twenty thousand one hundred and sixty;" so as to read:

For one captain of the watch, $1,000; and twenty-eight watchmen, to be allotted to day or night service, as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, $20,160.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1514, after the word "for" to strike out the word "stationery," and in line 1517, after the word "library" to strike out the word "eight" and insert "seven;" so as to make the clause read:

For furniture, advertising, telegraphing, ice, and miscellaneous items, including new books and books to complete broken sets, and cases and maps for library, $7,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1519, after the word "superintendent" to strike out the words "at $1,600, five thousand," and insert "six thousand two hundred and fifty:" so as to read:

For expenses of packing and distributing official documents, (including salary of superintendent,) $6,250.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 1526, to insert the following:

For stationery for the Department of the Interior and its several bureaus and offices, $29,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 1529, to insert the following:

For temporary clerks for the Department of the Interior, $7,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1535, in the clause making appropriations for the General Land Office, to increase the appropriation for the salary of the recorder from $1,800 to $2,000, and in line 1543, to increase the total appropriation for compensation to employés in the General Land Office from $213,440 to $213,640.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1551, to increase the appropriation for maps of the United States (including paper) from $3,000 to $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1552, after the word "diagrams," to strike out the words "stationery, parchment paper for land-patents;" and in line 1559, after the word "telegraphing" to strike out the words "twenty-five thousand" and insert "twenty-one thousand five hundred;" so as to read:

For diagrams, furniture, and repairs of the same, miscellaneous items, including two of the city newspapers, to be filed, bound, and preserved for the use of the office, for the actual expenses of clerks detailed to investigate fraudulent land-entries, trespasses on the public lands, and cases of official misconduct, and for advertising and telegraphing, $21,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the appropriations for the Indian Office, in line 1563, after the word "dollars" to strike out the word "four" and insert "five;" in line 1564, after the word "four" to strike out the word "seven" and insert "eight;" in line 1565, after the word "dollars" to strike out the word "nine" and insert "thirteen;" in line 1566, after the word "two" to strike out the word "twelve" and insert "thirteen;" in the same line, after the word "one" to strike out the word "eight" and insert "six;" and in line 1568, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "sixty-one thousand four" and insert "sixty-nine thousand eight;" so as to make the clause read:

Indian Office:

For compensation of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, $3,000; chief clerk, $2,000; five clerks of class four; eight clerks of class three; one stenographer, at $1,600; thirteen clerks of class two; thirteen clerks of class one; six copyists, at 900 each; one messenger; one assistant messenger; and one laborer; in all, $69,880.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1571, after the word "binding" to strike out the word "stationery;" in line 1572, after the word "including" insert the words "price-lists and;" in line 1573, after the word "two" strike out the word "city;" and in line 1574, after the word "office" to strike out the words "five thousand" and insert "three thousand five hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

For blank books, binding, fuel, lights, telegraphing, and miscellaneous items, including price-lists and two newspapers, to be filed and bound and preserved for the use of the office, $3,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS. In line 1590 I move to insert after the word "actual" the words "and necessary;" so as to read:

For actual and necessary expenses of clerks detailed to investigate suspected frauds and attempts at fraud, as provided by law, $40,000.

Mr. WINDOM. The Senator is a little out of order; but there is no objection to it. The amendments of the committee are usually acted upon first. I have no objection to it, however, and it may as well be acted on now.

Mr. DAVIS. I knew I was out of order, but it would save time. There is no objection to the amendment, I understand.

Mr. SARGENT. It is all right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will be considered in order. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was in the appropriations for the Pension Office, in line 1593, after the word "for" to strike out the words "stationery, $6,000 for;" so as to read:

For carpets, mats, furniture, awnings, and repairs of the same, $2,000; for fuel, gas, engraving and retouching plates; for bounty-land warrants, printing and binding the same, engraving and printing pension certificates; for repairs of building; and for other necessary expenses of the office, including two daily newspapers, $4,500; in all, $12,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1603, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "five hundred;" in the same line, after the word "commissioner" to strike out the words "two thousand seven hundred and fifty" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1606, after the word "at" to strike out the words "two thousand seven hundred and fifty" and insert "three thousand;" in line 1617, after the word "dollars" to strike out the word "four" and insert "five;" in line 1622, after the word "languages," to strike out the word "fifteen" and insert "twenty-one;" in the same line, after the word "and" strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert "thirty-five;" in line 1624, after the word "twenty" insert "five;" in line 1629, after the word "for" to strike out the word "four" and insert "six;" in line 1630, after the word "for," to strike out the word "three" and insert "four;" in line 1632, after the word "for," to strike out the word "forty-five" and insert "forty;" in line 1634, after the word "each" to insert "three folders and pasters, at $480 each;" and in line 1635, after the word "and" to strike out the words "forty-seven thousand nine hundred" and insert "eighty-four thousand five hundred and forty;" so as to read:

United States Patent Office:

For compensation of the Commissioner of the Patent Office, $4,500; for assistant commissioner, $3,000; for chief clerk, $2,250; three examiners-in-chief, at $3,000 each; examiner in charge of interferences, $2,500; trade-mark examiner, $2,250; twenty-two principal examiners, at $2,500 each; twenty-two first assistant examiners, at $1,800 each; twenty-two second assistant examiners, at $1,600 each; twenty-two third assistant examiners, at $1,400 each; one machinist, $1,600; five clerks of class four, (one of whom shall receive $200 additional for services as financial clerk, and shall give bond in such amount as the Secretary of the Interior may determine;) five clerks of class three, one of whom shall be translator of languages; twenty-one clerks of class two; and thirty-five clerks of class one; also for twenty-five permanent clerks, at $1,000 each; for forty copyist clerks, at $900 each; for three skilled draughtsman, at $1,200 each; for one messenger and purchasing-clerk, $1,000; for one skilled laborer, $1,200; for six attendants in model-room, at $1,000 each; for four attendants in model-room, at $900 each; for forty laborers, at $720 each; for six laborers, at $600 each; three folders and pasters, at $480 each; in all, $384,540.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1639, after the word "for" to strike out the words "stationery for use of office;" as to read:

For contingent and miscellaneous expenses of the Patent Office, namely: For repair of model-cases, stationary portfolios for drawings, furniture and labor connected therewith, repairing, papering, painting, carpets, ice, advertising, books for library, moneys refunded, printing engraved patent-heads, international exchanges, plumbing, gas-fitting, extra labor on indexes and abstracts for annual reports, fitting rooms, and other contingencies, $60,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1653, after the word "draughtsmen" to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "forty;" and at the end of the clause to strike out "the work to be done under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents, who shall receive competitive bids therefor;" so as to make the clause read:

For photolithographing, or otherwise producing copies of drawings of current and back issues of the office and for sale, including pay of temporary draughtsmen, $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1660, to increase the appropriation for "photolithographing, or otherwise producing plates for the Official Gazette, including pay of employés engaged on the Gazette, and for making similar plates," from $20,000 to $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1666, after the word "done" to strike out the following words:

In the city of Washington, if as cheaply as elsewhere, under competitive bids, under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents in the city of Washington, if it can be there done at reasonable rates; and the Commissioner of Patents, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to make contracts therefor.

So as to make the clause read:

For photolithographing, or otherwise producing copies of the weekly issues of drawings, to be attached to patents and copies, $25,000; the work of the said photolithographing, or otherwise producing plates and copies, referred to in this and the two preceding paragraphs, to be done under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents and in the city of Washington, if it can be there done at reasonable rates; and the Commissioner of Patents, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to make contracts therefor.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1676, to increase the appropriation for tracings of drawings preparatory to photolithographing back issues from $10,000 to $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1686, after the word "namely" to strike out the words "stationery, $1,500;" and in line 1698, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "twelve thousand nine" and insert "eleven thousand four;" so as to read:

For contingent expenses, namely: cases for library, $500; library, $1,000; current educational periodicals, $250; other current publications, $225; completing valuable sets of periodicals and publications in the library, $200; telegraphing and expressage, $200; collecting statistics, and writing and compiling matter for annual and special reports, and editing and publishing circulars of information $8,000; fuel and lights, $275; office furniture, $.50; contingencies, $500; in all, $11,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1701, to increase the appropriation for compensation of surveyor-general of Louisiana from $1,800 to $2,000; and in line 1703, to increase the compensation for clerks in his office from $2,000 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1704, to increase the compensation of surveyor-general of Florida from $1,800 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1707, to increase the appropriation for compensation of surveyor-general of Minnesota from $1,800 to $2,000, and for the clerks in his office from $3,000 to $5,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1711, to increase the appropriation for compensation of surveyor-general of the Territory of Dakota from $1,800 to $2,000, and for the clerks in his office from $2,500 to $4,300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1716, to increase the appropriation for surveyor-general of Colorado from $2,500 to $3,000, and for the clerks in his office from $3,000 to $3,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1719, to increase the appropriation for surveyor-general of the Territory of New Mexico from $2,500 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1721, to increase the appropriation of the surveyor-general of California from $2,750 to $3,000, and for the clerks in his office from $8,000 to $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1724, to increase the appropriation for the surveyor-general of the Territory of Idaho from $2,500 to $3,000, and for the clerks in his office from $2,500 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1728, to increase the appropriation for surveyor-general of Nevada from $2,500 to $3,000, and for the clerks in his office from $2,500 to $3,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1731, to increase the appropriation for the surveyor-general of Oregon from $2,250 to $2,500 and for the clerks in his office from $3,000 to $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1736, to increase the appropriation of the surveyor-general of the Territory of Washington from $2,250 to $2,500 and for the clerks in his office from $3,000 to $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1741, to increase the appropriation for the clerks in the office of the surveyor-general of Nebraska and Iowa from $3,000 to $3,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1743, to increase the appropriation for surveyor-general of the Territory of Montana from $2,750 to $3,000, and in line 1744 to reduce the appropriation for the clerks in his office from $4,000 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1746, to increase the appropriation for surveyor-general of the Territory of Utah from $2,750 to $3,000 and for the clerks in his office from $2,500 to $3,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1751, to increase the appropriation for surveyor-general of the Territory of Wyoming from $2,750 to $3,000 and for the clerks in his office from $3,000 to $4,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1755, to increase the appropriation for surveyor-general of the Territory of Arizona from $2,750 to $3,000 and for the clerks in his office from $3,000 to $3,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out from line 1758 to line 1767, inclusive, in the following words:

That public lands situated in States in which there are no land offices may be entered at the General Land Office, subject to the provisions of law touching the entry of public lands; and that the necessary proofs and affidavits required in such cases may be made before some officer competent to administer oaths, whose official character shall be duly certified to by the clerk of a court of record; and moneys received by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for lands entered by cash entry shall be covered into the Treasury.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1787, under the head of "Post-Office Department," after the word "thousand" insert the words "one hundred;" in line 1794, after the word "four" strike out the word "sixty-three" and insert "seventy;" in the same line, after the word "three" to strike out the word "forty-eight" and insert "fifty-three;" in line 1795, after the word "two" to strike out the word "sixty-five" and insert "seventy-five;" in line 1976, after the word "fifty" insert "seven;" in line 1800, after the word "each" to strike out the word "seven" and insert "eleven;" in line 1802, after the word "dollars" to strike out "nine" and insert "fourteen;" in line 1803, after the word "each" to strike out the word "twenty-seven" and insert "thirty-seven;" and in line 1813, after the word "and" to strike out the words "43,240" and insert "85,780;" so as to read:

Chief of division of free delivery, $2,100; superintendent of blank agency, $1,800; assistant superintendent of blank agency, $1,600; four assistants of blank agency, $1,200 each; two assistants of blank agency, $900 each; stenographer, $1,800; seventeen clerks of class four; seventy clerks of class three; fifty-three clerks of class two; seventy-five clerks of class one; fifty-seven female clerks, at $900 each; one messenger to Postmaster-General, $900; three messengers to Assistant Postmasters-General $840 each; eleven assistant messengers, $720 each; captain of the watch, $1,000; fourteen watchmen, at $720 each; thirty-seven laborers, $720 each; one engineer, $1,400; one assistant engineer, $1,000; one carpenter, $1,200; one assistant carpenter, $1,000; one fireman, who shall be a blacksmith, $900; one fireman, who shall be a steam-fitter, $900; one fireman, $720; three female laborers, $480 each; and for temporary clerks, $10,000; making, in all, $485,780.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1817, after the word "stationery" to strike out the word "nine" and insert "ten;" in line 1821, after the word "painting" to strike out the word "two" and insert "five;" in line 1828, after the words "miscellaneous items" insert "$8,000;" and in the same line, immediately following, to strike out the word "including" and insert "for;" in line 1829, after the words "Official Postal Guide" to strike out "18,400" and insert "20,000;" and in line 1831, after the words "in all" to strike out the word "60,000" and insert "72,400;" so as to make the clause read:

For contingent expenses of the Post-Office Department: For stationery, $10,000; fuel for the General Post-Office building, including the Auditor's Office, $7,400; for gas, $5,000; plumbing and gas-fixtures, $3,000; telegraphing, $3,000; painting, $5,000; carpets, $3,000; furniture, $5,000; keeping of horses and repair of wagons and harness, $1,200; hardware, $1,200; and for rent of house numbered 915 E street, northwest, $1,800; and for miscellaneous items, $8,000; for publication of copies of the Official Postal Guide, $20,000; in all, $72,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 1831 to insert the following:

For furnishing and fitting up and for plumbing and gas-fixtures for the new basement story of the Post-Office Department building, $12,800, to be available immediately.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1838, under the head of "Department of Agriculture," after the word "clerk" to strike out the words "two thousand" and insert "one thousand eight hundred;" in line 1843, after the word "statistician" to strike out the words "two thousand" and insert "one thousand eight hundred;" and in line 1846, after the word "dollars" to strike out the words "lady superintendent of flower-seed room, $900;" in line 1850, after the word "four" to strike out the word "three" and insert "four;" in line 1851, after the word "three" to strike out the word "four" and insert "five;" in line 1859, after the word "and" to strike out "seven" and insert "eight;" and in line 1860, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "sixty-two thousand and twenty" and insert "sixty-four thousand six hundred and forty;" so as to read:

For compensation of the Commissioner of Agriculture, $3,000; chief clerk, $1,800; entomologist, $2,000; chemist, $2,000; assistant chemist, $1,400; superintendent of experimental gardens and grounds, $1,800; statistician, $1,800; disbursing clerk, $1,600; superintendent of seed-room, $1,600; librarian, $1,400; botanist, $1,800; microscopist, $1,800; three clerks of class four; four clerks of class three; five clerks of class two; six clerks of class one; engineer, $1,200; superintendent of folding-room, $1,200; two copyists, at $900 each; two attendants in the museum, $1,000 each; one messenger, at $840; two assistant messengers, at $720 each; one carpenter, at $960; two watchmen; and eight laborers; making, in all, $64,640.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1869, after the word "seventy" to insert the word "five;" and in line 1873, to strike out "seventy-five" and insert "eighty;" so as to make the clause read:

For purchase and distribution of new and valuable seeds and plants, $75,000; for expense of putting up the same, including purchase of one paper-box machine, for labor, bagging-paper, twine, gum, and other necessary materials, $5,000; in all, $80,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1876, to increase from $5,000 to $10,000 the appropriation "for the purchase of garden and field seeds for distribution in those States which in 1876 were ravaged by grasshoppers or locusts."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1881, to increase from $3,000 to $5,000 the appropriation "for labor on experimental garden, and for flower-pots, repairs to greenhouse, and purchase of new plants and seeds for the same."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1884, to increase from $1,000 to $2,000 the appropriation for collecting and modeling specimens of fruits and vegetables, and collecting and preparing specimens for the museum and herbarium.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1894, to increase from $1,000 to $1,300 the appropriation for chemicals and apparatus for the use of the microscopist.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1911, to increase the appropriation for marshal of the Supreme Court of the United States from $2,500 to $3,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1935, after the word "courts" to insert "including compensation of the United States district attorney;" so as to read:

For defraying the contingent expenses of the courts, including compensation of the United States district attorney, and the fees, per diem, and traveling expenses of the United States marshal in the Territory of Utah, with the expenses of summoning jurors, subpœnaing witnesses, of arresting, guarding, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1947, to increase the appropriation for the expenses of the courts, &c., of the Territory of Utah from $20,000 to $26,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1955, after the word "dollars" to insert the words "naval solicitor, $3,500;" in line 1957, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "five hundred;" in line 1958, after the word "thousand" to strike out "five" and insert "seven;" in line 1959, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "two hundred;" in line 1960, after the word "thousand" to strike out the word "six" and insert "eight;" in the same line, after the word "hundred" insert the word "dollars;" in line 1961, after the word "dollars" to strike out the word "three" and insert "five;" in line 1962, after the word "dollars" to strike out the words "two clerks" and insert "one clerk;" and in line 1966, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "seventy thousand three" and insert "seventy-seven thousand one;" so as to read:

Office of the Attorney-General:

For compensation of the Attorney-General, $8,000; solicitor-general, $7,000; three assistant attorneys-general, at $5,000 each; one assistant attorney-general of the Post-Office Department, $4,000; solicitor of internal revenue, $4,500; naval solicitor, $3,500; examiner of claims, $3,500; law-clerk and examiner of titles, $2,700; chief clerk, $2,200; stenographic clerk, $1,800; one law clerk, $2,000; five clerks of class four; additional for disbursing clerk, $200; one clerk of class two; two clerks of class one; five copyists; one telegraph-operator, at $1,000; one messenger; one assistant messenger; two laborers; and two watchmen; in all, $77,140.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1971, after the word "Department," to strike out "one" and insert "three;" in line 1972, after the word "thousand," to insert "five hundred;" in line 1974, after the word "necessaries," to strike out the words "six thousand;" and in line 1975, after the words "in all," to strike out the word "ten" and insert "fourteen;" so as to read:

For contingent expenses of the Department, namely: For furniture and repairs, $1,000; for law and miscellaneous books for the library of the Department, $4,000; for stationery, $2,500; for miscellaneous expenditures, such as telegraphing, fuel, lights, labor, and other necessaries, $7,500; in all, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1977, to increase from $500 to $1,000 the appropriation for care and subsistence of horses and repairs of wagons and harness.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1979, to increase from $10,000 to $14,000 the appropriation for the rent of the four floors of the building occupied by the Department of Justice.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1984, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "five hundred;" in line 1986, after the word "dollars" to strike out the word "two" and insert "four;" in line 1988, after the word "two" to strike out the word "three" and insert "two;" and in line 1989, after the words "in all" to strike out the words "twenty-three thousand seven" and insert "twenty-six thousand six;" so as to make the clause read:

Office of the Solicitor of the Treasury:

For compensation of the Solicitor of the Treasury, $4,500; assistant solicitor, $3,000; chief clerk, $2,000; four clerks of class four; two clerks of class three; two clerks of class two; two clerks of class one; one messenger; and one laborer; in all, $26,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the head of "Court of Claims," in line 1999, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "five hundred," and in line 2003, after the word "thousand" to insert the words "five hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

For stationery, books, fuel, labor, postage, and other contingent and miscellaneous expenses, $2,500; for reporting the decisions of the court, clerical hire, labor in preparing and superintending the printing of the twelfth volume of the Reports of the Court of Claims, to be paid on the order of the court, $1,000; in all, $3,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 2004, to insert the following:

To pay judgments of the Court of Claims, $639,410.59.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 2, in the following words:

SEC. 2. That the sums respectively appropriated by this act for the salary or compensation of officers and employés therein named shall be the salary and compensation of such officers or employés.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This concludes the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WINDOM. On page 13, lines 290 and 291, under the head of "Public Printer," I move to strike out "twelve thousand nine hundred" and insert "thirteen thousand four hundred;" so as to read:

For compensation of the Public Printer at the rate of $3,600 per annum, and of the clerks and employés in his office, $13,400.

I have only two or three little amendments that I wish to offer.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WINDOM. On page 14, line 322, under the head of the "Botanic Garden," I move to strike out "three thousand" and insert "four thousand five hundred;" so as to read:

For improving the garden, procuring manure, tools, fuel, and repairs, and purchasing trees and shrubs, under the direction of the Library Committee of Congress, $4,500.

That is the amount which was appropriated last year.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WINDOM. On page 77, in line 1877, after the word "dollars," I move to insert the words "to be available immediately;" so as to read:

For the purchase of garden and field seeds for distribution in those States which in 1876 were ravaged by grasshoppers or locusts, $10,000, to be available immediately; the same to be deducted from the foregoing appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WINDOM. On line 1663, page 68, after the word "copies," I move to strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert "thirty;" so as to read:

For photolithographing, or otherwise producing copies of the weekly issues of drawings, to be attached to patents and copies, $30,000; the work of the said photolithographer, or otherwise producing plates and copies, referred to in this and the two preceding paragraphs, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WINDOM. On line 1671, in the appropriation for photolithographing drawings attached to patents, &c., I move to strike out the words:

In the city of Washington, if it can be done at reasonable rates.

Mr. SARGENT. I do not think that is a judicious amendment.

Mr. WINDOM. I do not insist upon it. I thought that was unanimously agreed upon in committee.

Mr. SARGENT. I think it would be rather an injudicious amendment.

Mr. WINDOM. I will withdraw it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. DAVIS. Out of order as I was reminded a few moments ago I offered an amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator was decided to be in order.

Mr. DAVIS. I would inquire if the amendment which I offered was made at the time?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment was made.

Mr. DAVIS. I intended to say something on that subject, but the lateness of the hour prevents me, and the words "and necessary" being added, which gives an opportunity to the committee of conference to change it if a change is necessary, I refrain from offering myself the amendment which I intended. So much for that. Now, after line 1904, I propose an amendment which I think probably will meet with no objection. I have a letter from the Commissioner of Agriculture, which is very short, to sustain it and which I shall ask the Clerk to read, for it will explain the amendment. The amendment has been considered by the Committee on Agriculture, and also it has been before the Committee on Appropriations. I move to insert after line 1904:

For the erection of a gallery around the museum of the Agricultural Department for the reception of the contributions to it by the representatives of foreign governments at the Centennial, $2,500.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter referred to by the Senator will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

To the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate:

A very extensive contribution has been made to the museum of the Agricultural Department by the representatives of foreign governments and by some of our own States. Their value is not less than $100,000, if they could be purchased at all. Our present museum, which contains five thousand square feet, as at present occupied will not contain them. I have had an estimate made by Architect Cluss, who reports to me that a gallery may be added to the present museum which would add three thousand square feet to our surface room and would be sufficient for the reception of the contributions referred, and that such gallery would cost $2,500. I have no means of making any other disposition of these contributions; and they will be lost unless they are thus cared for. I therefore ask for the following amendment to the bill making appropriations to this Department.

Respectfully,

FREDK. WATTS,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

Mr. SARGENT. There is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KERNAN. I wish to offer an amendment and I will state briefly what I wish to accomplish by it. I move to strike out from line 729 to line 734 inclusive in the following words:

For dies, paper, and stamps, $466,000; said engraving and printing to be done in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the Treasury Department, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, provided the cost does not exceed the price paid under existing contracts.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For dies, paper, and stamps, $466,000; said engraving and printing to be done in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the Treasury Department unless it can be done at less cost under private contract, the cost in no case to exceed the price paid under existing contracts, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

My information is that this work has been done since 1874 and is still being done under contract by certain companies, some three or four of them. The bill as it reads proposes that the work shall be done by the Government in its own office. The amendment provides that the work shall be done by the Government, unless it can be done at less cost under private contract, and that in no event shall the cost by contract exceed what the existing contract is now. My information about these contracts is that they were made in 1874, when prices were higher than now, and if this amendment should prevail, these companies which have contracts with the Government and other companies will compete and the work will be satisfactorily done and at a very much lower figure than it is done now, and perhaps lower than the Government can do the work itself.

My information is not direct, however, that this change is asked for by the head of the Treasury Department. I hope we will leave the law as it is, so that the work shall be done by contract unless it can be done in the Treasury Department cheaper than it is now being done. My information and belief is that if the amendment prevails the work may be done as it is now under contract with the American Bank Note Company, the Continental Bank Note Company, and the Columbia Bank Note Company, which are competent and skillful companies, and have done the work satisfactorily. I think it is wise in every case not to attempt to get up a bureau and to hire men and buy dies and buy what they must necessarily provide themselves with to do this work, and therefore I hope the amendment will prevail.

Mr. WINDOM. I am very anxious to complete the bill to-night, and think it very important that it should be done. Not being entirely clear as to the merits of the amendment, if it is agreeable to the Senator from New York, I will consent, and ask the Senate to consent, to his amendment, and the matter may be fully investigated in the conference committee.

Mr. STEVENSON. Is this amendment in order? I differ with the Senator from New York so widely in his views about the Government employing outside companies and placing the Government at the mere beck and power of these companies that I shall raise the question of order on the reception of the amendment.

Mr. KERNAN. I believe it is in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment does not increase the appropriation, neither is it a new appropriation, and it is in order.

Mr. WITHERS. I am opposed to the amendment on principle. The Government has provided at great expense a large amount of most costly machinery and is paying the highest salaries for the most skilled workmen and keeping them here at expense for the use of the Government to do this particular kind of work; and I think while that is the case it is wrong policy to let the work be put out under private contract or given to private companies when the Government is itself provided with all the appliances and means, secured at great cost, for doing identically this work.

Mr. KERNAN. My information is different. Of course I should like to be corrected if I am wrong, but my information is that this work has been done since 1874 and is being done now under contract. The amendment which I have proposed provides that it shall be continued with these companies if the cost does not exceed the price paid under existing contracts. But one of the reasons suggested to me (for I am not familiar with the subject myself) by different persons, a member of the other House among others, who is familiar with the subject, is that instead of the Government being provided with costly apparatus, if it undertakes to do this work there will have to be provided a great deal of costly apparatus.

On principle I believe that wherever there are responsible companies or individuals who will do manufacturing work for the Government, as a rule it is better to employ them than to have a bureau where everybody knows that the men in charge are pressed to put in political favorites instead of skilled workmen. Therefore the work must be done at less cost than the Government can do it or else the amendment would not be effective. I think that all these attempts to get men in charge in the Treasury Department to do work which foreign countries employ some of these very companies to do is a mistake in principle as it is extravagant. The amendment is in the interest of what I believe to be real economy, and I trust it will prevail.

Mr. STEVENSON. I have only a word to say to the Senator from New York, and that is that the late Secretary of the Treasury, who ought to have had some experience, opposed such an amendment. I heard him say that it would be a great mistake. I heard him say that whenever the Government puts out such work under contract it is putting the Government at the power of these companies. The gentleman says they have no skilled workmen in the Treasury. I am amazed at such a statement as that. With all the bank-notes that this Government has issued during the war, with all the means and appliances in every department of printing and engraving, I had supposed that we stood in the very front rank, and it is the first time I have ever heard it stated that the printing at the Treasury was not equal to any printing anywhere else. As I have heard, and I know of my own personal knowledge, so far as some artisans engaged in the Treasury Department are concerned, they have not any superior, and I stand by the testimony of more than one Secretary of the Treasury. If the Government has gone to this expense and has the appliances, why not keep up the work at the Department? I hope the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. KERNAN. If the Senator will pardon me, of course on such a question the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury would have great weight, but are we speaking about bank-notes? I would ask the chairman of the committee if this matter does not relate to the work for the Commissioner of Internal Revenue?

Mr. WINDOM. It is for internal revenue stamps.

Mr. INGALLS. It is about the same thing, however.

Mr. KERNAN. Then I should like to know how it is the work is being done under contract. These internl-revenue stamps, as I understand, now are being furnished by contract. My amendment provides that the work must be done in the bureau unless it can be done at less cost under private contracts. The work is now being done under contract, as I understand. I am not talking about greenbacks. I have heard no complaint that the work was not done well, but on the contrary my information is, though not from the head of the Department, that it is being done cheaper, and if there was an opportunity to make new contracts now and have the companies compete, it would be cheaper still than under the existing contract. The amendment which I propose provides that if they can do it as cheap in the Treasury Department it shall not be given out under contract, and the work would not go to these companies. The amendment provides for doing the work in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the Treasury Department unless it can be done at less cost under private contract. It is an important amendment. I do not say it shall be done cheaper by the Government, but if the Government can do it as cheap the amendment leaves it to them to do it there, unless it can be done cheaper under private contract. I think if the companies are doing the work now satisfactorily we should not put it back into the Treasury unless they can do the work as cheap in the Treasury as these parties will do it. Of course I only state my opinion. I spoke of unskilled men, but I did not say that there were not skilled men in the Treasury. I did say as every Senator knows that in this Bureau of Printing and Engraving in the Treasury there is a great pressure, and people are put there who are more or less incompetent, and they are put in through favoritism, and not on account of their skill. I do not believe that is a good mode of carrying on the Government.

Mr. WITHERS. I will state to the Senator that the class to which he alludes are simply placed in the subordinate positions, but I reassert that the Government has in its employment the most skilled labor that it is possible to command and secure upon that particular class of work. These revenue-stamps which are now being printed by contract, as the Senator very truly says, require a much less amount of skill in the preparation of them than the greenbacks and bank-notes which are now printed by the Department. That they are now printed under contract is because of the immense influence brought to bear by these wealthy corporations which was sufficient to induce Congress to divide the work and give them a part of it. A year or two ago when the same subject was under consideration the intelligence derived from the Secretary of the Treasury and the chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing was that the work would be done much more conveniently and at less expense and just as well or better than if taken by these private contracts, and I think myself while it might be a question as to which were the best course to adopt, the Government having adopted the principle of doing this work itself and under its own supervision and having secured the necessary labor and machinery, they ought to carry it on.

Mr. STEVENSON. I wish to say a single word to my friend from New York. I have had some little experience in this matter. I once looked into it. It may be that these companies underbid the Government now. It is a trick of the trade for them to underbid the Government so that the Government shall give up the work, and when the Government has given up all the materials and all their skilled labor then these companies put up the price three times as high as it was before. We have heard of that sort of thing before. The object of putting down these bids is to take away the work from the Government, to persuade us to take away this printing that they may raise their prices afterward. If the Government has skilled labor enough to print and engrave such bank-notes as we have seen in circulation and in such illimitable amounts in the last ten years, it seems to me almost an absurdity to say that the Government cannot print these internal-revenue stamps. It does not require half the skill to print internal-revenue stamps that it requires to print bank-notes.

But I answer the Senator by telling him that I know the Secretary of the Treasury who preceded the present incumbent attempted to get the entire printing done in the Treasury. He believed it was right; he believed it was economical; he believed that they had the right to do the work; that they had the clerks who could distribute it without any increased force, and you would not have to send off by express work which could be done in the Department. I know that my friend desires economy, but I say to him in all frankness, when we have had the experience and testimony of the Secretary before one of the committees of the other branch of Congress, with his idea of the capacity of the Department to do the work, it seems to me unwise legislation to take away from that Department these skilled workmen and these appliances and to allow private companies to raise their prices on us. What guarantee have we that the companies will not do that? What security have we that that would not be done?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's five minutes have expired.

Mr. KERNAN. The Government has the same security that a man has——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No further debate is in order by the Senator on this amendment. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York, [Mr. KERNAN.]

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I desire to offer an amendment to which I am sure the honorable chairman of the committee will not object and I am sure no Senator here will object to it. On page 77, line 1876, I move to strike out the word "ten" and insert "thirty;" so as to increase the appropriation "for the purchase of garden and field seeds for distribution in those States which in 1876 were ravaged by grasshoppers or locusts" from $10,000 to $30,000. The amount appropriated in the former bill was $30,000 and the effect was very good, and it is certainly as small an amount as there is any reason or propriety in giving.

Mr. WINDOM. The Senator from Nebraska knows my weakness in that direction, and I think he ought not to appeal to me. I think, however, we cannot sustain an amendment at $30,000, deducting it from the appropriation for seeds in the previous paragraph.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I think that is a proper deduction, and that Congress should make the same appropriation that it made before independently of the other appropriation for the distribution of seeds. They made the appropriation before, and the effect was good.

Mr. WINDOM. I am aware of the necessity of the amendment, and will go with the Senator as far as any other Senator will.

Mr. SARGENT. Would it not be better to strike out the succeeding words, "the same to be deducted from the foregoing appropriation?"

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I would be very glad to make that modification of my amendment, if it is agreeable to the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator certainly does not mean to deprive the whole country of a large proportion of the seeds that have been distributed annually heretofore, and apply it to a particular section of country. The bill already takes from that appropriation $10,000.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. That has been made already; but my amendment would make it independent of that appropriation as I have accepted the suggestion of the Senator from California.

Mr. INGALLS. I very heartily concur with the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska. I know as well as he does the wants of the section of the country which during the past two or three years has been ravaged by locusts; and it is the most fertile, the most populous, and one of the most valuable portions of this entire country, comprising a very large proportion of the entire valley of the Mississippi. The agricultural products of that region have been damaged to the extent of not less than forty millions of dollars annually for several years last past; and it is certainly a very small contribution that Congress can make to furnish them with the means of seeding their ground anew. I hope there will be no objection to the amendment. I am sure it is one that will commend itself to the consideration of every Senator.

Mr. WINDOM. I certainly make no objection to it.

Mr. INGALLS. It will commend itself, I am confident, to the approbation and judgment of the entire country.

Mr. DAVIS. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 1876 it is proposed to strike out "ten" and insert "thirty" and to strike out the words "the same to be deducted from the foregoing appropriation;" so as to read:

For the purchase of garden and field seeds for distribution in those States which in 1876 were ravaged by grasshoppers or locusts, $30,000, to be available immediately.

Mr. DAVIS. That is a very extravagant amount. If the Senator will make it $20,000 I shall not object to his amendment.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I believe $30,000 is too small.

Mr. DAVIS. It is an extravagant amount. Other portions of the country have suffered, as well as the West, not from grasshoppers so much but from the army-worm and other things which have destroyed the crops in other sections, and I see no reason why a particular section of the country should be singled out and favored.

Mr. SARGENT. Make it $25,000.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I will agree to make it $25,000.

Mr. DAVIS. Very well.

Mr. WITHERS. No, sir.

Mr. DAVIS. If it is in order, I will move to strike out $30,000 and insert $20,000.

Mr. INGALLS. O, no.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska to fix the appropriation at $20,000.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time. The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SARGENT. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Several SENATORS. O, no.

Mr. SARGENT. We ought to have about five minutes of executive session. There are matters that ought to be referred to committee.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not object.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After ten minutes spent in executive session the doors were re-opened, and (at five o'clock and fifty minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Thursday, February 22, at ten o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, February 21, 1877.

The Senate having withdrawn,

The SPEAKER (at twelve o'clock and fifty-one minutes p. m.) again called the House to order, and said: The Chair decides that a new legislative day now commences. The Chaplain will offer prayer.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. I. L. TOWNSEND.

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. No. 4680) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. KASSON. Let all points of order be reserved on the bill.

The SPEAKER. Points of order will be reserved.

Mr. HOLMAN. This is the same bill which is printed in the RECORD this morning. I propose to move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering this bill, but there are several gentlemen who wish to submit business to which there will be no objection and which will occupy no time. I am willing to yield for this purpose.

ELECTION IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. SAYLER. The committee appointed to investigate the recent election in South Carolina have directed me to submit a report and to ask that it be printed and recommitted. I am also directed to ask that the report may be printed in the RECORD, so that it may be of use to members at once. In the same connection I ask that the minority, whose views are not quite prepared, may have leave to report hereafter at any time.

Mr. FOSTER. And that the minority report when presented be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. SAYLER. There is no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the report just presented by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAYLER] will be ordered to be printed and recommitted, and also printed in the RECORD; and leave will be granted to the minority of the committee to report at any time hereafter, and have their views printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly.

The report presented by Mr. SAYLER is as follows:

REPORT OF THE MAJORITY OF THE COMMITTEE.

The select committee of the House to investigate the recent election in the State of South Carolina, appointed under a resolution of the House, passed on the 4th day of December, 1876, in the following words, to wit:

"Resolved, That three special committees, one of fifteen members to proceed to Louisiana, one of six members to proceed to Florida, and one of nine members to proceed to South Carolina, shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House to investigate recent elections therein and the action of the returning or canvassing boards in the said States in reference thereto, and to report all the facts essential to an honest return of the votes received by the electors of said States for President and Vice-President of the United States, and to a fair understanding thereof by the people; and that for the purpose of speedily executing this resolution the said committee shall have power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to take testimony, and, at their discretion, to detail subcommittees, with like authority to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to take testimony; and that the said committees and their subcommittees may employ stenographers, clerks, and messengers, and be attended each by a deputy sergeant-at-arms; and said committees shall have leave to report at any time, by bill or otherwise"— beg leave to submit the following report:

Your committee, upon their appointment, proceeded at once to South Carolina, and arrived at Columbia Thursday, December 7. They immediately took means to obtain copies of all the proceedings before the courts of the State and United States, growing out of the recent election and the count of the votes cast thereat, and also copies of all the election laws of the State.

ELECTION LAWS.

By legislative enactment each county is divided into election precincts, there being in all four hundred and ninety-two precincts in the thirty-two counties of the State. The county commissioners of election appoint three managers for each precinct, who preside at the election, receive the votes, and at the close of the polls proceed publicly to count the same and make a return of the vote, before separating to the county commissioners of election, together with the ballots. The three county commissioners of election who constitute a county board of canvassers, are appointed by the governor; all of the returns of the precinct managers are made to them, and they proceed to canvass the votes of the county, by precincts, as they appear by the returns of the managers. Having ascertained the result for the whole county, it is returned, under their hands, with all the papers, to the board of State canvassers. Two of each precinct managers and two of each county commissioners were republicans and one on each board a democrat. Very clearly neither of the three boards had anything but a purely ministerial duty to perform: the managers to count the votes and make due return thereof and the commissioners of election to aggregate the returns of the precinct managers and make a true return of such aggregation to the board of State canvassers.

THE BOARD OF STATE CANVASSERS was composed of the secretary of state, comptroller-general, attorney-general, State auditor, State treasurer, adjutant-general and inspector, and chairman of the committee on privileges and elections of the house of representatives. Of these the secretary of state, comptroller-general, and State treasurer were candidates for re-election, and as such passed upon all the questions involved in their own election. Their duty was, "upon certified copies of the statements made by the board of county canvassers, to proceed to make a statement of the whole number of votes given at the election for the various officers and for each of them voted for, distinguishing the several counties in which they were given." Upon "such statements, they shall then proceed to determine and declare what persons have been, by the greatest number of votes, duly elected to office." They shall also "have power and it is made their duty to decide all cases under protest or contest that may arise, when the power to do so does not by the constitution reside in some other body." The constitution provides specifically for only two cases for determining elections. One is that of governor and lieutenant-governor, when the returns are to be sent to the speaker of the house of representatives, who is to open and publish them in the presence of the house and senate, and in case of contest the same is to be decided by the General Assembly. The other is the election of members of the house of representatives and senate, when "each house shall judge of the election, returns, and qualifications of its own members." It is clear that the best possible way of obtaining the result of the votes cast in South Carolina at the last election was from the returns of the managers of election at the different precincts. Those officers were to count the votes publicly as soon as the polls closed, and make a certificate of such count before separating. Of course these returns would be the best way of ascertaining the votes cast if they were made honestly and with truthfulness. Your committee obtained statements of the result of the vote for presidential electors in each precinct in the State from the secretary of state, where any could be placed on file.

MISSING RETURNS.

At first there was an entire absence of managers' returns from more than thirty precincts. From time to time during the investigation some of the absent returns were found, so that there were but twenty-five precincts for which no returns were produced. The committee also obtained a copy of a statement of the vote of the State, as canvassed by the State board from the returns of the county commissioners, and compared it with those returns from each county, and it was found to be correct. It was proven, indeed admitted, that when the State board commenced their canvass they not only took the result as given by the county canvassers but also the result from the canvass of the managers' returns from the different precincts, and proceeded to canvass by precincts through the first six counties. In these counties the results obtained from the precinct returns were materially different from the results as given by the county commissioners' returns, and were such as to elect one or two electors on the democratic ticket instead of the whole of the republican ticket. At this point the State canvassers decided to abandon the canvass by precinct returns. This was done against the protest of those representing the democratic party. A request in writing was also made in behalf of the democrats for permission to examine the precinct returns and take copies of them, but this was refused.

THE VOTE CAST.

Your committee by testimony supplied the place of all the missing returns, so that they were enabled satisfactorily to show the vote as it was cast and counted in each precinct. Many mistakes and irregularities were found in the different returns. Some of them were signed by one and some by two managers; but if all the returns affected by such irregularities were rejected, it would not change the result. There were several cases where no votes appeared to be cast for some of the candidates and others where the votes were returned as having been cast for Hayes and Wheeler and Tilden and Hendricks instead of for the electors. It was proven in all such cases that the votes were properly cast for the electors. The result by thus ascertaining the votes cast at all the precincts, and correcting the mistakes made by the managers in the returns, is as follows:

REPUBLICAN ELECTORS.

Bowen	92,093
Winsmith	92,123
Johnson	92,140
Hurley	92,122
Nash	92,097
Cook	92,110
Meyers	92,124

DEMOCRATIC ELECTORS.

Baker	91,240
McGowan	91,262
Harrington	91,236
Ingram	91,246
Wallace	91,246
Erwin	91,247
Aldrich	61,200

This gives Bowen, who received the smallest vote on the republican ticket, 92,093 votes, over McGowan, who received the largest vote on the democratic ticket, 91,262 votes, a majority of 831. Your committee believe that they have obtained with substantial accuracy the number of votes cast, so far as it can be obtained from the present managers' returns, but no opinion is advanced upon the truth and accuracy of these returns.

The law of South Carolina passed in 1875 divided the counties into precincts and provided that all the elections should be held at the voting-precincts so established. It established in the seventeen voting-precincts, naming Abbeville Court House and fifteen other places. Thus, although it was enacted that there should be "seventeen voting-precincts as follows," the names of but sixteen were given. The same mistake was made in the several statutes in some of the other counties. In several of the other counties provision was made for from two to four voting-places in the county seat, usually called the "court-house," as "Abbeville Court House," in the county of the same name, but in all these instances they were carefully specified as Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4. Previous to the election the commissioners of election for this county, having no manner of power by law in the premises, in addition to the voting-precincts provided in the statute at Abbeville Court House, ordered another precinct to be established in the same town called No. 2. This action was protested against by the democratic member of the board of commissioners, who also took the opinion of counsel and presented it to his associates, setting forth such action to be illegal and unauthorized, but the two republican commissioners persisted and the voting-place was established, and 432 votes were there cast for the republican electors and 10 for the democratic electors, giving a majority of 422 to the republicans. Your committee are of the opinion that this voting-place was illegal and unauthorized, and that no votes cast there should be received or counted.

COUNTY OF ABBEVILLE

ROBBINS'S PRECINCT.

An attempt was also made by the board of State canvassers to count the vote alleged to have been given at the precinct of Robbins in the county of Barnwell. No returns by any managers of election were claimed to have been made to the county board, and no vote from that precinct was ever counted by the county canvassers. A paper purporting to be a return, signed by only one of the managers, and by another person never appointed as manager, and by a republican supervisor under the law of Congress, was sent to the secretary of state, who, when the State board was canvassing the counties by precincts, produced this paper from the package containing the genuine returns of Barnwell County, as if it had been sent with the others. The attention of the board was called to the fact that this return was irregular and void, and had not been received from the county canvassers, and it was not counted at that time. The facts in reference to the election at this precinct are these: The polls were opened about eight o'clock a. m., and kept open until between twelve and one o'clock, when the polling-place was fired into from the edge of the brush. About fifteen shots were fired. During the forenoon a large portion of the democratic vote had been polled. At the time of the firing there were four whites and three colored persons in the polling-place. The whites were men of standing and property in the neighborhood. The polling-place was abandoned because of the firing, and the voting ceased. One witness, who is not contradicted, testified that a short time before the firing began he saw five or six negroes, armed with guns, in the edge of brush in the direction from whence the firing came. His attention was attracted by the guns, as all parties had agreed that no guns should be carried on the day of election. Several witnesses testified when the voting was thus abandoned about half the usual votes of the precinct had been cast. All the people and officers of election immediately left, and nothing further was done at the regular voting-place, and no return of the votes cast there was ever made. The return which was sent to the secretary of state, and produced by him among the genuine precinct returns, was signed as above stated. This return gave the republican ticket 1,317 votes, and none for the democratic ticket. The only manager signing it could not be obtained as a witness, although many efforts were made to procure his attendance. One witness testified that he was ill, but the committee are satisfied that this was a pretense and that he was evading the subpœna, not wishing to testify. The republican supervisor, Mott, who signed the returns, testified that Burt and Allen opened the polls about one o'clock p. m. at an abandoned school-house, from a quarter to half a mile removed from the legal polling-place, and closed it from five to six o'clock. That during this time 1,317 voters deposited their ballots, and that each person separately took the oath before voting. No polling-list was produced showing the names of those voting. No person in the neighborhood knew of such poll being opened, or heard of it, until several days afterward, and no person saw or heard anything of this usual assemblage of voters, although respectable witnesses from the neighborhood were called. The vote cast at Robbins in 1874 was 366, and the supervisor at that election testified that this was the full vote of both parties. If the 1,317 votes claimed to have been cast at the Robbins poll are added to the vote of the county, there will be about 800 more votes cast than there were voters in the county in 1875. Not a single person of the thirteen hundred and seventeen, who, it is claimed, cast their votes at the deserted school-house, could be found to testify that he was one of them who voted. The committee are satisfied that no voting took place at the school-house, and the whole matter was purely a fabrication and fraud for the purpose of affecting the election in the county and State. There was no evidence that the democrats had any motive for breaking up the poll, and it is hardly to be supposed that the whites would fire into the polling-places when a majority of those present consisted of their own friends. The testimony that a squad of armed blacks was seen in the brush, from where the firing came, a very short time before it began, was not controverted, and your committee are satisfied it was true, and that the intention was, on the part of persons interested in the county vote, to break up the regular poll, and then substitute fraudulent votes and return, just as the attempt was made. Your committee consider it highly improbable, indeed impossible, that 1,317 voters could have voted in from three to four hours, each one taking an oath, and that such an assemblage could have gathered in the neighborhood and not have been known to those residing there. The number of votes cast is also incredibly large. Four times the number cast in 1874, when a full vote was polled, cannot be explained or accounted for. It was proven that another polling-place, Canaan's Fair Church, adjoining Robbins, did not hold an election, and it was claimed that the voters from that place might have voted at Robbins. No attempt, however, was made to substantiate this assertion. There were several other precincts as near Canaan's Fair Church as Robbins, and the usual vote of that precinct is only about two hundred, so that if all had voted at the school-house, together with all the voters of Robbins, one-half the number returned could not be accounted for. But, admitting the facts as claimed, the return is utterly illegal and ought not to be counted. But one out of the three managers was present, and the election was not held at the place prescribed by law. Your committee are satisfied that no votes were ever cast as claimed, and that no second polling-place was ever opened, and that the whole return was a fraud gotten up to insure the election of county and State candidates on the part of the republicans.

REGISTRATION.

The constitution of South Carolina, adopted in 1868, provides in article 8, section 3, "that it shall be the duty of the General Assembly to provide, from time to time, for the registration of all electors." The General Assembly and the entire State government, from the time of the adoption of the constitution down to the present day, has been wholly under the control and in possession of the republican party. Notwithstanding the mandate of the constitution, the General Assembly has persistently refused to "provide for any registration of voters." It has made many laws regulating elections, and the manner of conducting them—indeed, the whole machinery of elections has been carefully provided for, except the single measure most important to protect the purity of the ballot-box, and the only one specifically named in the constitution. Not only has registration been omitted, but other provisions have been made, which, taken in connection with this omission, can only be accounted for upon the supposition that the party in power has designedly refused to perform a constitutional duty, for fraudulent and corrupt purposes—indeed, to enable it to keep possession of the government. The different counties, as has been stated, are divided into precincts, one into as many as fifty or more, many into from fifteen to thirty, and none into less than seven. By the law enacted by the General Assembly, instead of registering, any voter can vote at any precinct in the county of which he is a resident. If any better method could be devised to render easy the perpetration of frauds on the ballot-box by repeating, in fact, to encourage them, your committee has failed to discover it. There is no doubt that where there are large numbers of colored voters there is much repeating, it being almost impossible to identify such voters. Under such circumstances it is worthy of your consideration, whether any officials who are to participate in the election of a chief magistrate, or in making laws for the whole country, should be recognized when they only claim an election when the constitutional mandate to provide for a registration of voters has been utterly disregarded. Take the case of the presidential electors claiming to have been elected in November last. Their vote may decide who shall be Chief Magistrate of five and forty millions of people, most of them not citizens of South Carolina. Before they can exercise such a right ought it not to be determined whether they have been appointed in compliance with or in defiance of law? They are to be appointed by the State, in such manner as the Legislature may direct. No doubt the Legislature may choose them, because the Legislature represents the State—(and is the State for such a purpose)—but if the Legislature does not appoint them, then the only other manner in which the State can appoint them under a republican form of government is by the votes of the citizens thereof, under the provisions of law. The appointment must be by the State; the Legislature can only direct the manner of appointment, but the appointment must still be by the State. There are but two ways in which the State can appoint; one is by the Legislature, and one by the choice of its citizens entitled to vote under the constitution. In this case the appointment by the State is by the election of the voters. In order that such appointment should be legal, it must be in compliance with the constitution and not in conflict with it.

But in this case the constitution requires that the Legislature shall provide for a registration of voters, to prevent fraud at elections, and the Legislature undertakes to provide for the appointment of electors by vote of the people without registration. It would seem clear that this was not an appointment by the State when it was in conflict with the constitution. It may well be that so far as the State itself is concerned and its own officers, a failure to establish registration would not vitiate the election. It may well be said that the Legislature represents and in part is the State, and if they refuse to perform their duty it is the refusal of the people, and so the election should not fail. But different considerations apply to members of Congress and presidential electors. Those officers are to take part in making laws for the whole country, or electing its Chief Magistrate. The constitution of the State, the organic law, provides and requires a registration of voters in order to preserve the purity of elections. Can officers elected without compliance with the requirements of the organic law be permitted to affect the rights of others outside the State? Why not require a compliance with the State's own organic law before permitting them to control in part the rights of the rest of the country by their action? They have been elected in violation of the highest law; can they on such an election claim to exercise the powers of the office? If a statute had provided for a registration, and they had been elected without any, it is clear that such an election would have been invalid. Why is a statute to be held more sacred than the constitution itself under which the statute is made? It has been repeatedly held by this House in cases of contested elections, and the same has been held in almost every State, that if the laws require a registration and none is made in any particular voting-precinct, the votes of such precinct must be thrown out. In one case where the registration was made, though not used at the election, it was declared void; although it was proven that no person voted whose name was not on the registration, strict justice and any rule of fairness, a proper regard for the purity of elections would seem to demand that if a State by its constitution from public policy, and to protect the purity of elections, required a registration of voters, and none was had, that no person elected in violation of such mandate of the constitution to participate in making laws or electing a Chief Magistrate for the whole country should be recognized as legally chosen. Before South Carolina claims, through her Representatives, to help make laws for the people of her sister States, or through her electors to participate in the election of a President of the Republic, she ought in justice to be held to comply with the provisions of her own constitution to secure a just and honest election. Every consideration of public policy, where the very existence of a government like ours must depend on preserving the purity of the ballot, would require that any election held in willful violation of a constitutional provision, made only to secure honest voting, should be treated as void and of no effect. That the recent election in South Carolina was held in violation of the mandate of the constitution is clear. That it was so held that the party in power might better retain its hold on the government your committee have no doubt. That great frauds were committed there by reason of such refusal to set up the great safeguard of registration your committee think is equally clear. Under these circumstances it is for the House of Representatives to consider what effect is to be given to an election so held.

MILITARY INTERFERENCE.

It was proven that a large number of United States soldiers were stationed in many different places in South Carolina for some weeks previous to the election and remained until after it. The pretense of thus stationing troops in the State and keeping them there until after the election was to preserve the peace and prevent violence growing out of the political issues to be passed upon by the people at the election. The fact of troops being sent to the State was used to overawe the colored people and prevent them from voting the democratic ticket. They were told the troops had been sent there to compel the blacks to vote the republican ticket and to shoot all those who voted for the democrats. Their presence undoubtedly had its influence and effect on the election. One of two propositions is true beyond question. Either the troops were sent to South Carolina without any legal and justifiable cause, for political purposes and to overawe a portion of the voters, or there was a state of violence and turbulence amounting to insurrection against the State, and which the State authorities could not deal with and restrain. If either proposition is taken as the true one, no election was held in that State, certainly for members of Congress and presidential electors, who are to participate in making laws for or choosing a Chief Magistrate for the rest of the country should be recognized as valid. If the troops were sent there without legal cause for political purposes, to control the election, to overawe the voters, clearly an election held under such circumstances should not stand for a moment. To uphold it would be at war with all sense of right and would shock every fair mind. An election to be valid must be free. No awe of military power at an election to interfere with or in any way to control or influence it should be tolerated for a moment. On the contrary, if there was such a state of turbulence and violence, amounting to insurrection against the State government, which the authorities could not put down and restrain except by calling in the aid of United States troops, your committee think it clear that an election held under such circumstances cannot be taken to be valid. In no sense is it a free election where an insurrection exists against the State government that can only be kept down by national troops. The people are not in a condition to take part in legislating for the whole country or in electing its Chief Magistrate. An election under such circumstances would be worse than a fraud: it would bring our institutions into disgrace and contempt.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE COURTS.

As has been before stated, the committee obtained copies of all the proceedings in the courts growing out of the election and counting the votes cast thereat. The first was a proceeding in behalf of The State at the relation of Sims and others, claiming to have been duly elected to certain State officers, vs. The Board of State Canvassers, for writs of mandamus and prohibition directing that board to aggregate the county commissioners' returns and give the certificates of election according to such aggregation, and prohibiting them from deciding contests and protests in reference to any office voted for. Such proceedings were had in that case that the court ordered the board to aggregate the county canvassers' returns for all State officers except governor and lieutenant-governor and return a statement of such aggregation into court. This was done. The court then issued a writ of peremptory mandamus to the board, commanding them to declare duly elected to the offices of senators and members of the house of representatives the persons who by the returns of the board to the court had received the greatest number of votes therefor, and to deliver a certified statement thereof to the secretary of state, who was to make a proper record thereof and transmit a copy thereof, under his seal of office, to each person declared thereby to be elected and a like copy to the governor, and to make a like copy to be printed in one or more newspapers. A writ of mandamus was issued and served on the members of the board. Before it was actually served on them, but when they knew the proceedings were still pending before the supreme court and after they had passed a resolution which was filed in the case that "they would not act on any proposition until the question of their powers and duties was decided by the supreme court," the board issued certificates of election to all members of the General Assembly who had the highest number of votes except to those from two counties, to whom they refused to give any certificates; and they then dissolved the board. This refusal was made upon ex parte statements only and affidavits, no opportunity being given to the parties interested to be heard, to examine the persons making the affidavits, or to contradict them, indeed no proof being offered of the genuine character of the affidavits acted on. This act gave a majority of both branches of the Legislature to the republicans. Giving the certificates as ordered by the court would have given the house of representatives to the democrats, with a majority in joint convention with the senate. For this act the members of the board were declared to be in contempt and were ordered to pay a fine and be imprisoned. A writ of habeas corpus was sued out from the circuit court of the United States, and the members of the board were thus liberated during its pendency. Finally judgment was given on that writ discharging the petitioners from the commitment. The committee have no doubt that the duties of the board of State canvassers, so far as counting the votes for members of the General Assembly was concerned, was purely ministerial, whatever may have been their duty and right as to the other officers. The act, as has been stated, only gave them the right to decide protests and contests "when the power to do so does not by the constitution reside in some other body." The constitution expressly provides that "each house shall be the judge of the election, returns, and qualifications of its own members." The words, "of the election-returns," are significant not of the election but of the returns of the election, clearly indicating that the election-returns themselves were to be judged of by the house. The statute incidentally intended to except the members of the Assembly from the power to decide protests or contests by the State board of canvassers because by the constitution the "power to do so resided in another body." The committee has no doubt that the court had full power and authority to compel the board to perform this purely ministerial duty, and that the interference of the judge of the circuit court was unauthorized by law and his proceedings therein and the opinion by which he attempted to justify his judgment are calculated to throw discredit on the administration of justice and weaken the confidence of the people in the courts.

A proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto was also instituted in the supreme court in favor of the democratic electors against the republican electors. This has been recently dismissed. There was also a petition for a mandamus at the relation of William Wallace, the speaker of the democratic house of representatives, against the secretary of state, to order the delivering of the returns of votes for governor and lieutenant-governor to him as provided for by the constitution, he claiming to be the speaker of the only legal house, and that the other house was an illegal body and had no authority as a part of the General Assembly. The court decided that Wallace was the speaker of the only legal house of representatives and that the other body was illegal, with no authority as a part of the General Assembly; in fact, usurpers. Before the service of process, however, the votes had been delivered to the speaker of the illegal body claiming to be the house, that house had counted them, rejecting the votes from two counties entirely on ex parte affidavits and declaring Chamberlain elected. And on such a declaration he was inaugurated and kept in office entirely by the authority and power of United States troops. The State-house was also taken possession of with the aid of United States troops by this body (declared to be illegal by the highest court of the State) and was held by them, a body of soldiers being quartered in it night and day until the final adjournment of this body. Thus the military power of the United States was used to uphold the authority of a body declared to be usurpers by the highest court of the State. It would be difficult to imagine a greater crime against liberty and law than thus using the soldiers of the United States to force an usurping governor and Legislature upon the people. The committee think that the employment of the soldiers of the United States in South Carolina for this purpose of sustaining a usurping legislature and executive against the judgment of the highest court of the State, one of the gravest crimes that can be committed under a government like ours, and it cannot be condemned in terms too strong.

CONTEST FOR THE STATE GOVERNMENT.

Another writ of habeas corpus was issued from the circuit court in behalf of Peter Smith, a convict, who had been pardoned by Governor Chamberlain, and whom the superintendent of the penitentiary refused to discharge on the ground that Chamberlain was not the legal governor. The judge refused the discharge. He found as a fact however, that General Hampton was legally elected; that the house of representatives of which Mackey was speaker was an illegal body, wholly without authority to count the votes and declare Chamberlain to be elected; but that he held over until his successor was legally inaugurated, and that General Hampton, although legally chosen, had not been legally inaugurated. No question has ever been made that General Hampton did not receive from eleven to twelve hundred majority of the votes cast, applying to the counting the same rules adopted by the committee in ascertaining the votes cast for electors. He has substantially been declared legally and constitutionally entitled to the office by the highest court in the State, composed entirely of republicans, and by the decision of the circuit court judge, also a republican. The action of the house of representatives in declaring Governor Chamberlain elected has been decided by the same courts to be illegal, and that the members of that body were usurpers of the rightful authority which belonged to the body of which Wallace is speaker. This usurping legislative body and the governor were put into power and kept there by the military force of the United States. Had that force not been used the decision of the highest court would have been upheld, the rightful Legislature and governor would have been inaugurated in peace, and the present conflict would not have arisen. A great wrong against the whole spirit and policy of our institutions has been committed by thus using the troops of the United States, first, to impose upon one of those States a usurping executive and Legislature never chosen by the people, and then to maintain them in power against right and law. In the judgment of your committee this has been done in South Carolina.

INTIMIDATION AND VIOLENCE.

Much evidence was taken before the three subcommittees upon the subject of intimidation and violence previous to and during the election. Evidence was also introduced to prove that there had been many homicides and other wrongs committed upon colored people by the whites, which had never been punished by process of law. The condition of affairs in the State for the last ten years has been such that much turbulence and disorder would be natural and to be expected. The government has been completely and entirely in the hands of and under the control of the republicans, in every department, executive, legislative, and judicial. It would be difficult to conceive of a worse government than the one that has cursed this State for the last ten years. Its debt has been increased, its treasury has become bankrupt and its credit ruined. An instance of this came to the knowledge of the committee. Copies of papers from the secretary of state's office were requested by the committee as soon as they could be obtained, and the answer was that work on them could not be done at night, as the gas company had cut off the gas, refusing to furnish it on the credit of the State. The superintendent of the lunatic asylum also gave notice while your committee was there that the inmates must be discharged, as the State had neither money nor credit to furnish supplies. It is understood that this want was afterward supplied by the voluntary payment of taxes to Governor Hampton. Of course taxes have been so increased as to become ruinous to property-holders. It is claimed by republicans themselves that no protection for the lives and property of colored people has been afforded by the republican governments. It was to be expected from the condition of affairs at the close of the war, when not only the mass of the people were reduced to comparative poverty, but society itself was disorganized, that there would be much disorder and violence. Under the best possible conditions of government, to suddenly emancipate the slaves, who were in a majority and necessarily from their condition unfitted either by education or habit to exercise the right and franchise of governing themselves or others, would be attended by difficulties great enough if the highest wisdom governed all parties. A few unprincipled men from the Northern States, together with a still smaller number of worse men, natives of the State, taking advantage of the ignorance and prejudice of the negroes, obtained power, which they used, not to give protection to the people, but for their own aggrandizement. Perhaps the best evidence of the utter unfitness of the State government for the last ten years is furnished by this claim of the republicans that it has not protected the blacks, who are in a majority, from great wrongs and violence, which to a certain extent is true. If the government cannot protect the majority of the people, it is a conclusive reason for surrendering up its trust to other hands. This state of things of course created great bitterness of feeling throughout the State, and undoubtedly found expression in some unjustifiable acts. Your committee is satisfied that all the democratic candidates, headed by General Hampton and the State committee, the organ of the party, together with all the influential men, exerted their whole influence in favor of a peaceful canvass and a perfectly free election. This is quite apparent from the testimony and speeches of General Hampton and the testimony of Colonel Haskell, chairman of the democratic State committee, General Connor, General Butler, and others. That there was great intimidation and violence resorted to by the blacks toward their own people to prevent them from voting the democratic ticket was proven beyond question. Your committee has no doubt, upon the evidence, that a much larger number of blacks were kept from voting the democratic ticket by the threats, violence, and intimidation from people of their own race than were prevented from voting the republican ticket by a resort to like measures on the part of the whites. Many cases of threats and actual violence were proven as coming from colored people to deter men of their own race from voting with the democrats. Women utterly refused to have any intercourse with men of their own race who voted against the republicans. One instance was proven of the actual desertion by a wife with the children of a husband because he made campaign speeches for the democrats. An examination of the vote in detail will show conclusively that no large number of voters were kept from voting in any way. The colored people cast a larger vote for the republicans than ever before, and a larger proportion of the voters actually voted than in any other State. The increase of votes was no more where the democrats controlled than in those places where the republicans were largely in the majority. Both parties cast votes at every voting-place, and there was no precinct where there were not some colored republican votes.

The testimony coming from the officers of the Army is very significant and important in this connection. It not only shows that there was no considerable intimidation or violence, either before or at the election, but it is in direct conflict with most of the testimony of the colored people called to testify as to the same places. It is the strongest proof of the utter unreliability of the witnesses called to prove intimidation of the blacks by the whites.

OATH-BOUND SOCIETIES.

To prevent the colored people from voting the democratic ticket they were enrolled in secret societies, called the Laborers' League, formerly the Union League. All the members of these societies are compelled to take an oath to support the republican party and vote the republican ticket. These societies are numerous. It was not ascertained what were the other objects of these organizations, nor what penalties were incurred by a violation of the oath. The State, too, was crowded, in addition to the Army, with United States deputy marshals and supervisors of election. Fully fifteen hundred of these officials were stationed on election day at the various precincts in the State. Many of these men certainly acted as electioneering agents for the party in power. Many, if not most, of them were so ignorant that they could not read their own commissions and the printed instructions issued by the Attorney-General. They were unfitted in every way to be charged with preserving the peace of the community at a time of so much excitement. Indeed the whole influence of the State government and its officials, and of all the United States office-holders, was brought to bear on the people to carry the election for the republican party. In addition a considerable portion of the Army of the United States was freely used for some weeks before the election, together with the cloud of deputy marshals, to accomplish the same purpose. In this connection your committee feel bound to say that the conduct and bearing of the officers and soldiers of the United States was both prudent and wise. Although their presence was made available to overawe the colored voters and prevent them from voting against the republicans, yet as a general thing, so far as your committee could ascertain, neither the officers nor men did anything to give encouragement to such a belief. That a people impoverished by ten years of bad government were enabled to throw a clear majority against their oppressors, in the largest vote ever cast, and under such circumstances, is the best evidence of the absolute necessity felt for a change. Your committee believe that in no other way can peace, prosperity, and protection to all, particularly to the colored race, be so surely restored and securely established in South Carolina as by recognizing the government legally elected by the people, of which General Hampton is the head, as the de facto as well as the de jure State government. It is pledged before the whole country to mete out exact justice and protection equally to blacks and whites, and it will have the power and strength to do so, while the present government, like its predecessors, has no power to protect the people and is so utterly weak that nothing but the moral power of the support of the General Government keeps it in existence a single day. Take this wrongful support from Chamberlain's unlawful government, and it will quickly vanish, like dew before the sun, and no longer disturb the peace of an oppressed and long-suffering people.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO BRIBE AN ELECTOR.

After the return of the committee, at the suggestion of some member thereof, Nash, one of the electors from South Carolina, was summoned as a witness. He testified that Colonel Childs, president of the South Carolina National Bank, sent for him on the day the electoral college organized and offered him a large sum of money to obtain the vote of three State senators to seat certain other members of the senate, and also $10,000 to promise to vote for Mr. Tilden in the electoral college and $40,000 more when it was consummated. Nash says that he refused the offers; that he was urged by Childs, and finally agreed to meet him again at another time to discuss the question, but that he failed to do so. He testified that he left Childs on entirely friendly terms, and that his friendly relations and intercourse have never been changed in the slightest degree or interrupted by this gross attempt to buy him like an article of merchandise in the market. This testimony was uncorroborated. Colonel Childs was summoned, but the committee received a certificate from his attending physician that he was unable to attend on account of illness. He has made an affidavit denying the testimony of Nash. Your committee attach no credit or weight to Nash's testimony. A person who could permit such an offer to be made to him without resenting it, on the contrary consenting to meet the proposer a second time to consult about it, and who had kept up his friendly relations with the person who had made so wicked and disgraceful a proposition, would most certainly have taken the $50,000 if it had been within his power to do it. Besides your committee is satisfied that a person who has so little sense of decency, honesty, and propriety as to openly confess that so disgraceful an offer, the most insulting, decidedly, one could receive, did not alter his friendly feelings toward or relations with the person making it, cannot be trusted or believed with safety. Evidently he is so wanting in self-respect, in a sense of duty, in all idea of what constitutes honesty, right, and even common decency that it would be utterly unsafe to put the slightest reliance on his statements, uncorroborated by other testimony.

REPORTS OF SUBCOMMITTEES.

Your committee also present the following reports of the majority of each of the two subcommittees that proceeded to Charleston for the purpose of taking testimony. Said reports are fully concurred in and made part of the report of the majority of the committee.

MILTON SAYLER, Ohio.
J. G. ABBOTT, Massachusetts.
ALEX. G. COCHRANE, Pennsylvania.
JOHN R. EDEN, Illinois.
THOS. L. JONES, Kentucky.
JNO. F. PHILIPS, Missouri.

REPORTS OF SUBCOMMITTEES.

To Hon. MILTON SAYLER, Chairman:

The subcommittee which went to Charleston, and of which Hon. ALEXANDER G. COCHRANE, chairman, and Hon. THOMAS L. JONES constituted a majority, submit the following report:

The subcommitte arrived in Charleston on the 20th of December, and immediately proceeded with an investigation of the election. Their inquiry embraced three counties, to wit: Charleston, Colleton, and Georgetown, but the great mass of the testimony taken relates to the conduct of the election in the first of these counties. The time was limited in which the committee was required to complete its labors and the means of communication with Georgetown and Colleton Counties very poor. This will account for the comparatively small amount of testimony taken in reference thereto; but sufficient evidence was taken to indicate very clearly that what was true of the election in Charleston County was equally true of the other counties referred to. In all of these counties (situate in what is known as the "low country") the blacks greatly outnumber the whites. It was therefore very evident that that party only could be successful in the political struggle which received the negro vote. The leaders of both the democratic and republican parties fully appreciated this fact. Prior to the last election the negroes as a mass had voted the republican ticket. There was, however, great dissatisfaction among them with the party leaders. The effort of the democrats was to take advantage of this dissatisfaction, while the republicans were determined to hold the vote. In the last canvass the first great effort since the war was made by the democratic party. Theretofore the democrats had joined with the more conservative element of the Republican party in the support of republicans more acceptable than those running upon the regular ticket, and no real struggle had ever been made to influence or secure the vote of the blacks. But in the last canvass each party had placed its nominees in the field, the lines between the parties were drawn, and each put forth its strength. To influence the negroes and secure their votes it became necessary that they should be made acquainted with the claims which each party had upon them for their support and hence arose what were known as

JOINT DISCUSSIONS.

That is to say, meetings would be called, at which democratic and republican speakers would attend. The time would be equally divided and the claims of the various candidates and of the parties would be presented by their respective adherents.

Charles H. Simonton, chairman of the democratic county committee of Charleston, speaks in his evidence of these joint discussions. He says, (see pages 125 and 126:)

"As soon as I was appointed the chairman of the executive committee, being well aware of the enormous majority in color against us in this county, I saw that the only possible chance for the democratic party was, by a policy of conciliation, to endeavor to win over the men to our side. I was very much encouraged in the conclusion to which I had arrived by the fact that there were already in Charleston a large number of colored people whom we knew as free people, who had always been free, the descendants of free persons, who were strongly in sympathy with the democratic party, and whose aid I certainly could calculate upon in carrying out this purpose which had been devised. I made every effort, therefore, to reach the colored people. * * * I then thought that possibly they might be persuaded by means of argument, listening to the expression of our kind feeling toward them. I desired to satisfy them that the great apprehension which seemed to exist in their minds that the democratic party was determined to deprive them of their privileges, and especially of their freedom, could be answered. In order to carry out that purpose I sought an interview with the chairman of the republican executive committee of this county and proposed to him that in all of the appointments which he had previously made for discussions by one party in this county we should be allowed to join, and that these discussions, instead of being ex parte, should be joint discussions. My relations with the chairman of that committee, Mr. Bowen, are of somewhat a pleasant character. He is the sheriff of this county, and I am a practicing lawyer here, and our official relations had always been pleasant. We had a frank, full conversation in regard to this matter, and in it we agreed that the joint discussion should go on; that I should be informed as to every meeting which the republicans were to have, and that at all those meetings I would be allowed to attend with such speakers as I thought proper, and the time should be divided."

Mr. C. C. Bowen, chairman of the republican county committee of Charleston, in his testimony, says, (see page 158:)

"I went down to Colonel Simonton's office here on Broad street, and had an interview with him. There was no one there but himself and myself, and we talked over the situation generally and agreed that we would have joint discussions at all the places where I had called meetings."

The meetings at which the joint discussions took place were mainly republican meetings, and were attended almost entirely by negroes. The suggestion that the democrats should have an opportunity to be heard came from the democratic leaders. When the joint discussions were agreed upon it was understood that no armed men should attend on either side. Colonel Simonton, in his testimony, (see page 126,) says:

"Both of us concurred in the propriety of this rule, that those meetings should be attended by none but unarmed men. Owing to the fact that the white population of this county is exceedingly sparse, Mr. Bowen also concurred in the suggestion that I made to him, that I should send up with our speakers several white persons from the city, who should be, as it were, their supporters in the audience, applaud them when the time came, and call attention to the strong points; but both of us concurred in the agreement that neither of these gentlemen that went up should go with any arms at all. Under this agreement these joint discussion were held."

Mr. Bowen also says, (see page 158:)

"It was also agreed that the men should not go there armed."

This agreement as to joint discussions was entered into early in October—about the 10th. Prior to this time there had been joint discussions at Strawberry Ferry in September, Mount Pleasant on the 6th of October, and again at Strawberry Ferry on the 7th of October; but these discussions were the result, not of any arrangement between the democratic and republican committees, but by the permission of Mr. Bowen and at the solicitation of individual democrats living at the places where the meetings were held. At the first Strawberry Ferry meeting both the whites and blacks were armed with guns. There was some disorder but no violence upon either side. There were about three hundred and fifty or four hundred negroes at this meeting, and about two hundred or two hundred and fifty whites. Theodore G. Barker, in speaking of the armed men at the meeting, (see page 74,) says:

Question. I understood you to say awhile ago that in reference to this Strawberry meeting you went there on a boat; you took some arms, and while you were landing you saw Mr. Bowen, their leader, surrounded by a large number of negroes: he went up to the church, and when he took the stand to address them, he said something about arms when he was speaking, and thereupon you said that you were not the aggressors in that respect; that you took arms there because they had taken arms previously?

Answer. I said that the first arms that have appeared on this hill to-day are in the hands of your followers, and we had notice that all of your followers were summoned to this meeting to come with their arms, and that the threat had been given out throughout the country that the colored democrats would be prevented from attending the meeting. He admitted that the first arms that appeared on that hill that day were in the hands of his own men, and he went on to say that he discouraged it.

At the Mount Pleasant meeting there was no violence either upon the part of the whites or blacks. As to arms, Mr. Bowen (see page 171) says:

Question. Were there any guns at Mount Pleasant in possession of the white men?

Answer. No, sir. No guns in the possession of anybody, either white or black.

At the second Strawberry Ferry meeting some of the negroes had guns, as also had some of the white men who had gone down from Charleston upon the boat, but they did not take them ashore or show them at any time during the meeting. It is quite evident from the whole testimony that the only purpose the whites had in taking these arms was to protect themselves if necessity required, and to give encouragement and protection to such democratic negroes as might be at the meeting. After these meetings came the agreement between Colonel Simonton and Mr. Bowen before referred to, and in pursuance of this agreement five meetings for joint discussion were held, namely, Johns Island on October 11, Wadmelaw Island on October 12, again at John's Island on October 13, Edisto Island on October 14, and Cainhoy on October 16. It appears from all the evidence that the whites attending all these meetings scrupulously observed the agreement made by Colonel Simonton, that they should not carry arms, while it is equally apparent that the agreement in that regard was violated by the negroes. Joseph Barnwell, a member of the Charleston bar, in his testimony (see page 49) says:

On another occasion I attended a meeting on John's Island. We were to have a joint discussion there, and we took Mr. Bowen and all his speakers up with us. When we got to the meeting, (we marched about four miles to get there,) we found at least three hundred blacks assembled; of that number at least one hundred and twenty-five had arms—muskets. The twenty-five white men who were with me had to go up to the stand through columns on either side.

Q. Through columns of blacks?

A. Yes, sir; columns of blacks, drawn up on either side, some with rifles and some without, and some with sticks. I was the first democratic speaker, and while I was speaking four sentinels were pacing up and down about ten yards right behind me.

Attention is also called to the following admissions of Mr. Bowen. He (see page 171) says:

Question. On the 11th of October a meeting was held on John's Island?
Answer. Yes, sir.
Q. That was a quiet, orderly meeting?
A. Well, yes, sir.
Q. Had the white men arms?
A. Yes, sir; pistols; nothing but pistols.
Q. Had the negroes their guns?
A. Probably a hundred or more.

Again, on the same page the witness says:

Question. On the 13th of October there was a meeting at John's Island?
Answer. Yes, sir.
Q. Did the white men have guns?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did the negroes have guns?
A. Yes, sir; twenty or twenty-five guns.

At most of these meetings some of the whites carried their pistols. This, however, they claimed not to be a breach of the agreement, which they asserted applied only to men being armed with guns. It does not appear from the evidence that any protest was made against the carrying of pistols. The design of Colonel Simonton and Mr. Bowen was evidently to prevent a recurrence of an occasion like that of the first Strawberry meeting, where bodies of men on both sides took their loaded guns to the meeting and when under the circumstances a trifling thing might have led to serious difficulty. The pistols were carried only by an individual here and there, doubtless upon both sides, and were not displayed by their owners. Notwithstanding this breach of agreement on the part of the negroes (and other matters which will hereinafter appear) however the joint discussions went on until the 16th of October, when at Cainhoy they were brought to a sudden termination. The tragic events which occurred upon that day will long be remembered with horror by the whites of South Carolina. On Monday morning, October the 16th, a boat carrying perhaps a hundred or a hundred and fifty white men and twenty or thirty blacks started for the little town of Cainhoy, beyond which, at the distance of perhaps three miles, a meeting was to be held and a joint discussion to be conducted. Among the passengers upon the boat were Mr. O'Connor, a candidate for Congress, Mr. Jervey, a member of the Charleston bar, and a negro named Delaney; these were to be the democratic speakers. Mr. Bowen, a negro named McKinley, and a negro named Cyrus Guillard, were also aboard. These were to be the republican speakers. Apparently the best of feeling prevailed and there was nothing to create even a suspicion of the dreadful events which were so soon to follow. The boat arrived at its destination about two o'clock p. m. The visitors were welcomed by their friends upon the shore who awaited their coming. All sorts of vehicles were pressed into service, and it was not a great while before the whole party was at the place appointed for the meeting. A long table had been procured for use as a stand for the speakers. Two chairmen were chosen, one to introduce the republican and the other the democratic speakers, and the discussion soon commenced. Mr. Jervey was the first speaker. He occupied about thirty minutes of time, and then McKinley, the colored republican speaker, was introduced. The latter had not spoken more than twenty words when the first step was taken toward the massacre which followed. The committee will not attempt to describe in its own language the terrible events which occurred, but will give them in the language of one of the eye-witnesses, Mr. George Rivers Walker. Mr. Walker's testimony (see pages 214, &c.) is as follows:

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Question. What is your age?
Answer. Twenty-nine.
Q. What is your profession?
A. I am a lawyer.
Q. Do you practice in Charleston?
A. I am senior member of the firm of Walker & Bacot, practicing lawyers in Charleston.
Q. Are you a son of the English consul?
A. I am.
Q. How long have you practiced here?
A. I left Hartford in 1869, and have been practicing here since.
Q. Where were you born?
A. I was born in South Carolina. I was brought up in England and the North.
Q. Will you state, sir, whether you were at the meeting held at Cainhoy?
A. I was.
Q. Did you go up on the boat?
A. I did, sir.
Q. Will you just state what occurred in detail and in its regular order from the time you left the wharf here until after the riot?

A. At the wharf in Charleston I found a steamer engaged, as I understood, by the democratic party. It being a beautiful day, and on account of the free trip up the river, quite a number of boys (I lay stress on the word "boys," because the number of persons was large but the number of men was comparatively small) and young men were on board. The steamer waited at the wharf, and, in fact, put back, for Mr. Bowen, the leading republican of this county.

Q. How many were on board?
A. By my calculation, there were in all one hundred and fifty went up on that steamer, democrats and republicans.
Q. How many men were on board?
A. Judging from the number of men that staid up there to do picket duty, there could not have been more than sixty men at the most.
Q. And those were not, all told, more than one hundred and fifty?
A. I should think not. I would not like to be positive on this point, because my attention was not called to the matter, but that is my impression; and my impression is derived from the number that came down. Mr. Bowen came aboard and a large number of well-known negro bullies. My attention was called at the time to the bad character of bullies that were getting aboard with him. Everything, however, seemed to be perfectly peaceful. We went up the river, republicans and democrats, chatting together peaceably, without the slightest sign of any ill feeling. We arrived at Cainhoy, and still everything was very peaceable. We got into the ambulance and rode up three miles to the brick church. When we reached the brick church Mr. Bowen and his party had preceded us and were already there. The meeting was called to order and some speaking occurred.
Q. Who spoke?
A. Mr. Jervey, the democratic candidate for solicitor.
Q. Was there a colored man in your party named Delany?
A. There was; a democratic colored speaker. He had been a major in the United States Army.
Q. What do you know, if anything, about a report that he was to speak there?
A. Major Delany was to speak at the meeting.
Q. Do you know whether the negroes at that place expected him to speak, from what they said at the time?
A. From what negroes said to me afterward, I know it.
Q. Well, were those negroes who thus spoke to you persons who were upon the ground there?
A. Yes, sir; I heard it constantly spoken of among the negroes not to allow Delany to speak; and I know, also, as a matter of fact, that the negroes not only at that meeting, but at several other preceding meetings which I had attended, seemed to be very hostile to any negro democrat speaking; the cry was that any white man had a right to be a democrat, "but no damned black man had."
Q. Did Mr. Jervey conclude his speech?
A. Mr. Jervey concluded his speech, and a colored man by the name of McKinley then got up to speak; he was what I would call a conservative-republican; as soon as he began speaking there was a commotion in the crowd. There seemed to be an objection to him; evidently he was taken for a democrat. I heard him say in effect, if not in actual words, "Listen to me; I's your friend." Before I go any further permit me to show you from a diagram the situation of the crowd. [The witness here drew a diagram of the grounds and indicated the position of the different parties, the buildings on the ground, &c.]

I have just given you a small diagram here of the situation. The horses were hitched on either side of the church and somewhat to the front; the speaker's stand was almost opposite the church. The old house was to the left of the stand about forty or fifty feet as you faced the church, and the vestry to the right. A road ran by the vestry and in front of the old house. When the speaking began I retired over to the church and was standing directly in front of the church when the attack began which I am about to narrate. The crowd was all around the stand. I was entirely out of the crowd, perhaps two hundred feet away from them. I could just barely hear the speaker, but heard McKinley, over the murmurs of the crowd, cry out, "Listen to me, I's your friend," or words directly to that effect. The commotion continued; in a few moments I heard a shot. This commotion was by the old house chiefly, between the house and the stand. A little of the commotion might have been at the other end of the house, but it seemed to me to be chiefly at the stand. Some one near me called out, "A horse has broken loose;" and I looked over intently to see at what spot it had occurred, when I heard this pistol-shot. I will call your attention to the fact that some distance back of the old house there were some pine trees, and directly behind the house, and more toward the road, there was a pool of water or small swamp. In a moment, in a shorter time than I can describe, standing at the church where I could distinctly see, I saw the whites withdraw toward the vestry in great disorder. The negroes, on the contrary, fell back a few feet and appeared more quickly than I have told it here, in perfect skirmish order, every man with a musket—not an arm appearing the moment before. They evidently had their guns placed in the bushes about four feet apart, and every man seemed to know his position the very moment the signal was given; I allude to the firing of the pistol.

Q. You say they appeared with their muskets. What did they do?

A. They fired volley after volley into the flying white men. I walked from the church to the vestry, calling on the white men to rally; but they being totally unarmed, with the exception of a trifling number of pistols, (there was scarcely a man on the ground with anything but the smallest kind of a pistol, and the most of them being boys were without even that,) which, opposed to muskets in the hands of negroes behind pine trees, were utterly useless. When I reached the vestry I found a small body of men, say fifteen or twenty, rallying behind it, and in some order, but no better armed. Just before reaching the vestry I saw Abram Smith, now a member of the State Legislature of South Carolina, on the stand, firing upon unarmed men who were flying to their horses hitched to the right of the church. As they ran he fired three shots from a revolver. I drew my pistol, aimed it at him, but it would not go off. I was about to fire on him when a democrat at my right knocked my arm down and said, "Nobody is shot; don't kill him." I then called out to Smith, "If you fire again I will shoot you;" and he held up his hands and ran into the swamp. At that time I had seen no one killed. I will here state that, standing at the church door, had the old negro Lachicotte, fallen where I afterward saw his body, to the right of the meeting, it would have been a miracle if I had not seen it.

I will state, before I proceed further in my narrative, that intelligence was brought to me by a party of young men immediately upon my arrival on the ground that there were a number of guns hidden in a chimney in the old house. They came to me, accustomed to take my advice in other matters, for advice as to what they should do with regard to these guns. I instructed them to closely watch the guns, but not to touch them unless there were an attack or direct signs of treachery.

An ex-officer of an organization known as the Butler Guards was present with these young men and evidently had them under his command—when I say under his command I mean that they obeyed him—and the men on the ground informed me that he followed my advice rigidly and gave no order for the seizure of the guns, nor were they seized until the negroes were advancing upon the squad of white men on a bayonet charge. When I reached the vestry, coming from the church, I found Mr. Bowen among the men at the vestry. He seemed to be eager to go over to the republican negroes, and repeated two or three times, "Will no one go with me and make peace?" After hearing him I at once volunteered. He accepted my offer, saying to me, "Stop the democrats firing." I turned around and called out in a very loud voice, "Gentlemen, cease firing, as Mr. Bowen and myself are going over to stop this row," or words to that effect. The democrats immediately ceased firing. I took Mr. Bowen's arm and we walked across the ground arm in arm. The negroes seeing us also stopped firing, and there was an absolute cessation of all hostilities.

When we had reached the negroes Mr. Bowen began speaking to them. Apparently he was endeavoring to stop the row. At this time Cyrus Guillard, a negro of a most incendiary character, rushed by, saying, "Mr. Bowen, we can't listen to you now," and urged the negroes to recommence firing on the whites; and I solemnly swear that, without a shot being fired by the whites, without the slightest cause for any hostility whatsoever, the negroes began refiring on these unarmed men volley after volley; and although I had gone among them as a messenger of peace, I heard suddenly behind me, "Shoot the son of a bitch." I jumped behind a pine tree, and three shots were immediately fired. I then, dodging from tree to tree, returned to the vestry, the whole party of negroes firing at me while doing so.

When I reached the vestry I said to the men there present "Men, all we can do now is to defend ourselves." At that moment I saw the present sergeant-at-arms to the other committee shot in the back and three or four others wounded. The negroes fired muskets loaded with buck-shot, duck-shot, nail-heads, and cut-up pieces of lead-pipe, apparently. I was wounded in the leg.

It was impossible, however, we being in the cleared ground in front of the church, and for the most part so utterly unarmed, to resist the hail-storm which was poured into us; and we had to retire and leave our wounded to the mercies of the negroes. We went to Cainhoy, sent home most of the boys and some of the wounded, who had managed to get off the ground. I do not think there were more than twenty of us, there may have been thirty, who remained that night at Cainhoy to protect the village. I sent out two faithful colored men to bring in the wounded, providing a buggy for them. I performed both picket and hospital duty that night, and saw the mutilated dead and wounded brought in. Old Mr. Simmonds, a very old man, was lifted out of the buggy dead on one trip. His head was cut open with some instrument, such as an ax or hatchet; he was shot through the body, and every bone in his body apparently broken with the stocks of the muskets, for as they moved him the bones could be heard crushing against each other.

I am not certain about the names of all the others. King, it was, however, who with other fatal wounds and cuts, had one which I distinctly remember. His arm seemed to have been cut into by an ax, one cut down in one slanting direction and another in another direction, taking a slip out of the bone; the balance of the arm seemed to hang by the muscles alone, and this had evidently been twisted around, I suppose, for the purpose of giving pain. He died a few minutes after he was brought in. McNeil, or Daley, I forget which it was, had a number of cuts—five, I think, I didn't count them—but I saw his head all cut open from an ax or hatchet. Daley was also cut up more or less. Both of these died within twenty-four hours. Most of them died that night; in fact, with the exception of Walter Graddock, I know of no wounded man who was left among them who escaped. Walter Graddock was a boy—a mere boy. He was most horribly hacked up, and his eye was protruding most fearfully, as if it had been gouged out, when we saw him next morning. I don't know whether he has lost his eye or not; I have not heard.

There was one other, I remember; his name was Pregnal. He was fearfully used, and, I understand, escaped because he was thought to be dead. He is here to-day, though, and can tell his own story. I saw him outside.

The question naturally suggests itself, was the

CAINHOY MASSACRE PRECONCERTED?

As bearing upon this question the committee refer to several important matters which appeared in evidence:

First. There was an absence at the meeting of negro women and children.

This fact was singular, because all of the meetings which had been held previously were marked by the presence of negro women. Indeed, the whole evidence indicated that the women were more interested in the political canvass than the men. They not only attended the meetings, but on election day were present in large numbers at the polls. Among the blacks gathered around the stand at Cainhoy no women were to be seen. Mr. Walker, in speaking of the matter, (see page 217,) says:

Question. How many negroes were present?

Answer. Those with me estimated them at about three hundred. I do not think there were a less number than of the whites, but they were all men. At every other meeting I ever attended the negro women were present. The women and children were kept out of the way at this meeting, for some unknown reason.

There was some evidence as to three negro women being in the old building in which the whites discovered the guns. The witness Smith (see page 253) says:

There was three women in an old building to the left that appeared like it was a place some time back to drive carriages in.

Question. Where was the building with reference to the platform?

Answer. To the left. The women ran out and says, "The democrats has those republicans' guns."

These were the only women present.

Second. From the time of the organization of the meeting until the first shot was fired the negroes preserved an ominous silence.

At all previous meetings there had been more or less noise and confusion. The negroes had frequently interrupted the speakers by asking questions, &c. The undisputed evidence is that at Cainhoy scarcely a word was to be heard from one of the assembled blacks. The witness Smith, (called by the minority on the committee,) in his evidence (see pages 254 and 255) says:

Question. During the speaking, up till the time when the cry was heard that you spoke of, you are positive that there was great order observed by the colored people?

Answer. Yes, sir; as I afore said, I never seed a better-behaved meeting than that.

Q. You have had some experience in this campaign?

A. O, yes, I always went around, and spoke some myself.

Q. And you were struck with the singular good order that was preserved?

A. Yes, sir; I was listening to the speaking myself.

Q. You did not hear any singing, or whistling, or hollooing?

A. Not even talking among themselves—just listening to the speaker.

Q. There seemed to be a perfect silence?

A. A perfect silence. You could a'most hear a pin drop on the floor.

Q. You were struck with that at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bowen (see page 161) says:

"Mr. Jervey was the first democratic speaker. That meeting was unusually quiet up to that time. Mr. Jervey spoke his twenty-five minutes and got down, and the most of the time you could have heard a pin fall. It had been the most quiet meeting I had seen; that is, there was no interruption."

Third. Just as McKinley commenced speaking one of the negroes near the stand fired a pistol in the air.

It will be remembered that prior to this and at the time there was perfect silence, nothing had occurred to create ill-will between the whites and blacks. Mr. Jervey's speech had been a mild and conciliatory one, McKinley, who was speaking, was a colored man and a republican, and yet suddenly and without previous warning a negro fires a pistol in the air, with what purpose?

Attention is here called to the testimony of Mr. C. C. White, a white man, who was present at the meeting and who was severely wounded. He says, (see pages 238 and 239:)

Mr. Bowen mounted the stand and addressed the crowd. I think his remarks were addressed more particularly to the colored people that were assembled there, and he pressed upon them, I think fairly and squarely, the necessity of keeping order and quiet, and begged them not to make any noise or disturbance while the speaking was going on, as an agreement had been made between the two parties to have a friendly discussion and that neither party should be interrupted through their speaking. After these few remarks Mr. Jervey took the stand.

Question. Who was he?

Answer. A democratic speaker; a white man. He spoke about thirty minutes. That was the time allotted by agreement. I think he was called to time by the watch. He withdrew, and a colored man by the name of McKinley followed.

Q. Who was he?

A. A colored man that belongs to Charleston. He is in the conveyance office in this city.

Q. He was a republican?

A. Yes, sir; he hardly spoke more than two or three sentences. I was standing with my hand on the table he was speaking from, and in a line beyond him, with the stand to the left. The crowd was divided, the republicans on the left of the stand and the democrats were on the right.

Q. Then the republicans were toward this old building?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The democrats were on the opposite side?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far away was the old building from the stand?

A. Well, I should judge it was about forty feet, perhaps. The rear of the republicans was almost on a line with the building, and they were almost in front of it, so that I could see behind the republicans. I could see through the opening of the building, the space under the roof. After McKinley had spoken a sentence or two, in fact as he began to speak, I saw a decided commotion among the colored people. I went up closely, to pay marked attention to the effect the speaking would have upon the colored people, and as soon as he got on the stand I saw a decided commotion, like a dissatisfaction, among them; and about the time he had made two or three remarks this commotion began. I think his first remark was, "My colored friends, I have arrived to speak in your interest." That was all the further he got. At that time I saw some of the men that went up on the boat with us; and it appears they discovered some rifles, and they picked them up, and as they held them in their hands I saw a colored man discharge a pistol.

Q. Where was he?

A. He was near the corner of the old building. I could not tell you exactly whether he was just beyond it or nearer to me, but I saw him distinctly.

Q. In the air?

A. It was apparently elevated at an angle, say of about thirty-five or forty degrees, and as he fired the pistol he sang out, "Look out, look out!" and in an instant, almost, the rush of the colored people was made to the swamp in the rear, and in a very short time I saw quite a number—I should think forty or fifty people—rushing in that direction, and a great many of them, if not all, armed with guns, which they commenced to fire with. While this rush was being made, these men that had these guns in their hands, as the party attempted to rush to the house, held the position of "ready," and cried, "Stand back, stand back!" almost simultaneous with the firing of the pistol. At the very minute that pistol was fired there was a mutual separation of the political parties, and they separated, as near as I can remember, about a hundred yards or more. I saw at once the disadvantage that we were laboring under, for going up the little boys were firing at chips in the water, and I went around among them requesting them not to do it; and knowing there were no other arms among us except pistols, I thought it was folly to attempt to keep up firing with pop-guns, and I walked between the two parties and held up my arms and pleaded with all the boys for peace and quietness. While in that position, I saw six or eight men rapidly advancing toward me with their guns. In the direction of them, a little to my right, was a cluster of trees. They were in a comparative thicket, and the open ground was behind us. The cluster of trees was a little to the right, between me and them, and I found I would have to retreat, and I made a quick step to these trees, calculating to wheel and run, and as I had about got the trees in line, I wheeled and made a run, and as I did the volley fired, and I was struck by three balls.

Fourth. The negroes took their loaded guns to the meeting and concealed them.

As to this fact there is no dispute. The guns concealed in the swamp and thicket, as well as those hidden in the chimney of the "old house," were placed there by the negroes. It is not proven or even alleged that a single gun was taken to Cainhoy by the whites.

Fifth. The report of the pistol was followed by the report of a gun from the swamp, and immediately the negroes emerged from the swamp in regular skirmish line, while those around the speakers' stand retreated in a body toward their friends.

If the negroes had from any cause been seized with a sudden panic would their actions have been marked with such precision and method?

Mr. Bowen, in his testimony, claimed that under the agreement with Colonel Simonton the members of an organization known as the Butler Guards were not to be permitted to attend these joint discussions. He alleged that the members of this organization were men and half-grown boys of very bad character, and their attendance at meetings might result in difficulty. Undoubtedly some of the men who had formerly belonged to that organization did attend the meeting at Cainhoy, but their attendance was evidently without the knowledge or consent of the democrats. It is not pretended that any of the democratic leaders either invited them or knew of their presence. Mr. Bowen says that he recognized some of these men not long after he had gotten aboard the boat, but he does not allege that he made any protest or called the attention of the democratic leaders to the fact, although these men were present at the meeting. The committee do not believe that their presence had anything to do with the trouble which occurred. Mr. Bowen, it is true, seeks to place all responsibility for the trouble upon the shoulders of these men, but under all the evidence such a conclusion is utterly without warrant. If Mr. Bowen and the colored man Smith are to be believed, then Mr. Walker, Mr. White, Dr. Grimke and Mr. Magill are to be disbelieved. The last four witnesses are men of high character. Mr. Walker, upon cross-examination, gives the following account of himself:

"I was brought up out of this country; I studied my profession in Massachusetts. There I acquired a profession and a respect for republicans—bona fide republicanism. I have with one exception voted the republican ticket in every campaign, and that exception was in the Seymour and Blair campaign. I voted then for Seymour and Blair, and voted the democratic ticket at this last election. With the exception of those two I have voted the republican ticket at every election. I have always been regarded. I believe, as an exceedingly conservative man until this last election. When Hampton was nominated I was a strong Chamberlain man, and for long after Chamberlain was nominated. When this campaign began I would more readily have voted for Mr. Chamberlain than for Mr. Hampton, and it was only after the treatment that I found the whites were receiving here at the hands of the negroes and the negro leaders that I felt it my duty as an honest man to support Hampton, and that I entered so fervently into this campaign."

Dr. Grimke has been a practicing physician in the city of Charleston for sixteen years. Mr. Magill is a book-keeper, and a very intelligent witness, while Mr. White (who is by occupation a pilot) has been engaged in business for many years, and is fifty-one years of age. No evidence was taken before the committee which tended to cast a cloud upon the evidence of these witnesses. In this respect, however, Mr. Bowen was not so fortunate. On cross-examination he admitted that he had some years ago been charged with "murder." That he was imprisoned upon that charge for about ten months. That he was not tried upon the charge until within the last two years. That he was tried before a judge who was elected by a republican Legislature; by a jury composed entirely of negroes, and the case of the Commonwealth presented by a republican prosecutor. Mr. Bowen tells the story of the trial (and a very remarkable one it was) in the following language, (see pages 177 and 178:)

Question. How long after you were discharged from custody did the trial take place?

Answer. Several years.

Q. How many years?

A. The trial was a year ago last June. Since I have been sheriff. A certain party trumped up the charge with the intention of holding it over me, and when they got that far I forced them to a trial.

Q. You were tried for what?
A. I was tried for murder, and they undertook to use this man Grimes against me.
Q. Did he appear as a witness?
A. O, yes; they brought him here and I insisted on his being kept in jail; they succeeded in getting him away and would not allow him to be tried afterwards.
Q. Did you appear as a witness?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did he allege that you had been the instigator of the affair?
A. Yes, sir; he made four different statements. These parties were my political enemies. They went after Grimes in Georgia, and put him in jail and got an affidavit out of him and let him out of jail when they found they could not do anything with me without getting Grimes's head in also; and he went off with their connivance.
Q. Did he swear on the trial that you had employed him to do the shooting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was the jury white or colored?
A. It was colored. The verdict was given without their leaving the box. The solicitor himself admitted that he had no cause. The judge was a democrat by the name of Shaw. The trial took place in Georgetown County, and the first proposition made by my enemies was that the court would continue the case until some special term after the next regular term. I saw that they wanted to hold it over me. I employed counsel and insisted on a trial, and I finally got the time fixed for a trial.
Q. Is the judge who tried the case living yet?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did he instruct the jury to find a verdict for you?
A. He did; the solicitor says, "Well, I submit the case without argument;" and my counsel says, "No;" and the solicitor then got up and says, "Your honor, I'll admit that we have no case;" and the judge then instructed the jury to find a verdict of acquittal.
Q. By whom had the judge been appointed?
A. He had been elected by the Legislature.
Q. By a democratic or republican Legislature?
A. We have not had any democratic Legislature since reconstruction.

Mr. Bowen had for a time during the war been in the confederate army. He was tried by a court-martial for "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," and dismissed from the army. In relation to these charges he says, (see page 177:)

Question. What were these charges?
Answer. O, they brought a great many trifling charges against me—some for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. I had on several occasions asked for a leave of absence, and failed to get it for a long time. Others could get what I could not. I finally succeeded in getting a leave of absence for ten days. Everybody knew that that would not last me until I could get where I wanted to go. I took it, though. When it got out I sat down and extended it myself, and they took offense at it, and discharged me for it. I was very glad of it.
Q. Were there any other charges than that?
A. O, lots of them.
Q. What were they?
A. Forgery, bigamy, and so on, and I can remember I had an orderly sergeant in my company. I recollect that they charged him with being Mephistopheles and alleged that I was under his influence. It was a common report in that battalion, and it was know by everybody here that if we had ever gone into battle that at least two or three of the rifles in the battalion would have been aimed at Major White. He was one of those overbearing, domineering men that never consider the men under him; putting a ball and chain on his men was a common amusement for him. It was a wonder that he lived as long as he did. I will say this under oath, that I had nothing to do with the killing.

Major White (whom it was alleged Bowen had procured to be assassinated) preferred the charges before the court-martial. Smith, the negro witness, is a member of the colored body which styles itself "the Legislature of South Carolina." The part which he took at "Cainhoy" is thus described by the witnesses:

Mr. Jervey, in his testimony, (see pages 259 and 260,) says:

Question. You are a member of the bar in the city of Charleston and a democrat?
Answer. I am, sir.
Q. You are the gentleman who made the first speech at the Cainhoy meeting?
A. Yes, sir; and the only speech there.
Q. I want to ask you, sir, whether you saw Mr. Abram Smith, the republican member of the present so-called legislature, with any weapon in his hand during the disturbance which occurred there?
A. I did, sir; I saw him with a pistol.
Q. Where was he?
A. He was standing on the platform from which we had spoken.
Q. Just state what he did?
A. I saw him fire three shots toward a party of white men, about as far as from here to the corner of the room away from him, [about fifteen feet.] By the time he had fired the third shot, I myself placed my hand on my pistol and said to him, "Don't fire again or I will shoot you."
Q. Did you see Mr. Walker in that neighborhood at that time?
A. Yes, sir; he was standing near me, and I heard him make the same threat.

The witness White (see page 240) says:

Question. Were there any men on the platform at that time?
Answer. There was one man got upon the platform and fired his pistol three times.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Who was that?
A. A man by the name of Smith. I asked afterward, and was told that his name was Smith.

The testimony of Mr. Walker corroborates these witnesses.

After Cainhoy there was no more joint discussions. The republican leaders were troubled no longer by democratic speakers making appeals to the negroes. The massacre at Cainhoy, whether preconcerted or not, certainly had the effect of exciting the negroes and driving back into the republican ranks many who until that time were inclined to vote the democratic ticket. The race issue was raised, and the result can readily be imagined. In reference to this matter Mr. Walker says:

"From the incendiary character of the speeches of Cyrus Guilliard and Abram Smith and other negro leaders, I have more than reason to believe that there was a determination, as soon as it was found out how popular Hampton was, to stir up strife, in order to create a race-feeling between black and white. At the beginning of the campaign I went out into Christ Church Parish and was listened to kindly by hundreds and hundreds of negroes, and had every reason to believe that the parish would give a large democratic vote. After Cainhoy, with the exception of two or three negroes in the village, there was scarcely a negro democrat to be found in the parish." (See pages 221 and 226.)

Having thus noticed the matter of joint discussions, their termination, and the effect of the same, we come to the matter of

RIFLE CLUBS.

There were quite a number of military organizations in Charleston County which had existed for a number of years. They are spoken of by Mr. Barnwell in his testimony. He says, (see page 50:)

Question. What club was it to which you sent for assistance, or the members of which you sent to notify that if there was trouble you would like them to attend?
Answer. The Carolina rifle club.
Q. There is a social club called the Carolina Club. Is that the club?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it a recent organization?
A. No, sir; it was organized seven years ago.
Q. What was the purpose of the organization?
A. Purely for social purposes, sir. Then, gradually, as they were not prevented by the State government, they grew into a sort of militia; that is to say, they came out in uniform, and even the United States troops used to turn out with us. Governor Chamberlain presented a flag to the Washington Light Infantry, which was an organization exactly like ours.
Q. How large was that club?
A. I think at that time it had about ninety men.
Q. Had they an armory?
A. I think so at that time, sir.
Q. Are there other clubs of that character?
A. Yes, sir; the Washington Light Infantry, the German Fusileers, (that was founded in 1776, and re-organized after the war,) the Palmetto Guard, the German Hussars, the Washington Artillery, and quite a number of other clubs, sir, by quasi consent, were allowed to go on and parade; and gradually, as time went on, a rivalry sprung up between them. They got better uniforms, and they became the citizen soldiery, and were so addressed by Governor Chamberlain. They were the ones that welcomed the company from Boston, with whom they turned out here on the 28th of June.
Q. What is the number of these clubs altogether?
A. I do not think that they have had more than six or seven or eight hundred men altogether; but I cannot answer positively about that.
Q. They are still in existence?
A. I believe not, sir. They were disbanded.
Q. Had they an order from the President or Governor Chamberlain disbanding them?
A. From both, sir.
Q. The organizations existed at the time of the 6th of September riot?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see yourself and do you know the facts which you have stated?
A. Yes, sir; I know all that I have stated. I have always qualified my statements, separating that which I knew from that which had been told me.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Were there any statutes allowing the organization of those rifle clubs?
A. One or two rifle clubs had original charters and organized under them, and others organized under charters from the clerk of the court, whilst others organized as purely social organizations.
Q. Did you understand that Governor Chamberlain recognized these clubs here?
A. Surely, sir.
Q. Was he a member of them?
A. He certainly was an honorary member of one of them, and he was entertained by them, and addressed them as the citizen soldiery in my presence.

In addition to these well-known and long-established military organizations in the early part of the campaign, there had sprung up quite a number of local organizations. The white men in the different wards of the city and in the country precincts met together, chose their officers, and organized into clubs, each member owning the rifle or musket which he carried. The purpose for which the whites organized these clubs was twofold: First, in order to protect themselves and their families from violence at the hands of the blacks; and second, to afford protection to all negroes who might desire to attend democratic meetings or avow democratic sentiments. In determining the necessity for the existence of such armed organizations it must not be forgotten that the negroes greatly outnumbered the whites, and furthermore, that a vast number of the blacks were supplied with State arms, and banded together under the name of

"THE STATE MILITIA."

In speaking of the militia, Mr. Walker says, (see pages 219 and 220:)

Chamberlain had surrounded us with his armed militia, and, as I understood it, there were different ward organizations for defense, and the Butler Guards were one of them.

* * * * * * *

Q. What is the State militia?
A. So far as I have seen it, the State militia is, as a rule, with the exception of a few companies here in the city, composed of the most ignorant negroes that can be found throughout South Carolina. They are most thoroughly armed, and in their ranks there is not to be found a single respectable white man, with very rare exceptions.

* * * * * * * *

Q. Then it was an organization authorized by the laws of the State, was it not?
A. I believe it was. I have never examined the militia laws.
Q. Now, the Butler Guards was a part of that local force voluntarily organized for defense against the legal military organization of the State government?
A. My answer to that is this: I live in a little town in the country. That town has been threatened with being burned by the negroes over and over again in the last six months. The negro militia have assaulted white men over and over again. They have charged upon and attempted to kill me simply because I had a personal quarrel with one black man, and they have charged through the streets of Mount Pleasant with their bayonets fixed, charged upon unarmed white men and women simply because a white man had had a quarrel with a colored man. We had no means of defense. And down here even republican white men belong to these various military organizations, purely for purposes of defense.

Mr. Barker in his evidence (see page 70) says:

"In Charleston the militia was entirely in the hands of the colored republicans; they were distributed about at the various precincts in small bodies and formed the nucleus upon which negroes rallied with such weapons as guns, sticks, clubs, and sticks with bayonets on the end of them, that constituted the armed force at different precincts on election day, and they frequently appeared at their meetings, before the election, threatening those who declared themselves at all on the democratic side."

Mr. R. J. Magill (see page 236) says:

Question. Now I wish you would state, if you please to leave the Cainhoy matter, what occurred, if anything, at the John's Island meeting.
Answer. Well, sir, there were about twenty or twenty-five of us who went there. It was a joint discussion, and Mr. Bowen went with us. We had a five-mile tramp to the speaking place. We had been informed by Colonel Simonton that we must carry no rifles, because he had made an agreement to that effect. When we reached the place we found that the republican speakers had gone on with the meeting, and to our surprise we found two companies of militia drawn up in line with their muskets, and at least 30 per cent. armed with old swords and every conceivable weapon. Bowen ordered them to leave, and they marched down to a house twenty or thirty yards away, and there they stood during the whole meeting. The whole time Colonel Young was making his speech a negro sitting in front of him in a cart covered him with his musket.

General Hunt, in his official report, makes the following significant statement. (See page 202.) The time of which he speaks was during the second Charleston riot. He says:

"In one case he found a negro who attempted to shoot a white man, and therefore disarmed him, the man objecting to give up his musket, as it was State arms. The musket was brought to the citadel guard-house."

It will be readily perceived upon a perusal of this and other testimony taken by the committee that the whites had some foundation for their fear of personal violence at the hands of the blacks. This fear, however, was not so much the incentive to the organization of these rifle clubs as was the desire on the part of the white people to afford protection to those negroes who desired to act and vote with them. Whether such protection was necessary will be better determined when we come to another part of this report. In the latter part of September or the beginning of October Governor Chamberlain issued a proclamation commanding these rifle clubs to disband. There can be no doubt that the letter of this order was complied with. The guns were taken from their armories by their individual owners, and in many instances the organization was abandoned. Some of the clubs retained their organization, however, but existed rather for social than military purposes. In some cases they retained their officers and had regular days of meeting. There can be no doubt that the individual members of these clubs held themselves in readiness to act in case of any great and sudden emergency, and when so called upon it was quite natural that they should act together, under competent officers, and with somewhat of military precision. Indeed they did so act upon several occasions after the date of the proclamation, notably in the case of the Charleston riots, one of which occurred upon the 6th of September, and the other upon the day after the election in November. The first of these riots is known as the "King-street riot," and awakened such alarm in the minds of the people that business was practically suspended throughout the city of Charleston for two days. This riot commenced upon the night of September 6. It originated in an effort on the part of the negroes to inflict violence upon others of their race who had been speaking at a democratic meeting. Attention is here called to the testimony of Thomas Lewis, a negro called by the minority on the committee. This testimony illustrates the condition of the mind of the negroes and the necessity that white men should afford protection to colored democrats.

The witness (see page 184) says:

Question. How long did he speak?

Answer. He spoke for an hour; but I wouldn't like to say all his remarks, though I can't.

Q. Well, what happened after his speech?

A. After his speech then the row commenced, and he was guarded home by a thousand white men, else he would have been killed that night, certain, because I had a pistol and I was going to blow his brains out myself, as he was coming out of the door, but a policeman stopped me.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. This man Rivers used very bad language about Mr. Bowen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Governor Chamberlain?

A. Yes, sir; and even General Grant—uncommon and imprudent language, the awfulest language that he could use.

Q. He stated that they stole public money, and all such declarations as that, and you colored people did not propose to stand it any longer?

A. No, sir; we didn't propose to stand it any longer; we had been standing it long enough.

Q. You proposed to get up and blow his brains out, and if he were to get up again, and called Mr. Bowen, or Governor Chamberlain, or General Grant thieves, that you will go after him and kill him if you can?

A. Yes, sir; I will if I possibly can.

Q. And your purpose in following Rivers up the street was to kill him if you could?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if the white men had not been there around him, you would have killed him?

A. Yes, sir; he would have been a dead man.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Did you talk with these fifteen other men about what you were going to do?

A. Yes, sir. John Mitchell was one of them. He was a constable; and he will be here to make his statement. He's gone to bring some person to the jail now.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. You fifteen men understood each other pretty well?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you talked it over and you came to the agreement that any one of you would kill Rivers if you could?

A. Yes, sir; if we could.

Q. Did you have arms?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Did the other men have pistols also?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the understanding was that any one of you would kill him if you could?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Did you see any other man shot that night?

A. Yes, sir; young Mr. Buckner. He is the man that Mr. Barnwell shot that night.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. From what you know of the sentiments of republicans here of your own color, do you think that they entertain the same feelings that you do?

A. I am certain of it, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. John Mitchell was one of your party, and he made this agreement with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you all agreed together to kill him?

A. Yes, sir, certainly; to kill him for his argument.

As has been stated, after the proclamation of the governor the rifle clubs disbanded. Nowhere does it appear that in the testimony, nor was it ever alleged, that these rifle clubs ever committed an act of violence. True it is that Mr. Cunningham, the mayor of the city, was (in his evidence) very bitter in his denunciation of these clubs, but even he admitted upon cross-examination that he did not know of an instance during the campaign where they resorted to violence. The committee are of opinion that the presence of the members of these clubs on the night of the 6th and the morning of the 7th of October prevented a continuance of what would have turned out to be a most bloody riot. The police force of the city of Charleston was unable to keep the peace. More than half of the members of the force were negroes, who, instead of seeking to prevent riot and bloodshed, were at times themselves guilty of the most outrageous conduct. General Hunt in his official report, (see page 202,) in speaking of the riot of November 8, says:

"I sent for the troops to the citadel to hurry down, for I could now hear the firing and saw it was extending westwardly along Broad street. So soon as I reached the court-house, I found the firing was heavy near King street, and started toward it, when a policeman ran out of the station-house and asked me to come in there. Immediately three or four negroes on the north side came off the side-walk and told me to keep on if I desired, for that I "would be safe anywhere." I, however, at the request of the policeman, went to the station-house, where the officer in charge was getting out his men, and he appealed to me for assistance in such terms as led me to believe he felt himself too weak to control the riot. By this time a number of gentlemen, young and old, had arrived and offered their services to me. I informed the police officer that the troops were on their way, but if he desired the service of these citizens they were at his disposal. He said he would be glad to have them; they fell in with his force, and as I was giving some directions he interposed, saying in substance that the matter was in his hands. He then started off, when I almost immediately had complaints that the policemen were firing on and bayoneting quiet white people. The troops soon after arrived at the station-house, and additional armed white citizens also reported. Some one of the civil authorities, as I supposed, I do not remember who, then told me that it was essential that the latter should be sent back to their homes. I declined sending these armed men on the streets, but told him they would be placed where they would produce no bad effect, and directed them to take position behind the troops and to remain there, which direction they followed implicitly."

It will be observed that the whites during this exciting time were present striving to keep the peace.

The results which flowed from the proclamation of Governor Chamberlain disbanding all military organizations among the whites were most injurious. The negroes, who had hoped for protection, lost all heart, and felt that they no longer had the freedom of voting for the men whom they felt would look to their interests. In speaking of the effect produced by the proclamation of the governor, Mr. Mills (see page 131) says:

There was a very large number of colored men who had voted for their republicanism who were now anxious to affiliate with us, and who were now ready to enroll themselves in the democratic clubs, but the first requirement was that they should be assured of physical protection. They expressed extreme apprehension, especially out of the city, if they should enroll themselves in these democratic clubs; they were afraid of being maltreated.

Q. By whom?

A. By the colored republicans; their own republican party, and race, unless we could give them that assurance of protection. That matter was called very specially to my attention; so much so that I was the member of the committee that prepared and submitted to the committee an announcement to the colored people pledging our personal honor that we would give them all the protection that was in our power if they associated themselves with us. I think that Colonel Simonton has described much more fully than I could do the effect of that throughout the county. I think that what broke down or checked for the first time that disposition on the part of the colored people to enroll themselves (for it was growing and swelling as you always find those things; it was extending from the leading men to the subordinates, and they were getting a certain pride in the matter of membership in these clubs) was this: The first thing that militated against them was the proclamation of the governor ordering all organizations called rifle clubs to disperse, and treating as violators of law any bearing of arms publicly. I think from that time that the colored people lost heart and faith in the ability of the democrats to give them protection, because I think it is a matter capable of the most perfect demonstration that the order of the governor and the President, harsh as we considered it to be, was implicitly and absolutely obeyed. There was no violation of it in spirit or letter, and we therefore felt, and we recognized that these people felt, that they had not the same protection that they had before, because the militia of the State was composed exclusively of colored men. They retained their arms and carried them to the public meetings. I have myself been at a public meeting when the white men present had no arms visible and where the colored men marched up under arms. When the proposition was made to disarm them Bowen himself said they should march off the grounds. We said, "No; let them stay." We were afraid of no violence when we were in pursuit of a peaceable object.

Mr. Barker also says: (See page 68.)

After the proclamation of Governor Chamberlain and the proclamation of President Grant, the temper of the republican leaders and of their followers changed very much. There was in this county perfect good-nature in the conduct of the canvass, and we were progressing, as we thought, very well in the influence upon the colored people to vote the democratic ticket; but after that the whole temper of the campaign was changed, and the intimidation began, or increased, and up to the time of the election——

Q. Intimidation of whom?

A. By the colored people of the colored people. They did not intimidate any white people. They threatened the negroes in every way from joining the democratic party or showing any sympathy for the democratic party, or voting for the democratic party. The efforts of those who were competing with the republicans were entirely paralyzed. They appealed to race prejudices.

Q. Who did?

A. The republicans. They insisted upon their party allegiance. They treated them as deserters of their race and of their party, and of their political friends, and brought to bear upon them the most tremendous pressure—a combination of the Union League and the power of the political organization which followed the Union League.

Q. What was that power—the Union League?

A. Yes, sir; after the emancipation the colored people of this State generally were brought into the Union League, and they were bound over by very solemn formula and oaths to adhesion to that organization.

* * * * * * * *

Q. What evidences have you seen of the fact that such an oath was administered?

A. The evidence of that came in different directions from negroes who expressed their sympathy with the white people with whom they lived, yet up to the point of voting against the republican party they said, "We cannot do that because we took an oath."

There is no doubt that the negroes were bound by an oath to support the nominees of the republican party. Attention here is called to the evidence of the negro witness "Prince Albert." This man was a somewhat prominent republican and was employed on election day as one of the "republican rallying committee." In his testimony (see pages 118 and 119) he says:

Q. Did you ever take an oath to support the republican party?

A. I swore the last time.

Q. When did you take an oath that you would support the republican party?

A. About three months ago.

Q. Who did you take the oath before?

A. Before Lieutenant-Governor Gleaves.

Q. And you swore before him that you would support the republican party?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Where was the oath administered you?

A. Down in Archdale street, across town, in our ward meeting.

Q. How many other negroes took the oath there?

A. So many that I couldn't commence to tell you; over six hundred, white and colored.
Q. How many white men?
A. More than I can remember. I aint got no particular remembrance of it.
Q. How many negroes?
A. Over six hundred. It is more than that, because they have had to take that oath every meeting that they called. Every meeting that was called was open for new members every night till the election.
Q. And then they had to take an oath to support the republican party?
A. O, yes, sir. They were not compelled, but they were asked.
Q. What was the oath; what did you swear?
A. The oath was this: "You do solemnly swear to protect and defend the constitution of the republican party, so help you God;" and I forget. there was some other things, such as don't give out no secretness of this club, but something or 'nother of that kind; I couldn't give it exactly, but it is something just that way.
Q. It was, in substance, that you would vote the republican ticket and do all you could to support the republican cause?
A. Yes, sir; that was as I understood it.
Q. You understood from the oath that when you took it you would be bound to vote the republican ticket, and you would be bound to do whatever you could for the republican cause?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You say that there were a great many negroes that were sworn in the same way?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Every negro that came to the club would have to sign this oath?
A. I didn't say that they would have to sign this oath, but they signed the constitution.
Q. Did most of the negroes in Charleston belong to these clubs?
A. The majority of them did.
Q. Did all of these republican clubs have the same kind of an oath?
A. It is very likely that all had the same oath. I never visited all the ward meetings. I visited wards 2, 3, and 4, and they all had the same oath.
Q. There was also a provision in the oath that you would not betray any of the secrets of the club?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Under this oath that you took you would have felt yourself bound to vote for any person who might have been nominated on the republican ticket?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It did not make any difference who it was?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Was not that part of the oath?
A. Yes, sir; all the nominees of the republican party. We made up our minds to vote the straight ticket and all the names on that ticket.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. You say that the lieutenant-governor was there?
A. Yes, sir; he administered the oath.
Q. How many negro men were there connected with your club?
A. I can't remember exactly, but according to the number which was registered there in the ward, it run up between six hundred and seven hundred.
Q. And every one of those six or seven hundred men took the same oath that you did?
A. Yes, sir; he took the same oath in my presence every time that I was there.
Q. They would not allow any one to belong to the club unless he took that oath?
A. No, sir.
Q. Were these meetings held in secret?
A. No, sir; they were public meetings. Anybody could come, but if they didn't feel a desire to take any part with us, he was requested to go out. He could come in as a visitor, but when the time came for particular business we asked him to go out. When we got through initiating new members, then we opened the door and they came in again.
Q. What was the initiation?
A. Only to take that oath.
Q. What was the nature of the business what was done in these clubs?
A. Why, the business that was done in this club was only to state who the officers, &c., should be whom you got to vote for, and to not let any member go out on the street and have any public discussion about what took place in the club.
Q. You were not allowed to tell outside that you took the oath?
A. You could speak about taking the oath, but you wasn't to tell what the oath was.
Q. Who was the president of your club?
A. The president was Aaron Williams.
Q. Was he a white or a colored man?
A. He was a white man.
Q. What was his business?
A. I don't know his business.
Q. Is he in office?
A. No, sir; he didn't occupy any position in this city.
Q. Have you worked any since you were discharged, except the day that you worked for the rallying committee?
A. I worked five hours one afternoon.
Q. Who was that for?
A. That was for a Mr. Michael, on the southern wharf where the Dictator, the Florida boat, lands.
Q. Is Mr. Michael a democrat?
A. I don't know whether he is a democrat or republican.
Q. Do you know of a great many republican negroes in Charleston working for democrats?
A. Yes, sir; there are a great many working for them now.
Q. You never heard any oath administered to these men since the election? You never saw any white men administer it?
A. You never took an oath, but they wanted you to take an oath.
Q. That one man?
A. Those three that I went to.
Q. Did they want you to take it?
A. No, sir; they only spoke to me concerning it; but my employer did, and I said to him that he couldn't get my vote if he was to give me $5,000 cash in my hand and $20 a day. He said, "No intimidation; no intimidation."
Q. You would not violate this oath that you took in this club if a man came to you and gave you a hundred dollars a day?
A. Not for a thousand dollars a day. According to the oath they couldn't do anything to you; but at the same time to be truthful as a truthful man I wouldn't take $2,000 a day.
Q. In other words, in taking this oath that the lieutenant-governor had administered to you, you felt as a matter of conscience that you could not vote anything but the republican ticket without violating your oath and violating your conscience?
A. Yes, sir.

Before leaving this matter of the general conduct of the election, the committee desire to call attention to, and condemn, an abuse which existed, namely, the employment and use of

DEPUTY SHERIFFS.

Mr. Bowen, the sheriff of Charleston County, just prior to the election appointed a large number of persons styled "deputy sheriffs." The appointment of these persons was without warrant or authority of law. They were all republican negroes, and were placed at the polls throughout the city of Charleston on election day, and were invested by Bowen with the power to make arrests. This power did not seem to be in any way limited, nor was it subservient to any higher authority. The liberty of the citizen was only subject to their caprice. On the day of election these men assembled in large numbers at the polls, wearing badges, and exhibited the utmost partisan malignity. Reference is here made to the following testimony: Mr. Mills, after the election, prepared a written protest, which he published. This protest he produced before the committee and made it a part of his testimony. One part of this protest was as follows. (see page 132:)

"That there were present at the aforesaid voting-precincts large numbers of persons claiming to be deputy sheriffs, and wearing badges so designating them, (such pretended deputy sheriffs having been appointed by the sheriff of the county in direct violation of law, and being without any lawful office or authority,) who, pretending to act under color of such office, did, by intimidation and threats of violence, prevent and stop many persons from voting the said democratic ticket, by which unlawful violence and intimidation of said pretended deputy sheriffs the result of the election was changed."

In his testimony (see page 133) Mr. Mills says:

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Question. The statements which you have read from the paper, if I understand you correctly, are read from a copy of a paper which you filed with the board of county canvassers, after the election?
Answer. Yes, sir; based upon affidavits, many of which I took from known and reliable witnesses. I was appointed one of a committee composed of George Lamb Buist and Rudolph Siegling, besides myself, to draft this paper.
* * * * * * *
Q. Are you satisfied of the correctness of that statement, at this time?
A. In the main, I am. I do not know that I can establish each one of those precincts. As I have stated, I have drawn that on the plan of an indictment, but I have no doubt of the truth of those general statements.
Q. Are you satisfied that those deputy sheriffs of whom you have spoken served to decrease the democratic vote and increase the republican vote?
A. I have the most decided impression on that point. Perhaps it may be well to state that that is a hobby with me—opposition to those deputy sheriffs—for I have been at it every election that we have had since 1868; I have always opposed it.
Q. State what effect they had?
A. They acted as party-rallyers, while they worked clothed with a badge which gave them a certain official authority. They were partisan, and violently partisan.
Q. Were there any democrats appointed?
A. No, sir. At the last election in Charleston that was prevented by the commissioners of elections. In the municipal election the commissioners of election were charged with the entire duty of preserving the peace, and our commissioners therefore controlled the sheriffs; while in the general election our commissioners of election have no such power.
Q. Was there anything in the law which authorized the appointment of these deputy sheriffs?
A. In my judgment, there was nothing; they were appointed in open violation of law.
Q. By whom were they appointed?
A. By the sheriff of the county.
Q. Who is the sheriff?
A. Mr. Bowen, who was the candidate for re-election, and also a candidate for presidential elector.
Q. And a prominent republican?
A. The head of the republican executive committee of the county.
Q. Were they all appointed from one party?
A. All from one party.
Q. And that the republican party?
A. Yes, sir; and I think I may say all colored people, or nearly so

Mr. Barker (see page 70) says:

"They were aided on election day by a large force in the city of Charleston and elsewhere—constables, or rather deputy sheriffs—who were ignorant colored people, wearing badges of office under the appointment of Bowen, the sheriff of the county, and exercising the power of arrest at will of any one that they chose, without reference to the committal of any offense. They were assisted by the same class of persons, wearing the badges of deputy United States marshals, under the appointment of Mr. Wallace, and the exercise by these two sets of persons, who were entirely partisan, all appointed on one side, was always directed against the democrats, and it created a thorough and entire intimidation of that portion of the colored vote which was at all disposed to vote the democratic ticket. The exceptions were men of rare courage, or those who were under the absolute protection of individual white men. The militiamen, who had arms from the State, furnished by republican military commanders or militia officers, in numerous instances presented themselves at the polls in armed force, and controlled the voters to a very large extent."

The witness Patrick Philip Toole (see pages 150 and 151) says:

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Question. What is your age?
Answer. Thirty-five, sir.
Q. Where do you reside?
A. In this city, sir.
Q. How long have you resided here?
A. Since 1864, I think, just a few days after the evacuation.
Q. What is your business?
A. Milling; I have a planing-mill and lumber-yard.
Q. Where is your mill?
A. On the west side of Charleston, sir; on the Ashley River, right opposite here.
Q. Have you an office?
A. Yes, sir; I have two stores, or salesrooms, in Hayne street, Nos. 20 and 22. We make doors, sashes, and blinds, and everything connected with buildings, besides building buildings.
Q. From what State did you come here?
A. From New York State, sir.
Q. Were you born there?
A. No, sir.
Q. Where were you born?
A. I was born in Ireland.
Q. How long did you reside in New York State?
A. Well, I have been there since 1846. I was about three years old when I came over. I am not quite thirty-five, but will be that age the early part of next year.
Q. Were you in the Army?
A. I was, sir; in the Federal Army.
Q. How long did you serve?
A. One year, sir.
Q. In what brigade?
A. Well, sir, I was in two or three brigades. I was in the Sixty-fourth New York, Colonel John Cochrane's regiment. Major Schaler, of New York, was our lieutenant-colonel. We were known as the "Chasseurs."

Q. What are your politics? Have you been voting any stated ticket or not?

A. I have voted generally a split ticket until this last election.

Q. When Governor Chamberlain ran before, whom did you vote for?

A. I voted for Green. Green was a reform republican. Before that I had voted for Moses.

Q. Were you at the polls on election day?

A. I was there part of the time.

Q. How long were you there?

A. I was there probably an hour or so in the morning and about two or three hours in the afternoon.

Q. Please state what poll you voted at?

A. I voted at the first precinct, ward 4, I think.

Q. Now state what occurred, if anything.

A. Well, sir, we were running the mill that day, and I told my hands, as I generally did, to make it as short a time as possible in voting: that I was going to vote about eight or nine o'clock, and if they wanted to vote they could come along and vote with me. Some of them did, and some of them staid behind. There was one of our men who was arrested after he voted.

Q. Was he a white or colored man?

A. He was a colored man named John Hall.

Q. What did you employ him at?

A. At laboring work in the yard.

Q. Now detail to us all the circumstances of the arrest; what was said by him and all the circumstances attendant upon the case.

A. When we got in line to vote, this man Hall stuck very close to me and looked very much frightened, and on my looking around to see the cause of it, I saw several colored men opposite to him, near him, making gestures and looking at him, and so on. Seeing that he was somewhat alarmed, I told him to stand still and not be afraid. After he voted, he was taken possession of by those deputy constables or sheriffs.

Q. Did he vote the democratic ticket?

A. Well, I could not say that; I suppose he did. He was accused of voting the same ticket that I did, which was the democratic ticket. He was accused before and afterward of voting the democratic ticket.

Q. After he had voted what occurred?

A. He was taken possession of and was going to be arrested by those black deputy sheriffs. I got between them and tried to reason with them about the folly of arresting him.

Q. What did they say and what did other colored men say, if anything?

A. Well, they said that he voted the democratic ticket, and that he did so under my request. They made an attempt to take him out of the line, however, before he got to the ballot-box, those same men did. You see you had to stand off the length of this room [twenty-five feet] from the ballot-box.

Q. What else did they say about his voting the democratic ticket?

A. They got very violent. They were all armed with clubs and sticks, and so on; and the white men there said he should not be arrested. The majority of the blacks, seeing a few take hold of him, were encouraged to interfere, and there would have been a general fight if I had not begged them to stand back and let the man be arrested. Before that, however, the deputy United States marshal told these constables to stand back and let the man alone; that if he did vote the democratic ticket they had no right to arrest him. Those deputy sheriffs took him away from the marshals altogether, and just at that period a fight was very imminent, and I begged the marshals to let him go and let him be arrested to quiet the crowd and keep off a fight. I did it for peace sake. Of course I got cursed just as much as he did.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. What did they do with him?

A. They took him to the city jail.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. What was the charge against him?

A. That he was under age. They accused him of being only eleven or twelve years of age. So they took him to jail, and from there he was sent before the United States commissioner.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. You followed him down, did you?

A. Yes, sir; I went with him.

Q. What occurred before the commissioner?

A. Well, the commissioner held some whispered conversation there with the attorney-general of the State, this man Stone. Later on the attorney-general called the commissioner out of the room where we were, into the hall, and had some conversation with him out there, I suppose, and he came in and looked at us two or three times, and the commissioner finally came in and asked this man some question in regard to his name and age, and so on, and asked me if I would be responsible for him; that is, to have him whenever the commissioner would call for him; and I told him I would. After giving that verbal guarantee they let him go and reminded me that they would hold me responsible for the man.

Q. Have they called on him to answer since?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was he twelve years old?

A. Well, he was doing a man's work and receiving a man's wages. I considered him a man. I hire him for a man, and pay him for a man.

By Mr. JONES:

Q Do you think he is twenty-one years old?

A. I think he is over twenty-one.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Has he whiskers?

A. Yes, sir; he has some hair on his upper lip.

Q. This man alleged that he was only twelve years of age?

A. Eleven, I think.

Q. That was the deputy sheriff?

A. Yes, sir. During all that time there were threats made by those surrounding him, and he was pointed out to the crowd.

Q. What effect did this action of the deputy sheriff's in this case, and the general course which they pursued during the day, have upon the negro voters, that you know?

A. We had to send this man and one other colored man who voted the democratic ticket down back of the mill under a guard. We had to beg the white men on the place to take them down.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Why?

A. We were afraid they would be torn to pieces. Some evenings later I let them go to go home, and kept my eye on them as far as I could.

Q. From what you saw at the polls of the action of these deputy marshals and others advocating the interests of the republican party, would you consider it safe for a colored man to vote the democratic ticket?

A. No, sir; I would not. I do not suppose there would have been a colored man in Charleston who would have voted the democratic ticket that day if there had not been whites at their back. The supposition was that I voted it, and I was cursed myself for voting it. I was among them when they acted in this manner.

Q. What was the action of the deputy sheriffs whom you saw during the hour that you were at the polls in the morning and the two hours that you were there during the afternoon? And I ask this without reference to the case you have given.

A. Well, the deputy sheriffs were interfering: bringing these men up to vote the republican ticket. That seemed to be their duty. They were all armed with clubs of some kind or another—either a rough-hewn piece of stick or something else. They were anything but peacemakers.

Having thus considered some of the leading matters connected with the general conduct of the election, the committee direct attention to a matter bearing upon which a large amount of testimony was taken, and the importance of which will at once be perceived. The matter referred to is the INTIMIDATION OF DEMOCRATIC BY REPUBLICAN NEGROES.

From all the testimony taken the committee are satisfied that had the negroes been permitted to vote as they desired the result would have been the election of the democratic electors. A reference to the testimony cannot fail to satisfy an unbiased mind that such would have been the result. In the "low country," both before and upon the day of the election, almost every kind of violence was resorted to in order to prevent negroes from voting the democratic ticket. Threats were first employed, and where they failed to produce the desired effect the most cruel and barbarous measures were resorted to; negroes were stripped naked, beaten with whips and clubs, and in some cases cut with knives or razors, their only offense being that they had resolved to vote the democratic ticket. The negroes, maddened by the report circulated by unscrupulous party leaders that if the democratic party should be successful in electing its candidates they would again be reduced to slavery, were like so many ferocious animals. At some of the voting-precincts the voters were nearly all negroes. Upon election day they assembled at the polls armed with shot-guns, rifles, muskets, swords, knives, bayonets on sticks, and almost every other conceivable weapon, shouting, cursing, and threatening; swearing that they would (to use their language) kill any "damned democratic nigger that offered to vote." As the negro voter approached the polls he would be set upon by these armed men. If he had a democratic ticket in his hand it was taken from him, a republican ticket substituted, and the voter marched up to the ballot-box with clubs brandished over his head and compelled to deposit his ticket in the presence of his assailants.

It was by such means that the voice of the people was stifled and large majorities rolled up for the men who have brought ruin and disaster upon every business interest in South Carolina, impoverished her people, made her treasury bankrupt, banished from the faces of her children the smile of hope and left in its stead a settled gloom and despair. Testimony was taken as to the actions of the negroes at the following precincts, Charleston County, Red-top Church precinct.

The following extracts from the testimony will indicate how the election was conducted there. (See pages 13, 14 and 15.)

A. M. LATHAM sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Question. What is your age, sir?

Answer. Forty-nine.

Q. Where do you live?

A. I live in South Carolina.

Q. How long have you lived in South Carolina?

A. Since 1851, sir; twenty-five years.

Q. Where were you born?

A. I was born in Scotland, sir.

Q. Is there a precinct in Saint Andrews Parish known as Red-top Church precinct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you engaged in any business in that precinct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?

A. Mining phosphates.

Q. How long have you been engaged in business there?

A. I used to plant rice and cotton there since 1868, but for the last three years I have been mining phosphates.

Q. Did you go to the Red-top Church precinct on last election day?

A. I did, sir.

Q. What time did you reach the polls?

A. Before six in the morning.

Q. Before they opened?

A. Before they opened.

Q. What time did the polls open?

A. Six o'clock.

Q. Where was the voting conducted?

A. At Red-top Church; in the church.

Q. What position, if any, did you occupy on that day?

A. I was democratic supervisor of election.

Q. At that place?

A. Yes, sir; at that place.

Q. At the time the polls opened about how many negroes were there?

A. There might have been from a dozen to eighteen.

Q. Well, sir, did others come?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Singly or in bands?

A. They came occasionally in bands and sometimes singly.

Q. Were they armed; and, if so, with what?

A. Most of them had bludgeons; some had guns.

Q. Did you see any one with bayonets?

A. I saw some bayonets tieds on poles or sticks.

Q. How many managers of election were there?

A. Three.

Q. How many colored men?

A. Two of them were colored men and one was a white man.

Q. Two colored republicans and the white man was a democrat?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was there a republican supervisor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he white or black?

A. He was a white man.

Q. Well, sir, I wish you would go on now and state from that point, in your own language and without questions from me, what occurred during the day, giving the events, as near as you can, in their order.

A. About, I should say, a few minutes after I entered the church and the polls were opened, the box was examined by the people to see that it was all right. I proposed to the managers of election that but one person should be admitted to the church at a time, for the purpose of having a fair election; and the managers agreed that it was right enough, and requested the marshals to clear the church. By that time there were a great many in the church, and the people would not go out, so the managers didn't insist upon it. The church then became filled with people who crowded all around the box.

Q. What kind of people?

A. Colored people; all colored people, sir.

Q. Did they surround the box?

A. They were all around the box, close to it, and packed all around it; and a short time after that there was a boy came up to vote by the name of Jenkins, and I challenged the vote.

Q. How old was he?

A. He seemed to be about sixteen years of age—perhaps from thirteen to sixteen—and the crowd became very unruly at my objecting to his vote.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. You challenged the boy on account of his age?

A. I challenged his age, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Well, sir, proceed.

A. The crowd became very unruly about my expressing myself as dissatisfied with the vote, and they brought forward his father, and his father said that he was in his twenty-first year. I told him that that would not do; that he must be twenty-one years and out, and proceeded to swear his father; and they got perfectly obstreperous.

Q. What did they do?

A. They crowded all around me with sticks and hollered, "Take him out; bring him out;" and, of course, I was unable to challenge any more.

Q. Did the boy vote?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Did you protest against it?

A. I did, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Were there any others?

A. There were many others, sir, but I could not protest after that; it was as much as my life was worth. Some democratic negroes came in to vote then, and among others my foreman, James Grant. He voted and showed his ticket.

Q. What ticket did he vote?

A. The democratic ticket; and the people became very much annoyed about that, apparently, and were for assaulting him; indeed, they expressed themselves so violently that they frightened the man. He wanted to go away, and he slipped out, and no sooner did he get out than they got after him, and they run him about two hundred yards.

Q. Were you present when any further difficulty occurred?

A. I was not present when they caught the man.

Q. Did you see Grant the next day?

A. I did, sir. He was very much cut up.

Q. What was his condition?

A. When I saw him he was lying in bed, and he told me he was unable to turn over.

Q. How many cuts were there about his head?

A. Well, sir, I think there may have been three or four. There certainly was one very bad one on the brow and head, and a very bad one across the top, and another in the back of his head; probably three or four cuts.

Q. Were there any other injuries or wounds about his person?

A. He was very badly cut in the knee, stabbed with a knife. I saw the cut. It was a very bad one.

Q. Any other cuts?

A. Another cut in the arm.

Q. Now, go back to the polls and tell us what followed after Grant ran out.

A. After that some little time went by before another man came in to vote—Peter Lucas.

Q. Was he a colored man?

A. He was a colored man and a pronounced democrat. He had been in my service for years and had always voted the democratic ticket. Well, they got after Lucas as he was going in, and they marched him up to the door with bludgeons over him, and he came to me and asked me what he should do. I remarked to him that I thought he had better sit down a little while and not vote at present; just to wait a little while. He was afraid to stay, and went and put in his ticket. He then went out and they got after him again.

Q. Did you see Lucas the next day?

A. I saw him the next day and his head was tied up, and he told me they had all but killed him.

Q. He was cut up, you say?

A. His head was tied up, sir.

Q. Well, now, what further occurred at the polls?

A. Well, sir, at a later period in the day the negroes were around the church all the time, and men and women cursed me. I was kept in the church from six in the morning till eight or nine at night. I could not get out.

Q. What more, if anything, was done?

A. There was a man by the name of John Brown, a democratic negro, got into the church with me in the morning, and he could not get out; and one man came up there and cursed him for a son of a bitch and that he wanted to knock his brains out. He didn't come into the church, but he came over to the door.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Did you see him?

A. I saw him and heard him.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Whom did he curse?

A. He cursed Brown.

Q. Who was Brown?

A. He was a democratic negro. He was afraid to vote and never voted.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Do you know of democratic negroes coming up?

A. Several; a number that told me they were going to vote the democratic ticket were brought up by men, one on each side, with bludgeons. These men came up to the door with them, and told them if they didn't vote the republican ticket, what they would do, and they stood at the door and saw them vote the republican ticket. Men voted the republican ticket that I am satisfied would have voted the democratic ticket if they had been let alone; they told me so afterward.

Q. How many colored women were there about there?

A. There were thirty or forty armed with bludgeons. There was hardly a woman that hadn't a bludgeon, and they were, if anything, worse than the men.

Q. Was there any incident occurred between a negro woman and yourself that day?

A. There was. One of these women took a gun and aimed it in the window. I happened to go to the window and some one called out, "Look at that woman; she is about to shoot you, sir." I looked out and they had just taken the gun from her by that time.

Q. How many democratic votes were there at that poll altogether that day?

A. Four white men and nine negroes voted the democratic ticket—13 votes.

Q. How many republican votes?

A. Two hundred and ninety-seven; in all there were 310.

Q. How many white men were there about the polls on that day?

A. Five.

Q. Who were they?

A. There was one republican supervisor, one democratic manager; there was myself, democratic supervisor, and two others.

Q. Were those two others white democratic voters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state whether either of them was detained through fear in the church?

A. Yes, sir; one young man was detained there as long as I was. He remained there the whole day from six in the morning until eight or nine o'clock in the evening.

Q. He was afraid to go out?

A. Yes, sir; I went to the door two or three times, and whenever I saw the crowd surging toward the church I had to get in again.

Q. You made several efforts to get out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But was driven back by the threatening attitude of the crowd?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would state whether there was great noise and confusion there during the day?

A. A great deal, sir, and the wildest intimidation I ever saw anywhere.

Q. What did the intimidation consist in?

A. There was a band of men marching backward and forward, beating drums, hallooing and screaming, and carrying on with the women in front of the men. I saw a company of men there, with forty or fifty in it probably, and mostly all armed apparently, half of them with bright, shiny rifles, and the others with bludgeons, sticks, and bayonets.

Q. Were these colored people?

A. Yes, sir; all colored people.

Peter Lucas, colored, voted the democratic ticket. He gives the result, as follows, (see page 19:)

Question. What, if anything, did they have in their hands?

Answer. Clubs, sir. I saw them coming, and I knew then they were coming after me, and I ran across the swamp and they run me down and cotched me, and then they fetched me up at the Red Top again, at about two hundred yards from it, and then they stripped off my jacket down to my vest and give me about one hundred and fifty lashes with grubs, a switch about as big as my thumb, and they let me go, and in that time a gang of women was seen coming down from the Red Top after me again. Then I run and got away from them.

James Grant (colored) testifies as follows, (see pages 20 and 21:)

Question. Without any questions from me, I want you to go on and state in your way, from the time you voted, what was said or done to you during the day.

Answer. After I got in and voted my ticket, the place where I put my ticket in the box was so crowded that I jumped out of the window; the window was always open. I went out and took a ticket out of my pocket——

Q. What ticket?

A. Democratic, sir; the same that I voted.

Q. How many democratic tickets did you have?

A. I had a good deal, sir. I didn't count them. After I had voted my own and I took the tickets out of my pocket, a young man came up to me that time by the name of Simon Bennett. Simon Bennett said to me, "The crowd is very strong around the door, and if anybody votes the democratic ticket he will be put to death," and says he, "If I can't vote the ticket I won't vote at all." I says, says I, "If you can't vote as you choose fold your ticket up close and show it to no man, and then you can put it in the box; don't show it to no man till you get up to that box." At that time he was standing with me, a little way from the church, and then he commenced walking with me, and I had my ticket in my hand, and the crowd burst right out behind me, and we considered the crowd was coming to get the ticket. I wheeled around and I says to Bennett, "Do you think that crowd is after me?" He says, "I don't know." By that time the crowd was nearly up on me, and I heard one man in the crowd say, says he, "Catch the son of a bitch," and as I looked behind me Simon Bennett broke off and run, and I broke off and run, and then we run down the road a little ways, and we turned the fork of the road that goes up to the O'Hare's plantation. As we turned the fork we saw a crowd coming across the field to cut me off.

Q. Part followed after you and the balance cut you off?

A. Yes, sir; after I turned the fork I seen the crowd cutting me off, but they didn't have closed up on me yet, and I wheeled round and saw that they had me in a ring; then I run round in the ring trying to break out and get away; then the crowd that had cut me off closed up on me, when one man, by the name of Solomon Lyon, struck me and knocked me down.

Q. Where did he strike you?

A. He struck me right in the head. He struck me two blows; one blow staggered me and the last one, in the back of the head, knocked me down.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. What did he strike you with?

A. A green-gum club. As he knocked me down I jumped up and he knocked me down again.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Where did he hit you that time?

A. All in the same spot, sir. Then I jumped up again and Ben Manigault flew up and says he, "Kill the son of a bitch; he voted the democratic ticket." One man says, "No; don't kill him." Sol Lyon says, "Kill the son of a bitch; he is nearly done died. Kill him at once." I says, "O, do, boys; don't kill me," and I jumped up, and Ben Manigault struck at me again, and as Ben struck at me he fell with the force of his own blow and I jumped up and run toward the bank to get to the road, and Lyon says, "Kill him, kill him; don't leave him; he's nearly dead now;" and he runs up and strikes me on the head again.

Q. What with?

A. The same club, and I grabbed hold to the grass on the dam and crept across the dam and run cross the road, and Rebecca Bennett, she run down the road screaming, and I says, "O, do, darling, save me; save me;" and she run toward me, and she hugged I and I hugged she, and she threw me down, and she was on top of me trying to cover me with her clothes.

Q. I see a long scar on your forehead. How did you get that?

A. Ben Manigault, sir, gave me that.

Q. Was that the last time he struck you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, what did they do, if anything, after Rebecca Bennett threw herself over you and tried to protect you?

A. Sol Lyon struck me a lick then on the right side of the head, and in that time Rebecca, she cotched me and I cotched she, and she threw me under her, and they caught up my leg which was sticking out a piece from her dress, and beat me on my leg, and one of my arms was out, which I cotched she with, and they beat me on my arm too, and some one, to break my hold on she, cut my arm.

Q. How many times?
A. Two times, sir; cut right to the bone.
Q. Suppose you let us see your arm. [The witness exhibited his right arm to the committee and displayed two long cuts near the elbow. The witness also exhibited the cuts on his head, one on the forehead on the top and one at the back of his head, which were not entirely healed.]
Q. Were you cut any place else?
A. Yes, sir; on my knee.
Q. On the knee of what leg?
A. The left leg.
Q. Was that a deep cut?
A. Yes, sir. You know that cap you can twist about on your leg, they cut down to that; and whatever they was cutting it with, slipped, and it went down side of that bone, and went in there. They sawed right across the cap, and the cap went one side and slipped down. That is the chief pain I've got now, and the doctor says it'll be over six months before I can walk good on it, sir.
Q. You are lame now from that wound?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Go on and state what occurred after you were cut.
A. Rebecca she was on top of me, and she covered up everything except this right arm and left leg, and they cut that; and one woman she came up and struck me in the head, and Rebecca she was hollerin', "Do marster; don't kill him; don't kill him."
Q. You say a woman came up and struck you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, now, after she struck you, what occurred?
A. Julia Madison, she came up and struck me.
Q. What occurred after that?
A. After that, Rebecca was then hollerin', and they said, "Kill the woman and get the damned nigger out; kill him, for he voted the democratic ticket."

Quite a number of other witnesses, both white and colored, were examined as to the occurrences at this precinct. Reference is made to their testimony without further quotation.

CLUB-HOUSE PRECINCT.

(See pages 1, 2, and 3.)

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Question. Where do you reside?
Answer. I reside in Charleston.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am a lawyer by profession.
Q. Have you any business in Saint Andrew's Parish?
A. Yes, sir; I am the owner of some phosphate-mines in Saint Andrew's Parish; mining phosphate rock.
Q. What is your age?
A. Thirty-seven.
Q. How long have you resided in this State?
A. All my life, sir. I was born here, and except a temporary absence in Europe a year or two, I have always been a resident of the State.
Q. In what voting-precinct are your works situated?
A. Well, I do not know the name of the precinct; the place where the residents of the parish vote is called the "Club-House precinct."
Q. Will you state whether you went to the Club-House precinct on the morning of last election day?
A. Yes, sir; I went up to my place the evening before and spent the night there, and arrived at the precinct about six o'clock, perhaps a few minutes before six, on that morning.
Q. The morning of the election?
A. Yes, sir; the morning of the election.
Q. Whom did you go to the election with?
A. I went in company with Mr. E. T. Legare, who owns a place there a short distance from mine.
Q. When you reached the polls, how many negroes were there?
A. They were just assembling. They were scattered about the roads in the neighborhood, coming in. I suppose perhaps some fifty or so had arrived. I did not estimate the number very accurately, but there were a good many already there.
Q. (By Mr. JONES.) How many had arrived there?
A. I did not make a very careful estimate of them. About fifty were around there; it was early, and they were just coming in from all directions. I passed a good many on the road coming down. They were walking and I was riding.
Q. (By the chairman, Mr. COCHRANE.) You say there were fifty negroes at the polls when you got there?
A. Perhaps about that number.
Q. Well, did the negroes continue to come in?
A. They continued to come in pretty rapidly after that.
Q. From the same direction or different directions?
A. From different directions.
Q. Did they come singly or in bands?
A. Generally in batches; sometimes one or two; generally more than that.
Q. What were they doing?
A. They were just drawing toward the voting-precinct.
Q. I want to know what they were doing.
A. At the poll?
Q. No, sir. In coming in, were they making any noise of any kind?
A. They occasionally yelled, whooped, hooted, and blew horns about the country, but at that early hour the noise was not very great.
Q. Well, sir, in the course of two or three hours, how many negroes were there?
A. Well, after that time they began to come in rapidly; and on one or two occasions, I recollect, in large numbers. One body came rushing down the road at a great rate, yelling and whooping, and all armed, a sort of a company. They just came rushing down the road with a great noise.
Q. How were they armed?
A. They were armed mostly with muskets, most all of them with bayonets on them. Others around the polls were armed with all sorts of things.
Q. Did you see any shot-guns?
A. I do not remember seeing any; perhaps one or two shot-guns, and some had dilapidated rifles.
Q. Any clubs?
A. Clubs, bushes, sticks, old swords, and old bayonets. It struck me that they had a considerable variety of implements with them.
Q. Do you recollect seeing a negro with a club fixed in any special way?
A. I noticed one that struck my attention. It was a large oak wooden club, with nails driven in different directions through it, so that the nails would project on the outside, the head being left out about a half inch, with the spikes projecting all around the club. It was a very singular-looking weapon.
Q. Did you see him shortly after you came to the polls, or how long after?
A. I did not see him or notice him until shortly before we left.
Q. What, if anything, did you hear him say?
A. He passed by Mr. Legare and myself, and was swinging this club in one of his hands. As he passed, he made a rather obscene remark.
Q. What did he say?
A. Well, he says, "If I hit any democrats with this ting, and it don't kill him, Christ will never——."
Q. Now, when a negro would be approaching the polls to vote, what would these negroes standing about the polls do, if anything?
A. They stood around talking and moving about a great deal, going to and fro; and usually, when any new-comers would arrive, they would run down to meet them—half a dozen of them, perhaps—with whatever weapons they might have in their hands. Those who had clubs and arms would run down to meet these new arrivals, and crowd around them, and ask them if they were all right, and such questions, if they had the right ticket, and perhaps carry them tickets, and then they would come up together.
Q. During this time, how were they acting? Were they quiet or disorderly?
A. They were not quiet. There was great exhibition of excitement among them. There was no very positive disorder, because there was no opposition. There was no fighting, because there was not a single negro who voted the democratic ticket, and there was no collision between anybody.
Q. You say not a single negro voted the democratic ticket?
A. At least not up to the time I left.
Q. How long were you there?
A. I was there about three hours.
Q. Until about nine o'clock?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know of any negroes who wanted to vote the democratic ticket?
A. There were some at my place, who were employed there, who desired to vote the democratic ticket, but very few of them came to the polls. One or two desired to vote the democratic ticket, but were afraid to. One I remember particularly.
Q. What was his name?
A. The one I have in my mind was named Kent.
Q. Well, what, if anything, did you hear said to Kent?
A. He was standing near me, and I observed that he appeared to be very much frightened. He did not stand with the others. He stood to one side, looking very uncomfortable and uneasy, but I did not speak to him because I was afraid I would attract attention to him, and I did not want to do that. There was one man there who had voted, and as he was going off he turned around and called out to somebody in the crowd, "Mind now and watch Kent for me."
Q. Well, how did he vote after that?
A. He voted the republican ticket.
Q. How many negroes do you suppose were there at one time while you were there?
A. Think that the negroes increased in number in the time I came; some came and went away. They were coming and going all the time, but probably there might have been from one hundred to one hundred and fifty at one time. They were a good deal scattered about the woods.
Q. How many of these did you see armed with guns?
A. I suppose about one-third were armed with guns; perhaps a little more.
Q. How many with bludgeons?
A. Well, perhaps as many more, sir. Probably, including all varieties of things, a little more than half of them were armed.
Q. How many democratic votes were polled while you were there?
A. I think there were seven white men there, and each one of them polled a democratic vote.
Q. How many negroes had voted?
A. Well, they voted pretty rapidly, sir. I did not attempt to count them.
Q. Give us your estimate.
A. There may have been one hundred and fifty, sir.

Mr. Legare, another witness, who was present at this precinct, testifies as follows, (see page 8:)

Question. What was the general demeanor of the negroes assembled at that poll?

Answer. I will tell you the plain truth, sir. I have been through the war, and I have been in some pretty close places, but I never felt so uncomfortable in my life as I did that day. If I had undertaken to carry a democratic negro up to vote that day I believe he would have been mobbed, and I would have been mobbed for carrying him up.

FOUR-MILE CHURCH PRECINCT.

(See pages 38 and 39.)

JOHN S. HORLBECK sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Question. What is your age?
Answer. Thirty-two, sir.
Q. Where do you reside?
A. I reside in the city here.
Q. Do you do business in Christ Church Parish at Four-mile Church precinct?
A. I do business in Christ Church Parish, three miles above that place.
Q. How long have you resided in Charleston?
A. All my life, sir.
Q. Were you born in South Carolina?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What business are you engaged in?
A. I am planting, and making bricks.
Q. Will you state whether you went to Four-mile precinct on election day?
A. I did.
Q. Last election day?
A. Last election day.
Q. About what time in the morning did you get there?
A. I suppose I got there about a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes before the polls were opened.
Q. How long did you remain there?
A. I remained there until after they closed.
Q. How many negroes were there when you first went?
A. About fifty negroes.
Q. Will you state whether they were armed with anything; and, if so, what?
A. The men had clubs of various descriptions, and of the women some had clubs and some sticks or poles with bayonets stuck on the end of them. There were from fifteen to twenty women there at the time the polls were opened.
Q. State whether any more negroes arrived.
A. During the day they arrived pretty rapidly. Within two hours after the polls were opened the main batch were there.
Q. How many were there?
A. At least two hundred and fifty.
Q. They would keep coming and going, I suppose?
A. Well, in the country the negroes would vote early in the morning, and they rushed to the polls all together, and as a general thing they all leave together. At the election prior to this, when the evening came on, and when the votes were counted, I don't suppose there were twenty present.
Q. How was it at this election?
A. Well, a great many were there when the polls closed.
Q. What, if anything, did you hear these negroes say there that day?
A. When the voting commenced early in the morning, I heard one say that he would "like to see the first negro that would vote the democratic ticket here to-day."
Q. You say they were armed with clubs?
A. Yes, sir; with clubs.

Q. Well, did you hear any threats?
A. I heard similar threats to that during the day.
Q. Did you hear anything said by the negro women?
A. The women were very boisterous and noisy at times, pulling the negroes off the stand and examining their tickets when they went up to vote, saying what they would do if their husbands were to vote the democratic ticket, and that "he better not do it." In one instance I saw one woman shake a club in the face of a man that was there and curse him for a red-bearded son of a bitch. She did it two or three times, following him about the grounds. I told him he had better go away, and I got him off after a while. He said he was afraid she was going to knock him.
Q. When the polls closed what occurred?
A. Well, I can't say when the polls were closed, but when they were about closing—it was about dark in our climate here and I was not allowed inside of the voting-place—it was cold outside, and I was sitting beside a small fire, and after a while I saw guns commence to appear. There were but three white men left there at that time, at least on the outside. I am not speaking of those in the building—the board of election officers. I suppose about half a dozen came out; there were more negroes there, but half a dozen came out with arms and said, "We would like to see anybody come within fifty yards of this place to-night," and I said to my partner, "There is no chance of seeing a fair vote," and we got in the buggy and rode off. The polls were closed a half an hour when we left.
Q. With reference to these crowds of negroes who stood about the polls during the day, I wish you would state what they did as voters would approach.
A. Well, when voters were coming down the road four or five or a half a dozen of their committee would rush after them and give them tickets and ask them if they were all right. In some instances, when they did have tickets they took them away from them. None of the colored men then dared to vote the democratic ticket openly; they did it clandestinely, and to this day they dare not say they voted the democratic ticket.
Q. How many negroes voted the democratic ticket?
A. Fourteen.
Q. How many white persons?
A. Seventeen or eighteen.
Q. How many republicans voted there?
A. About four hundred and sixty or seventy. There was one white republican vote cast.
Q. From what you saw there, I wish you would state whether, in your opinion, it would have been safe for a negro to have voted the democratic ticket?
A. Well, sir, I will tell you; the negroes generally look upon a white man as being a man that will vote the democratic ticket anyhow, but I do not think it would have been safe for a white man to have boasted there that day that he voted the democratic ticket, or any other man there.
Q. Would it have been safe for any negro, not hiding his ticket, to have gone up and put it in the box?
A. It would not, and the reason I say that is this, that, to my knowledge, there were at least fourteen or fifteen hands on my place that had become members of a democratic club, and I was satisfied before the poll opened that we should have seventy-five votes.
Q. What did you base that expectation upon?
A. From general conversation with the people about my place, and with others that belonged to the club. I think there were that many that would have voted the democratic ticket.
Q. Did the negroes, prior to the election, seem to be dissatisfied with the manner in which they had been governed?
A. Very much so. I remember in one instance of being at a democratic barbecue, where there were a hundred and fifty negroes, and they appeared to be very well pleased with what they heard there. Of course they didn't all promise to vote, but a good many told me that they would.
Q. And you attribute their not voting to these negro men being there at the polls, armed, and acting as they did?
A. I would suppose that was the reason; they were afraid to do it. I know of an instance where a boy, up to the night before, said he would vote the democratic ticket at that poll if he died in his steps; but the next day he didn't do it.
Q. He voted the republican ticket?
A. He did. I saw him vote it myself. I was not two feet from him when he put it in.
Q. You spoke of fourteen negroes who voted the democratic ticket, and you said that to this day they are afraid to own it?
A. They are afraid of being knocked down, or bruised, or killed. In fact, I really hesitated about bringing a great many witnesses that could have been brought, for fear of violence after they got back.
Q. You hesitated for fear that if they appeared and made statements before the committee there would be violence offered them?
A. Yes, sir.

Frederick Randall, a colored man, who voted at this precinct, testifies, (see page 42:)

Question. Did they carry the gun along?
Answer. Yes, sir.
Q. What did they do when they got to the poll?
A. They dragged me to the polls shamefully.
Q. Where did you get your ticket?
A. They had the tickets at Mr. McCant's avenue, and when they got up there they presented this ticket, and said, "This is your ticket and you have got to vote it." George Gray said that to me and he stuck to me until I put that ticket in the box.
Q. It was a republican ticket, was it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they did not leave you until you put it in the box?
A. Never an inch, sir, until it was put into the box by me.
Q. What did the crowd of negroes do that were standing up there when you came marching up with these three men?
A. They were always sticking right around there, and there was a great crowd around there hurrahing.
Q. What ticket did you want to vote that day?
A. The democratic ticket, sir.
Q. If they had not marched you up in that way, what ticket would you have voted?
A. My intention was to vote the Wade Hampton ticket.
Q. So you would have voted that ticket if they had not scared you?
A. Yes, sir; I would have done it.

Mr. WILLIAM R. WHEELOCK (see pages 77 and 78) says:

Question. Were you at the polls in the precinct on election day?
Answer. Yes, sir.
Q. What time did you go there?
A. About half past six.
Q. What time did you go away?
A. I left there about five o'clock in the afternoon. I went home during noontime to dinner.
Q. Just tell us whether the negroes at that poll were quiet or otherwise during the day.
A. I saw a number of negroes with arms and guns; there was hardly one there without a club, or a knife, or some old bayonet, or something of that kind.
Q. Did many of them have clubs?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were there few or many negroes there.
A. From three to four hundred during the day all the time.
Q. Did you hear any threatening at all of democratic negro voters?
A. I did. I heard a number of them say if any negro voted the democratic ticket they would kill him.
Q. Did you hear any cursing?
A. I did.
Q. Loud talk?
A. A great deal of it.
Q. Were negro women about?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many?
A. I should say twenty that were prominent. There were more than that there, but the others were peaceable and quiet, and the fifteen or twenty were noisy and violent. They were armed with knives, or bayonets, or clubs.
Q. What kind of knives?
A. What you would call a butcher-knife. One woman in particular, that I knew, had a large butcher-knife stuck in her apron-belt.
Q. What were they doing?
A. Parading the road there and making a good deal of loud talk.
Q. Did they say anything at all about negro democrats?
A. Yes, sir; they said if they knew any negro who voted the democratic ticket that they would kill him or that they would pound him, and different expressions.
Q. There were other negro women there that were quiet?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know of any minors voting there?
A. I know one, sir.
Q. Who was he?
A. His name is Orphelus Grant. He goes by two or three different names, but that is what he is called more than by any other; sometimes he is called Jenkins, sometimes he is called Rankin.
Q. What was his age?
A. Eighteen.
Q. How do you know?
A. I know that when I went on to the place he was a boy eight years old, and it has been ten years since I went there.
Q. Do you know any negroes who had expressed their intention of voting the democratic ticket prior to the election?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many?
A. Quite a number; at least twenty-five that I know of particularly.
Q. Well, did they vote it?
A. I should judge not; there could not have been more than sixteen that voted the democratic ticket at that precinct.
Q. Do you know why?
A. Well, they said they were afraid to vote it.
Q. Was this afterward?
A. Yes, sir; they said so afterwards; and a great many of them said before that they were afraid to vote it openly.
Q. Since the election did any of them tell you they were afraid?
A. Yes, sir; three of them told me so this morning. They promised me last evening that they would come here before this committee; but they dared not come. They told me that they thought it would not be safe for them to go back on the place again. One of them told me that he would come if I said so, but that he would never go back to the place again. I told him he had better stay where he was. I spoke of those three for the reason that their testimony would have been important, because all three of them were assaulted by the negroes at different times.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Did you see it?
A. No, sir; I only have their word for it.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Do you know of any influence prior to the election being used by republican negroes to prevent democratic negroes from voting?
A. I have often heard them threaten if they did vote what would be done to them. They would threaten to whip, to pound, or to kill them, and so on; there would be different expressions.
Q. What is your business?
A. I have charge of a platation called Woodland, in that parish, and conduct that—settling the estate of my former partner, Alexander Knox. I was with him six years. I have been North for the last three years, and they sent for me last May, at the time of his death, and I came down here to settle the estate, and have been conducting the business since.
Q. I will just ask you, sir, whether these negroes are intelligent or a very ignorant class of people?
A. Well, the majority of them are an intelligent set of laborers.
Q. I am speaking now of their intelligence, not of their capacity to work.
A. Well, none of them are capable of reading or writing at all. They cannot write their names or read, and I don't know of but one or two on that plantation that could do so.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. You are not a native of this State?
A. No, sir; I am not.
Q. Where were you born?
A. In Massachusetts.
Q. How long have you lived in this State?
A. It has been ten years since I first came. I staid here six years and then went away, and was gone three years and a little more. It was in the spring of 1867 when I came here.
Q. How many negroes have you had employed on the Woodland plantation?
A. We have settled on that place, men and women together, about one hundred and fifty. There are not as many as that there now, but when I was here formerly they had that many.
Q. How many have you there now?
A. During the busy season, in the summer, there are a hundred and fifty because we plant a number of vegetables and employ a great many laborers.
Q. Have you been a democrat ever since you have been in this State?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you belong to the republican party?
A. I do.
Q. You voted the democratic ticket at the last election?
A. I did.
Q. How long have you been with that party?
A. I think that I voted the democratic ticket a year ago—the State democratic ticket.
Q. Have you belonged to the republican party up to two years ago?
A. Yes, sir.

At this point the committee call attention to the report of General Hunt, (see pages 200 and 201:)

"Captain Randolph states that he found neither marshal nor deputy at Beaufort, and that it was reported to him that the United States supervisor was stopped on his way to the polling-place, and upon showing his papers to the negroes, who stopped him, had them taken from him and destroyed and was obliged to fly for his life.

"Lieutenant Adams reports that at Strawberry Ferry a company of colored men, about forty in number, were marched to the polls with arms, under a leader, said to be John Lowery, (colored,) though no riot or disturbance occurred.

"Lieutenant Baldwin states that no disturbance connected with the elections occurred on John's Island; that leading citizens informed him and he believed this was due to the presence of the troops.

"Lieutenant Edgerton reports that no disturbance occurred at Adams Run, and that he has every reason to believe that the presence of the troops prevented a serious one taking place at the polls.

"Lieutenant Jefferson, immediately on his arrival at Walterborough, on the evening of the 6th, in a conference with the United States marshal, Commissioner Glover, the intendant of the town, and the leaders of both political parties, learned that while they had no apprehension of disorder at Walterborough they believed there would be trouble at Blue-house polls. Acting on this, he marched early next morning to that place, and says he has no doubt that their arrival prevented serious trouble. In the last three cases these officers report that the danger arose from the disposition of the republican negroes to interfere with those of their own color who desired to vote the democratic ticket."

There was a good deal of evidence taken by the committee in regard to the conduct of the election in Georgetown and Colleton Counties. In the former of these counties occurred the among the negroes, which for a time created great excitement. The leaders in these strikes were also prominent republican politicians, and several of the witnesses testified that the strikes were gotten up not because the negroes wanted or needed higher wages, but for the purpose of precipitating if possible a conflict between the whites and blacks. It appears from the evidence that upon one occasion when the strikers, led by a prominent republican negro named Jack Wineglass, came into the field where the negroes were at work, they proceeded to beat the democratic negroes but suffered the republicans to escape. There was also a great deal of intimidation of democratic negroes in the CITY OF CHARLESTON.

LABOR STRIKES

The testimony of Rivers, the negro who spoke at the democratic meeting on the evening of the King-street riot, is very full upon this subject.

Mr. Barker (see pages 69 and 70) says:

Q. Now, sir, I wish you would state what influence was exercised by the colored men over their colored brethren who might desire to vote the democratic ticket?

A. The younger and bolder of the negro men, those who were more disorderly and were not men of families, and not men of quiet dispositions, were generally the material that were organized to be active agents in the business of intimidation, first in the labor movement and afterward the political intimidation. Boys of seventeen and the more desperate side of the disorderly element of the negro population of older years constituted the body of those who were active in the matter. They went about threatening any negro who would dare to go with the white people, or who would dare to go with the land-owners, or who would not vote the republican ticket, and they were assisted very powerfully in their work by the negro women who were under the influence of the negro preachers, who are generally republicans. The negro preachers were in many instances active politicians. The Rev. R. H. Cain, who is the editor of the Missionary Record, in the city of Charleston, and the republican Congressman-elect from this congressional district, is the strongest man known among them, and the most incendiary. In the early part of the campaign he held a meeting, at which I was not present, but the proceedings of the meeting were published in the paper, at which meeting he appealed to their race prejudices and to those feelings of antagonism to the white people which started the inflammatory element in the campaign. With him were several others, and among them a man, also a negro, who was present at the speaking at this Strawberry meeting, named Hunter. Those people exercised a sway over the women. This sway was increased solely, I suppose, from the fact that the element was so completely ignorant. The combined influence of the religious teachers and the political teachers and leaders carried the most absolute sway over the colored people in this seaboard country. It was so strong that nothing could resist it. Their sway antagonized all the efforts which were made by the opposite side who represented the capitalists, the property-holders, the intelligence, and the general character of the community. There were many touching instances of the struggle between kindly feelings on the part of the colored man in favor of those whom he had lived with all his life and the sway of this party and race obligation which was brought to bear upon him. Those who showed any disposition at all to come over to the democratic side were denounced as traitors to their party and their race. Their political leaders told them that if they went with the white people and with the land-owners, they were voting to put themselves and children back into slavery, their lives were threatened, and exclusion from churches and the social sympathy of their people—everything was brought to bear upon them. Intimidation was exercised more and more as the canvass went on up to the day of the election, and at the time of the election.

Colonel Simonton (see pages 127 and 128) says:

Question. Were these all among the colored people?

Answer. Yes; I doubt whether there was any break in the whites. I found they were very kindly disposed at first. They thought that we were contending only for honest government in the State; that we were trying to see if they would not assist us in driving away from the strongholds of power men who had settled among us, as we thought, simply for office, and they were very kindly disposed, indeed. I received promises of support from nearly every man that I talked to, and those promises were kept up until the Sunday before the election. I do not know what influence was used on that day; that is, I do not know of my own knowledge what influence was used. I do know that the very strongest efforts were made in every pulpit and county, and on Sunday evening and Monday nearly every one of these men either communicated to me in person or sent me a message that he did not dare to carry out these promises; that it was as much as his life was worth.

* * * * * * *

Q. Well, sir, proceed.

A. Well, sir; the result of the election proved that the apprehensions were correct, because they voted in a solid mass against us. The votes of this county were almost altogether upon the line of freeman on one side and freedmen on the other. Those who had been emancipated by the war went against us almost in a solid body and those whose condition was not altered by the war voted with us. At every poll from which I heard during that day there was no difficulty at all, and white men and men who had been free voted the democratic ticket; there was no trouble about it. But in every instance in which a freedman attempted to vote he was resisted and prevented, and either did not vote at all or voted the republican ticket.

* * * * * * *

Q. What, in your judgment, would have been the result of the election if there had been no intimidation and the negroes had been allowed to vote as they saw fit, and according to their own judgment?

A. I think, sir, that if this extraordinary influence to which I have referred had not been brought to bear upon the colored people that the worst result for us would have been a majority in favor of the republican party of about from 2,000 to 2,500 votes in the county. I am satisfied that if we could have gone among them from the beginning and not been driven off by these discussions that we would have carried the county.

Q. Do you know many democratic negroes who voted the democratic ticket prior to the election and who were prevented at this election?

A. I can tell you this: I had in my possession lists of democratic colored clubs all over the county. There were three democratic clubs on John's Island, numbering in one club about forty-five, in another about sixty, and in another possibly about fifty, say one hundred and fifty in all. Well, they were in constant communication with me. I had no agency in getting up the clubs at all, but they had volunteered their services and had come over, and they saw me every day. Well, we got out of those clubs of one hundred and fifty or one hundred and sixty men 6 votes. There was a democratic club at the Red Top Church, in Saint Andrew's Parish, which at one time numbered over sixty-five. I don't think that we got 3 votes at the Red Top Church on the day of election. I know that the president of one of my clubs in Saint Andrew's Parish was assaulted the Sunday before election and badly cut up, and we had to vote him in Charleston.

Q. Who was that?

A. A man named Parker. We had in the parish of Christ Church, where this little village of Mount Pleasant is situated, nearly seventy-five active men, co-operating with the democratic party—all colored men, and of those seventy-five we did not get 20 votes on the day of election. In Saint Thomas and Saint Dennis, as far back as the month of June, I had a very active and lively democratic club that was increasing in its membership, but after the Cainhoy affair every man resigned and voted the republican ticket. In Saint James Santee, the outlying parish in this county, round a little village called McLellansville, we had a majority of voters who were avowed democrats. I had the parish thoroughly canvassed.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Do you remember how many voters there were in that parish?

A. I will not be positive, but I think there are from six to seven hundred, and we did not get a vote on the day of election. * * * In my own house there was a man between whom and myself there has existed the kindest of feelings, and he was spoken to on the day of the election. I think it was the most piteous scene I ever saw in my life. This servant is a thorough gentleman; his manners are just as good as those of any man you ever saw, and my wife said to him: "Colonel Simonton is a candidate for the senate, and you have been here so long with us that I take it for granted you will vote for him." Well, he hesitated, and then she turned to one of us and said: "Francis feels a little uneasy about voting. Go with him to the polls. I am satisfied that he will vote for us." The negro stood in the middle of the floor and the tears rolled down his cheeks as he replied: "Mrs. Simonton, I would die for master; I would give my wife and children up for him, but I dare not go out of this gate; it would be at the cost of my life."

Mr. Miles (see page 134) says:

Question. If the negroes had not been intimidated or molested, but had been permitted to vote according to their own best judgment in the last election, what, in your opinion, would have been the result in this county?

Answer. We carried the city, as it was, by a small majority. I believe that the result would have been that we would have carried the city by, say, 2,500 majority, and we would have diminished the vote in the county very considerably, so that probably the entire republican majority of the county would have been brought down to about 2,500.

Q Suppose you had been allowed to go out among the colored people—when I say "you" I mean the democratic speakers—and freely speak to them, without threats or violence having been used, from the commencement of the campaign to the conclusion of it, what effect would that have had, in your opinion?

A. It would have had a very decided effect, I should judge, from the professions that were made. It would have given us a large accession of voters.

There was of course throughout the investigation some conflict of evidence. Many ignorant negroes appeared before the committee ready to testify to anything which would tend to relieve them and the leading white and black republicans from the censure and odium which their conduct merited. But the committee has based the conclusions at which it has arrived upon the testimony of unbiased men, and men of character, relying upon negro evidence only when it was sufficiently corroborated. They are fully justified in their conclusions by the weight of the evidence.

The committee also call attention to the large

INCREASE OF THE VOTE IN CHARLESTON COUNTY.

Mr. Barker (see page 70) says:

Question. About what is the population of this city and district?

Answer. The population of Charleston City, I believe, is estimated about fifty thousand, and the population of the county has been variously estimated at eighty thousand, including the city. I don't think that any accurate census has ever been taken since the war.

Q. Do you remember the votes given in the county altogether?

A. Twenty-three thousand, I think, were about the figures in round numbers, of which 15,000 were stated to be republican and 8,000 democratic.

Q. Well, sir, what do you suppose would have been the vote of this county and city if none of this intimidation which you have described had been exercised over the people?

A. I should suppose that the best judgment upon that subject could be formed from the previous vote. I think that the legitimate vote of the county would not be more than 15,000 or 16,000.

Colonel Simonton (see page 129) says:

Question. Your attention had not been called to the extraordinary large vote according to the population at the last election?

Answer. O, yes, sir; I have always been satisfied that our vote was four or five thousand beyond its legitimate number.

Q. What led you to form that opinion?

A. The vast increase of the vote in the city over two years ago. I think that the legitimate vote of Charleston was thrown before eleven o'clock on the day of election, and that every other vote that went into the box after eleven o'clock was illegitimate. It is impossible to stop repeating in a population like ours.

Q. Why do you think it is impossible to stop the repeating?

A. Well, sir, if you have had much experience with colored men, you will know that you cannot tell one colored man from another, especially if you see him for the first time. You cannot tell a negro man from a negro woman if they are dressed in the same clothing.

Q. You think that is the reason chiefly?

A. That is one reason, and a very good reason. We have no check on that at all. There is no registration in this State to fix the residence of a voter, and then it is a class of population that floats from one ward to another.

Q. They are not required to vote in the same ward?

A. No, sir, they are not required to vote in the ward of their residence at all.

Q. Do you know of any boats passing repeatedly that day from Charleston here to the islands and up the river landings in the same county?

A. Early in the morning a very large number of voters, or rather a very large number of men who could vote, passed from Charleston and went over in Christ Church Parish across Cooper River. A large number came from the direction of James and John's Island in Saint Andrews, on Ashley River, and if you were to examine the vote down in the last poll in this city at the Union Star engine-house in ward 2 you would find that an enormous vote was polled there early in the morning.

In the protest which Mr. Mills published just after the election, and which he made a part of his evidence, the following paragraph appears, (see page 133:)

"That gross and unparalleled fraud was practiced in the casting of the vote of said county, large numbers of persons under age having been allowed by the managers to vote at every precinct, and many voters having illegally and fraudulently voted repeatedly at the different voting-precincts, the total vote in said county purporting to have been cast at said election amounting to 4,000, or more than there are qualified voters resident in said county, and that such fraud and repeating and voting of minors and other unqualified voters was practiced by the republican party, which was opposed to the democratic party, the supporters of these petitioners, by which fraud and repeating and illegal votes the result of the election was changed."

There was a good deal of testimony taken as to what was known as the PREFERENCE POLICY.

It had been alleged that the whites had banded together under a compact not to employ any negro who did not vote the democratic ticket. The committee are satisfied that some individuals in the city of Charleston did discharge republican negroes because of their politics, but they are also satisfied that this policy was limited in its scope and confined to comparatively few persons. A number of witnesses (perhaps eight or ten) appeared before the committee and testified that they had been discharged from employment because they were republicans. It was also proven that one of the democratic daily papers (the News and Courier) advised the adoption of this policy, and that at various public democratic meetings resolutions were adopted to like effect. But while this is true, the evidence shows that the policy referred to was not adopted to any great extent.

In speaking of the matter, Colonel Simonton says, (see pages 128 and 129:)

Question. I want to ask you whether you know of any system having been adopted by the whites to discharge colored men in their employ unless they agreed to vote the democratic ticket?

Answer. The matter was brought up in the committee of which I was a member. It had been suggested by one or two persons, and I think one of our newspapers, that no man should be employed unless he was a democrat. The question was propounded to us by the owner of a very large wharf property, who employed a very large number of negroes, and who wanted from the committee an expression of their opinion with regard to that policy, and the committee, after a very full discussion, refused to countenance any policy of that kind.

Q. Do you know whether any such policy was adopted to any extent?

A. I think that such policy was inaugurated partially. Some gentlemen who employed negroes determined to employ none but negroes who promised to vote with them; but I am satisfied that it was not carried out to any extent at all. It was the result of individual action upon the part of some persons. * * * I had an opportunity myself of advising a gentleman who has charge of Mr. Adger's wharves with reference to this same policy. Mr. Adger has four large wharves, and he does as much business as any cotton-factor in the city. The chief wharfinger came to me to consult me as to retaining a colored man who is an ardent republican. I asked him if he had anything to do with the King-street riot. He said no. I asked, "Is he a loud-mouthed politician, discussing on the wharf openly?" He said, "No; but he is an open and avowed republican, a bitter opponent of the democratic party;" and I advised him not to discharge him.

Q. I will ask you at this point if there were any republicans, loud-mouthed republicans, who were talking constantly and losing their time, who were discharged?

A. In some instances men were discharged who were connected openly with the riots that I have spoken of—men who openly and constantly express their sympathy with the people who were engaged in those riots and defended them. They were discharged not because they were republicans, but because we supposed they were endangering the peace of the community. I do not think if those riots had not taken place that you would have ever heard of any man's discharge because of his political sentiments.

Mr. Mills (see pages 133 and 134) says:

Question. I will ask you now whether you know of any system having been adopted by the whites of discharging from their employment negroes who would not vote or pledge themselves to vote the democratic ticket?

Answer. I can add but very little to what the chairman of the committee testified in my hearing on that subject.

Q. You have heard the testimony of Colonel Simonton?

A. Yes, sir; it is entirely correct upon that subject. I would state in reference to the matter just spoken of, that I was one of the committee who prepared a report in which we called attention to the laws of the United States for discharging men for political opinions, and the result was a resolution of the executive committee that we decline to give any such advice as that; that the employment of labor was a matter of individual and personal judgment; that the grounds upon which they would employ or would not employ must be left to individuals entirely. I would state that there was a good deal of talk and a good deal in the newspapers about it, but the old adage, "Much cry, and little wool," would apply.

CONCLUSION.

Your committee report, in conclusion, that at no time during the canvass was there any intimidation or attempted intimidation upon the part of the white people. All through the excitement of the campaign, although violence and lawlessness greeted them upon every side, although riot and bloodshed surrounded them, although they saw inoffensive men shot down without provocation or excuse, and no courts of law to punish the offenders, yet amid all they showed a moral heroism which must ever command the highest respect and admiration. In speaking of the immunity from punishment enjoyed by criminals, Mr. Walker says, (see page 224:)

"I made the deliberate charge against Cyrus Guillard of murdering Mr. Simmonds, and presented the charge before a trial justice, who told me it was useless to attempt to arrest Cyrus Guillard, because in the first place the sheriff had already refused to execute warrants for him, and because, also, if arrested, the republican leaders (this was an appointee of Governor Chamberlain who told me this) would not permit the trial to be other than an abortion. Cyrus Guillard was carried around by Mr. Bowen to every political meeting that I ever attended. Mr. Bowen would always get up and make a very conciliatory speech and Guillard would always follow him with a very incendiary one; he would do all he could to stir up the negroes."

Such is the condition of the people of Charleston, a city once the home of learning and the dwelling-place of beauty and of chivalry.

All that was bright and beautiful has given place to desolation and decay. The light which shines elsewhere is denied to this people; the liberty enjoyed by others is not vouchsafed to them; the law which through the North stretches its protecting arms around the person and property of every citizen, however humble, affords no protection to the broken-hearted people of South Carolina. Groping amid the darkness, they are looking for the dawn, looking for the time when they will be relieved from the yoke and burden of rulers who are aliens to their soil, and when they will be relieved from a thralldom worse than death.

ALEXANDER G. COCHRANE.
THOS. L. JONES.

Report of the subcommittee of which Hon. JOHN F. PHILIPS was chairman.

Hon. MILTON SAYLER, Chairman.

SIR: The undersigned, constituting a majority of the subcommittee, beg to report that, in pursuance of the resolution of the whole committee, the subcommittee proceeded to the city of Charleston and investigated, as fully as was possible in the time allowed, the conduct of the election, and the incidents and circumstances bearing thereon, in the counties of Charleston and Beaufort.

WHALEY'S CHURCH.

There were 600 votes cast at this precinct, of which only 18 were democratic. Ten or twelve covered the whole number of white men voting at this poll. The weight of the testimony established the fact that this poll was not free, fair, and open. The conduct of the colored republican voters is indefensible, and, on principle, ought to vitiate the entire vote. Republican voters came there in companies armed with guns, and the great body of these 582 republican voters were armed with clubs or bludgeons of such a character as to make them formidable weapons. Here as elsewhere their chief opposition seemed to be against the right of any colored man to vote the democratic ticket. Both before and at the election they made violent threats of severe personal injury, extending to the taking of the life of any colored man who should vote that ticket. Some colored men so disposed to vote were deterred by these threats from voting at all; and in two or three instances colored men were assaulted and set upon in full view of the polls for casting democratic votes. The law of the State prescribing the manner of conducting such election was violated in letter and spirit. For instance, it requires the voting to be by ballot, which "shall be so folded as to conceal the contents, and shall be deposited in the box by the voter," the evident object and intent of the law being to secure a candid expression of the voter's will by enabling him to vote a concealed ballot; whereas the evidence shows that the republican tickets here as at every poll were printed in red ink, with a large eagle plainly discernible through the paper when folded, the only exception found to the character of this ticket being in the city of Charleston, where the "crowing cock" and the representation of a hustings meeting and artillery salutes were printed conspicuously on the back of the ticket. At this (Whaley's) poll especially the voter was required by the outside crowd and the republican managers of the election who administered the oaths to hold up the ticket in his right hand while taking the oath, so that the character of his ticket was known to all. The democrats were not allowed to challenge, so that some minors voted, while the republican rallying committee thronged the poll and examined the ticket of almost every suspected voter, and took away from them the democratic tickets. A number of colored men testified before the committee that they went to the polls with the desire and purpose to vote the democratic ticket, but on account of the violence and threats of the large number of colored republicans they were forced to vote the republican ticket. Mr. Hard, the white democratic manager of election, a gentleman of intelligence and high character, and other white witnesses of equal credibility, testified that between four and five o'clock p. m., an hour and a half before the poll closed, one of the companies of colored republicans marched around the poll, sang "Hold the fort," and fired off their guns, the captain giving the command to reload at once. There is on this point a conflict of testimony as to the time of this occurrence—whether it transpired before or after the closing of the polls—the weight of the evidence, in the judgment of the majority of the committee, being in favor of the position that it occurred about 4.30 p. m.

BIGGIM CHURCH.

At this precinct, about 400 votes were cast, of which the republican ticket received 360 and the democratic ticket 40. This poll was almost a counterpart in its management and the conduct of the republican voters of Whaley's Church. There were about twenty-five whites, a part of whom brought guns with them. The colored republicans were at the polls in companies, armed with guns and clubs, and drilled during the voting, with guns in their hands, around the house in which the election was held. Threats and intimidation prevailed to an alarming extent. One negro orator at a public meeting threatened that if the democrats succeeded to wade knee-deep in blood, declaring that the negroes held the white people at their mercy, for they would draw the trunk doors that held in check the waters, and flood and destroy the rice-fields. Colored men were threatened with corporal punishment and loss of life should they vote the democratic ticket. Numbers of them were thus deterred from either exercising their right of suffrage at all or compelled to do so against their judgment. There was in this neighborhood a democratic club in which there were about sixty colored men, but they became so alarmed on account of threatened violence and proscription that they voted the republican ticket.

STRAWBERRY.

At this precinct the republican ticket received 360 majority. About twelve guns were seen at this place in a buggy. These are supposed to have been the property of white voters, of whom there were about fifty. The colored republicans were armed, and voted with guns in their hands. Captain William Lawrence, after voting his company, marched them off in the direction of Mount Holly precinct, but whether they voted there again is only a matter of conjecture. Access to the poll at Strawberry lay through a gateway, where the republicans leaned their guns against the fences while they deposited their ballots, and though there was here a larger colored democratic vote than at the other precincts named, many of them were intimidated from voting the ticket of their choice. George Sass seems to have been the ruling spirit among the colored people. The evidence shows him to be ignorant, vicious, and proscriptive. Before and at the election his threats were bloody and dreadful. He threatened to flood the rice-fields, and at the polls he declared "that every colored man who voted the democratic ticket was a marked man." He took democratic tickets from voters. Some were frightened into voting the republican ticket, and others were prevented from voting at all. A democratic manager who challenged minors was threatened with being "knocked in the head." One Baalam Barnard, a colored witness introduced by Judge LAPHAM, gave testimony that conveys a faint conception of his gross illiteracy and fierce untamed nature. He best illustrates the lack of individuality in the average colored voter in this section, and how in squads, and under a discipline not to be interfered with, they are voted by their quasi-military commandants. He brought up his company, one hundred and twenty strong, and after stacking arms and supplying them with tickets, he proceeded at their head to the poll, and when a white man named Rhett attacked the rear of this column with offers of democratic ballots, Baalam opened his mouth and said he must not bribe his men, "For I commands these mens!"

FOUR-MILE HOUSE.

Preceding the election the same threats were made here as elsewhere against colored men who should vote the democratic ticket, and one man, John Johnson, was set upon after the election by colored republicans and beaten in a most brutal manner with clubs for the offense of voting the democratic ticket. Dill's Bluff precinct is but a repetition of Four-mile House, and was worse. Between 250 and 300 votes were cast here, all republican save 25 or 30. The republicans were armed with guns in hand all day of election, and a company came up armed and cheering, which is believed to be the same company which left Strawberry precinct, the witnesses being mistaken merely as to the hours of arrival and departure. Guns were fired off by these guardians of elections within fifty yards of the polls. Voters were dragooned and brought to the polls under threats of death and the mob law, and through fear were coerced to vote against their convictions.

MOUNT HOLLY

CHARLESTON CITY,

in the allotment of work between the subcommittees, was assigned to that of which Hon. A. G. COCHRANE is chairman; but one witness, P. G. Fitz Simmons, a gentleman of unusual intelligence and great probity, residing at Biggim Church, examined by us, details an incident which gives some idea of the temper of the colored people in this city and the terrorism they exercised over those of their race who were disposed to quit the republican party. He went to Charleston before the election, with his democratic club, to attend a political meeting which was to be addressed by General Hampton, candidate for governor. There were some sixty colored men in this club. In Charleston these men were so taunted, jeered at, and threatened by the swarms of colored republicans that they could not be gotten out to the meeting, but they remained in the room where they were quartered all day, huddled up as if struck with panic.

BEAUFORT COUNTY.

The conduct of the election in this county was investigated by this subcommittee as thoroughly as was possible in the time allowed.

MITCHELVILLE PRECINCT.

Four hundred and seventy-six votes were polled here, of which only 10 were democratic. There were, perhaps, twelve or thirteen white men who voted here during the day, but after the morning there were only three or four whites left on the ground. The evidence shows that the conduct of the colored republicans was threatening and riotous to a degree that gave them complete and undisputed control of the ballot. W. S. Drayton, a white man and one of the managers of the election, testified that John McFall was set upon by the mob and driven to seek protection of the managers for distributing democratic tickets. He undertook to read the riot act to them, or the law of the United States, denouncing such conduct at an election for Federal officers. The mob denounced the law as a "damned democratic paper." Told Drayton to go to hell; called him a son of a bitch, and told him if he would come out of the house they would break his head. He appealed to one of his co-managers, Peoples, an old colored man who preached to these people at times, who made an ineffectual effort to quiet them, and was compelled to seek refuge in the house, where he denounced their conduct as shameful. McFall was set upon by negro women, who seem to have attended the polls in this and Charleston County. He was assaulted and beaten with sticks and clubs until his life was in imminent peril. He escaped on condition that he should quit the grounds within ten minutes, not to return until after six o'clock p. m. He took refuge at a farm-house, half a mile distant, where he was followed by a mob of men and women, with "banners flying," yelling and hooting. He was saved from them by being locked up in an outhouse by the colored tenants to whom he applied for protection. W. F. Wilder, a prominent republican, and a recent appointee of Mr. Chamberlain to the office of treasurer of Beaufort County, undertook to extenuate this ill-treatment of McFall by attributing it to the fact that he had attempted to practice an imposition upon the republican voters by distributing democratic tickets with the devices of the republican tickets. The only evidence in support of this allegation is the statement of the witness, Wilder, that McFall admitted to him that he had given out some of these tickets, but stated at the time that they were democratic tickets. We have no testimony of the witness, McFall, as to the truth of this statement, for he had been examined by the committee and gone home before we had any intimation of Wilder's charges. But the committee submit the following facts disclosed by the evidence, in refutation of the conduct of those voters being attributable to such provocation: First, their insulting and threatening conduct toward the two managers, Drayton and Peoples; second, they assaulted another white man, Mr. Politzer, and declared to him and Cline, another white man, "This is republican ground, and no democrat shall vote here;" third, they threatened to kill the whites on the island, and said they would cut to pieces any colored man who voted the democratic ticket; fourth, a white man who had been a sailor, on asking if he could vote there, was assaulted by the colored men as soon as it was discovered that he wished to vote the democratic ticket; fifth, McFall testified that he was personally told by a friendly colored man on arriving at the polls that if he intended to vote the democratic ticket he had better do it before they, the colored men, got there. On their arrival the crowd began at once to curse him as a democrat, declaring that they did not "believe in any damned rebel son of a bitch who had owned slaves coming there to vote the democratic ticket," and that they "would root out every white skin on the island." This witness further says that they would not allow any democratic speaker to come to the island; sixth Mr. McIntire, a white democrat, who had a store near the polls, at whose house McFall staid the night, after the election, was shot by an assassin in the night, the shot being fired through a window into his store. Fortunately he was not killed, but he has since been shot and killed. McFall was driven away and made a prisoner; the sailor left, and so did Politzer; McIntire went to his store; and when the witness Wilder says it was all peaceable after eleven o'clock it is plainly seen that it was the peace of resignation which the wolf proclaims when the keeper is gone and the unsuspecting flock is huddled at his mercy.

PARIS ISLAND.

One hundred and fifty-five votes were polled at this precinct, of which 143 were republican and 12 democratic, and only 6 white votes. The proceedings at this place were characterized by the grossest abuses and the most intolerant spirit. The few colored men who did vote the democratic ticket did so early, before the republicans got in. The republicans were boisterous and tumultuous. They snatched democratic tickets from colored men, dragged them away from the polls, and after handing them republican tickets dragged them back to the polls and made them vote. They utterly ignored and disregarded the United States supervisors of election and United States deputy marshals. They thronged the inside of the house where the managers and ballot-box were, yelling, singing, threatening, and declaring that to be a republican island and vowing to run every democrat off of it. They would force open the hands of colored men and tear up their democratic tickets. Their party zeal was stimulated and their patriotic ardor fired by an appeal to their appetites made by Congressman SMALLS in a bounteous dinner furnished by him, at which no unfed democrat was allowed to satisfy his hunger.

W. H. Niver, a white witness, testified that he was a native of the State of New York and had lived in Beaufort County since the war, pursuing his trade as a carpenter. He had always voted the republican ticket until this year, when, to use his own language, he "could not stand it any longer." He states that tickets were forcibly taken away from colored democrats, and when they did vote they had to do it slyly and slip off home. He was twice assaulted and beaten with fists and clubs in the presence of the officers, and when asked if he had the mob arrested, said, "No; because there was no law or justice in that county." By the sixth section of the election law of this State it is provided "that the polls shall be opened at such voting-places at six o'clock in the morning and closed at six in the evening, and shall be kept open between these hours without intermission or adjournment." The evidence shows that this poll was not opened until seven a. m. and was closed at four p. m., and though it does not appear that there were any applications to vote after four p. m., the fact that it does appear that it was important for some to vote early if they wished to vote at all shows the policy of the law and the necessity of its observance, and the non-observance of which legally vitiates such election.

GREY'S HILL PRECINCT.

There were 467 republican and 9 democratic votes polled at this precinct, and and only 2 white votes. The election here was characterized by violence and intimidation on the part of the republicans. The United States supervisor of election, a white democrat, was assaulted, his commission taken away from him and torn up. They laid claim to the poll as republican property, and threatened to kill any man who voted the democratic ticket. The other white man, B. Van Ness, was one of the managers. He is a native of New York, and had served as a Federal soldier in General Kilpatrick's command. He was sent from the town of Beaufort to act as manager at this precinct, because there was no white man in it who could act. He says the negroes began their clamoring early about democrats voting there. That they were after the supervisor with clubs, and told him (Van Ness) if he went out of the house they would knock his damned brains out. They declared no democrat should vote there, and if any negro voted the democratic ticket they would beat his brains out and bury him in the sands. He sent to Beaufort for troops to protect the polls, but without avail. It is attempted by the minority to show that the occasion of the assault upon Mr. Porteous, the supervisor, was the distribution by him of democratic tickets bearing the devices of the republican tickets. The only witness to sustain this is one F. D. J. Lawrence, colored, of Beaufort, whose personnel and method as a witness gives little weight to his credibility. He says he left Beaufort the morning of the election at 5.30 a. m. for Grey's Hill, and arrived at 6.30 a. m. On driving up he found a commotion over this simulated republican ticket found in the hands of Porteous, who was then holding them, mixed up with republican tickets. He is flatly contradicted by his own party friends. Congressman SMALLS testified that he sent this witness from Beaufort to Grey's Hill, distant seven miles, between eight and nine o'clock a. m., after he discovered this simulated ticket in circulation at Beaufort. William Lawrence, the colored manager, says it was two or three hours after six o'clock when F. D. J. Lawrence got there, and all the witnesses, three in number, introduced by the minority contradicted this swift witness, for they state that it was one Hamilton, a colored republican, who could read well, who had those tickets, and the colored men assaulted him, as they allege, for faithlessness to the party; but the white witnesses say the negroes assaulted Hamilton because as chairman of the republican committee he scratched his ticket and voted for one Judd. The evidence shows that Porteous had the straight, undisguised democratic tickets, and that there was no complaint made of him on account of the distribution of tickets. In respect to this matter of the tickets, it may be remarked that the republican party in this county plainly violated the law in the character of their tickets. They were printed in red ink, with the flaming eagle, so that when folded it was plainly distinguishable by the crowd; and in view of the hazards attending the casting of a democratic vote by a colored man, if the simulated ticket was circulated, it may have been the means of enabling him to run the gauntlet of the inquisitorial guards of colored republicans thronging the way to the ballot-box. There was at this poll a third white man, Pat. Hammond, who said he intended to vote the democratic ticket, but he "did not like the looks of things," and he left without voting.

ABRAM P. JENKINS.

The experience and treatment of this colored man constitute a strong indictment against the spirit of lawlessness and proscription prevalent among the colored republicans of Beaufort County. He was a candidate on the democratic ticket for the Legislature, and was the object of a ribaldry and persecution calculated to drive from his convictions a man of less moral courage and heroic fortitude. The evidence shows a specimen threatening letter received by him before the election, containing threats which were subsequently executed. He was cursed and abused; his house was assailed by night and bombarded with brickbats; the democratic club attended by him was invaded and broken up by colored republicans, and these same men interfered with and interrupted the democratic meeting addressed by General Hampton at the town of Beaufort, when the colored democrats tried to stop them, the republican policemen arrested and put in jail the colored democrats, and the chairman had to break up the meeting. At Woodlawn precinct, where he attended the election, there were only 8 democratic votes cast out of 320, although there was a democratic club on this island with fifty-five colored members. On the day of election they were threatened with expulsion from the island. They were compelled to approach the polls through a gate and show their tickets to republican patrols. This precinct was carried by the conservatives two years ago. After the election this man Jenkins was waylaid at night on his way from church where he had gone with his family. He was beaten by a man named Polite, alias Barnes, a colored barber, who had threatened to do so prior to the election on account of his politics. He was beaten in a most brutal manner; his face, eyes, nose, and mouth were frightfully battered and smashed, and for weeks he was a creature of suffering and an object of pity. No better illustration of the administration of civil law in South Carolina could be given than in its application to the just cause of this shamefully abused citizen. He applied to the civil magistrate of the town for a warrant for the arrest of his assailant, and was referred to the United States commissioner.

There was a second party aiding this assault by his presence. The United States commissioner recognized the party for his appearance before the United States grand jury at Charleston, which, as has been shown since the committee left there, ignored the bill against Polite, alias Barnes.

PETER JOHNSON.

This colored man was threatened before the election for his democratic tendencies, and on the day of election at Lawton Church he voted the democratic ticket. Afterwards he was taken out from his house at night and most cruelly and barbarously whipped with a rawhide. The trial justice issued a warrant for the apprehension of the criminals. They were arrested by the constable and his posse, when the prisoners were rescued by a band of negro men and women, the men being members of a State militia company, armed with guns and bayonets furnished them by the State. One of the assaulting party was killed and one of the constable's posse, Mr. Shuman, a white man, was killed and left on the ground. The top of his head was shot off, and the negroes, with savage fiendishness, pulled out his brains with cotton-stalks, and his body was bayoneted and bruised. Another of the posse, Mr. De Loach, a white man, was shot and struck with a gun-stock, until the hammer was buried in his shoulder. He survives, but his condition is critical. The perpetrators of these outrages are said to be in jail, but they have not been tried.

PETER JONES,

a colored man, details the conduct of the so-called rice-strikers, from Colleton County. They passed from plantation to plantation, interrupting labor and compelling the laborers to join them under threats of the cowhide. They whipped this man Jones and told him he must not vote the democratic ticket, and threatened to shoot him on the day of election. He determined to vote the democratic ticket for the first time because Governor Chamberlain did not protect the people from these mobs. They disregarded the officers of the law. They cowhided the deputy sheriff who attempted to arrest them and the trial justice who issued the warrant. He attended the election at where 19 democratic votes were cast in a total of 618. There were thirteen whites at this poll. The history of this poll is but a recital of republican violence and intimidation. They waylaid the road and catechised colored men. They took Jones's horse from him and kept it several days. He swears that, to his personal knowledge, some twenty men were deterred from voting the democratic ticket. Republicans attended a democratic meeting to participate, and, to prevent trouble, the democrats abandoned the meeting to them. The election at Lawton Church and at Lawtonville precinct was but a repetition of those already detailed in matters of force and violence. A company of armed militia was at the latter place and voted the republican ticket as handed them by their captain. This company paraded and hurrahed at the poll.

GARDNER'S CORNER,

THOMAS E. MILLER

is a republican, with a slight tinge of negro blood, and a member of the Mackey legislature. He was examined by the minority, and his evidence was mainly directed to the details of a quarrel between himself and a family by the name of Ellis. To this he sought to give a political coloring, but the majority of the committee find that this quarrel originated in a trial before a justice of the peace early in the summer, before the canvass had fairly begun in the State, and was wholly personal in its character. He attempted to convey the impression that he was driven from his home by a body of armed white men that came to his house. In this he was guilty of a palpable misrepresentation and a willful misrepresentation of the whole truth. The facts really are that for offensive language used at the justice's trial in respect to the Ellises he was unjustly assaulted and beaten after starting home, and to oblige him, as he declared that he would not again attend at this place of trouble, the trial of another cause in which he was concerned was appointed at or near his house, and the occasion of the assembling of the crowd near his house was to attend this trial. There were a few guns and fowling-pieces among the colored people and whites assembled. He represented in his testimony that he was driven from his home. He was a tenant. His occupation was that of a politician, in which he had been engaged for four years. He left this place and went a short distance to Grahamville, in the same county, where he owned land and where all of his relatives lived. He was back in the neighborhood of Lawtonville through the summer. He spoke there and was elected to the Legislature, and afterward seems to have turned his personal quarrel to good political advantage.

THE INCREASE OF THE VOTE IN BEAUFORT COUNTY

at this election is something remarkable.

The vote of this county in 1874 was 6,854. In 1876 it was 9,878, an increase of 3,024. The census of this county for 1870 gives the population at 36,098, which gives a ratio of 1 vote for every 3⅔ of the inhabitants. The evidence, instead of giving any explanation of this voting phenomenon, rather tends to show that the population of the county is staid—without influx or efflux. Hon. Mr. SMALLS in his testimony undertook to parry the force of this suspicious fact against the integrity of the election here by saying that it was but little more than the vote of 1870. We present a tabulated statement of the votes of this county since and including 1870:

	1870.	1872.	1874.	1876.
Republican	6,142	4,995	4,778	7,604
Opposition	994	1,445	2,076	2,274
Majority	5,143	3,550	2,702	5,330
Total	7,141	6,440	6,854	9,878

The increase of the vote of 1876 over that of 1870 is 2,737. When it is borne in mind that in 1870 the famous war was fought between Bowen and De Large, candidates for Congress, and that two noted republican politicians of this county, Williams and Langley, were sent to the penitentiary for stuffing ballot-boxes, the force of Hon. Mr. SMALLS's explanation is hardly perceptible.

THREATS TO DISCHARGE EMPLOYÉS.

The minority of the committee constantly endeavored to establish the fact that attempts were made to influence the votes of colored laborers by threats of dismissal from the service of democratic employers. The question was asked of nearly all the white men and many of the colored men examined as to their knowledge of such threats, and all, with two or three exceptions, contradicted the imputations. The witness Miller said he heard one white man justify the measure and heard one colored democratic orator in a speech say that if he were the white employers he would do it, inasmuch as the colored men arrayed themselves against the whites. He and a colored witness named Wheeler, a lawyer of recent immigration from Philadelphia, claimed to have seen numbers of families from the upper country hunting homes since the election, but had no personal knowledge as to the fact of their discharge on political grounds. Two colored men in the city of Charleston testified to having been discharged for political reasons, one before and the other since the election.

INTERFERENCE AT POLITICAL MEETINGS.

At Charleston the minority introduced and examined two witnesses relative to the democratic clubs interfering in armed force during the early part of the canvass and demanding an equal division of the time with the republicans at meetings called by them at Edgefield and an adjacent county. The investigation of the affairs in that locality was left to the subcommittee sitting at Columbia, which was near those counties; and why this evidence was introduced at Charleston, two hundred miles away, with no reasonable means of introducing rebutting testimony, is not apparent. Especially is this a matter of criticism when the principal witness introduced is Mr. Thompson, the editor of the republican paper, owned in part by Mr. Chamberlain, and his organ at Columbia, and who left there one night while the subcommittee was there in session, testified in Charleston, and returned to Columbia the next night. The affairs of that county we properly remit to the proper subcommittee.

NO VIOLENCE ON THE PART OF DEMOCRATS.

It is a matter to be observed that in all the evidence taken by this committee touching Charleston and Beaufort Counties not one single instance is in proof of any threat made or violence offered by any democrat at the polls. The polls were completely under the official and physical control of the republican party. The county commissioners, who constituted the canvassing board of the county, are the appointees of the governor of the State and his partisans, some of whom were themselves candidates for office, as in the case of Timothy Hurley, of Charleston, who was a commissioner and a candidate for presidential elector on the Hayes ticket. He canvassed his own vote and retained the custody of the ballot-boxes of the county, just as the State canvassing board were in part candidates for the highest State offices.

THE PRECINCT MANAGERS

are the appointees of the county commissioners. The character and qualifications of these managers can only be appreciated by seeing and interrogating them. Two of them are invariably colored men and republicans. They are generally unfit and incompetent for such an important trust. Many of them can neither read nor write and are grossly ignorant. Many of them are mere boys in appearance, twenty-one or twenty-two years old, without property, and heedless of responsibility. To these the custody of the ballot-boxes and returns were committed after the election to be delivered in three days to the commissioners of election. The ballots are not numbered, so that it is impossible to determine in the case of the substitution of a ballot whether the voter deposited or somebody else.

REGISTRATION.

Section 3 of article 8 of the constitution of the State provides that "it shall be the duty of the General Assembly to provide from time to time for the registration of all voters." It was adopted in 1868. The Legislature of the State has never obeyed this mandatory provision of the constitution, though as shown by public documents demand has time and again been made upon it to enact a registration law. Voters are allowed to vote at any precinct in the county or at any ward in a city, and with the difficulty of identifying the colored voters, owing to their similarity in appearance and lack of individuality, the facilities for repeating are at once apparent.

CONCLUSION.

In view of the facts developed by the evidence, we are warranted in stating as our solemn conclusion that had the law been observed and enforced in Charleston and Beaufort Counties so as to secure and protect the voters in the free, honest, and untrammeled exercise of their right of suffrage, the result of the vote cast in these counties alone would have been such as to have destroyed the majorities claimed by the State board of canvassers to have been given in the State to the Hayes and Wheeler electors.

J. F. PHILIPS.
JOHN. R. EDEN.

REMOVAL OF DISABILITIES OF ROBERT H. CHILTON.

Mr. TUCKER. I ask unanimous consent of the House to introduce for passage at this time a bill (H. R. No. 4681) for the removal of the political disabilities of Robert H. Chilton, of the State of Georgia. There is a petition accompanying the bill.

The bill, which was read, provides (two-thirds of each House concurring therein) for the removal of political disabilities imposed upon or incurred by Robert H. Chilton, of the State of Georgia, under or by virtue of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. CONGER. Let the petition be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

The undersigned, Robert H. Chilton, respectfully asks for the removal of all his disabilities under or by virtue of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. He was an officer in the United States Army and resigned in 1861 and took a commission in the army of the Confederate States, whereby he has incurred disabilities which he prays may be removed by act of Congress.

ROBERT H. CHILTON.

There was no objection, and the bill was read a first and second time, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, was accordingly read the third time, and passed, two-thirds concurring therein.

RECIPROCITY.

Mr. WARD. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to state to the House that at the last session I presented a joint resolution (H. R. No. 14) authorizing the appointment of commissioners to ascertain on what terms a mutually beneficial treaty of commerce with Canada can be arranged, which is as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested to appoint three commissioners, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to confer with other commissioners duly authorized by the government of Great Britain, or whenever it shall appear to be the wish of that government to appoint such commissioners, and to investigate and ascertain on what basis a treaty of reciprocal trade, for the mutual benefit of the people of the United States and the Dominion of Canada, can be negotiated; and to report the results of their investigations to the President of the United States.

The subject was made a special order for the third Tuesday in May after the morning hour, and from day to day thereafter until disposed of, not to interfere with the regular appropriation bills. I opened the debate on that day; but during the last session the appropriation bills and other legislation prevented a discussion and further action on this important resolution. I now find the time of the present session has been so much occupied by the presidential count and will be hereafter by the general appropriation bills that it will be impossible for me to bring that joint resolution before the House for consideration and action, and therefore I now request by unanimous consent I may be allowed to print in the RECORD as part of the proceedings the remarks I intended to submit in closing the debate on that subject if it should have taken place.

Mr. KASSON. I understand the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. JOYCE] desires the same privilege shall be extended to him.

Mr. KELLEY. I desire also to have leave to print a rejoinder if I should find it necessary.

Mr. JOYCE. That is what I wish to do.

Mr. WARD. I have no objection, so far as I am concerned, as gentlemen would of course have debated the question when it came up and should be allowed the privilege of publishing what they have to say.

Mr. JOYCE. It was understood by the gentleman from New York and myself that I should have an opportunity to answer him when the matter came up for consideration.

Mr. KELLEY. I expected to participate in the debate, and if part of it is to be printed without being uttered, I do not see why my views should not also be spread upon the record.

Mr. CONGER. My colleague, Mr. DURAND, (who is absent from the House on account of sickness,) has a report and some remarks on this subject which he also should be permitted to print, and I ask the same privilege for myself.

The SPEAKER. If the Chair may be allowed to make a suggestion in this regard, perhaps it would be better for the five gentlemen desiring permission to print their remarks upon this subject to withhold their request for the present and make some arrangement for the order in which the remarks may appear.

Mr. KELLEY. Let me suggest, Mr. Speaker, that perhaps the subject will keep until the next Congress, and therefore I shall object to any printing.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I hope not; as some members asking to have their remarks printed, which cannot be delivered for the want of time, may not be here at the next session of Congress.

Mr. KELLEY. I am perfectly willing that the debates should be printed, if both sides can be printed together.

The SPEAKER. That is the request; that each side may have opportunity to print its views on the subject.

Mr. BRADLEY. I suggest that motion be enlarged so that every member desiring to be heard on the pending bill, and not having the opportunity, may have the privilege to print his remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think that motion is in order. He understands the gentleman from Pennsylvania withdraws his objection?

Mr. KELLEY. Certainly, I withdraw my objection if the understanding is the privilege shall be accorded to both sides.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection, then, to the five members who have been indicated having the privilege to print in the RECORD their remarks on the subject indicated.

Mr. HENDEE. I desire also to be included in the privilege to print.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection, and the gentleman will be included with the others in the privilege accorded to print remarks in the RECORD.

NAVIGATION OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Mr. RUSK, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4682) to carry out the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the further security of the navigation of the Mississippi River," approved March 3, 1876; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

HENRY VOELTER.

Mr. BANKS, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4683) for the relief of Henry Voelter; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

DISTRICT TAX BILL.

Mr. NEAL, by unanimous consent, from the Committee for the District of Columbia, reported back the bill (H. R. No. 4554) for the support of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, with amendments by the Senate, and moved that the House non-concur in the amendments of the Senate and ask for a committee of conference.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. NEAL moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LITTLE HELL GATE.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4684) to declare Little Hell Gate not a navigable channel and to accord the assent of the United States to the filling up of the same; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

L. M. NORTHCUTT.

Mr. JONES, of Kentucky, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4685) for the relief of L. M. Northcutt, of the county of Kenton, State of Kentucky; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

LIEUTENANT THEODORUS B. M. MASON.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent to report back from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, for present consideration, the joint resolution (S. No. 17) authorizing Lieutenant Theodorus B. M. Mason, of the United States Navy, to accept a silver medal from the King of Italy.

Mr. PIPER. I object.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT FOR 1876.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio, from the Committee on Printing, reported the following concurrent resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring.) That there be printed 300,000 copies of the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1876; 224,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, 56,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 20,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio, moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ELIZABETH SHERRILL.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4686) granting a pension to Elizabeth Sherrill, widow of Ute Sherrill, a soldier of the revolutionary war; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

JOHN W. SKILES.

Mr. CABELL, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. No. 4411) for the relief of John W. Skiles; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

NEW TERRITORY OUT OF BLACK HILLS.

Mr. KIDDER, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, to Congress, remonstrating against the establishment of a new Territory out of the Black Hills; which was referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

The memorial is as follows:

A memorial to Congress remonstrating against the establishment of a new Territory out of the Black Hills.

Your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, would most respectfully represent:

Whereas a bill has been introduced in your honorable body creating a Territory out of the section of country known as the Black Hills;

And whereas said section of country is situated in Southern Dakota and adjacent to the fine agricultural lands of the Missouri River Valley;

And whereas said section of country is within one hundred and thirty miles of the Missouri River, a great natural highway and the most practicable outlet for the products of said country, and by far the nearest route by which the Black Hills can be reached;

And whereas the population of said country is transient, being miners, and the extent of the mineral resources has not yet been established;

And whereas a bill has passed the Senate of the United States creating the Territory of Huron out of the northern portion of Dakota, and the southern portion, including the Black Hills, will not have an area as large as most of the Western States;

And whereas the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota has already passed laws establishing courts, organizing counties, laying out roads from the Missouri River, and appropriating money for the improvement of the same;

And whereas your memorialists in view of the facts do not deem it to the best interests of the people of the Black Hills or the Territory of Dakota that a new Territory should be created of the Black Hills: Therefore,

Your memorialists would most earnestly pray that such new Territory be not created.

Approved February 10, 1877.

JOHN L. PENNINGTON,
Governor.

RE-IMBURSEMENT OF SETTLERS ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, to Congress, asking that settlers upon the lands set apart by executive proclamations of January 11, 1875, and May 20, 1875, be re-imbursed for their improvements made thereon; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

RAILROAD FROM YANKTON TO BLACK HILLS.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, to Congress, asking for a grant of land to aid in the construction of a railroad from Yankton, via Bon Homme and Springfield, to the Black Hills, Dakota Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Railways and Canals.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF DAKOTA.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, presented a joint resolution of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, relative to changing the time of meeting of the Legislative Assembly, and for an extra session in 1878; which was referred to the Committee on the Territories.

NAVIGATION OF RED RIVER OF THE NORTH.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, asking for an appropriation to improve the navigation of the Red River of the North; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Mr. HARDENBERGH, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with an adverse recommendation the bill (H. R. No. 4180) to declare the true intent and meaning of an act entitled "An act to relinquish the interest of the United States in certain lands to the city and county of San Francisco, California," and moved that the same be laid on the table and that the accompanying report be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

ELI BASKINS.

Mr. HARDENBERG also, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with an adverse recommendation papers in the case of Eli Baskins, late of Company A, Tenth Regiment Tennessee Volunteers; and the same was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

HENRY G. HEALY.

Mr. HARDENBERGH also, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with an adverse recommendation the bill (H. R. No. 4495) for the relief of Henry G. Healy, late lieutenant-colonel of the Sixty-fifth Regiment New York Volunteers; and the same was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

LIEUTENANT C. A. CUTLER.

Mr. HARDENBERGH also, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with an adverse recommendation the bill (H. R. No. 3164) for the relief of Lieutenant C. A. Cutler; and the same was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think I should limit the suspension of my motion to allowing bills and other matters to be introduced for reference. If general business is allowed to come in it would occupy the whole day.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana objects to further business by unanimous consent, except the introduction of bills, &c., for reference.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I enter a general objection.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution for reference to the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland objects absolutely.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I do.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now move that the rules be suspended, and that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. And pending that motion, I move that all general debate on the bill be limited to five minutes.

The motion to limit debate was agreed to.

The motion that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole was also agreed to.

So the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, (Mr. BUCKNER in the chair,) and proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4680) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union on the bill making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, and all general debate upon this bill is limited to five minutes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that by unanimous consent the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill by paragraphs for amendment.

The following paragraph was read:

For printing and binding for the State Department, $15,000; for the Treasury Department, $180,000; for the War Department, $72,000; for the Navy Department, $39,000; for the Interior Department, $135,000; for the Agricultural Department, $9,000; for the Department of Justice, $6,000; for the Post-Office, $105,000; for the Congressional Library, $15,000; for the Supreme Court of the United States, $20,000; for the Court of Claims, $10,000; and for debates and proceedings of Congress, $694,000; and of the sums hereby appropriated for the several Departments, the courts, and for the debates and proceedings in Congress, there shall only be used for the several purposes herein provided the sums specified, and the unexpended balances shall not be used for any other purposes; and there shall be taxed against the losing party in each and every cause pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, or in the Court of Claims of the United States, the cost of printing the record in such case, which shall be collected, except when the judgment is against the United States, by the clerks of said courts respectively, and paid into the Treasury of the United States, but this shall only apply to records printed after the 1st day of October next.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I offer the following amendment, to come in at the close of that paragraph:

For compiling, under the direction and supervision of the Postmaster-General, a history of the Post-Office Department from its origin to the present time, including a catalogue of the Postmasters-General, with a brief account of their services, the history of the reduction of postage to its present rates, ocean postage, international postage, railway mail service, appliances for the use, security, and celerity of the mails, and such other matters as will show the progress of our national postal system.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order upon that amendment that it is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the amendment comes within the rule which prohibits new legislation upon an appropriation bill, and the Chair therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. The amendment has reference entirely to the Post-Office Department, and I do not think it can be considered new legislation,

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. Then I offer the following amendment to come in after the words "for the Post-Office, $105,000:"

Provided, That a sum not exceeding $2,000 of this item of appropriation may be used, under the direction and supervision of the Postmaster-General, for compiling a history of the Post-Office Department from its origin to the present time, including a catalogue of the Postmasters-General with a brief account of their services, the history of the reduction of postage to its present rates, ocean postage, international postage, railway mail service, appliances for the use, security, and celerity of the mails, and such other matters as will show the progress of our national postal system.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the same point of order upon that amendment that I made upon the last. It is subject to the point that this is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I desire to ask the gentleman who has charge of this bill a question. I see that there is an appropriation for the printing of the Agricultural Department of $9,000. Is there a provision anywhere in this bill for printing the report of the Agricultural Department for the year 1876, just ordered this morning by the House?

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. The appropriation is sufficient to cover the printing of that report.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Very well.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

To purchase of the proprietors of the Congressional Globe all the stereotyped plates, the bound and unbound volumes of the said Globe and the copyright of the same, together with the fire-proof building, (located in the rear of the building situated on Pennsylvania avenue and known as the Globe office,) $100,000.

Mr. CONGER. I make the point of order that that is new legislation

Mr. PIPER. I rose to make the same point of order, and to move to strike out the clause.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order, that this is new legislation and therefore the clause will be stricken from the bill.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For life-saving and life-boat stations:

For salaries of ten superintendents and one assistant superintendent of the life-saving stations at the following points, namely: On the coasts of Long Island and Rhode Island, $1,500; and on the coast of New Jersey, $1,500; assistant to the superintendent on the coasts of Long Island and Rhode Island, $500; for superintendents on the coast of Massachusetts, on the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire, on the coasts of Virginia and North Carolina, on the coasts of Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia, on the coasts of Lakes Erie and Ontario, on the coasts of Lakes Huron and Superior, and on the coast of Lake Michigan, and for superintendent for the houses of refuge on the coast of Florida, each $1,000, $8,000; in all, $11,500.

Mr. CONGER. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out in the last line "$1,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,500;" so as to make these salaries $1,500 instead of $1,000.

Mr. Chairman, this bill provides for superintendents on the coasts of Long Island and Rhode Island $1,500, and on the coast of New Jersey $1,500, and it provides for the superintendents of life-saving stations at all other places a salary of only $1,000. There is no reason for the distinction whatever. The superintendents on the lake service especially have from four to seven stations, some as far as seven hundred miles apart, which their duty requires them to visit frequently during the whole season of navigation, and especially during the season of storms. There is no reason for the distinction. There is a reason why these officers who have charge of the life-saving stations for which we are making appropriations of over one and a half million dollars should be competent men, and they should be well paid for that most laborious service for which they are engaged. I think all those gentlemen here, and that embraces almost the entire delegation in Congress who have commerce in their States or commerce in which their States are directly or indirectly engaged, have a direct and vital interest in passing this amendment, in order that the life-saving stations, which after years of labor we have procured for part of the Atlantic coast and on the Pacific coast where there were none, and especially for the great lakes, where there were none until this last year, should have competent officers upon these stations. If there are any places of this description where the salary should be small, it should be at those points where the three or four stations under the superintendent are close together and easy of access, and yet these are the ones which are given by this bill not only $500 a year greater salary but have assistants to aid them in their labor. I ask for a vote on my amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. We have followed the estimates. I think it is the opinion of the Committee on Appropriations that the amount here named is sufficient for the service performed.

Mr. CONGER. Let me reply to that. I doubt its being the opinion of the committee. I know it is not the opinion of some of the members. It is an old appropriation increased in two cases.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let us have a vote.

The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. CONGER; and upon a division there were—ayes 29, noes 58.

Before the result was announced,

Mr. CONGER said: No quorum has voted, and I feel compelled to call for a further count.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. CONGER and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 38, noes 72.

Mr. PIPER. No quorum has voted, and as this is an important matter I insist upon a quorum voting.

The CHAIRMAN. The tellers will retain their places, and members who have not voted are requested to vote, so that the committee may not find itself without a quorum.

The tellers continued the count, and reported that there were—ayes 53, noes 96.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

For one hundred and fifty keepers of stations, at $200 each, $30,000.

Mr. CONGER. I move to amend the clause just read by striking out "$200" and inserting "$750." I desire the attention of the committee for a moment while I make a statement upon this subject.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order that the law fixes the salary of these station-keepers, and an increase would be a change of existing law, and therefore is not in order.

Mr. CONGER. The law fixes this salary, as it does every other salary, by a clause in an appropriation bill. This whole system was introduced by being ingrafted upon an appropriation bill. That is the way in which all these salaries have been fixed, by provisions in appropriation bills. And under the rule salaries may be increased in appropriation bills; the rule is not changed in that respect. The Chair will recollect that the object of the new rule was that salaries might be decreased in appropriation bills. It was never questioned that salaries might be increased in appropriation bills. I ask for a ruling on the point of order, and then I will submit some remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. I wish to call the attention of the committee to the character of the duties performed by these officers. They are called here "keepers of life-saving stations." They are the local superintendents of the stations; they are the captains of the boat-crews who manage the life-boats, who use mortars that send the ball and rope from the shore to the sinking ship; who go out in the storm at the peril of their lives every time that they attempt to save the lives of others. These "keepers of the life-saving stations" give the word of command, exercise the discretion, the care, the prudence necessary to be exercised by the captains of these crews.

The committee will see that the second paragraph proposes to pay $40 a month to every sailor employed in these crews; $480 a year. But it is proposed to pay to the man who is their captain, their leader, the experienced man, the only valuable man, $200 a year the year round. I have conversed with four of these general superintendents of life-stations, and I learn that neither on the Atlantic coast nor on the lakes are they able to find men fit for the performance of these duties who will take these offices, who will be captain of the crews of these life-boats and go out in the storm to save life for the sum of $200 a year. It is a mockery, a paltry device.

When these officers were established they were merely resident on shore, living in the house, keeping possession of it; they had no other duties to perform. But now under the law they are captains of the crews, they are efficient officers of the service, and there is a reason why the compensation should be increased.

The officer in charge of this bureau, Mr. Kimball, than whom there is not a more faithful or a more careful officer in the service of the Government, in his annual report and in a special report to the Committee on Appropriations, has made the statement that this increase was absolutely necessary in order to make the service effective.

Mr. HOLMAN. If I had had time to look up the statutes, of course the point of order which I made upon this amendment would have been sustained. The law fixed the salary of these officers at $200 a year; not of all these persons, because some of them have been provided for incidentally in appropriation bills. But the original law of 1873 establishing this system fixed the salary at $200 a year. I have the law before me.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair relied upon the statement of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] that these salaries had been fixed in the appropriation bills.

Mr. CONGER. Is this point of order to be opened again? If so I want to be heard upon it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I refer to the matter in order to show that this salary was fixed in 1873 and it has been deemed sufficient ever since. It is estimated for on this basis by the Secretary of the Treasury this year and it is now sought to be increased. The law as found in sections 4242 and 4243 of the Revised Statutes is as follow:

SEC. 4242. The Secretary of the Treasury may establish such stations on the coasts of Long Island and New Jersey—

The law provides afterward for other stations—for affording aid to shipwrecked vessels thereon, and may make such changes in the location of the existing stations, and make such repairs and furnish such apparatus and supplies, as may, in his judgment, be best adapted to the preservation of life and property from such shipwrecked vessels.

SEC. 4243. The Secretary of the Treasury may appoint, at each of the stations established under the provisions of the preceding section, a keeper, at a compensation not exceeding $200 a year, and a superintendent, who shall also have the powers and perform the duties of an inspector of the customs for each of the coasts therein mentioned; and he shall give such keepers and superintendents proper instructions relative to the duties to be required of them.

That was the act of 1854. The act of 1873 provides that—

The Secretary of the Treasury may appoint a keeper for each of the ten life-saving stations on the coasts of Cape Cod, Massachusetts, and Block Island, Rhode Island, whose compensation shall be at the rate of $200 per annum, and may employ crews, &c.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I hope the committee will understand that the law has fixed the compensation at $200; and the Secretary of the Treasury estimates on that basis; but in spite of these estimates, which we have strictly followed, the gentleman from Michigan proposes to increase the salaries of these keepers of life-saving stations, who, I understand, are employed only a small portion of the year. That is all I have to say.

Mr. CONGER. I move to amend the amendment by striking out the last word. Even what the gentleman has just read from the Revised Statutes is taken from an appropriation bill—a bill like that which we are now considering. But, sir, there are only ten stations referred to in that provision. There are more than one hundred and fifty stations besides those to which that provision refers—stations established by new laws to which that provision has no reference. The stations to which that provision refers are specified local stations at places where officers have their homes and pursue other business. Since the adoption of that provision the law has been enlarged by the establishment of more than one hundred and fifty life-saving stations, a large portion of which are on desolate coasts, far removed from habitable ground, and where no other avocation can be followed.

Besides that the law has increased the duty of these men by making them captains of crews. Under the former law they were merely occupants of houses to take care of the property. While the duties of these officers have been enlarged, their compensation has not been increased.

I repeat that the chief of the bureau in charge of this service, Mr. Kimball, has in his annual report recommended an increase of pay to these keepers who are by law made captains of crews. He has sent a special urgent communication to the Committee on Appropriations, asking them to bring it to the attention of the House, which they have refused to do. It is time that the committee should report to this House what the Department recommends on questions in which the property and lives of citizens of the United States are at stake every hour, and not smother such communications in committee. I know this to be true because I have seen the report.

Mr. HOLMAN. All I have to say is that the appropriation in the bill is in accordance with the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury. We have reported every dollar which he recommended to be appropriated for this purpose. I call for a vote.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. CONGER, it was not agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. I move to amend by striking out "$200" and inserting "$500." I desire to continue my remarks.

Mr. HOLMAN. I renew my point of order upon this amendment. My point is that by express provision of law, not by simple appropriation in an appropriation bill, these stations have been established and the salaries fixed at $200 per annum. It will be observed that the gentleman's motion applies to all the life-saving stations, of which there are one hundred and fifty-five. As to a part of them the salary by express law is fixed at $200, while as to the others the compensation of $200 is fixed by simple appropriation. As to the latter I do not contend that the salaries are fixed by law.

The act of 1873 provides as follows:

The Secretary of the Treasury may appoint a keeper for each of the ten life-saving stations on the coasts of Cape Cod, Massachusetts, and Block Island, Rhode Island, whose compensation shall be at the rate of $200 per annum, and may employ crews of experienced surfmen at such stations and for such periods as he may deem necessary and proper, and at such compensation as he may deem reasonable, not to exceed $40 per month for each person to be employed.

Now, inasmuch as some of these salaries are fixed by law at $200, I submit that the gentleman's amendment, so far as it applies to these, is out of order as changing existing law and not in the interest of economy.

Mr. CONGER. I will not ask for the ruling of the Chair upon the point of order. I withdraw my amendment and move to amend by inserting the following:

For one hundred and fifty keepers of stations at $500 each, where the salary of said keepers is not otherwise provided for by law.

Now I desire to go on and make some remarks.

Mr. HOLMAN. I concede that this amendment is in order.

Mr. CONGER. I was saying that the officer of this Government who is more especially in charge of the live-saving stations has within the last four weeks made a special report on this subject, in addition to his report as transmitted to this House with the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury; and he has thus urged Congress to make an appropriation sufficiently large to pay a salary of $750 to light-station keepers, to whom new duties have been assigned and who have to perform the most perilous service in connection with these life-saving stations. The committee have not seen fit to adopt that motion, and therefore I ask for a vote on the proposition to increase it to $500 where not otherwise limited by law. I tell gentlemen to-day there is not a practical, useful captain of crews on all our coasts or all our lakes who will not take that paltry salary for exposure of his life night and day, in storm and tempest, to save the lives of others during the year. Their lives are worth too much to be paid for by a government like ours with the paltry sum of $200, when the very men they command, their crews, are paid by law $40 a month each while they are asked to serve for $200 a year, having all the responsibility, all the care, the greater danger, the greater knowledge, the greater skill. I submit to the House if the millions of dollars which have been spent in this magnificent effort to save the property and the lives of our citizens endangered on our coasts be worth preserving, then this most effective arm of the service should be paid a reasonable compensation.

Now I will not dwell on that. If this does not convince the mind of every man who is in favor of life-saving stations and has a desire to preserve life and property, that some change should be made in the salaries of these officers, then I know not what language can.

Mr. HOLMAN. A single word. It is well known, Mr. Chairman, these persons are only employed during the stormy season of the year; perhaps not to exceed a month during the whole year are they actively employed. The Secretary of the Treasury, who is as well informed on this subject as the gentleman from Michigan—the Secretary of the Treasury with all the facts before him does not recommend an increase of this salary.

Mr. CONGER. I move to amend by striking out the last word. I assert here, as I have before, that the Secretary of the Treasury does recommend the increase of this salary. He indorses the report of the chief of the bureau of life-saving stations, Mr. Kimball. Mr. Kimball has made two distinct, separate reports on this subject, and this committee not only fails to bring forward these reports for us to see or to report upon them, but the gentleman has now the effrontery to deny what I have asserted, saying the Secretary of the Treasury has never recommended an increase of the pay of these officers. Sir, there is a point where impudence becomes sublime, and my friend from Indiana has reached it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. There is a point where insolence becomes ridiculous and most shameful in any legislative body, and the gentleman from Michigan has reached it.

Mr. CONGER. Then I have reached my friend from Indiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. But I wish to say this: I have stated to the committee that the Secretary of the Treasury in his estimates to Congress does not recommend this increase and the Committee on Appropriations have simply followed the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury. I now call for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment to the amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

The question recurred on Mr. CONGER'S amendment.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 44, noes 56.

Mr. CONGER. I demand tellers on this. I wish we could have the yeas and nays, so gentlemen might be put upon the record.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir; we will stand by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. CONGER. I think we will have them some time before we get through.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. CONGER and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 74, noes 86.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the support and maintenance of convicts transferred from the District of Columbia, $8,000.

Mr. PIPER. I move to strike that out for the purpose of understanding why $8,000 is required to be appropriated to transport convicts from the District of Columbia.

Mr. HOLMAN. The convicts in this District are sent elsewhere to penitentiaries in the States, and are of course supported by the Federal Government. This appropriation is merely for that purpose. It is an annual appropriation.

Mr. HALE. It has always been made.

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. PIPER. To what penitentiaries are these convicts sent?

Mr. HOLMAN. Generally to the penitentiary in Albany, but sometimes to the penitentiary of Maryland.

Mr. PIPER. I will withdraw my motion to strike out, and move to reduce the appropriation to $4,000. There must be a great many convicts in this District to cost $8,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. That will answer my purpose. I wish the gentleman would provide in his amendment for charging the remaining $4,000 for the District of Columbia. Of course I cannot antagonize him when he is in an economical mood, but I shall be glad to inquire of the gentleman from California whether he has any information on the subject which would justify any such reduction?

Mr. PIPER. I have no information, and that is precisely what I rose to secure from the gentleman from Indiana; that is, how many convicts are transported from this District to other penitentiaries in the several States, and what it costs per capita to transport them? Of course the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations knows all the details of this business, and I should like to be informed before I vote why the means of the Government are required to this extent for this purpose.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is impossible, Mr. Chairman, to foretell the number of persons who will be convicted in this District in the next fiscal year. The number, of course, necessarily varies in different years. The proper Department of the Government thinks that $8,000 will be required. If the gentleman from California will propose to appropriate $4,000 out of the public Treasury and let $4,000 be chargeable to the treasury of the District, I think there will be no objection to that.

Mr. CLYMER. In view of the fact that nobody has been convicted in this District for a long time, I think it might be well to reduce the amount. [Laughter.]

Mr. DURHAM. It occurs to me that if the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will examine the annual report of the Attorney-General, he will find that an appropriation of $4,000 is ample. If I understand the report of the Attorney-General for last year, he only claims to have expended an amount falling short of $3,000 during last year in the transportation of criminals.

Mr. HOLMAN. That may be true; but $8,000 is his estimate for this year. I think it will be safe to accept the amendment of the gentleman from California.

Mr. DURHAM. I have here the language of the Attorney-General in his last annual report. He says:

The law requires the warden to transport to the penitentiary at Albany, New York, the prisoners sentenced by the criminal court of this District to that prison, and to the Reform School of this District such boys as may be sentenced by the courts to that institution.

In discharging that duty the warden has transported ninety-nine convicts to the Albany penitentiary at an actual cost and expense of $2,397.23.

The amount, therefore, is not quite $2,500.

Mr. HOLMAN. I apprehend that the gentleman has not a statement there of the entire expenditure. We had to make this year an appropriation for a small deficiency. I think, however, it will be safe to make the amount $4,000.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I move to amend the amendment by striking out "$4,000" and inserting "$12,000."

I am pretty well satisfied that the criminal docket of this District will be very largely increased instead of diminished during the coming year. Our habit in the last two years of bringing every scoundrel in the country to testify before our investigating committees will lead to this. We have brought here blackguards of each denomination and thieves of every stripe and station; and unless gentlemen who have charge of the administration of the affairs of the District will see to it that they are sent back to the countries from which they come, to be placed in penitentiaries at home, they are altogether likely to be sentenced here and to reach the penitentiary from this District. I am pretty well satisfied, therefore, that the amount reported does not exceed what it is the part of wisdom to provide; and if to be disturbed at all, I would rather increase than diminish it.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Iowa insist on his amendment to the amendment?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I withdraw it.

The question being taken on Mr. PIPER'S amendment, it was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

For payment of the necessary expenses incurred in defending suits against the Secretary of the Treasury or his agents for the seizure of captured or abandoned property, and for the examination of witnesses in claims against the United States pending in any Department, and for the defense of the United States in the Court of Claims, $25,000.

Mr. HALE. I offer the following amendment which was agreed to by the Committee on Appropriations, but has not been inserted in the bill:

Add after the paragraph just read the following:

To enable the Clerk of the House to have prepared for the Public Printer 50 copies of the summary reports of the Commissioners of Claims in cases reported to Congress as disallowed under the act of March 3, 1871, of which 25 copies shall be printed and bound for the use of the Senate, and 25 copies for the use of the House, $1,000.

That is the customary appropriation, which has been by an oversight dropped out of the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Reform School of the District of Columbia:

For the superintendent, assistant superintendent, matron, two teachers, for medicines and physicians' fees, gardener, farmer, baker, night-watchman, seamstress-laborer, and laundress, and four female servants, and for fuel, clothing, and incidentals, $10,000.

Mr. PIPER. I move to amend by striking out "$10,000" and insert "$8,000." I think some explanation should be made before we are asked to make such an appropriation in gross as this.

Mr. HOLMAN. This amount of $10,000 for this Reform School, which is a Reform School for boys, is the appropriation we have been making for a great many years. We have no information which would justify us in reducing that appropriation.

Mr. PIPER. I see that one item is for a "gardener." I suppose the people to be reformed might do the gardening of the school if they were properly employed.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Government owns a piece of land there that is in cultivation. These boys who are being reformed have of course to be provided for. There is a small market garden in connection with the institution, as we are informed, and this appropriation includes $720 a year for a gardener. I presume the boys are employed, though I am not certain of that fact.

Mr. PIPER. I will modify my amendment and move to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$9,500." The boys can certainly do the gardening."

Mr. CONGER. Before the gentleman from California insists on his amendment, I wish he would specify where this great saving which he proposes comes in; whether it applies to the gardener or to one of the four female servants or to incidentals.

Mr. PIPER, (in his seat.) The gardener.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman remarks privately that it applies to the gardener. He should have set forth to the world that he means gardener, so that the reduction may not fall upon one of the female servants or other employés. My friend from the golden land of California is accustomed to look upon all these appropriations very carefully. He has never been dazzled with wealth there, nor will he squander this $750 on one of the employés in this Reform School unless it be absolutely necessary; but he should specify what he means in the amendment lest evil fall on one of the female servants. I call upon him to specify.

Mr. PIPER. I specify the gardener.

Mr. HARRISON. I have the floor and I yield my time to the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. CONGER,] whom we would all like to hear further elaborate this subject. [Laughter.]

The question was taken on Mr. PIPER'S amendment; and it was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Capitol extension: For work on the Capitol and for general care and repair thereof, $40,000.

Mr. PIPER. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out $40,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $30,000. As the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations is also chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I would like to know what extension is being constructed on this Capitol. This appropriation is "for extension of the Capitol and for other purposes." Now the gentleman is so well informed about the details of every Department of this Government that it gives me great pleasure to hear any explanation by him as to the appropriation of the people's money to the various purposes of the bills which he reports to the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. The estimate for this purpose was $60,000. We have reduced the amount $20,000 and I hardly think the amount can be safely reduced below that.

Mr. ATKINS. This is for taking care of the entire building, and not to make additions to it.

Mr. PIPER. The words used are "Capitol extension."

Mr. ATKINS. Last year we appropriated $60,000 for this purpose and this year we propose to appropriate $40,000; that is all.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for a vote.

Mr. PIPER. I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH. I offer the following amendment, to come in at that point. After the word "thereof" insert the following:

And for putting an elevator in the south wing of the Capitol, under the supervision of the Architect of the Capitol, $50,000.

And strike out $40,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think that is new work entirely, and that the amendment is subject to the point of order, that this is an appropriation not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For improving the Capitol grounds and paving the roadways and footwalks of the Capitol grounds, $100,000.

Mr. PIPER. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out $100,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $50,000. I have, since I have been a member of this House, paid particular attention to the improvements about the grounds of the Capitol. Whether this appropriation is intended for the public grounds about the city or for the grounds around the Capitol building, I am not sufficiently informed to say, but if this appropriation is intended for the purpose of improving the grounds around this Capitol, it is an extravagant appropriation and should be reduced to $50,000. I have observed the character of the workmen employed about these grounds and I know something of the character of this work. I have employed men for years and years in work of this description in large numbers, and assuredly I could funish a Chinaman eighteen years old who would do more work than any six of the men I have seen about these grounds during the last two years. It constitutes an asylum for loafers, for beggars paid out of the public Treasury, under the pretense that they are doing work around these grounds. Consequently if this appropriation is for the grounds about the Capitol $50,000 is more than ample for them, for there is hardly a man who can do a day's work or even half a day's work.

Mr. HOLMAN. The estimate for this purpose was $200,000. The committee has reduced it one-half, and although $100,000 is certainly a large sum to appropriate for such a purpose, the gentleman from California [Mr. PIPER] must remember that the filling in and improvement of the grounds west of the Capitol will require a very considerable outlay of money. There must be some fountains established to perfect the plan, and I do not see well how this expense can be avoided.

I do not think that there is any reason why $200,000 should be appropriated, but I think, perhaps, that $100,000 is not an excessive appropriation, and I hope that after the present year it will be found entirely compatible with the public interest to reduce the appropriation down to $25,000 a year, unless, indeed, Congress enters upon the system of improving the western front, which has been recommended by the gentleman employed by the Government to present plans for the improvement of the grounds around the Capitol. I hardly think it would be safe to reduce this appropriation below $100,000, although I know it is a very large sum for such a purpose.

Mr. PIPER. How much money, in the aggregate, has been appropriated for the improvement of these grounds?

Mr. HOLMAN. O, well, there have been several hundred thousand dollars appropriated; indeed, including the appropriations for the grounds east of the Capitol, the amount has swollen up to millions. This is the smallest appropriation which has been made for this purpose for a great many years. I believe the appropriations for the present fiscal year were $125,000. We have put the amount for the coming fiscal year at $100,000.

Mr. PIPER. Is it not a fact that the stone used around this Capitol is imported from Canada, or Scotland, or Sweden, or some other place remote from the United States?

Mr. HOLMAN. I think that almost all the public buildings in the United States are constructed out of materials from remote points. Canadian stone, from the coast opposite Maine, is used in the construction of the custom-house at Chicago, and, I believe, also on the buildings at Cincinnati and Saint Louis, and a large portion of the granite and marble used about the Capitol has been imported from remote points.

Mr. FOSTER. Where else would it come from?

Mr. PIPER. I insist upon my amendment.

The question was put on the amendment; and on a division there were—ayes 6, noes 26.

Mr. PIPER. As this is a question of $50,000 of the people's money, which my friend from Indiana is especially careful of, I think I must insist that there shall be a quorum. [Cries of "O, no!"] Very well, sir; I will let it go.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. I offer the following amendment:

For the improvement of the heating and ventilating apparatus of the House of Representatives, to be expended by the Architect of the Capitol, the sum of $33,000; and that the board of United States officers convened by request of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to advise with it on the subject, be requested to advise the Architect of the Capitol in the premises; and that hereafter the subject of ventilating and heating the House of Representatives be placed under the direction of the Architect of the Capitol.

This morning the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds by a unanimous vote directed me to draft a bill and prepare a report on the subject of the ventilation of this Hall. I will bring that bill before the House as soon as I can get an opportunity to do so.

For the last twelve months a subcommittee of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has had under careful consideration the subject of ventilating this Hall. We have had in consultation with us a board of United States officers consisting of Professor Henry of the Smithsonian Institution; Mr. Clark, the Architect of the Capitol; Mr. Shuman, in the employ of the Architect of the Treasury Department; Dr. Billings, of the United States Army, and one or two others. We have had before us a large number of experts from the different cities of the United States who have been seeking to have their plans adopted.

During the last summer Dr. Billings visited Europe, where he examined the heating and ventilating apparatus of the House of Commons and the House of Lords in London, of the opera-house in Vienna, the best ventilated building in the world, and also other buildings. After very careful examination and study of this subject, this board within the last few days have submitted to us their report. That report this morning was adopted by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and as I said I have been directed by that committee to draft a bill to carry it into effect. As the bill will require some little change in the law, I will bring it to the attention of the House as soon as I can do so. In the meantime, in order to have an appropriation for the purpose, I have moved this amendment.

I have been asked to state what is the plan. It is utterly impossible in a five-minute speech to properly explain it. It does not change the present system of ventilation in this Hall. We have found that it would be utterly impossible, without an expense of from $100,000 to $200,000, to change the present system of ventilation. But by perfecting the present upward system of ventilation, by removing from beneath the floor of this Hall about a million of brick which clog up the flues, by bringing the stack of heating apparatus or radiators from far off in the corner of the building by the room of the Committee on Naval Affairs and placing it under this Hall, near the center, by changing the ventilators here and giving each member the direct control of the ventilation of his own seat, it is believed that we will be able to secure a thorough ventilation of the House.

I have the plan in the committee-room, not knowing that the House would go into Committee of the Whole on this bill.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HARRISON. Is my time up?

The CHAIRMAN. The five minutes time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I desire to ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HARRISON] one question.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the gentleman yield to me to finish my statement?

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. After my question. The gentleman says it is not proposed——

Mr. CONGER. I rose to oppose the amendment.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. That is my object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman to rise to ask a question after the time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HARRISON] had expired.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I rose also to oppose the proposition. I have a right to yield for my question to be answered, have I not, provided it comes out of my time?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair had not recognized the gentleman.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I had hoped that the Chair would recognize me.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HARRISON] sometime since very kindly offered to yield his time to me, because he thought I had superior knowledge of a certain subject. I may say that my friend from Illinois, something like the subject which he is discussing here, goes back and forth from one subject to another as the wind, which blows where it listeth and we know not whence it cometh or whither it goeth. [Laughter.] So it is with my friend's discussion on this subject.

The gentleman has for two years by direction of the House been charged with this windy subject. The House knew instinctively who could best take charge of such a subject as that [laughter] and they selected my friend. He has been struggling all that time to obtain some knowledge, some information by which he could enlighten the House as to the means of ventilating this Hall better than it has been heretofore ventilated. I know he is better prepared than I am to discuss that subject; and with all the grace possible I yield to him the remainder of my time.

Mr. HARRISON. I thank the gentleman. I think there is no man in this House, who needs fresh air more than he. [Laughter.] Sir, in olden time, when the gentleman from Michigan was a baby, he had a sweet smile upon his face. When he came here it was wreathed in smiles; it was lovely to look upon. [Great laughter.] But now see the effect of bad ventilation upon him: always sour, always vinegary.

Mr. Chairman, this is a very serious subject. [Renewed laughter.] I think the House is sufficiently prepared to vote on my amendment. It is utterly impossible, as I have already said, in a few moments and without the plan before me, to explain it. If gentlemen wish an explanation, I will endeavor to give it, if I can be allowed the time. [Cries of "Go on!" "Go on!"] Then I have got consent and I will take advantage of it. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONGER and many others. "Go on!" "Go on!"

Mr. HARRISON. I ask that the report of this committee of officers be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Second report of the board of United States officers convened by request of the subcommittee on public buildings and grounds to advise with regard to the ventilation of the House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 2, 1877.

The board find that the measures which have been taken to give an increased supply of fresh air to the Hall of the House of Representatives, in accordance with its recommendation in its previous report, have been followed by good results, and that the test of actual experience, during both cold and warm weather, has shown that the Hall can be satisfactorily heated and ventilated with the system now employed, namely, that of upward currents, and that this can be done without causing discomfort to the occupants.

The recommendations of the board heretofore presented were intended to meet the great want existing, namely, that of an increased supply of air, without the production of unpleasant draughts, and also to remove or mitigate certain sources of impurity which were found to exist in the basement of the building.

These recommendations have been only in part carried out, owing to the want of funds, for, although the sum estimated for by the board, namely, $8,000, was duly appropriated from the contingent fund of the House at the close of the last session, yet it appears that this appropriation was only partially available, since the contingent fund was exhausted.

For this reason it has been found impossible by the Architect to provide the means for that increased supply of fresh air to the galleries which the board consider as necessary.

The board has collected information as to the practical results obtained in large halls of assembly in this country and in Europe by the systems of heating and ventilation adopted, and, from these as well as from the observations and experience of its members, it has arrived at certain conclusions as to what should be done looking to the permanent arrangement for heating and ventilating the south wing of the Capitol, which may be stated as follows:

1. That it is not desirable to change the present or upward system of ventilation of the Hall of the House of Representatives for any system of so-called downward ventilation, and it is not possible to apply any so-called natural system of ventilation, by means of windows and openings in the ceiling and walls only, to a large assembly Hall like this.

2. That while the quantity of fresh air which can now be supplied to members on the floor without causing unpleasant draught is probably sufficient under ordinary circumstances, it is desirable that there should be means to increase it when needed.

3. That the supply of air to the galleries should be largely increased, and that there should be means provided for furnishing cooler air to the galleries than is supplied to the floor of the hall.

4. That the system of brick flues beneath the floor of the House should be removed and galvanized iron flues substituted so far as necessary.

5. That a duct should be constructed to bring the fresh air required for the use of the House to the injecting fans from a point on the lower terrace and through an ornamental shaft about thirty feet high.

6. That an attempt should be made to regulate the amount of moisture in the air supplied and to cool the air in warm weather.

7. That for this purpose, as well as for other reasons, the course of the present fresh-air duct should be changed, and the heating-coils removed from their inaccessible and inconvenient position, and that the point for admission of fresh air beneath the floor shall be central instead of in one corner, as at present.

8. That additional means of ventilation should be supplied for the upper lobbies.

9. That an attempt should be made to so arrange a system of outlets for foul air in the roof that the wind can only produce an increased flow of air.

If this can be done successfully the exhaust fans now in use will become available for ventilation of the basement and lobbies.

10. That means of communication by a system of electric signals be provided between the floor of the House and the engine-room.

11. That the whole matter of heating and ventilation of the south wing of the Capitol should be placed under the control of one person who is to be held responsible for their proper working. Under the present system, or rather want of system, the board do not believe that any apparatus can be made to work satisfactorily.

If it is desired that the board shall continue to interest itself in the heating and ventilating of the House, and in the devising of the best means of carrying out its recommendations, it is extremely desirable that the person who is to have charge of the apparatus when completed should be in some way associated with the board, not only to carry out the experiments and observations which it may deem necessary, but to become familiar with what is to be done, and with the apparatus and machinery decided to be best adapted for doing it.

12. Plans have been prepared by the Architect of the Capitol for the alterations recommended, and these are herewith submitted. The total cost of making these changes, and of putting the heating apparatus in good order, including the purchase of 20,000 feet of new steam-pipes, is estimated at $33,000.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH HENRY,
Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, President of the Board.
THOS. L. CASEY,
Lieutenant-Colonel Corps of Engineers, Member of the Board.
EDWARD CLARK,
Architect United States Capitol, Member of the Board.
F. SCHUMANN,
Civil Engineer, Member of the Board.
JOHN S. BILLINGS,
Surgeon United States Army, Secretary of the Board.

Mr. HARRISON. I believe, Mr. Chairman, I had unanimous consent to finish my remarks on this subject.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no objection, of course, to the gentleman proceeding; but I believe the five-minute rule cannot be waived in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, obtained the floor, and yielded to Mr. HARRISON.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman, the plan as suggested here is to get fresh air from a spot out on the terrace, removed from the walls of the Capitol. The cold air, instead of being driven by the fans to the far corner of this building, will be carried to the stacks which will be placed immediately under the Hall and very near to the center. Then the flues under this floor, which are now of brick, and in which, as I have stated before, nearly a million of brick are placed, will be removed. At present this brick-work absorbs the heat; and when it has become heated it is utterly impossible for the engineer to cool it in less than about half an hour. On the other hand, when these bricks become cold, it is utterly impossible to heat them in less than a half an hour. These brick flues will therefore be removed, and will be replaced by flues of galvanized iron. Around this Hall will be a system of ventilation through which the heated air will come. Under each desk will be a ventilator under the control of each member, so that he can prevent draughts from coming directly upon himself, while he cannot prevent the general influx of air around the room.

In addition to this, these officers recommend the attachment of what is called a cold-air duct to one of the engines, by which, when the House becomes too much heated, cold air can be rapidly thrown in and mixed with the warm air, so that the air may come into the Hall thoroughly tempered.

We believe that this system will be a success, though of course to a certain extent it will be an experiment. We have had before our committee men from nearly every city of the Union, wishing to get a contract for perfecting the ventilation of this House. The estimates submitted are in no instance less than $85,000. We submitted all these plans to this committee of experts; we consulted with them; and they have come to the conclusion that the plan they propose to adopt is a feasible, practicable, and economical one.

Mr. WHITE. I understood the gentleman to say that it was necessary to have the brick-work underneath removed in order to perfect our system of ventilation. I want to ask the gentleman whether he does not think that the tobacco-juice and all other sorts of filth now going into these flues ought to be removed?

Mr. HARRISON. The whole substructure under here will be removed and cleaned; and then the system will be so changed that refuse tobacco and other impurities cannot be thrown into the flues.

Mr. WHITE. I wish to inquire further whether it is possible to keep out these impurities under the present system of ventilation, which undertakes to carry the foul air upward.

Mr. HARRISON. It is thoroughly practicable; at least we believe it is so, or we would not recommend this plan.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, I have a profound respect for the opinions of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. HARRISON.] I always bow my head with deference to gentlemen who offer theories in regard to ventilation. But after two years of experience in regard to this matter—experience in the very midst of the operation of this system—I think that my experience is worth more than the theories of these gentlemen who propose to ventilate this House. And I do not offer my experience alone. I state what every gentleman on this floor must know to be the fact, that around this Hall on the outside are openings for the reception of the pure air which is to be forced into this Hall by driving-fans. This pure air comes over refuse tobacco, cigar-stumps, apple-peelings, and all sorts of filth which the boys from the street see fit to throw into those holes. After the air has been heated it reaches this Hall through these openings here in the floor, and all the foul particles that can be evaporated by this heated air are evaporated, and in this condition the air comes in here for us to breathe. Can anything be more destructive to life or health or comfort than to be confined in such an impure atmosphere?

Again, it is a well-known fact that the air which we breathe out of our lungs is much heavier than the natural air. By the exhaust fans which draw the air upward we undertake to carry off the carbonic-acid gas through the ceiling, to take it out at the roof of the house instead of at the bottom of it. To accomplish this unnatural and life-destructive work we are asked to appropriate the sum of $33,000.

Now, as I understand the gentleman, he does not propose a new system of ventilation. He proposes to continue the old system; and what is it? It is simply to bring this air to us from the outside through the old channels, with the exception that the little holes at the rear of our seats shall be closed. There is to be a register under each desk, which each member may open or shut at pleasure; but if it be the pleasure of two-thirds of the members to close those registers, then the persons in the galleries will have to endure the draught where air is forced in upon them.

Mr. HARRISON. If the gentleman had listened to the report, he would have learned that the gallery will have a system of heating for itself. There are to be flues carried into the gallery.

Mr. WHITE. Notwithstanding the remark of the gentleman, it is nevertheless the truth that these officers propose to get the pure air into this House by bringing it over the same impurities over which it has always been brought in. They propose to continue the same old plan of pumping the foul air out of this House through the roof, and as it goes upward we naturally get bad air to breathe. We have never yet had pure air in this Hall. You can taste it the minute you get inside the corridors around this Hall. We not only get no natural air, but we get no natural light in this Hall.

I was about to offer an amendment to improve the ventilation of the House at the moment the gentleman from Illinois rose. But if it is proposed to put it into the same old system, to make the same old system more perfect, we will only get more of the bad air we have been getting all along, and I will oppose the amendment and I think the House should vote it down. I ask the amendment be again read.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, it seemed to me the ventilation of this Hall since the improvements at the last session was quite complete, and we could scarcely hope, even by large appropriations of money, to materially improve that ventilation. Gentlemen have observed this: when the Hall is crowded with people, galleries and all, that the atmosphere seems to become oppressive. But this subject of ventilation is one of such interest that the Committee on the Public Buildings and Grounds, with great unanimity—with entire unanimity with the exception of my views—have favored this appropriation of $33,000. Now, inasmuch as we have appropriated a larger sum than is imperatively required for the improvement of the public grounds, I ask to insert that provision in the bill, if the House shall determine to adopt it, in another form. The bill now provides for the improvement of the Capitol grounds and for paving the roadway and footwalks in the Capitol grounds, $100,000. I move to add to that, "provided, however, that a sum not exceeding $33,000 of this appropriation be used for the improvement," &c., then using the language of the amendment moved by the gentleman from Illinois. I have consulted with such members of the Committee on Appropriations upon the floor, and believe they acquiesce in this proposition. Gentlemen will discover when we come to add up the items making up this appropriation bill it will be found to involve a very large sum of money in the aggregate, and therefore it seems to me no appropriation should be made in this instance increasing those appropriations beyond what is imperatively required. We are satisfied this $33,000 can be deducted from that $100,000 without any embarrassment of the public interest, or without necessarily postponing the completion of the public grounds.

Mr. WHITE. I now ask that the amendment be read as it will stand if amended by the gentleman from Indiana.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman, I am willing to accept that as a modification of my own proposition.

Mr. HARRIS, of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I desire very much to vote for an appropriation for the ventilation and heating of this Hall, but I shall never vote a dollar for a system of ventilation which is absurdly wrong-side up. It has been demonstrated, I believe, in some portions of the country, that heated air drawn into the top of a large hall, and the foul air thrown out by pumps at the bottom, give free ventilation. It is known to every gentleman, I suppose, that all the air which we breathe forth from our lungs, all the air thrown out from our bodies, is vitiated and loaded with foul matters. It descends to our feet, and if it be allowed to rise to our lungs we breathe it over and over. When we can let our air in at the top, properly warmed, properly heated, and draw the foul air out by strong pumps at our feet, we will be constantly breathing free air; and until that system is adopted there can be no ventilation and no introduction of pure air into this Chamber which will answer the purpose.

Mr. HARRISON. How do you mean, sir?

Mr. HARRIS, of Massachusetts. I understand they propose to force in heated air at the bottom and force out foul air by some process. I believe if gentlemen will take pains to investigate this subject they will come to the conclusion that any system of ventilation such as is now proposed is absolutely wrong-side up and will not work.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose, and a message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, announced the passage without amendment of an act (H. R. No. 2690) to refund to the mayor and city council of Baltimore certain moneys illegally assessed and collected for internal-revenue tax.

It further announced that the Senate agreed to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. No. 1185) to ratify an agreement with certain bands of the Sioux Nation of Indians, and also with the Northern Arapaho and Cheyenne Indians.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HARRISON. I move to strike out the last word, in order to reply to the gentleman from Massachusetts. I will say to the gentleman that this committee has studied this question, and believe what is proposed is not wrong-side up.

A great many persons think that it is the easiest and simplest thing in the world to ventilate a large hall. Men who have been living in a small house, with a large fire-place and windows, where they can move from point to point, and when their backs are freezing turn round and warm their backs, or when their feet are cold can put their feet to the fire, imagine that that system can be brought into this huge establishment. They think also that if we could only get the sunlight—if we could in some way strike out these walls and admit the light of heaven—all would be right. Now, suppose that we were to attempt to strike out these walls. In the first place, strike these down and this vast superstructure, this roof which they support, would fall in upon us. But suppose it could be done safely, we would then throw the atmosphere of this House against the outer walls which are cold where it would become rapidly congealed and fall and cause numerous currents.

But, then they say, "Give us the light of heaven." Why, sir, in the Supreme Court, where they had the light of heaven, they could not stand it and have erected a screen to enable the lawyers who sit there to look at the judges. I do not know but the want of that light of heaven has been the cause of some late decisions; but I will not say anything on that subject.

Mr. Chairman, it is an utter impossibility to connect natural and artificial ventilation together. The two things are as oil and water that cannot be mingled. And if you have natural ventilation with outside windows and large fire-places, then you must have gentlemen moving from point to point, their faces burning and their backs freezing. You could not possibly by any natural system of ventilation heat this room in such a way that men could sit here during the day and keep themselves comfortable. In other large halls such as the great exchanges where men meet to discuss sales for half an hour or so they knock out the roof; but they stand while they are there. They cannot sit; men who sit still must have an equal heat upon them. Where men are moving about it is another thing.

The question was before the committee whether we could have a downward system of ventilation. We found it utterly impractical. Some say, "You do not exhaust the air." The facts are that we can carry out of this building twice as much bad air as we can get fresh air in. Gentlemen say, "Why do you not let the fresh air in?" Fresh air can get into this room in two ways. One is through the shafts which heat and temper it; the other is by opening the doors of this Hall. What would be the result of opening the doors? Draughts would come in through the open doors of the galleries, there would be a rush of air in the gallery, the bad air in rising is immediately cooled, and falls back upon us, and we have to breathe it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CLYMER. The subject of the ventilation of this Hall is one full of interest to every member of this House and to the public who are in the habit of visiting it. It is a fact, and indeed a lamentable one, that very large numbers of those of us who are obliged to be here continuously have had our health seriously impaired by the foul condition of the air of this Hall. Therefore there seems to me to be a pressing necessity to adopt some means whereby this evil may be remedied. This being apparent, it is our duty to adopt some plan which will unquestionably secure the end desired. The trouble about that proposed by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. HARRISON,] who seems to have studied the subject with care and to have a general idea as to what we should have, is that he is unable to offer us any guarantee whatever of the success of his plan. The committee of which he is a member has called in the advice of experts, and we have before us their suppositions as to what will be the result of the plan proposed by them. But after all they are mere suppositions, and I fear that if we spend this large amount of money we will not be any better off in this respect next session than we are this session.

Now, sir, there is a member of this House, one whose pursuits and habits in life have compelled him to make this subject of ventilation a study, one who has given it more thorough investigation, and one who has dealt with it more practically than any other person in this House and to a larger extent perhaps than most persons in the country whose lives are devoted to subjects of this kind. I have his word that if this House should authorize him—and he is amply responsible for all he offers to do—he will guarantee the perfect and entire ventilation of this Hall so that no man on the floor and no persons who occupy the gallery need complain of it. If we will say that he shall do this, he will never ask of this Government one dollar unless he makes the ventilation perfect and complete. I confess that I would prefer to embrace an offer of this kind, coming from a responsible person, one who understands the subject, rather than try what at best is alleged to be a mere experiment, for the result of which we have no guarantee in the assertion either of the gentleman who proposes it or of those for whom he speaks.

Mr. HARRISON. The gentleman is mistaken in saying that it is an experiment.

Mr. CLYMER. The gentleman will pardon me; he certainly stated in the speech which he made in the early part of this discussion that he could not guarantee its success.

Mr. HARRISON. Of course I cannot guarantee its success.

Mr. CLYMER. I propose to have it done by some one who will guarantee its success and who will take the risk, and if it be not successful we will not be called on to pay a large sum of money for that which will be utterly worthless.

A MEMBER. To what member of Congress did you refer.

Mr. CLYMER. Hon. Mr. HEWITT, of New York.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ATKINS. I desire to ask the gentleman a question. It is this: If the vitiated atmosphere in this Hall is not produced by the oil-shops, the slop-shops, and cooking-places, and all that kind of thing below us, where?

Mr. HARRISON. No, sir. So far as the vitiated atmosphere, the atmosphere that is deleterious to health is concerned, that has nothing to do with it; but the unpleasant odors in the outer halls are due to that cause.

Mr. ATKINS. I want to say to the gentleman that there are some rooms below this Hall which are used for oiling machinery, and in which there is a great deal of paint, and the atmosphere from those rooms passes right through this Hall and into the committee-rooms.

Mr. HARRISON. That is an entire mistake. The gentleman has been misinformed.

Mr. ATKINS. I am told so by the engineer of the House.

Mr. WHITE. I move to strike out the last word. I object to the amendment as it now stands for two reasons. The first one is that I am opposed to an appropriation of $100,000 for the improvement of these Capitol grounds. The second is that this amendment, which proposes to give $33,000, out of the $100,000 appropriated to the Capitol grounds, for the improvement of the ventilation of the House, would perpetuate a system which has been tried and found wanting. I am aware that very much of this bad ventilation can be attributed to the incompetent engineer that has charge of the heating apparatus of the House. I believe that if we had competent officers the ventilation would be much better; but never, until, as the gentleman from Massachusetts has suggested, this carbonic-acid gas goes in the direction that nature intended it should go—by making it heavier than the natural air—downward, instead of upward—shall we have a complete system of ventilation in this Hall.

I want to say a word to the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. HARRISON,] who I regret has taken occasion to remind me of the fact that I am used to standing around log-cabin fires in the backwoods, simply because he happened to be born in the "Blue Grass" region of Kentucky and I was not so fortunate as to be born there, and because his subsequent life has been spent in Chicago, where he could see great buildings and the powerful machinery for their ventilation, and smell the Chiagco River. It was never my lot to do that.

Now I want to call the attention of the House to this fact, and it is a fact, that we cannot have this carbonic-acid gas go upward before our faces without having to breathe it. You may say we breathe it in a very much diluted state and in a way that we get very little of it. But no man can tell, no scientist can tell how much or how little it takes of the foul gases that have once been breathed out of the lungs, if breathed in again, to make a man an invalid. The only proper way is to have a system of ventilation that lets the air go out at the bottom and brings in the pure air at the top. This amendment to give $33,000 for the ventilation of this Hall does not propose to do that. It proposes to continue the old system and make a stronger draught to force in more air at the bottom. Yesterday I was cold and wanted a fire made in the cloak-room, but the servant told me that it was utterly impossible to build a fire because the draught down the chimney (which was occasioned by the draught in the House) was so great that the fire would not burn. I want to know whether under this appropriation of $33,000 we shall not increase the draught down the chimneys so as to make it utterly impossible to have fires in the grates lighted at all. I object to the amendment and appeal to the House to vote it down.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. As my name has been mentioned by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] I feel constrained to say a word, but the House will see the condition to which I am reduced by the air of this House. I am absolutely unable to make myself heard. I have been under the doctor's care for the last ten days, and I am assured, and I am conscious of it myself, that there is no other cause for it but the impure ventilation of this House.

Now there are no difficulties in the way of ventilating any hall. It is a subject perfectly well understood. There are two systems of ventilation: the one is by the introduction of pure air at the top and the abstraction of impure air at the bottom, and there is the reverse of that system, the introduction of the pure air at the bottom and the abstraction of impure air at the top. They are both in successful operation in many places in this country and also in Europe.

The former system, that which takes the impure air out at the bottom and introduces the pure air at the top, is the system of General Morin, the eminent director of the Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers in Paris. That system has been very largely applied in many public buildings and is invariably successful.

The other system, the system of abstracting the impure air at the top and introducing the pure air at the bottom, is the system in use in the British houses of Parliament, and in many buildings in this country, and it also works very well. As one instance of its admirable working, I can point to the Cooper Institute building in New York City, which has a larger hall than this, which is supplied with fresh air at the bottom and parts with its impure air at the top. The air is forced in and out at such a rate that in two minutes' time every particle of air in the hall can be changed.

The simple secret of the whole matter is that you cannot ventilate unless you get the air. The trouble in this Hall is that you do not get the air. All that it is necessary to do here is to get the air into this Hall, and if the openings are sufficiently large, (and I have no doubt they are, but if they are not they can very readily be made so,) the impure air will pass out.

Just imagine that this Hall is filled with material; it is not a vacant space but it is filled with material substance. This impure air at the bottom must be taken out, must be pushed out of this Hall. If enough air does not come in in time to change it sufficiently to render it safe for life, then the impure air is not pushed out at all, but is left here as a solid mass, as it were, and being heavier than the pure air it sinks to the bottom and we breathe it.

Now if gentlemen think that any member of Congress can ventilate this Hall, they must be like those who think that every man can be a farmer. The proper understanding of the subject of ventilation is an art. I venture to say that those gentlemen who have signed this report are competent experts and know all about what they propose to do; and I have no doubt that if permitted they will accomplish the desired result.

What I wanted to call the attention of the House to is the error which some gentlemen seem to have fallen into, that successful ventilation depends upon the adoption of one or the other of these systems. Good ventilation may be had by either of them.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to strike out the last word, and I yield my time to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. HEWITT.]

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I was merely going to add that what is required to get out the impure air from this Hall is a ventilating flue properly heated, so that the pressure which is brought to bear from the engine shall enable this impure air to pass readily out of the room. Of course it will be very easy to apply the system practically to this room; there is no trouble about it. The suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] was the result of an accidental conversation only. I have no desire to undertake the ventilation of this Hall.

Mr. CLYMER. I did not suppose the gentleman had.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I think it would be entirely improper for any member of Congress to undertake to do any such thing. But I do say, with my experience here for these two sessions, finding that my health is being undermined, and knowing that my usefulness is being destroyed, knowing that my constituents and, I believe, the constituents of every gentleman in this room do not desire that our health shall be impaired, but on the contrary have the grea est possible interest in preserving our health and maintaining our usefulness—knowing all that, I did say that if nothing else could be done I would be glad, and would feel that I had rendered some service in my day and generation, if I could be permitted at my own expense to ventilate this Hall, and I would not expect to be paid back from the public Treasury. And I say now that if gentlemen in this Hall cannot otherwise protect themselves from this bad atmosphere, and will allow me to confer this benefaction upon my country, I may consider it the greatest opportunity of my life, at my own cost and expense, to provide for the proper ventilation of this Hall.

Mr. WHITE. I will offer an amendment that will cover that.

Mr. SPRINGER. I propose to resume the floor for the remainder of my time. I offer as an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that which I send to the Clerk's desk, and after it is read I will thank the Clerk to read the amendment as it will be if my amendment should be adopted.

The Clerk read the amendment to the amendment; which was to strike out all after the word "Capitol," down to and including the word "premises," and to insert in lieu thereof the following: "Upon plans to be furnished by Hon. ABRAM S. HEWITT, and in such manner as he may direct;" so that the amendment, as amended, will read:

Provided further, That a sum not exceeding $33,000 of this appropriation may be used for an improvement in the heating and ventilating apparatus of the House of Representatives, to be expended by the Architect of the Capitol upon plans to be furnished by Hon. ABRAM S. HEWITT, and in such manner as he may direct; and that hereafter the subject of ventilating and heating the House of Representatives be placed under the direction of the Architect of the Capitol.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I sincerely hope that this amendment will not be adopted. It would put me in a very false position. I simply state my belief that this commission is composed of men who are quite competent to do this work and that it will be well done by them. I say further that, if it should fail to be properly done by them, I will be willing to accept any responsibility that may be imposed upon me by this House; but it would be very unjust to put that responsibility on me now.

Mr. SPRINGER. I withdraw the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. WHITE. I desire to offer a substitute.

Mr. FORT. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that after the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FORT] is heard the debate on this paragraph will cease by unanimous consent.

Mr. WHITE. I object. I want to offer an amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no objection to offering an amendment, but we want the debate to stop.

Mr. WHITE. I would like to explain the amendment.

Mr. FORT. Mr. Chairman, experience has taught us that one of the best systems of ventilating this House is the plan of issuing tickets to the galleries. It reduces the number of bellows that are operating upon the atmosphere there, and, in reference to one portion of the gallery, it changes very much the character of the individuals who are engaged in that business. Formerly I fancied, when I approached one portion of this gallery, that I could feel the impurities pouring down upon my head almost as perceptibly as I would water tumbling over a precipice. The trouble has been that the amount of fresh air coming into the Hall has often been insufficient for the number of persons in attendance.

Mr. HARRISON. I said that last year.

Mr. FORT. And the difficulty is not altogether with the number of persons. The character and condition of the persons occupying the gallery have very often a great deal to do with the condition of the atmosphere that pours down upon our heads from a certain gallery in this House.

This consideration proves to me conclusively that impure air must descend. It is impossible to make the impurities in the atmosphere go upward except by an atmospheric current. Hot air will rise as a balloon will rise; cold air will go downward as a cannon-ball goes downward. But the impurities in the atmosphere will not rise unless carried up by a current. We must have currents.

In my judgment nature can ventilate this Hall cheaper and better than all the machinery which gentlemen can apply. What we most want is to have pure air come in around this Hall; and without attempting to resort to machinery or mechanical contrivances we must spend a great deal of money in order to get sufficient quantities of air into this Hall to supply such an audience as we often have here when the galleries are full. The remedy must in a great degree consist in bringing in pure air and letting the impurities pass out with the current. As the gentleman from New York said, you can drive out impure air, but you must do it with a current. Impure air, even though heated, will not rise unless you have a current.

Mr. WHITE. I move to amend by inserting the following:

That the proposition of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] be, and is hereby, accepted by the House.

We have been told by the gentleman in charge of this bill [Mr. HOLMAN] that it appropriates a very large sum of money. Yet we are asked to give $100,000 for the improvement of the pavements, walks, and grounds around this building. Seeing that it is more necessary to improve the inside of the cup or platter than to polish the outside, the gentleman has kindly consented that $33,000 of this $100,000 should be appropriated to the ventilation of this Hall. The purposed mode of improvement is admitted to be a theory—the vision of some scientist or of several perhaps. It is also indorsed by the distinguished gentleman from New York, [Mr. HEWITT,] who says he believes the system proposed in the report will be a success. But it is not denied that the plan is simply an experiment. Now the gentleman from New York has kindly offered to take this experiment upon his own shoulders. He has led us to believe that these charges about the great amounts of money which the democratic party spent in the late election did not touch him; that he is left whole with an abundance of means; and he proposes to benefit his race by improving the ventilation of the Hall occupied by the representatives of the people. I say allow him to do it. If you do not you will have upon your heads the curse of having given $33,000 to carry out a mere experiment, the money expended upon which will prove to be worse than thrown away. I say, allow the gentleman from New York to come in and take this responsibility upon his own shoulders. If he fails, his name will go down to history as a failure; if he succeeds, posterity will honor him. But in either event the Government will save $33,000.

Mr. HARRISON. I rise to oppose the amendment. I am sorry to say I do not know whether my friend from Kentucky [Mr. WHITE] meant this for a joke or not. If he did, it was a good one. If he meant it for a castigation of the gentleman from New York, I think that gentleman can afford to let it go. The bray will come back and break upon his own ears, not upon those of the gentleman from New York.

Now I want to say one word. This is a serious matter. They say that this proposition is an experiment. The Senate, sir, has exactly the same plan we have here and it is a success, only the Senate's Hall being smaller, the flues adequate, and the ducts large enough, they get a sufficiency of air. Go to the Senate Chamber, and when you open the door you will find the current of air coming out of the Senate into the corridor. Stand at yonder door or any one of these doors in this Hall, and the current comes from without. Here we have to put screens before our doors to prevent gentlemen who sit in the neighborhood of them from being made sick. In the Senate the air comes in warm and tempered, and presses out, and so strong is it that when you go into the corridor of the Senate you will feel the pure air coming toward you. Why is that? The gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. WHITE,] bred away up in the mountains of Kentucky, where in the houses when the chinks drop out the air pours in and they have health, where a back-log is put on and turned around like you would turn a turkey on a spit——

Mr. WHITE. Does the gentleman mean to say I was born in the "pea-vine region" of Kentucky, for if he does——

Mr. HARRISON. I was born there myself if you were not, and if you were you ought not to be ashamed of it. Now, in getting the foul air out, the exhaust of this House is so large that instead of having air coming from below and pressing out we have to keep the air from the corridors. The exhaust of this House is one hundred and eighty thousand feet a minute, whereas the air driven in only gives about forty or fifty or sixty thousand feet when severely pressed. The consequence is that with the exhaust-fan run to its capacity or in the neighborhood of its capacity the air from the corridors rushes in and makes draughts. Our proposition is to give the ability to the atmosphere from without to be brought into the stacks, the radiators heated and tempered, and then when it gets impure to pass out.

Mr. WHITE. I hope the gentleman from Illinois will not take his seat without yielding to me after what he has said.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. BANKS. Before debate is closed I wish to be heard.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move by unanimous consent all debate on the pending paragraph be considered as closed when the gentleman from Massachusetts has completed what he has to say.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection, and that will be considered as agreed to.

Mr. BANKS. Now, Mr. Chairman, while the proposition of the gentleman from New York is a very liberal one, yet it seems to me if the ventilation of this Hall is to be perfected, the Government is able, and ought to take upon itself the expense and responsibility of it. Therefore I hope the gentleman from Kentucky will withdraw his amendment.

Mr. WHITE. I certainly will if the gentleman from Massachusetts will yield a moment to me to say a word.

Mr. BANKS. I will yield to the gentleman from Kentucky before my time has expired.

Mr. WHITE. But I wish to say it now, and say it to the gentleman from Illinois who referred to me in his five-minute speech—I only want one word.

Mr. BANKS. Very well; I will yield to the gentleman for one word. Say it now before the time is gone.

Mr. WHITE. I say the gentleman from Illinois in taunting me with being born in the hills of Kentucky, in the "pea-vine district," instead of the "blue grass" or lower silurian limestone region of Kentucky, as he was, is unkind in this——

Mr. HARRISON. I take it all back if the gentleman feels so bad about it.

Mr. WHITE. I am not ashamed of the "pea-vine" district; I am proud of it. But if I had lived so long by that sweet-smelling river Chicago, as the gentleman has, then I could live on anything and would not need any ventilation, and therefore I do not wonder he introduces such an abominable system after he himself has lived there so long.

Mr. BANKS. Now, Mr. Chairman, the difficulties we encounter in this Hall in regard to ventilation were imposed upon us by scientific men. We had scientific men from all parts of the world. The architects of the British houses of Parliament were here, and spent a whole year, and whatever scientific men could do they have done for us, and about as much as any scientific men will do hereafter. The difficulty is, this is an iron box within a stone box. There are twenty-five or thirty feet between the outside walls of this Chamber and the outside walls of the building; and no natural light and no natural air ever did or ever can come into this Chamber. How can it be made a suitable place for the daily assembling of from four hundred to fourteen hundred people? I do not believe bringing currents of air into this Chamber from the outside can remedy the difficulty; nor do I believe these currents of air can be disposed of so as not to be dangerous to members of the House and to the ladies and others seated in the galleries. There is a current of air that is strong enough to sweep away an ordinary person in some parts of the gallery where the wives and children of the members daily congregate; and if you bring in air enough to make a ventilation for all these people, you will have a force of the currents that will be just as dangerous to those who encounter it as the foulness of the air itself.

But as the committee has considered the subject maturely, and as I know the gentlemen who have charge of the inquiries into this matter are well acquainted with the subject, and as the expense of the experiment will be trifling, I hope it will be made; and that if it fail we will then do what is necessary to be done, bring this Chamber to the air and light of heaven, which are better than any scientific man ever made, better than that which the honorable gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] proposes to make or can make. Let us go to the outside and bring in the air and light of heaven, which the Cooper Institute, to which he refers and whose ventilation he approves, enjoys, and with which every building on the face of the earth is accommodated where there is a free and pure air. Meanwhile I am willing to vote for the report of the gentlemen who have examined this matter.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I wish to explain, in regard to the great hall of the Cooper Institute, that it has no access to the outer air. It is a tight box, into which the air is forced by power and out of which the air goes by a ventilating flue. It is a case in point. The great hall of the Cooper Institute has no access to the outer air except that forced into it by power.

Mr. BANKS. The hall of the Cooper Institute is used for two or three hours in an evening, fifteen hundred or two thousand people congregating in it and going away after an hour or two. I have no doubt that fresh air can be supplied in the way the gentleman speaks of for a limited time, but we are here from four to six hours every day.

Mr. WHITE. I withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HARRISON] as modified on the suggestion of the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN.]

Mr. WHITE. I hope the gentlemen who have this matter in charge will divide the amendment so that we can vote on the $33,000 for ventilating, and then afterward on the other matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order.

Mr. WHITE. My object is that no part of the $67,000 proposed in this amendment may go to the improvement of these public grounds.

Mr. HOLMAN. Move to reduce the appropriation of $100,000.

Mr. WHITE. I move to reduce the $100,000 to $33,000. I do it for the reason——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order. The gentleman will put his amendment in writing.

Mr. WHITE. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out "$100,000," and insert "$33,000."

The question being taken on Mr. WHITE'S amendment to the amendment, it was not agreed to.

The question being taken on Mr. HARRISON'S amendment as modified, there were—ayes 48, noes 14; no quorum voting.

Mr. WHITE. I call for a further count.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. WHITE and Mr. SPRINGER were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 84, noes 39.

Mr. WHITE. A quorum has not voted. I do not, however, make a point on that, but shall ask for a vote in the House.

So further count not being called for, the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH. I offer the following amendment.

After the word "grounds" insert the following:

And for putting an elevator in the south wing of the Capitol, to be done under the direction of the Architect of the Capitol.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am compelled to insist upon the point of order that this is new work.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH. Will the Chair allow me to say that this differs from my former amendment? This stands on precisely the same footing as the amendment just adopted. It is not subject to the objection made to it by the gentleman from Indiana. It makes no additional appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair misunderstood the object of the amendment. It is in order.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH. It is a most extraordinary fact that the American Congress should have spent tens of millions of dollars on this building which we occupy; that we should have adorned it with the most elaborate frescoing found anywhere on the continent; that we should have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in beautifying it architecturally; and that we are now spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in buying additional grounds and beautifying them; and yet that we should be denying ourselves the most common comforts that modern civilization has produced.

Every public building of any importance, every hotel that is put up in any city on the continent, every store in which a large amount of business is transacted, every factory which is built in the country, every large edifice which is erected for the purpose of being rented, four stories high, is provided with an elevator. It has become a necessity. It is not one of the luxuries of life, like those for which we have expended here so many millions of dollars, but is one of the ordinary comforts of life. But yet we deny ourselves this convenience and comfort; for we are, in this building, like people in a fourth story. This is substantially the fourth story, although we call it the second; for each flight of stairs is equal to two flights in an ordinary building. Ascending to the second story of this building is equivalent to ascending to the fourth story of any ordinary building. And yet we deny to ourselves the convenience and comfort of an elevator in getting to the second floor of this building. We deny the same conveniences to every person that attends this House. There is not a hotel in this country in which one-quarter of the number of ladies go up stairs daily as ascend to these galleries every day, and yet we deny to our mothers, our sisters, our wives, and all the ladies of this country the necessary convenience which an elevator affords to them. We have an elevator at the other end of the Capitol, and the additional expense of running this elevator will be nothing. I call the attention of the House to the letter of the Architect of the Capitol, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

Mr. ATKINS. I rise to a question of order. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. HOLMAN. I raised a question of order on this proposition, and in the midst of the confusion I presume the Chair did not understand it. It was that this is independent legislation on an appropriation bill. It is entirely immaterial whether it appropriates money or not. It is legislation on an appropriation bill and it does not reduce expenditures, but conceding that it reduced expenditures it would not be in order. It is independent legislation and not in the line of retrenchment. Rule 120 of the House is very imperative on this subject. This bill is certainly large enough not to be loaded down with independent provisions.

Mr. SPRINGER. The one hundred and twentieth rule has reference to amendments which change existing law, and if an amendment changes existing law it must be in the line of retrenchment to make it in order. But this amendment does not change existing law, and therefore that rule does not apply to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is in order.

Mr. CONGER. Then I rise to oppose the amendment, and I yield my time to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. LEAVENWORTH.]

Mr. LEAVENWORTH. I call for the reading of the letter.

The Clerk read the letter, as follows:

ARCHITECT'S OFFICE, UNITED STATES CAPITOL,
Washington, D. C., January 31, 1877.

SIR: In reply to yours of the 29th instant, I beg leave to state that I have examined the south wing of the Capitol in reference to the location of a passenger elevator.

In my judgment, the most suitable place is at the south end of the eastern corridor, near the entrance to the room of the Committee on Appropriations, and convenient to the bronze stairway.

The estimated cost of the elevator, together with that of changing the position of doorway where necessary in the rooms in each story, is as follows:

For elevator	$6,000
For carrying steam-pipe to elevator	300
For constructing well-hole and tiling floors to correspond with present patterns	2,500
For changing doorways in rooms and painting the rooms, rendered necessary by the change	500
	9,300

The cost of running an elevator will be but little beyond the salary of the attendant.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWARD CLARK,
Architect of the United States Capitol.

Hon. E. W. LEAVENWORTH.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH. Mr Chairman, the only expense which is involved by the amendment now offered is not an expense in addition to the appropriation; it merely defines the mode in which a portion of the appropriation shall be expended, and when the elevator has been put in there is the entire expense. You already have the engineer; you have the engine also; you have all the conveniences; you have the power, and it is only necessary to apply the power to the elevator. That is all the additional expense there is. The entire additional expense which would be involved in running the elevator would not amount to $3 a day.

I am myself running an elevator in the city of Syracuse, and it is run in addition to heating the building with steam. I have in my hand an estimate from the engineer who runs the elevator and warms the building with steam, in which he estimates the entire additional expense of running the elevator at $2.54 a day, giving all the items of expense. I say that the additional expense of running this elevator would not exceed $3 a day, and that it would be the greatest public convenience that could be added to this building.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOLMAN. I only wish to say that the elevator at the other end of the Capitol, which, after great hesitation, we allowed, has cost the Government not less than $5,000 a year from the year that it was first established, including the many alterations that have been made, the engine, the engineer, and the conductor. And in view of the large sum appropriated by this bill the Committee on Appropriations ask the House to vote down this amendment.

Mr. BANKS. I move to strike out the last word. The proposition presented is certainly well worth the consideration of the House. There is no portion of their labor more worrisome upon members of this House than that of getting here during a large portion of the year, and especially during a large portion of the long session.

Now the elevator since it was first invented has of its own force been adopted in almost every public building in all parts of the country. I know perfectly well the man who invented it and without any effort to give it popularity it has now been adopted and is being adopted in all the public buildings, in all the hotels, and in a great many private houses in this country, and will be ultimately in other countries. Now where there are so many persons obliged to come here, upon what theory or reason can it be said that they shall be compelled every day to walk up and down these four flights of stairs which we are obliged to travel, many of us, from other causes which have been spoken of here, in ill-health and many advanced in years? It seems to me that this is one of the absolutely necessary expenses that we should incur.

Now, what has been said by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] may be strictly true. It may cost $5,000 to run the elevator at the other end of this building, but it does not cost $5,000 nor $1,000 to run the elevators that are used in hotels, in stores, and in commercial establishments, and there is no reason in the world why it should cost more than $1,000 at the outside to run an elevator for a year at this end of the Capitol. I hope the House, in consideration of the advantages and comforts to be derived from an elevator and of the thanks they will receive from those men who will follow them in the performance of their duties here, will vote for this appropriation. I withdraw the formal amendment.

The question was then taken upon the amendment moved by Mr. LEAVENWORTH, and upon a division there were—ayes 67, noes 70.

Before the result of this vote was announced,

Mr. LEAVENWORTH said: No quorum has voted, and I call for a further count.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. LEAVENWORTH and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

The committee again divided; but before the result was declared,

Mr. CONGER said: I suppose consent will be given to have a vote taken on this amendment in the House, and then we can go on with the bill.

Many MEMBERS. O, no.

The tellers completed their count, and reported that there were—ayes 63, noes 75.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH. I do not insist upon a further count.

No further count being called for, the amendment was accordingly declared to be not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read through the portion relating to the Capitol extension.

Mr. HOLMAN. With a view of asking the House for an evening session, as it is now half past four o'clock, I will move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and had come to no resolution thereon.

CHICKASAW NATION.

Mr. THROCKMORTON, by unanimous consent, presented the following petition; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, ordered to be printed, and to be printed in the RECORD:

The undersigned, Benjamin F. Overton, governor of the Chickasaw Nation, and Thomas W. Johnson and John E. Anderson, citizens of said nation, having been constituted delegates of the said nation, pursuant to an act of the national legislature hereinafter set forth, respectfully submit the following statement and memorial:

In the years 1832 and 1834 the Chickasaw Nation, then occupying their ancient lands, in the State of Mississippi, entered into four treaties with the United States, whereby they sold to the United States all of their lands east of the Mississippi River, and agreed to emigrate to territory west of that river, and the United States agreed to dispose of the proceeds of sales of their lands in Mississippi in accordance with the following stipulation:

"The funds thence resulting, after the necessary expenses of surveying and selling and other advances which may be made are repaid to the United States, shall, from time to time, be invested in some secure stocks, redeemable within a period of not more than twenty years, and the United States will cause the interest arising therefrom annually to be paid to the Chickasaws."—7 Statutes, 382,385,454.

In 1852 the United States and the Chickasaw Nation entered into a treaty, which contains the following provision:

"ARTICLE 5. The Chickasaw Nation desires that the whole amount of their national fund shall remain with the United States in trust for the benefit of this people, and that the same shall on no account be diminished. It is therefore agreed that the United States shall continue to hold said fund in trust as aforesaid, and shall constantly keep the same invested in safe and profitable stock, the interest upon which shall be annually paid to the Chickasaw Nation: Provided, That so much of said fund as the Chickasaws may require for the purpose of enabling them to effect the permanent settlement of the tribe, as contemplated by the treaty of 1834, shall be subject to the control of their general council."—10 Statutes, 975.

By the treaty entered into April 28, 1866, between the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations it is provided as follows:

"ART. 10. The United States re-affirms all obligations arising out of treaty stipulations or acts of legislation with regard to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, entered into prior to the late rebellion and in force at that time not inconsistent herewith, and further agrees to renew the payment of all annuities and other moneys accruing under such treaty stipulations and acts of legislation from and after the close of the fiscal year ending on the 30th of June, in the year 1866."

"ART. 40. All the rights, privileges, and immunities heretofore possessed by said nations, or individuals thereof, or to which they were entitled under the treaties and legislation heretofore made and had in connection with them, shall be and are hereby declared to be in full force so far as they are consistent with the provisions of this treaty." (14 Statutes, 774, 779.)

The interest on said trust fund, amounting at present to $67,967.84 per annum, has always been paid to the Chickasaw Nation by the United States, except the sum of $297,890.25, which accrued prior to July 1, 1866, of which no part has been paid. The amount so unpaid is correctly set forth on page 170 of the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for 1875, as follows:

"Estimates have repeatedly been submitted to Congress for arrears of interest due the Chickasaws accruing on Arkansas and Tennessee bonds prior to July 1, 1866, amounting to $297,890.25; but Congress has as yet failed to make the necessary appropriation. The amount of this indebtedness on the part of the United States to the Chickasaw Nation has been fully admitted by the Interior and Treasury Departments, and sustained by the opinion of the late Attorney-General Ackerman. No explanation can be made to the Chickasaw people of the course of the Government in thus annually ignoring a claim concerning whose equity there is not the least dispute."

In the year 1866 a petition for the payment of said interest was presented by agents of the Chickasaw Nation to the Congress of the United States. But it came to the knowledge of Congress that the following contract had been entered into between said agents and Hon. J. H. B. Latrobe, and that the most of the money nominally stipulated to be paid to said Latrobe was in fact to be paid to said agents for their own use:

We, the Chickasaw delegation, having full power to act, do agree that for and in consideration of the services of Hon. J. H. B. Latrobe, of Baltimore, Maryland, rendered us in making a treaty with the Government of the United States, that if the unpaid back annuities belonging to the Chickasaw Nation are recovered and paid to them, the said J. H. B. Latrobe shall be entitled to and be paid one-half part thereof.

We further agree to advance the said J. H. B. Latrobe $100,000 out of any money the Chickasaw legislature may think proper to appropriate, which may have been obtained under said treaty, so as not to interfere with the funds necessary to carry on the Chickasaw government.

The said $100,000 agreed to be advanced to the said J. H. B. Latrobe is to be deducted from the one-half part of the back annuities due the said J. H. B. Latrobe, provided the same is recovered under said treaty, and provided also that if the said treaty should be altered or amended so as to materially impair the interests of the Chickasaw Nation, as now secured thereby, the compensation stipulated to be paid to the said Latrobe is to be reasonably modified accordingly, but the amount agreed to be advanced to the said J. H. B. Latrobe not to be less than $100,000. It is further agreed that one-half of the proceeds realized and coming to the Chickasaw Nation out of the leased district shall be paid to the said J. H. B. Latrobe, provided the Choctaws and Chickasaws agree to grant the freedmen the forty-acre lots, and other stipulated privileges, and receive the $300,000, after deducting the amount or price of the forty-acre lots allowed said freedmen according to article — of treaty.

In testimony whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names and affixed our seals.

[SEAL.] WINCHESTER COLBERT.
[SEAL.] his EDMOND + PICKENS. mark.
[SEAL.] ROBT. H. LOVE.
[SEAL.] HOLMES COLBERT.
[SEAL.] COLBERT CARTER.

Witness.
W. S. MITCHELL.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, TISHOMINGO CITY,
CHICKASAW NATION, INDIAN TERRITORY.

I do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the Latrobe contract, (so called,) the original of which may be found on file in the office of national secretary at the city of Tishomingo, Chickasaw Nation.

Given under my hand and seal of office, this the 27th day of January, A. D. 1877.
[SEAL.] JOSIAH BROWN,
National Secretary, Chickasaw Nation.

And the petition presented by said agents was rejected.

On the 22d of September, 1874, the legislature of the Chickasaw Nation enacted the following statute:

"Whereas Robert H. Love, Holmes Colbert, Colbert Carter, Edmund Pickens, and Winchester Colbert were commissioned in the year 1865 to visit Washington City, District of Columbia, during the session of Congress, 1866, with full and efficient powers to reconstruct or enter into new treaties with the United States, or any authorized agents thereof, necessary and proper, in their judgments, to obtain full guarantee and securities of all the rights, interest held by the Chickasaw Nation, or individuals thereof, under former treaty stipulations with the Government of the United States, whereby the happiness and interest of the Chickasaw people may be advanced;

"And whereas said commissioners did between themselves with a fraudulent view entered into an informal contract giving to J. H. B. Latrobe, esq., of Baltimore, one-half of all moneys collected or caused by him to be paid to the Chickasaw people, then withheld by the United States Government; also, one-half of the $300,000, after deducting the amount or price of the forty-acre lots allowed said freedmen, should the Choctaws and Chickasaws adopt and give each freedman forty acres of land under the treaty of 1866.

"And whereas the commissioners on the part of the Chickasaw Nation did, upon false representation, obtain from the Chickasaw Legislature, November 14, 1867, the sum of $100,000, giving to J. H. B. Latrobe $16,000, and divided the remainder among themselves, D. H. Cooper and John T. Cochran, deceased, and also an equal share of the 50 per cent. of all back annuities, that said Latrobe may collect on the said informal contract one-sixth of said moneys collected being J. H. B. Latrobe's share for services rendered in behalf of the Chickasaws: Now, therefore,

Be it enacted by the legislature of the Chickasaw Nation, That the informal and fraudulent contract made and entered into by and between the Chickasaw commissioners and J. H. B. Latrobe, esq., of Baltimore, Maryland, and all laws and parts of laws giving or granting authority to any and all contracts made by and between the Chickasaw commissioners and J. H. B. Latrobe, their agents and attorneys, are hereby repealed, repudiated, rescinded, and declared null and void.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That the governor be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this act to the Secretary of Interior, Secretary of the Treasury, and Commissioner of Indian Affairs at the city of Washington, District of Columbia; and that this act take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Approved September 22, 1874.

B. F. OVERTON,
Governor of the Chickasaw Nation.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, TISHOMINGO CITY,
Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory.

I do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original act of the legislature of the Chickasaw Nation, the original of which may be found on file in the office of national secretary, at the city of Tishomingo, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory.

Given under my hand and seal of office, this the 29th day of January, A. D. 1877.
[SEAL.] JOSIAH BROWN,
National Secretary Chickasaw Nation, I. T.

On the 4th of October, 1874, the following act of the legislature of the Chickasaw Nation was duly approved by the governor:

An act repealing certain acts, appointing commissioners to visit Washington City in charge of Chickasaw interest under any treaties existing between the United States and the Chickasaw people.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the legislature of the Chickasaw Nation, That the act appointing commissioners Holmes Colbert and George D. James to Washington, &c., (see Chickasaw printed law-book, page 102,) appointed and continued as commissioners, with full powers to represent the interest and welfare, under any treaties existing between the United States and the Chickasaw people, approved November 14, 1867, by Cyrus Harris, governor of the Chickasaw Nation, are hereby repealed.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted That the act appointing Holmes Colbert commissioner to settle claims at Washington, District of Columbia, appointed commissioner for and in behalf of the Chickasaw Nation, and the individual members thereof, in order to carry out the object referred to in the preamble (see Chickasaw printed pamphlet law-book, page 10) approved October 24, 1867, by Cyrus Harris, governor of the Chickasaw Nation, are hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, That the act authorizing the governor to appoint a commissioner to settle up the unfinished business of Holmes Colbert, deceased, with the Government at Washington, and to take charge of and carry out the programme begun and commenced by the said Holmes Colbert without alteration or amendment, and fully authorize to receive and receipt the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States for all moneys and awards due, and to settle with and pay over to the widow of Holmes Colbert, or his administrators, &c., (see Chickasaw manuscript law, passed the legislature, and approved May 8, 1872, by Thomas J. Parker, governor of the Chickasaw Nation,) are hereby repealed.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, That all appointments and commissions heretofore granted under the authority of the Chickasaw Nation, giving full powers to represent the interest and welfare of the Chickasaw people at Washington City or elsewhere, shall cease and be of non-effect from and after the passage of this act.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, That the governor be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to transmit a certified copy of this act bearing the great seal of the Chickasaw Nation to the Secretary of Interior, Secretary of Treasury, and Commissioner of Indian Affairs at Washington City, District of Columbia, and that they be requested to reject all persons heretofore commissioned in the interest of the Chickasaw people.

Approved November 7, 1874.

B. F. OVERTON,
Governor of the Chickasaw Nation.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, TISHOMINGO CITY,
Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory.

I do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original act of legislature of the Chickasaw Nation, which is now on file in the office of national secretary, at the city of Tishomingo, Chickasaw Nation.

Given under my hand and seal of office this the 29th day of January, A. D. 1877.

[SEAL.] JOSIAH BROWN,
National Secretary of the Chickasaw Nation.

On the 2d of November, 1876, the following act was duly approved:

An act appointing delegates to visit Washington, District of Columbia.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted by the legislature of the Chickasaw Nation, That the governor of the Chickasaw Nation be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to appoint and commission two persons to visit Washington City, District of Columbia, during the next session of Congress, with full and efficient power to represent the interest of the Chickasaw people in all things touching their interest and welfare, under any treaties existing between the United States and the Chickasaws, wherein the interest and happiness of the Chickasaws may be advanced.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That the governor of the Chickasaw Nation be and he is hereby authorized to accompany said delegation to render all assistance necessary in the prosecution of all claims held against the Government of the United States, and, if necessary, to employ counsel to assist in recovering all claims which may be justly due the Chickasaws by treaty stipulations or otherwise.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, That any and all awards by the United States on back annuities, orphans, and incompetent claims, or any other claims of a national character, shall be paid over to the national treasurer of the Chickasaw Nation, taking his receipt therefor, and giving him an exhibit and statement of the source from whence derived, together with such other items of information as may be necessary and advantageous to the nation. And it is hereby made the duty of the national treasurer to lay all exhibits of moneys received by him before the legislature or any authorized committee for their information and action.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, That the said delegates are hereby required to protest against any and all territorial forms of government which may be introduced into the United States Congress for the purpose of extending the same over the Indian Territory against the express sentiments of our people. And they are further required to report the proceedings of their mission in full to the next session of the legislature. And for such services they shall each receive the sum of $1,000 out of any money now in the hands of the national treasurer, and the auditor of public accounts is authorized to issue his warrants accordingly.

Approved November 2, 1876.

B. F. OVERTON,
Governor of the Chickasaw Nation.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, TISHOMINGO CITY,
Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory.

I do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original act of the Chickasaw legislature, which is now on file in the national secretary's office at the city of Tishomingo, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory.

Given under my hand and seal of office this the 24th day of January, A. D 1877.

[SEAL.] JOSIAH BROWN,
National Secretary of the Chickasaw Nation.

In pursuance of said last-mentioned act the undersigned, Benjamin F. Overton, governor of the Chickasaw Nation, has commissioned Thomas W. Johnson and John E. Anderson, both citizens of the Chickasaw Nation, to perform the duties imposed by said act.

The undersigned, therefore, on behalf of the Chickasaw Nation, respectfully ask the Congress of the United States to provide for the said arrears of interest, now due to the Chickasaw Nation from the United States, amounting, as aforesaid, to the sum of $297,890.25, by an investment of the sum of $200,000 in bonds of the United States, to be held in trust for the Chickasaw Nation by the United States, and the interest thereon to be paid semi-annually to the Chickasaw Nation; and by an appropriation of the sum of $97,890.25 to be paid in money into the treasury of the Chickasaw Nation.

B. F. OVERTON,
Governor of the Chickasaw Nation.
THOS. W. JOHNSON,
JOHN E. ANDERSON,
Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, February 21, 1877.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BANNING. I ask unanimous consent that a session of the House be held to-night for the purpose of considering the pension bills only that are on the Private Calendar.

Mr. RUSK. I hope the gentleman will not confine his request to the Private Calendar, but will include all reports from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, just as was done when the order was made for a session last evening.

Mr. BANNING. Very well, I will modify the motion so as to include reports from the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The SPEAKER. The use of the words "reports from the Committee on Invalid Pensions" would embrace all reports from that committee, and the Cnair inclines to think it would embrace a general bill.

Mr. RUSK. The committee has no general bill to report.

Mr. BAGBY. That was the language of the order made for a session last night.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state the proposition of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. BANNING.] It is that when the House takes a recess to-day it shall be be until half past seven o'clock this evening, and that the session of this evening shall be exclusively for the consideration of reports from the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Reports of a private nature.

The SPEAKER. That will be understood.

Mr. HOLMAN. If gentlemen who are interested in these pension bills would consent that to-morrow night be set apart for the purpose of considering them, and allow the Committee of the Whole to finish to-night the sundry civil appropriation bill, that would greatly promote the public business.

Mr. BANNING. I know a number of gentlemen who have left the Hall supposing that there would be a session to-night for the consideration of pension bills only, and many of those gentlemen are interested in such bills. I believe that if we have a session to-night for the purpose of proceeding with the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill, there will be no quorum here and nothing will be accomplished. I hope the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] will withdraw his objection to my proposition, and let us have a session to-night to consider these private claims, many of which should have been passed upon long ago.

Mr. HOLMAN. Many gentlemen are insisting that the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill shall be finished at the earliest moment, shall be concluded to-day. Inasmuch as it is of the greatest importance that that bill shall be passed as soon as possible, I feel constrained to submit the motion that the House now take a recess until half past seven o'clock this evening, with the understanding that we will then proceed with the consideration of the appropriation bill. If the House shall determine otherwise, of course I will defer to the wish of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman understands that if there be a session this evening the appropriation bill will come up as unfinished business.

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly; and so many gentlemen ask that we shall go on with the bill at once and complete it that I feel constrained to make that motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman practically objects to the assignment of this evening for pension bills.

Mr. HOLMAM. No, sir; but I practically ask that to-morrow evening be set apart for pension bills.

Mr. BANNING. Then if the gentleman does not object, I call for the regular order, which is upon my motion.

Mr. HOLMAN. The House can show by its vote what it wants. I think, in view of the late period of the session, the Committee on Appropriations should insist upon the business from that committee being first considered and disposed of.

Mr. ATKINS. I would ask my colleague on the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. HOLMAN] if he thinks a bill of this importance should be considered without the presence of a quorum?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. We can have a quorum here by sending for members.

Mr. ATKINS. There are many millions of dollars involved in this bill, and it should not be considered unless a quorum is present.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to take a recess until half past seven o'clock this evening, the effect of which will be to bring up at that hour the unfinished business, being the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. KNOTT. I move to amend that motion so that the House will now take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

The motion of Mr. KNOTT was not agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not understand exactly whether the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] desires that the pension bills shall be considered to-night or to-morrow night.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that to-morrow night be set apart for pension bills, and that the House shall consider the appropriation bill to-night.

The question was then taken upon the motion of Mr. HOLMAN, and it was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Before the Chair announces the result of the vote just taken, he asks unanimous consent to present for reference certain executive communications.

There was no objection.

W. W. LIVINGSTON.

The SPEAKER, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the Adjutant-General on the petition of W. W. Livingston, brevet lieutenant-colonel United States Army; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

NAVIGATION AT ENTRANCE OF BRAZOS HARBOR.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report on obstructions to navigation at the entrance of the harbor of Brazos Santiago, Texas; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SURVEYS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a communication from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, inclosing an estimate of appropriations for surveys in North Carolina; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

NAVIGATION OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the board of engineers on the security of navigation of the Mississippi River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted—

To Mr. JONES, of New Hampshire, for one week.

To Mr. J. H. BAGLEY, for three days on account of sickness.

To Mr. ANDERSON, for ten days on account of sickness in his family.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to Mr. FOSTER for the withdrawal from the files of the Forty-third Congress of papers in the case of J. W. Douglas, there having been no adverse report.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

By unanimous consent, Mr. SPARKS obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD remarks on the Florida election; and Mr. PHILIPS of Missouri, Mr. COCHRANE, and Mr. RAINEY leave to print remarks on the South Carolina election.

Mr. CONGER. It is understood, of course, that this leave is granted subject to the rule that no personal language shall be indulged in.

The SPEAKER. Wherever unanimous consent is granted to print remarks in the RECORD it is understood that no personal matter of any sort is permitted to be embraced in such remarks.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, is it the understanding that the session this evening shall be for the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill alone, and that no other business is to be considered?

The SPEAKER. The motion was simply to take a recess until half past seven o'clock. If the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] desires to press the sundry civil bill, he will of course be recognized.

Mr. FOSTER. Had not that better be understood?

The SPEAKER. That bill comes up as unfinished business.

Mr. SAYLER. Will not other business be in order this evening?

The SPEAKER. Any business which may be in order under the rules can come in. It will be a regular session.

Mr. HOLMAN. I give notice that immediately upon the assembling of the House at half past seven, I shall ask that we go into Committee of the Whole on the sundry civil bill.

The result of the vote on the motion of Mr. HOLMAN for a recess was then announced; and accordingly (at four o'clock and forty-five minutes p. m.) a recess was taken until half past seven o'clock.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House re-assembled at half past seven o'clock p. m.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. BUCKNER in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

SURVEYS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

For survey of the public lands and private land claims, $50,000: Provided, That the sum hereby appropriated shall be expended in such surveys as the public interest may require, under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and at such rates as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe, not exceeding the rate herein authorized: Provided, That no lands shall be surveyed under this appropriation, except, first, those adapted to agriculture without artificial irrigation; second, irrigable lands, or such as can be redeemed and for which there is sufficient accessible water for the reclamation and cultivation of the same not otherwise utilized or claimed; third, timber lands bearing timber of commercial value; fourth, coal lands containing coal of commercial value; fifth, exterior boundary of town sites; sixth, private land claims. The cost of such surveys shall not exceed $10 per mile for standard lines, (and the starting point for said survey may be established by triangulation,) $7 for township and $6 for section lines, except that the Commissioner of the General Land Office may allow for the survey of standard lines in heavily timbered land a sum not exceeding $13 per mile.

Mr. BELFORD. I move to amend by striking out in the first line of the paragraph just read "$50,000" and inserting "$300,000."

I have not much hope, Mr. Chairman, that the amendment proposed will prevail, for the reason that matters appertaining to the State of Colorado have not been favorably regarded by this House; and yet I would not be doing justice to the people I have the honor to represent if I failed to lay before this body the requirements of the public service in that State. In 1874 Congress fixed the rates for surveying the public lands in Colorado as follows: $15 per linear mile for standard lines, $12 for township and $10 for section lines, and for heavily timbered lands at augmented rates not exceeding $18 per linear mile for standard, $16 for township, and $14 for section lines, the total appropriation amounting to $50,000. At the second session of the Forty-third Congress $60,000 were appropriated. At the last session, when we entered upon the great era of retrenchment and reform, the rates of surveying were reduced from fifteen to ten dollars per mile for standard lines, from twelve to seven dollars for township, and from ten to six dollars for section lines. The result was that in Colorado but little surveying was done last season. Every year the settlements made in my State are reaching farther to the westward. Supplies in many instances have to be carried for great distances on pack-mules. Public surveys such as the subdivision of townships cannot be made at the reduced price, $6 per mile. It requires the following men to form a surveying party: Two rodmen, two chainmen, one compassman, one cook, two axmen, and two men to attend camp, stock, &c. We pay men $40 per month and board, equal to $2 per day. The surveyor gets $10 a day. Therefore, to pay expenses it becomes necessary to run five miles per day, which no set of men can do in the mountains where the principal Government work will be done in the future. Large settlements are being formed on the Bear and Grand Rivers, and yet I am told not a foot of the land has yet been surveyed.

It is impossible to run lines through the thick groves of aspen and young pines, when you have to cut a road for man and beast, at $6 per mile. It is no excuse to say that, because much of the surveyed lands on the plains remain unoccupied, new surveys should not be extended to points made necessary by new settlements. Again applications for patents for mineral lands cannot in some instances be made, because the United States surveys have not been extended to the mineral lands; the law requiring a survey for a mineral patent to be connected or tied to some known corner of the public surveys. To do this in many instances would impose an enormous expense on the applicant, who by law has to pay the expenses of the survey for location and patent, as it would require a line to be run in some instances from three to thirty miles in length. Again the State of Colorado, by virtue of the enabling act, is entitled to a large amount of land to be selected from the body of the State, the proceeds to be applied to supporting public institutions. A bill is now pending in this House granting ninety thousand acres for the endowment of an agricultural college, and another in the Senate making a grant for the endowment of a school of mines. Should these bills pass, additional surveying will be necessary. I therefore think that the amendment should prevail, and that at least $60,000 should be appropriated for a survey of the public lands in Colorado.

Mr. HOLMAN. The statement of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BELFORD] in regard to the amount of lands surveyed in Colorado is correct. I have before me the statement of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, showing that on the 30th of last June there were 13,516,376 acres of surveyed lands in the Territory of Colorado, unsold; an area as large as the great State of Indiana, in which I reside and which comes well up to the average of the States of this Union. The whole amount of lands surveyed and unsold at the date I have mentioned reached the enormous aggregate of 175,876,165 acres; a territory equal to seven such States as Indiana. Yet we are told that this policy of surveying lands in advance of settlement for the benefit of speculators is a proper thing for this Government to do. That is the whole effect; it simply enables the rapacious speculator to go in advance of settlement, select the best tracts of land and enter them.

Mr. PIPER. The gentleman speaks of surveying the public lands for the benefit of speculators. Now I wish to ask him what lands in the West can be bought by speculators?

Mr. HOLMAN. Any of them that have been offered for sale.

Mr. PIPER. I beg leave to differ with the gentleman. No land is sold except for homestead settlement.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am aware that that principle prevails universally in the State of Nebraska; I am aware that it was a fundamental principle in the organization of the Territory of Dakota; but I do not understand the principle to be of universal application.

Mr. PIPER. It is of universal application.

Mr. HOLMAN. Time and again I have struggled on this floor to have that principle adopted as one of universal application, but I have uniformly failed.

The Committee on Appropriations have deemed it sufficient to appropriate $50,000 for these surveys, having two objects in view: first, that in such cases as that mentioned by the gentleman from Colorado, where settlement was found to be drifting into channels where the lands had not been surveyed, a proper allotment of the money could be made for surveys so as to answer fully the purposes of settlement.

Mr. BELFORD. Will the gentleman allow me to call his attention to one fact which he seems to have overlooked?

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BELFORD. And that is this: I have stated that I concede the statement made by the gentleman from Indiana to the House the other day was correct; but he seems to have overlooked the fact that the surveys to which he alludes were upon the east side of the mountains. These settlements have crossed the main range of the mountains and are now pushing their way to the main rivers in Colorado. The lands east of the mountains, except upon the banks of the streams, cannot be cultivated, as they are not susceptible of irrigation.

Mr. HOLMAN. We wish to meet cases like that and therefore have recommended an appropriation of $50,000 to meet just such emergencies.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HENDERSON. I move to strike out the last word and yield my time to the gentleman from Colorado, [Mr. BELFORD.]

Mr. BELFORD. The gentleman says he gives $50,000 for the purpose of surveying the public lands. I say out of that appropriation, according to the distribution made by the Commissioner of the General Land Office last year, the State of Colorado will not receive more than $2,000. If the gentleman will turn his attention to the act enabling our people to form a State government, he will find under that act we are entitled to so many hundred thousands of acres of the public land, to be selected by the State, for the purpose of erecting public institutions, and yet there is no money appropriated to survey those lands and enable the State to make its selection. If Congress in 1874 deemed it proper to appropriate $50,000, and in 1875 to appropriate $60,000, that is, if the public necessity of that section of country required it, I cannot imagine why Colorado should be limited in this distribution simply to $2,000; for that is what it will amount to if this law passes as reported from the Committee on Appropriations.

I desire to call the attention of the gentleman to another thing, and that is this: in this bill he has not only limited the amount of the general appropriation, but he has also limited the amount which shall be paid for surveys, that is, $6 for surveying a section line per mile. If the gentleman lived in that country, he would find that it is absolutely impossible to survey through the Rocky Mountains for $6 a mile. Why? It requires first, two rodmen, two axmen, one compassman, one cook, two men to take care of the stock and the camp, and you pay these men at the rate of $40 per month and the surveyor $10 per day. So, then, Mr. Chairman, they have to run a line five miles every day or they cannot pay expenses; and yet we have been acting upon that basis in this great era of retrenchment and what I call false economy, because it is an economy which uniformly operates against the development of western interests and in favor of eastern interests; and our people are to be prevented from making a permanent lodgment in that country which they have opened up simply because this great Government denies the means of surveying the public lands and bringing them into market.

I wish to call the attention of the gentleman to another fact with which he seems not to be familiar. I represent a mining country. Whenever a man takes up a claim upon the public domain there, the law requires he shall connect his location with the lines of the public surveys. Suppose a miner takes up a claim to-day and has it surveyed. He may have to run that line at his own expense from three to thirty miles before he can secure a patent of his mine; and yet will the gentleman retard and hinder the development of the mining interests because of his wild devotion to his pea-nut system of economy? Economy does not consist so much in saving the pennies as in a wise and just application of the public funds of this nation to the development of its great vital and material interests.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOLMAN. The double object—as I was attempting to remark when I yielded to the gentleman from Colorado—the double object in reducing the amount of this appropriation for surveys is, first, to cut off speculation in the public lands; for the object of heavy appropriations is in the interest of speculation, either through the pre-emption law, or otherwise according to the laws of the Territories——

Mr. PIPER. I do hope the gentleman will not persist in misrepresenting this matter.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman let me consume my own time?

Mr. PIPER. But I do think you ought to correct your statement.

Mr. HOLMAN. Secondly, the object is to put an end to the very profitable jobs in making these public surveys; and there that object is especially had in view. And thirdly, to put an end to this system of surveyors-general and bring this whole subject of the survey of the public lands directly under the control of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, subject to the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. LANE. Will the gentleman pardon me if I interrupt him?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. LANE. Then why not strike out all the appropriations for salaries of surveyors-general?

Mr. HOLMAN. I will answer the gentleman, if he will allow me. I have but five minutes' time.

The appropriation made this year for the surveyors-general and their clerks and their offices is simply to enable them to finish up their work, and it is designed for no other purpose. For I take it for granted, from the light now thrown on this subject before Congress, that the next Congress will at once revise and reform this entire system.

Mr. MAGINNIS. I wish to ask the gentleman from Indiana one question. What work possibly can the surveyors-general allow to run over this fiscal year? Are they not obliged to complete their work out of the last year's appropriations?

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not understand what the gentleman means. These are appropriations, as he knows, for the next fiscal year; and we are all aware that the business of all these surveyors-general's offices is behind-hand and that it is necessary to make some small appropriations to enable them to complete their work. That is all there is about it.

Now, sir, I do not know why the gentleman from Colorado, with thirty and a half millions of acres of unsold lands in his State, should be so eager for the expenditure of money in his State. We are informed, sir, by disinterested persons in all the Territories that the appropriations heretofore made were unwarrantably made and were a mere squandering of the public moneys and a squandering of them in the interest of speculators; and for one I am anxious to see that brought to an end. We think the appropriation of $50,000 is sufficient. We have had occasion to consider carefully the interests of every State and Territory in which public lands are located and have reported what we consider a sufficient amount for that purpose.

[Here the hammer fell.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

Here the committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the Chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, informed the House that the Senate had passed, without amendment, a bill (H. R. No. 901) for the relief of J. E. Robertson & Co., of Indianapolis, Indiana.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. No. 4187) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

Mr. HENDERSON. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. PIPER. I renew it.

I am surprised at the tenacity with which the gentleman from Indiana persists in refusing both last session and this session to make any appropriations for the purpose of surveying the public lands of the country. So far as the Territories are concerned, I personally know but little about them; but the State of California contains about one hundred millions of acres of land; and of that vast area only twenty-seven millions have heretofore been surveyed during the last twenty-eight years. It is true that much of the land that has been surveyed there is desert land that cannot be settled upon except at great expense and is totally useless except by irrigation. It is true that all the lands that have been surveyed in the State of California have not been settled upon; nor will they be for the next century probably; but is that any argument in favor of this system of preventing the other lands from being surveyed? Not at all. The fact is it is the true policy of this Government to survey all the public lands; that when the settler goes into the wilderness and sets himself down to create a home and settles upon the public land he may know the section, or half section, or quarter section upon which he settles. Without this he is groping about in the dark. He knows not where he is or where he may be.

As to this pitiful sum of $50,000 to be applied to the survey of the public lands of the United States, why, sir, it is beneath notice. I admire the grand and towering intellect professed by the gentleman who happens to be the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. Of course I admit that he absorbs all the knowledge of the United States in that grand cranium of his. But as regards this one little thing, his great mind has not condescended to contemplate it justly and truly. If we are to make any appropriation whatever, we should make an adequate one that will accomplish the purpose intended, instead of frittering away this $50,000 to be simply wasted here and there, in this Territory and that, and to accomplish no good whatever. Consequently I submit to the committee that, if we appropriate one cent, we should appropriate $300,000, that it may subserve a public purpose.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise only to say that the surveyed lands unsold in the State of California amount to the startling aggregate of 21,402,906 acres, and yet the gentleman is crying for more.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that all debate upon this paragraph cease at this time.

Mr. PIPER. I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. ATKINS. I wish to make a single statement. The gentleman from California [Mr. PIPER] stated a moment ago that nothing was appropriated at the last session of Congress for the surveys of the public lands. I hold in my hand the act of Congress of last session which appropriated $325,000 for the survey of the public lands, and yet the gentleman from California says that nothing was appropriated.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the committee rise.

Mr. PAGE. I hope the gentleman from Indiana will withdraw that motion; I want to say a word upon this question.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would be willing to withhold my motion until the gentleman from California [Mr. PAGE] and the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. STEELE] had been heard, but I ask that after they are heard debate shall cease upon this paragraph.

Mr. MAGINNIS. I notify the gentleman from Indiana that if there is not a quorum present all his efforts to cut off debate in this way will not succeed.

Mr. HOLMAN. O! well, then I insist on my motion. My object in moving to rise was that the House might go to other business, as I see we cannot proceed with this bill without a quorum. I must insist on my motion that the committee rise.

The question was put on Mr. HOLMAN'S motion; and on a division there were—ayes 57, noes 38.

So the motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had, according to order, had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. HOLMAN. At the time of making the motion that the committee rise, I thought that perhaps the House would prefer proceeding with other business, but it has been suggested to me that perhaps we had better proceed with this bill. I move therefore that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the sundry civil appropriation bill, and pending that motion I move that all debate upon the pending paragraph shall cease in fifteen minutes after the session is resumed.

The motion to close debate was agreed to.

The question was then taken on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union; and it was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, (Mr. BUCKNER in the chair,) and resumed the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. All debate on the pending paragraph by order of the House has been limited to fifteen minutes.

Mr. PAGE. I was not in here when the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BELFORD] offered his amendment, but I desire to say a very few words in advocacy of the amendment offered by him. The Forty-third Congress made an appropriation of between six and seven hundred thousand dollars for the surveys of public lands in the States and Territories where there are public lands. Congress at the last session reduced that amount to $300,000. There was an appropriation in the Forty-third Congress of $70,000 for surveys of public lands in the State of California alone. There are to-day over seventy million acres of public lands unsurveyed in the State of California alone, and yet the gentleman from Indiana urges that because there are 21,000,000 acres, I believe he stated it, of lands that are surveyed and have not been occupied in that State, the surveys of public lands ought to stop.

Mr. Chairman, there are not to-day in the State of California of good agricultural lands that have been surveyed 20,000 acres that are not occupied. I make the statement from my own knowledge. I hope therefore that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado will prevail and that an additional $250,000 will be given that it may be distributed among the several States and Territories where these unsurveyed public lands are. It seems to me that it is not a good policy for this Congress to pursue, to cut down the appropriations for surveys of the public lands. When these lands are surveyed and opened to settlement they are paid for under the pre-emption laws at the rate of $1.25 per acre. The State of California contributed to the Treasury of the United States three quarters of a million of dollars from the sale of public lands in the year 1875. Three quarters of a million of dollars were paid by the settlers on the public lands into the Treasury of the United States, and I ask the gentlemen composing this committee that they will not insist upon this mere pittance to be distributed among the States and Territories where there is such a large quantity of unsurveyed public lands.

The Territories of New Mexico, Wyoming, Dakota, Idaho, and the States of California and Oregon contain large quantities of public lands that should be surveyed and put into market. I say it is bad policy for Congress to adopt the principle of cutting down the appropriations for this service to the small amount here recommended. I am glad that my colleague [Mr. PIPER] has seen fit on this occasion to withhold his support from the Committee on Appropriations. I believe it is the first time he has done so either during this session or the last session of Congress, except on one or two occasions perhaps when he has refused to give his support to that committee in their ruinous process of cutting down appropriations.

Mr. STEELE. I certainly hope this amendment will be adopted. The Committee of the Whole must see, if they know anything at all about this subject, that the appropriation here recommended of $50,000 is entirely inadequate for the necessities of the public surveys. There are sixteen States and Territories in which there are land districts and for which estimates were submitted by the Department, and the House was thus informed that surveys were necessary in the ensuing fiscal year in all those sixteen States and Territories.

The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] speaks of these surveys being made in the interest of speculators. That gentleman certainly ought to know, even if he does not, that there have been no lands offered at public sale or in any other manner than under the homestead and pre-emption laws for very many years, and that all these surveys are made in the interest of settlers.

The gentleman says that there are in these States and Territories many thousands and millions of acres of public lands already surveyed and unoccupied. That is true; yet I know of hundreds of people living in my Territory to-day who have no title to their lands, simply because there has been no survey of the public lands on which they are settled. The tendency has been to survey lands where it was easiest and cheapest to survey them. But the Committee on Appropriations last year made a limitation in that regard which answered a very good purpose. They appropriated last year $300,000 for surveys, which was an inadequate sum. But we ought to have at least that same appropriation although inadequate, made this year for the purpose.

In regard to my Territory, for instance, the Senate has agreed to a proposition of the House which opens up for settlement the Black Hills country so called. Now there never has been a survey made in that country. There are thousands of people there, and last year there was taken out of that country, before it was opened up to legal occupancy, at least three millions of dollars of gold. That country is now open to settlement; there is a necessity for surveys there, and those surveys must be made. And it is not economy to refuse the necessary appropriation to survey and thus open to settlement what promises to be the richest mineral region ever discovered on this continent.

If the appropriation for this purpose is limited to the amount named in this bill the Territory of Wyoming cannot get over $2,000 for surveys of the public lands during the next fiscal year. I telegraphed this afternoon to the Commissioner of the General Land Office in reference to this matter. I ask the Clerk to read his answer to my dispatch, in order that this committee may see what kind of economy it is that gives $112,950 for office work and only $50,000 for surveys.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., February 21, 1877.

Hon. W. R. STEELE:

The legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill provides for salaries of surveyors general and their clerks $89,450. Contingent expenses of their officers $23,500 more, or an aggregate of $112,950 for office work, under a proposed appropriation of $50,000 only for surveys. Such appropriation would be utterly inadequate. It would be better to abolish the entire system than to make such an appropriation.

J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner.

Mr. STEELE. If we have these departmental offices for any purpose at all it is to inform the representatives of the people what are the necessities of the Government. The Commissioner of the General Land Office tells this House that to make an appropriation of $50,000 for this purpose is so inadequate that we might as well abolish the whole system.

Mr. MAGINNIS. Mr. Chairman, the dispatch just read shows in the most perfect light the absurdity of the action proposed by the Committee on Appropriations in this bill in reference to the surveys of public lands. The salaries of the surveyors-general, the appropriations for clerks in their offices, for incidental expenses, for office rent, &c., amount to more than $110,000; while, according to this bill, the amount appropriated for surveys is but $50,000. In other words, the Committee on Appropriations give $110,000 for the machinery with which to do $50,000 worth of work. That may be economy, but it looks to me more like willful and wasteful extravagance.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MAGINNIS. Certainly.

Mr. HOLMAN. Is not the gentleman aware that in every one of the offices of these surveyors-general there is an accumulation of work that must be disposed of? They are all asking for clerical force for that purpose, and before abolishing the offices, which it is proposed to do, it is very proper that the business shall be brought down to a given time.

Mr. MAGINNIS. The question of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is a very pertinent question. But I am thoroughly convinced and undertake to say that there is no large amount of back business in any of these offices. None at all that ought not to be carried to completion by means of previous appropriations. These appropriations of $110,000 for all this machinery is needed for no other purpose under the sun than to expend the $50,000 which it is proposed to appropriate for surveys.

The gentleman says there are millions of acres of surveyed public land not yet taken up. That is so; a part of them is in Florida, and part in Indiana, a part in Michigan, and a part in several of the other States of this Union; lands not desirable. Does the gentleman mean to say that settlers shall not go on any land which has not been surveyed; that none of the lands in the newly settled portions of our country, where mines are discovered and colonies settled, shall be opened up to settlement because there have been no surveys there recently; that these must wait until all the surveyed land is taken? Certainly he cannot insist upon any such argument as that. I undertake to say, in the language of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that to make this appropriation of $50,000 is simply foolishness, and you had better abolish the whole system and close your public lands against settlement than to cripple the Land Department in this wasteful way.

I ask unanimous consent to have certain letters printed in connection with my remarks.

There was no objection. The letters are as follows:

HELENA, MONTANA TERRITORY, January 24, 1877.

DEAR SIR: As the time is now approaching for Congress to make the appropriations, I thought that I would write to you and give you my experience in running a surveying contract under the prices and regulations established by Congress last year.

The prices established were $8 for standard lines, $7 for township, and $6 for section lines. The first regulation was that "the settled parts of the country should be surveyed first." Under these instructions I was assigned a contract which extended from Camp Creek on the Big Hole River to Hot Spring Creek on the Deer Lodge River. Five townships were supposed to be full, or that all parts of them could be sectionized, and others were fractional, or only a part of them could be surveyed. I had to go seventy miles to my work, and commenced on September 29, the appropriations having been made very late. I found the ground to be very rough, with a great deal of brush on the streams, and much triangulating to be done on the river (Big Hole)—all of which prevented any swift progress. The townships which were supposed to be full proved to be fractional, so that I could only run about one-half of each. The exterior boundaries of these townships had been run several years before by another surveyor. The courses had been obliterated by time and the cattle, and as I had to connect with the courses, I had to rerun many of the lines and re-establish the courses. In this way, and for that purpose, I reran with compass and chain upward of twenty-two miles, and re-established a number of courses for which work, under the regulations, I do not receive one cent; yet it was absolutely necessary in order to enable me to do my own work correctly.

About two weeks after I commenced work bad weather set in, with rain, snow, and keen, piercing winds, and continued until I came in about a month later. I worked frequently with four inches of snow on the ground and the thermometer at zero, and the wind (the worst part of it) blowing.

It was, as may be supposed, very cloudy, and I had to do much of my work with the needle and not with the solar compass; and as I found that the variation changed constantly I had to run by back sights and fore sights, which consumed a great deal of time, and prevented my running as many miles in a day as I would otherwise have done. But it was unavoidable in order to do my own work rightly.

I was out about one and one-half months. I did about eleven hundred dollars' worth of work. I was forced to come in without entirely finishing my contract in consequence of a severe fit of rheumatism in consequence of the exposure I was subjected to, hardy as I am. After I came in I was one month in preparing my notes and maps for the office. So that altogether I was two and one-half months in doing the $1,100, in consequence of circumstances beyond my control. After paying off my men, and paying all the other expenses connected with the contract, I find that I am ahead about $152; or, in other words, that for my time and trouble I received the munificent reward of $61 per month—a little more than a day-laborer's wages!

The work which I did was a necessary one, because there were many settlers in this region and it was necessary to have it done in order to enable them to enter their land. I supposed when I took the contract that I might make $5 a day, but I did not do it.

Had I remained at home I could have obtained enough mineral patent surveying to have paid me much better, without disbursing a dollar.

I paid my men $50 per month, and for their full time; otherwise I could not get them to go. I had to pay high for provisions, and had to pay freight from Deer Lodge on most of it.

There are also other considerations; the surveyor is required by the new regulations to judge whether land is worthless or not, whether it can be irrigated or not; if it cannot he is not to survey it. He is to judge whether the timber is merchantable or not; if it is, he is to survey it, (if in the township,) and if he does, he will come out in debt on his contract; and the oath which he subscribes at the end of his notes is of the most stringent character, "that he has performed his surveys exactly according to instructions and in the specific manner related in the notes, and that if any falsehood should be discovered he will suffer the penalties of perjury," &c.

Another thing. About three years ago, in consequence of some bad corners having been made by some surveyors, and a great fuss being made over it by people in Deer Lodge, an order was issued by the Commissioner that every corner should be minutely described; every stone and pit, with its length and breadth; every stake, length, breadth, thickness, and every mark made on it, must be described most minutely. The consequence is that the plainer and more elaborate you make the corner in the field the more trouble you have in describing it in the notes.

To illustrate this, I subjoin the old and the new forms for a corner:

Old form.

Eighty chs. "Set a post for corner to sections 13, 14, 23, and 24 with pits and mound, as per instructions."

New form.

Eighty chs: "Set a post diagonally 4 feet long, 3 inches square, with chained stake 12 inches in the ground for corner to secs. 25, 26, 35, and 36, marked R. 2 W., T. 2 N.; sec. 25 on N. E., sec. 26 on N. W., sec. 35 on S. W., and sec. 36 on S. E. faces, with 1 notch on south and east edges; dry pit, 18 in. sq. 12 in. deep, in each of the 4 sections, 5½ ft. dist. and raised a mound of earth 2 ft. high, 4½ ft. base."

This regulation has more than doubled the size of the notes, and thus, while our pay is diminished two-fifths, our responsibilities and labor are more than doubled. Moreover all this additional labor and responsibility is a heavy burden to the conscientious surveyor, while it is none at all to the dishonest one. The latter knows that there is no inspection of the work; that the surveyor-general has no power to inspect it, unless he does it at his own expense, and consequently he can do fraudulent work and it may not be discovered for years. It is just as easy for him to make the notes so as to pass, and swear to them, as to do the bad work. He makes money by it, while the honest surveyor loses by his honesty.

As matters stand now, with the stringent regulations and the low pay, it makes a man's interest and conscience clash, and when that is the conscience generally takes a back seat. Every man who wants to do his work right will be driven out, and the public land surveys will be a scandal to every one.

I have taken pains not to exaggerate anything. I have tried to put down everything truly. The pay is not sufficient for this country and ought to be increased. Where the ground is rough it is impossible to make anything. I have endeavored to make this plain, so that you could understandingly speak to the Committee on Appropriations about it.

Hoping that you will excuse me for writing such a long letter,

I remain, your obedient servant,

WALTER W. DE LACY,
United States Deputy Surveyor, Montana Territory.

Hon. MARTIN MAGINNIS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA, January 29, 1877.

DEAR SIR: In reading the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the last session, I noticed that when the item in the appropriation bill making appropriation for the survey of the public lands of the United States was reached, you took a very prominent part in the debate, and that you endeavored to keep up the amount appropriated to the several surveying districts so as to meet the wants and necessities of our rapidly increasing frontier population. You seem to have been about the only member (judging from the RECORD) who was there attending to the interest of their constituents, or who stood up squarely in defense of the rights of our great West in this matter of appropriations for the survey of our public lands. * * * Your course when this item was before the House was remarked on by all who had any occasion to be interested in this matter of public surveys. In vain we looked for some evidence of the presence of our members when this matter was before the House. If they were there they appear to have been silent.

Now the important part you took last year, and the interest you seemed to take in this matter of surveys, is my excuse for writing to you to call your attention to one feature of last year's appropriation, or rather to one provision contained in the bill, which is clearly against the best interests of every surveying district and the surveying service. Heretofore it has been the custom for the different surveyors-general to make estimates for their several districts in advance of the appropriations, and as a basis for recommendations for appropriations by the Commissioner of the General Land Office. The Commissioner revises these estimates of the surveyors-general, and recommends whatever he sees fit for each district, after looking over the wants of all the districts; and the appropriations are then made upon the recommendation of the proper committee, and stated sums appropriated to each district. This has been the plan heretofore; each district gets a certain specified amount. It may be small, but they are sure of something. Now last year the House for some reason struck out this provision giving to each surveying district a certain specified amount, and in place of it appropriated a gross sum for all, to be divided up among the districts by the Commissioners, by and with the consent of the Secretary of the Interior. Now what the House was trying to do, or in what way they expected to better matters by putting the appropriation in this shape, I for one am unable to see, since the amount appropriated is still based on recommendations or estimates of the Commissioner, as it was heretofore. He still gets his data from the surveyors-general, and in making up his estimates recommends the amount they recommended, or a greater or a less sum, just as he sees fit.

If the Commissioner does his duty of course every surveying district gets just the proportion it is entitled to under his estimate, and so they did when specific amounts were appropriated to the several districts. I believe it was charged that money was used for surveying worthless or unproductive land in some instances. Now, if the Commissioner would recommend appropriations for the surveys of this character under the old system, what is there to prevent him in dividing up the appropriation under the new system, from giving those districts where this barren land is situated their full share of the appropriation? There is nothing. He can just as easily divide it up so that money will be used in surveying barren land as he can recommend that amount to be appropriated. If he thinks a district has no land worth surveying he ought not to recommend an appropriation. If an appropriation is made and it is left with him to be divided up among the several districts such districts will get nothing, which is just what he recommended. This is just what will happen if the Commissioner does his duty. True, an injunction was laid on the Commissioner by Congress that the money should not be used in surveying non-productive land; and the Commissioner in apportioning the amounts to the several districts laid this injuction on the surveyors-general, but did not, as far as I am informed, attempt to designate what was productive or non-productive. He simply left it in the hands of the several surveyors-general to say what should be surveyed. Now why all this could not be brought about under the old system of appropriating specific sums to the several districts I cannot see. Congress has entire control over the matter. They can appropriate whatever they see fit. If they cannot depend on the Commissioner's estimates they cannot depend on his apportionments. I say whatever is appropriated let it be appropriated to the districts in the old way, and let the surveyor-general appoint his own deputies in the old way, and free from the dictation and interested interference of the Commissioner and his friends.

The fact of the matter is that the provision contained in last year's appropriation for surveys, providing that the whole amount should be at the discretion of the Commissioner, and by him divided up as he sees fit, is that it opens up a big field for fraud and injustice, and is as well calculated to prostitute the surveying service as anything can well be. If the Commissioner sees fit what is to prevent him from robbing some of the districts of their just proportion and putting it in other districts. There may be cases where his interests may incline him to do this very thing. Under the old system the appropriations were entirely out of his reach as far as the disposition of the contracts was concerned. The surveyors-general could let the contracts to whom they chose. It seems to be the opinion that under the operation of last year's appropriation bill the Commissioner could have not only given whatever he liked to each of the districts, but he could have taken the letting of the contracts into his own hands, and have let every one of them to men living out of the districts interested, and to his own personal friends, and over the heads of the surveyors-general. We know that this is the way they have always done where money has been placed in their hands for the survey of Indian reservations; their friends generally get the contracts, and some nonentity, who knows no more about surveying than he does of the mysteries of eternal life, does the work; and such work! I hope the survey of our public lands may never get to be such a damnable fraud and swindle as this surveying Indian reservations has become under the system of letting contracts from Washington. If it does it will be only when the contracts are let by the Commissioner to persons who have no interest in the country and whose only object is to get out of the country as soon as they can and draw their money.

I say the way the appropriation was made last year would furnish an excuse for the authorities at Washington to deprive some of the districts of their fair share of the appropriation and also for letting the contracts over the heads of the surveyors-general, to any persons they choose. It was expected by every one who saw the shape the appropriation of last year was in that the contracts would either be let at Washington or that the surveyors-general would be dictated to in regard to whom the contracts should be let to.

If the democratic House put the appropriation of last year into the Commissioner's hands in order to cut off the patronage of surveyors-general, I do not see as they have improved the thing very much by placing it in the hands of the Commissioner; for if he has the disposition of the funds I presume just as much of it will be used for republican campaign purposes as was used by the surveyors-general.

The fact of the business is that where the surveyors-general appoint their own deputies they generally do it from qualified surveyors living in their own districts. These surveyors are general qualified for their business and make it a point to acquire a good reputation and do good work. Most of them intend to make the States or Territories where they survey their homes. They consequently are interested in having surveying well done. They live in the districts where the work is done; they outfit there; they spend the money they get for surveying there; and consequently are of some benefit to the district at large. Whereas if the contracts are let in Washington non-residents get the whole benefit of the appropriations, they do not spend a dollar more than they are obliged to in the country, but endeavor to carry all they can out of it. But this is a small matter beside of the injury they do a country by sending into it an incompetent lot of surveyors from abroad who have no interest in and who care nothing for the country, and whose only object is to get through the work just as easy as possible and draw their money.

As proof of this, look at the way Indian reservations have been surveyed, or rather, have not been surveyed; for in the majority of cases you cannot find where they have been at work, unless you follow them up before the dew is off the grass.

Probably the old way is not free from some objections. The surveyors-general may not always let contracts as they should. They may appoint more from one political party than they do from the other. They may even appoint a political friend more on account of his politics or friendship than on account of any peculiar qualification he may possess as a surveyor; but still, as a general thing, in Minnesota and Dakota, the surveyors-general have conducted themselves very fairly, and have appointed about as many deputies from one party as another. I am a democrat, myself, but I do not know as my politics ever entered into consideration when I applied for surveying. I think the disposition is to get the best class of men that can be got for deputies, and always to patronize their own districts if they can find the proper men to do the surveying; which is certainly for the best interests of the districts, for reasons before given.

I am satisfied the interests of the surveying service and the interests of the country at large will be best subserved by the return to the old way of making the appropriations. They can make them as small as they see fit, and they can provide that money shall not be used in surveying barren, unproductive land, but whatever is appropriated, let it be certain, stated, specified sums to the respective States and Territories, and not put it in such shape that the Commissioner can defraud some of the Territories or districts out of what is due them, and also put things in such shape that he can let the whole amount of the appropriation to whoever he choose to. I am sure no State or Territory having a surveying district is interested in having any such provision in the appropriation bill as was in there last year. I know their interests are right the other way; and I hope when the proper time comes you will strike at it as gallantly and remorselessly as you did at certain other features of last year's bill. If the democratic members understood just the way they are opening the door for fraud and the prostitution of the whole surveying service, it seems to me they would not insist on such an amendment to the bill this year. I hope whatever the appropriation for surveys may be, you will insist that it shall be made direct to the districts and be disposed of by the surveyors-general in the old way. I hope you will pardon my assurance in presuming you will read this long communication. I hope, at least, you will read so much of it as to give you an idea of the nature of the objections to placing the appropriations for surveys entirely in the hands of the Commissioner of the General Land Office or Secretary of the Interior.

Very respectfully,

GEO. G. BEARDSLEY,
United States Deputy Surveyor.

Hon. MARTIN MAGINNIS, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. DUNNELL. I desire to put a question to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. He said a moment ago that the $50,000 appropriated in this bill for the survey of public lands looked to an entire change in the method of surveying those lands.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNELL. I want to ask the gentleman whether the Commissioner of the General Land Office has recommended any change of policy in that respect?

Mr. HOLMAN. No, sir; he has not.

Mr. DUNNELL. Then allow me to ask by what authority does the gentleman state that there is to be a change?

Mr. HOLMAN. If any recommendation in the interest of economy ever came from that office, I am not aware of it.

Mr. DUNNELL. I did not catch the gentleman's remark.

Mr. HOLMAN. If any recommendation proposing a re-organization of the land system ever came from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, I am not aware of it.

Mr. DUNNELL. Until a short time ago I was not aware of the small amount which this bill proposes to appropriate for the survey of the public lands. I indorse most heartily everything that has been said by the gentlemen from the Territories as well as the remarks of the gentlemen from the State of California and Oregon. I think it a very poor policy to cut down largely the appropriations for the survey of the public lands. I cannot understand the wisdom of such a policy. This vast public domain ought to be gradually surveyed, especially in the mineral districts, where the advantage to the Government from these surveys in the development of the resources of the country, would far exceed any cost which may be incurred in this way.

I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Idaho, [Mr. FENN.]

Mr. FENN. An appropriation of $300,000 was asked for these surveys. In the Territory of Idaho, with more than 90,000 square miles, only about one-twelfth has been surveyed. This bill proposes to appropriate $50,000, of which Idaho will receive possibly about $1,500 or $1,800. In the northern portion of that Territory is a large tract of as fine agricultural land as the sun ever shone upon. But this land is covered by the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad; and men who are anxious to go there and settle are unwilling to occupy those lands until they know whether they are settling upon the odd-numbered or the even-numbered sections. Thus, for want of Government surveys, they are excluded. By this pitiful system settlement is not only retarded but totally kept out of that country.

I will say further that in our Territory not one foot of timber land has ever been surveyed. The people of our Territory have settled upon those rich valleys. There are mining interests there——

[Here the hammer fell.]

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BELFORD to strike out $50,000 and insert $300,000, it was not agreed to; there being—ayes 42, noes 54.

Mr. PAGE. I ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations whether he will not accept an amendment making this appropriation $200,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, Mr. Chairman, with the consent of a portion of the members of the Committee on Appropriations I will move to increase this appropriation to $100,000, with the understanding at the same time that there shall be an amendment offered to the next paragraph, so as to transfer the business of the surveyors-general in the several States and Territories to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. With that understanding, I move to amend by striking out $50,000 and inserting $100,000.

Mr. PAGE. We do not agree to that.

Mr. BELFORD. I move as an additional amendment to add to the paragraph these words:

For surveys of the public lands in Colorado alone, $50,000.

Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe debate has ceased on this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the paragraph is exhausted under the order of the House.

Mr. PAGE. I desire to appeal again to the chairman of the committee. I ask that he will consent to make this amount $150,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. My motion was $100,000. I am not authorized to assent to any larger sum.

Mr. PAGE. Will the gentleman allow a vote to be taken on $150,000?

Mr. HOLMAN. The Committee on Appropriations have carefully examined this subject, and are satisfied that $100,000 is ample.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from California move an amendment?

Mr. PAGE. Yes, sir; I move to make the amount $150,000.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment of Mr. PAGE, there were—ayes 55, noes 48.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. PAGE were appointed.

Mr. LANE. An appropriation of less than $150,000 would be totally inadequate to accomplish anything.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 63, noes 58.

Mr. HOLMAN. I raise the point that no quorum has voted.

Mr. PAGE. I suggest that we have a vote in the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Indiana insist upon the presence of a quorum?

Mr. HOLMAN. I think there should be a quorum on this question.

Mr. POPPLETON. I raise the question that there is not a quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. A quorum being insisted on, tellers will resume their places and the vote will be taken over again.

Mr. PAGE. It is evident there is no quorum present, and I hope the gentleman will not insist as it will delay the appropriation bill. If there was any prospect of a quorum being present, perhaps it would be well enough to insist on it.

Mr. LANE. I hope we will be allowed to vote in the House on this appropriation.

Mr. THORNBURGH. I do not think there is any necessity for taking the vote over again, as under the circumstances perhaps the demand for a quorum will not be insisted upon.

The CHAIRMAN. If a quorum is not insisted upon, then the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. POPPLETON. I raised the question of the absence of a quorum distinctly.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana who had the floor and insisted there was no quorum, the Chair understood, withdrew his demand for the presence of a quorum and therefore the amendment was declared to be carried.

Mr. POPPLETON. The gentleman from Indiana had not the floor at the time I insisted on the presence of a quorum. When the gentleman from Indiana did not insist on a quorum I took the floor and did insist on a quorum. I have the right to insist upon it and do insist upon it.

Mr. ATKINS. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations did not insist.

Mr. HOLMAN. It was the gentleman from Ohio who insisted on the presence of a quorum. I did not press the point, but the gentleman from Ohio did.

Mr. PAGE. It is evident there is no quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] and the gentleman from California [Mr. PAGE] will take their places as tellers and the question will be again submitted to the committee on the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe it is generally accepted that $100,000 will be a reasonable appropriation. I believe the gentleman from California is content with that.

Mr. PAGE. I do not desire to break up the committee, and therefore am willing to accept $100,000.

Mr. LANE. I trust the gentleman will not agree to anything of the kind.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any objection to the amount of $100,000?

Mr. LANE. I desire to say in behalf of the State of Oregon, which has a large amount of unsurveyed public land, that I do not consent to a reduction of the necessary appropriation to $100,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is out of order, as debate is exhausted.

Mr. LANE. I am willing to agree that a vote shall be taken in the House on the appropriation of $150,000 for this purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not in order.

Mr. LANE. I insist, then, there is no quorum present.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. The demand comes too late.

Mr. LANE. The demand has been made all the time that no quorum is present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will again submit the question, is there objection to $100,000?

Mr. POPPLETON. I object, and insist there is an amendment pending which has not yet been withdrawn or acted on.

The CHAIRMAN. The vote will again be taken on the pending amendment. Tellers will resume their places, and all gentlemen in the House are requested to vote on one side or the other.

Mr. POPPLETON. Is the vote to be taken over again?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 70, noes 55.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no quorum voting, and I move the committee rise.

The motion was disagreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. No quorum appearing on the last vote, the Chair directs under the rules the roll be called, in order that the names of the absentees may be reported to the House.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll, and the following members failed to answer to their names:

Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Anderson, George A. Bagley, John H. Baker, Banks, Bass, Beebe, Blackburn, Bliss, Boone, Bradford, John Young Brown, William R. Brown, Buttz, William P. Caldwell, Carr, Cason, Chapin, Cook, Cox, Crapo, Crounse, Davy-Denison, Dibrell, Dobbins, Douglas, Durand, Eden, Egbert, Ellis, Evans, Faulkner, Field, Fiye, Fort, Frye, Garfield, Gause, Gibson, Gunter, Hale, Robert Hamilton, Hartridge, Hathorn, Haymond, Hays, Hendee, Henkle, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Hoar, Hoge, Hooker, Hopkins, Hoskins, House, Hubbell, Humphreys, Hunter, Hunton, Hurlbut, Hyman, Jenks, Frank Jones, Thomas L. Jones, Kasson, Kelley, King, Lamar, Franklin Landers, Lapham, Lawrence, Leavenworth, Levy, Lord, Luttrell, Magoon, MacDougall, McFarland, Miller, Milliken, Money, Monroe, Morgan, Nash, New, Norton, O'Brien, Odell, Packer, Payne, Phelps, William A. Phillips, Plaisted, Platt, Powell, Pratt, Purman, James B. Reilly, Rice, John Robbins, Roberts, Miles Ross, Rusk, Sampson, Savage, Schumaker, Sheakley, Singleton, Slemons, Southard, Sparks, Stenger, Stephens, Stone, Stowell, Swann, Tarbox, Teese, Thomas, Tucker, Turney, Van Vorhes, Wait, Charles C. B Walker, Alexander S. Wallace, John W. Wallace, Walling, Ward, Watterson, G. Wiley Wells, Wheeler, Willard, Alpheus S. Williams, Charles G. Williams, James Williams, Wilshire, Alan Wood, jr., Fernando Wood, Woodburn, Woodworth, and Young.

During the call of the roll,

Mr. DURHAM stated that his colleague, Mr. BLACKBURN, was sick and not able to be present.

The committee then rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had, according to order, had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, and finding itself without a quorum, had caused the roll to be called, and directed him to report the names of the absentees to the House to be entered upon the Journal.

Mr. FOSTER. Is there a quorum present?

The SPEAKER. One hundred and forty-six members have answered to their names, which is a quorum.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. KNOTT. I move we take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is it not the rule the committee shall resume its session without a motion?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks a motion to take a recess is in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. But a quorum having appeared, does not the committee resume its session as a matter of course?

The SPEAKER. When the committee rises no quorum appearing, a motion to adjourn or a call of the House is in order, but the House finding a quorum present does not preclude the motion to adjourn, and, the House now being under the operation of the electoral law, a motion to take a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

Mr. KNOTT's motion was disagreed to.

The committee then resumed its session, Mr. BUCKNER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. PIPER] increasing the amount to $150.000.

Mr. PAGE. That amendment was adopted. It was so announced from the Chair.

Mr. HOLMAN. Before the vote is again taken, I again propose that the amount be fixed at $100,000. I trust there will be no objection to that.

Mr. LANE. I certainly do object to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from California.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 58, noes 62.

Mr. WIGGINTON. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. LANE. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. LANE and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 67, noes 66.

Mr. PIPER. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. HOLMAN. To meet the views of gentlemen who are urging this matter, I will agree that a vote be taken in the House on $125,000.

Mr. LANE. I cannot, in justice to the people I represent, consent to anything less than $150,000.

The CHAIRMAN. A quorum not having voted, the Clerk will call the roll.

Mr. LANE. The point is not made that a quorum has not voted.

The CHAIRMAN. The point is made on the other side of the House.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LANE. I will say this, that I will consent as far as I am concerned——

The CHAIRMAN. The call of the roll cannot be interrupted.

The call of the roll was proceeded with, and the following members failed to answer to their names:

Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Anderson, John H. Baker, Banks, Bass, Beebe, Blackburn, Bliss, Boone, Bradford, John Young Brown, William R. Brown, Buttz, William P. Caldwell, Carr, Cason, Chapin, Cook, Cox, Crapo, Crounse, Danford, Davy, Denison, Dibrell, Dobbins, Douglas, Durand, Eden, Egbert, Ellis, Evans, Faulkner, Field, Flye, Fort, Frye, Garfield, Gause, Gibson, Gunter, Hale, Robert Hamilton, Hartridge, Hathorn, Haymond, Hays, Hendee, Henkle, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Hoar, Hoge, Hopkins, Hoskins, House, Hubbell, Humphreys, Hunter, Hunton, Hurlbut, Hyman, Jenks, Frank Jones, Thomas L. Jones, Kasson, Kelley, King, Lamar, Franklin Landers, Lapham, Lawrence, Leavenworth, Levy, Lord, Luttrell, Magoon, MacDougall, McFarland, Miller, Milliken, Money, Monroe, Morgan, Nash, New, Norton, O'Brien, Odell, Packer, Payne, Phelps, William A. Phillips, Plaisted, Platt, Powell, Pratt, Purman, James B. Reilly, Rice, John Robbins, Roberts, Miles Ross, Rusk, Sampson, Savage, Schumaker, Sheakley, Singleton, Slemons, William E. Smith, Southard, Sparks, Stenger, Stephens, Stone, Stowell, Swann, Tarbox, Teese, Thomas, Tucker, Turney, Van Vorhes, Wait, Charles C. B. Walker, Alexander S. Wallace, John W. Wallace, Walling, Ward, Watterson, G. Wiley Wells, Wheeler, Alpheus S. Williams, Charles G. Williams, James Williams, Wilshire, Alan Wood, jr., Fernando Wood, Woodburn, Woodworth, and Young.

During the roll-call,

Mr. ATKINS said: I desire to state that my colleague from Tennessee, Mr. YOUNG, is detained at home by sickness.

The committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, according to order, had had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, and having found itself without a quorum, he had caused the roll to be called, and now reported the names of the absentees to the House.

The SPEAKER. The roll-call discloses the fact that 148 members have answered to their names, being a quorum.

Mr. HOLMAN. The hour is somewhat late, and I hardly expect that we will accomplish anything more this evening than we have already accomplished. I therefore move that the House take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow.

The question being taken on Mr. HOLMAN's motion, there were—ayes 83, noes 40.

Mr. PAGE. I call for the yeas and nays.

The question being taken on ordering the yeas and nays, there were 18 ayes.

Mr. FOSTER. Count the other side.

The negative vote being counted, there were 99 noes.

So (the affirmative not being one-fifth of the whole vote) the yeas and nays were not ordered, and the motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly (at nine o'clock and thirty minutes p. m.) took a recess until ten o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by Mr. CLYMER, as Speaker pro tempore, at ten o'clock a. m., Thursday, February 22.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union and resume the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. WALLING. I trust the gentleman will yield to me for one moment. I desire to introduce a bill for present consideration to which I think there will be no objection. It is a bill to extend the time for stamping unstamped instruments. The provisions of law relating to this matter expired by limitatian on the 1st of January and it is necessary that this bill shall at once become a law.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I have no objection to the reference of the bill to the Committee of Ways and Means. There is now pending before that committee a bill having this object in view.

Mr. WALLING. The chairman of the committee, the gentleman from New York, [Mr. WOOD,] himself advised this course.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I think the bill should take the usual course.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill is not before the House.

The question being taken on Mr. HOLMAN's motion, it was agreed to.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union (Mr. BUCKNER in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the special order, the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. When the committee rose last evening the pending question was on the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. PIPER] to strike out $50,000 and insert $150,000 in the paragraph appropriating for survey of the public lands and private land claims.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is manifestly not a quorum present. I ask that by unanimous consent the provisions in regard to public lands be passed over until there is a quorum.

Mr. DUNNELL. That proposition includes all the clauses in regard to the public lands?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

There being no objection, the paragraphs in relation to the public lands were passed over for the present.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For fitting up the Armory building for storage of articles belonging to the United States, including those transferred from the international exhibition, and expense of watching the same, $2,500.

Mr. CLYMER. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to offer the following amendment, to come in immediately after the paragraph just read:

Botanical Garden:

For painting and repairs of the building and fences, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Geological and geographical surveys:

For the continuation of the geological and geographical survey of the Territories of the United States, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, by Professor F. V. Hayden, $50,000, to be immediately available.

For the completion of the geographical and geological surveys of the Rocky Mountain region, including the preparation and publication of maps, charts, and other illustrations necessary for the reports of said survey, by J. W. Powell, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $20,000, to be immediately available.

Mr. PIPER. I move to strike out that paragraph.

Mr. LANE. I rise to a point of order. I understood that all these paragraphs relating to surveys of public lands were to go over.

Mr. HOLMAN. The surveys of public lands proper; these are explorations.

Mr. LANE. I regard these as the most proper surveys of public lands that are made, and I would not have consented to let the others go over unless these were embraced in them.

The CHAIRMAN. It is for the gentleman from Indiana to say what items he intended to go over.

Mr. LANE. These are the most important surveys we have.

Mr. HOLMAN. Which? These explorations?

Mr. LANE. Yes, sir; I have no hesitation in saying that, so far as conveying information as to the character of the soil and the country, these are the most important surveys we have.

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend from Oregon [Mr. LANE] knows that these are not surveys of public lands, but simply explorations.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I would suggest to the gentleman from Indiana that he could dispose of these items far more easily in a full House than he can now.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think we can dispose of them now. I am willing that they should be stricken out pro forma and then we can have a vote in the House.

Mr. PIPER. This is an appropriation of $50,000 for the purpose of exploring the country in and about the Rocky Mountains. There has been a good deal of money expended for that purpose already, and if any good has come from it I have yet to learn it. Sir, I am very much surprised to see that, while the surveys of the entire public lands of the United States the Committee on Appropriations have seen fit only to appropriate $50,000, they appropriate the same sum for this useless purpose. I will venture to say that there is no gentleman on this floor who can point one single item of advantage to the people or to the nation that has accrued from these explorations. It is true they take a great many stereoscopic views which are circulated about this House; in fact I have quite a box of them myself. They are very nice things for young gentlemen to amuse young ladies with, but I believe that is the only thing they are useful for, and I think that, in view of the depleted state of the Treasury and the vast burdens of taxation which the people have been enduring, this appropriation should be stricken out and the money applied to some purpose that will be of some benefit to the people of the country.

Mr. LANE. I desire to say that I regard this character of surveys of the utmost value. I do not think the gentleman from California [Mr. PIPER] has given the matter that consideration which it deserves. It is from this character of surveys that we are able to ascertain the nature of the soil, the surface, character of the earth, its altitude, its fitness for cultivation, and its general geological character. I regard these surveys as of incalculable value, and I trust the amendment of the gentleman from California will not, on his mere suggestion that this is work of no importance, be permitted to prevail. I repeat that I know that these surveys are of inestimable value.

Besides, sir, I have no doubt that this work in the end will be in the interest of true economy. When we know, as we can by this system, the nature and character of the earth, we can intelligently determine that which should be surveyed. The money appropriated for such purpose could then be properly utilized. Such land as would be the subject for settlement would thereby be selected for survey, thus saving the expense of surveying lands unfitted for cultivation. Under the prevailing system the cost of surveys exceeds the revenues derived by the Government from the sale of public lands. I apprehend, also, that one result of this character of work will be to change our present system of surveys, unnecessarily expensive, and the adoption of the geodetic system, a change I deem of the utmost importance.

Mr. ELKINS. I move to strike out the last word. The people I represent are about as much interested in the surveys of the Rocky Mountains as anybody, but what they want is surveys of the public lands, and do not want ornamental and scientific surveys. The Committee on Appropriations recommend in the bill before the House only $50,000 for surveys in nine Territories and seven States, and the same amount for Hayden surveys. Now I am opposed to this distinction of the two surveys; that of the public lands is far more practical and important to the home-seeker and people on the frontier. I have yet to learn the first instance where any valuable results have been derived from the Hayden's surveys, such as the discovery of mines. The information they furnish may be accurate enough—I do not challenge that—but what practical good are they at present? Who reads their reports? None but scientific men can understand them; the people on the frontier care nothing about geodetic points, isothermal lines, and the Silurian system; they want homes, farms, and mines, and therefore desire the public domain surveyed.

Mr. LANE. It gives you a general and accurate description of the country.

Mr. STEELE. We should never have heard of New Mexico but for these explorations.

Mr. ELKINS. As I said before, I would rather encourage the surveys of the public lands.

Mr. HOLMAN. A single word, and then I shall ask that debate be closed on this paragraph. In my judgment the practical value of these explorations is, for the present, simply the fixing of geodetic points, with a view to the surveys of the public lands in the future, and especially the ascertaining the character and extent of our mineral resources. But I suggest that by unanimous consent the two paragraphs relating to these surveys be stricken out for the present pro forma.

Mr. ELKINS. Let them be stricken out altogether.

Mr. HOLMAN. We have all heard this subject argued a thousand times, and we understand it perfectly well. At a time when the Government has ample resources I think it would be well enough to have these surveys; I think scientific surveys are always valuable; but at this time I think this expense should not be incurred, except where imperatively required, for the public service. I think we all understand this matter, and I trust these paragraphs will be stricken out.

Mr. STEVENSON. I object to that.

Mr. CLYMER. I rise to oppose the motion to strike out.

Mr. ELKINS. I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. CLYMER. I regret exceedingly that my colleague from Pennsylvania, [Mr. TOWNSEND,] who, in the Forty-third Congress, was chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, is not present, for the reason that during that Congress a very careful and elaborate examination was made of this subject of the surveys of the Territories under Professor Hayden and Lieutenant Wheeler. That committee spent much time taking the testimony of officers of the Army, of persons interested in the Territories, of other persons who were familiar with the subject, and gathering information from officers and professors connected with nearly every institution of learning in this country. And I think it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that there were no more important surveys progressing under this Government, or that could be projected by any government, than those made by Professor Hayden and Lieutenant Wheeler.

I think there is not a Delegate from the Territories who will not assent to that opinion, who will not say that to have the whole surface of their Territories surveyed, the character of their soil ascertained, and its aptitude for certain productions ascertained, their mineral deposits and general topography fully set forth, would be of vast service. When gentlemen say that no one ever knows what has been done by these surveys, I reply to them that these reports go into the hands of the young and intelligent of this land; they are disseminated through our institutions of learning, and by these means we are educating the men who are to take our places in the future, and who out of this vast territory, this terra incognita of to-day, are to carve thriving and populous commonwealths in the future.

I say it is not unworthy to spend money for such purposes, and that it would be false economy to refuse to do so. There is no more useful or interesting subject than the making of these surveys. And if you come to the mere question of value to the people and the Government, there is no expenditure which will repay them so richly as to discover what we possess in our Territories as regards soil and mineral products.

I trust this committee will not strike out these items, for if it is done now, when we come into the House with the bill we will be compelled to act upon it without any opportunity for debate. I do not propose that a question affecting the prosperity of this country in the future so vitally as this shall be disposed of when its advocates are not upon this floor. I trust, therefore, that this committee will at least debate this subject so long as to thoroughly ventilate it, and then if they choose to strike out these paragraphs I will have nothing to say.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. HOLMAN. Both sides have been heard. For the purpose of progressing with the bill, as it is manifest that whenever we come to this question of surveys it is impossible to make much headway until there has been debate, I ask unanimous consent that the two paragraphs relating to surveys be passed over at least until a quorum is present.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That is right.

Mr. PIPER. I object.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. HOLMAN. With a view to harmony, I ask unanimous consent that when the Committee of the Whole resumes its session the pending paragraph and the next succeeding one be deferred until the close of the bill be reached, when they can be recurred to as unfinished matter.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, to resume the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union (Mr. BUCKNER in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. By order of the House, the consideration of the paragraphs under the heading, "geological and geographical surveys" is passed over for the present.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

Subtreasury and post-office, Boston, Massachusetts: For purchase of additional land condemned by the courts of the State of Massachusets, including interest and expenses incident, $181,554.

Mr. PIPER. Simply for the purpose of having an explanation, I move to strike out this paragraph. I wish to know what this money is intended for.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Government authorized the condemnation of four pieces of land, constituting together one plot, for the extension of the Boston subtreasury and post-office public building. The Government has paid already for two of those four pieces of land. The other pieces have been condemned for public use by the courts of Massachusetts, and the sum of $181,554 is required to pay for them, being the amount of those condemnations.

Mr. PIPER. I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Custom-house and post-office, Cincinnati, Ohio: For continuation of building, $325,000.

Mr. BANNING. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out "$325,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$500,000."

I wish to say a word or two upon this subject. I see that the Committee on Appropriations have given to Cincinnati $325,000, and that they have given to Chicago and Saint Louis each $400,000. I think, Mr. Chairman, that true economy for this Government consists in finishing those buildings that are now being built, and stopping the payment of rents. We are paying at Cincinnati more than enough rent for extra buildings for the pension, the revenue and other offices, to pay the interest on the additional amount I ask in this amendment. We need the buildings there. Our Chamber of Commerce yesterday instructed my colleague [Mr. SAYLER] and myself to ask for this. I hold in my hands the report of Mr. Hannaford, the architect of this building, explaining its condition, which I shall ask to have read. I want to say to this House that in giving this amount to finish this building you will not only use good economy and get all the officers of the Government under the roof of safe Government buildings, but you simply give to us at Cincinnati what we pay to this Government in less than two weeks' time. We pay more than $10,000,000 at Cincinnati; more than any other city; more than any State, except the State of Illinois and the State of New York. We are building one of the largest buildings, and you give us less money than you give for the buildings in other cities. I say it is not fair, it is not right, it is not just; it is not caring for the business of the Government as it should be cared for to thus delay and hinder the completion of necessary buildings by insufficient appropriations.

I hope I will be allowed enough time to have read the report of the architect of our building, and that this amount will be made what was asked for, in order that this building may be completed at an early day. I ask that the architect's letter be read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the letter. Before the reading was concluded the hammer fell.

Mr. RICE obtained the floor and yielded his time to Mr. BANNING.

Mr. BANNING. I am much obliged to my colleague. I desire to have the rest of the letter read.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not think that that is in order except by unanimous consent.

Mr. RICE. I believe I have the floor, and I yield my time to my colleague, [Mr. BANNING.]

Mr. BANNING. I ask the Clerk to proceed with the reading of the letter.

The Clerk continued and completed the reading of the letter, which is as follows:

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF CONSTRUCTION,
UNITED STATES CUSTOM-HOUSE AND POST-OFFICE,
Cincinnati, February 20, 1877.

SIR: I desire again to address you in regard to the proposed appropriation for the construction of the custom-house and post-office at this place. It is reported that the proposed appropriation is only $325,000. This amount I can assure you is but a mere pittance, and a mockery of the real necessities of the building. In this connection I would state for your information that the building is now in that condition to warrant a liberal appropriation and an energetic prosecution of the work.

The subbasement and basement stories are substantially completed.

The granite of the exterior walls is set to a height of three feet above the level of the first floor. The basement and first floor beams are laid, and the superstructure during the next nine months could be carried to the level of floor of third story if the appropriation would allow of its being done. The amount proposed, $325,000, is only sufficient for the constructional necessities of the building in its several departments, outside of and in addition to the cost of cutting the granite. At the present date, two stories, first and second, and possibly a small amount of the third story, is cut. As before stated, we propose to set the granite of the first and second stories during the coming nine months, but this will exhaust the appropriation, leaving nothing to expend on the cutting of granite. It necessarily follows that the year 1878 will be a time of forced idleness in the history of the construction of the building for lack of cut granite.

The appropriation now proposed should be sufficient to not only carry on the actual construction of the building, but to also carry forward the granite cutting, that the completion of the building will not be delayed for lack of the cut stone. To this end the appropriation should be $750,000 at the least.

As you are aware, no city in the Union is in more pressing need of the building than Cincinnati. Neither is there any other more fairly entitled to consideration of its needs than Cincinnati. This fact is in strange contrast with the proposed appropriation for Chicago and Saint Louis, which is reported as $400,000 each. The appropriations of last year show similar unjust discrimination against this city.

Feeling, as you do, as great an interest in the welfare of this building as myself, I am confident that you will excuse my importunity in this matter of appropriation.

Respectfully,

SAMUEL HANNAFORD,
Superintendent.

Hon. H. B. BANNING,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mr. BANNING. I am surprised that my friend from Indiana, who I know is an economist, should have endeavored to cut off the reading of this letter, written by the architect of that building, which gives us full information about the building and tells us just what is wanting. He ought to be willing that we should have information upon this subject and that the House should vote understandingly. We have it shown here that this building is now up to the first story, and that if we get this amount of money it can be pushed to the third story this year.

I think, Mr. Chairman, the House should give this amount. There is every reason why my friend from Indiana, who sought to cut off this information, should agree to give at least as much to Cincinnati as he gives to Chicago or Saint Louis. I hope the House will consider this matter and give the amount asked. That it will treat this matter as we would treat our own business, and push on the building and complete it. This penny-wise economy makes nothing for the Government, makes nothing for the party; hurts the Government, hurts the party, and hurts the men who exercise it.

I desire now to modify my amendment. I asked for $500,000; I shall now fix the amount at $400,000, the same amount that is given by this committee to Chicago and the same amount that is given to Saint Louis. I do think there is every reason why we should have just as much as either of these cities has. We pay more for the support of the Government. Our building is quite as much needed. And by reason of inadequate appropriations heretofore our building is not as near completion as the buildings of those places. In saying this I do not wish to be understood as opposed to the amount given to Chicago or Saint Louis. I think each of these cities should have had the amount asked for by the Secretary to continue the work. I believe our appropriations should be such that each of these buildings might be finished at an early day. True economy consists in finishing them quickly.

Mr. PIPER. I would like to ask the gentleman what amount of money has been expended already upon the building at Cincinnati?

Mr. BANNING. I do not know the exact amount. It is about three million dollars.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. KELLEY. I understand that debate is exhausted on this amendment; but if the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BANNING] will withdraw it, I will renew it.

Mr. BANNING. I withdraw it.

Mr. KELLEY. I renew it. Mr. Chairman, I cannot help thinking that the policy of the Committee on Appropriations in reducing appropriations for buildings already begun and for the completion of which much of the material has been purchased and prepared, is a mistake. Such a policy seems to me not economy, but unwise expenditure. For the building now under consideration the stone for two stories has been paid for and is cut. During the whole of the long period while labor upon these buildings is suspended, there is a contingent force, I think it is called, under pay; there are clerks, superintendents, &c., who are receiving large pay per diem during the eight months of the year in which nothing is doing. Interest is being lost on the money expended; rent is being paid for offices and rooms which would be dispensed with if these buildings were completed. I believe that true economy, the saving of money in a period of three years that it may take to complete all the buildings now under way, would be accomplished by making appropriations large enough to keep the work going all the year, so that the twelve or fifteen thousand dollars expended on the contingent force might go into the buildings instead of being paid to those holding sinecure positions.

I will unite with the committee in resisting the purchase of any new lots and the commencement of any new buildings; but I do insist that sound economy requires liberal appropriations for these purposes at this time. Wages are low, material is low, and now, when our people are out of employment, when it would be in the long run economy to make such appropriations, when it would give work for the support of families now idle and so far stimulate the public revenues, I say it is not economy but wastefulness to reduce the appropriations. I therefore renew the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio, and shall cordially support it.

Mr. SAYLER. Is debate still in order on this amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. It is in order to oppose the amendment.

Mr. BANNING. I withdraw the amendment that my colleague may renew it.

Mr. SAYLER. I renew the amendment. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to detain the committee at any length in the discussion of this question. I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLEY] who has just taken his seat, that it is not good economy to impede the ordinary progress of these buildings; that more harm is done by allowing the walls of these buildings to stand uncovered from winter to winter than can possibly be compensated by the reduction of appropriations proposed by this committee. In my judgment there should have been appropriated for each of these buildings at Chicago, Saint Louis, and Cincinnati respectively, the amount of the estimate of the Supervising Architect. It would have been better economy to have given for each of them the half million dollars necessary for the successful prosecution of the work during the next year, so that the usual force in the service of the local architect might have been kept steadily employed. To give a smaller sum compels the architects necessarily to carry on their work with less energy and efficiency and less real economy.

There is no reason for making a distinction between Cincinnati, Saint Louis, and Chicago. In saying this I do not wish to drag Chicago and Saint Louis down in their building enterprise, but only to lift Cincinnati up. The buildings in these three cities are of about the same size, as gentlemen from the cities will testify. They are expected to cost about the same amount of money. I believe that the estimates for the ultimate cost of these buildings is very nearly the same in each instance, and there is no reason why this distinction should be made as against the city of Cincinnati. I hope, therefore, that the committee will not hesitate to increase the amount of this appropriation from $325,000 to $400,000.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The Committee of the Whole rose informally, when a message from the Senate by Mr. SYMPSON one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government, for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union resumed its session.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I do not think that any of these gentlemen advocating this increase are serious. I do not believe that they desire to have money appropriated out of the public Treasury for the benefit simply of their respective localities. It seems to me that a gentleman whose constituents are interested in a particular appropriation of money is less able to judge fairly and impartially of the merits of that appropriation than those whose constituents are to bear the burden without receiving the benefits. I admit that it is desirable for the cities themselves that large sums of money should be spent there; but in this way the public burden is unnecessarily increased.

I admonish gentlemen that this bill already appropriates $14,900,000. The corresponding bill twelve years ago was deemed oppressive when it made an aggregate appropriation of $7,000,000. I trust that gentlemen, at least on this side of the House, will bear in mind that the appropriations recommended by the Committee on Appropriations are enlarged to the very last extent of the capacity of our Treasury to bear the burdens.

I wish to state the reason why the appropriations proposed for Cincinnati are not so large as those recommended for Chicago and Saint Louis. Cincinnati has very good public buildings, built, I believe only about twenty years ago. It has an excellent court-room, a good post-office, room enough for a sub-treasury. Its public buildings are solid and substantial, and would have answered for the purposes of that city for many years to come.

Mr. SAYLER. The gentleman from Indiana will allow me to correct his statement.

Mr. HOLMAN. In what?

Mr. SAYLER. The Cincinnati post-office building is entirely insufficient for the discharge of the public business, and they are compelled to rent the basements of adjoining buildings. They are carrying on a great part of the business now in rooms unfit for men to be placed in, and utterly inadaquate to the purpose.

Mr. BANNING. And they are constantly renting buildings outside.

Mr. SAYLER. Yes, they are renting buildings outside constantly.

Mr. HOLMAN. I know if the building was as large as this Capitol they would rent outside buildings.

Mr. SAYLER. No they would not; the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. HOLMAN. This building was good enough fifteen or twenty years ago, and is good enough now, but our public officers are so accustomed to palatial residences elsewhere that they are not willing to put up with what was sufficient and convenient a few years ago.

Chicago is an exceptional case. There are no public buildings there, and we are now paying some $70,000 a year rent. This building in Cincinnati has already cost $3,000,000, that is, the appropriations will be $3,000,000 up to this time. There are yet in the Treasury, or were on the first day of this month, $27,500 of money—that much money yet to be expended; so that the appropriation of $325,000 will run the whole amount to be expended hereafter, appropriated already, and to be appropriated by this bill, $352,500 for a single building in the city of Cincinnati.

Mr. BANNING. Let me ask the gentleman from Indiana a question?

Mr. HOLMAN. My time is rapidly passing away.

Mr. BANNING. I wish the gentleman to correct one statement.

Mr. HOLMAN. What is it?

Mr. BANNING. Does not the gentleman know from the report I sent him in the room of the Committee on Appropriations that the $27,500 which was the unexpended balance on the 1st of this month will all be exhausted on the last of this month under existing contracts?

Mr. HOLMAN. We have to depend upon the only reliable information we can obtain from the Treasury Department, and we are informed from that Department there were unexpended on the 1st of the present month for this purpose $27,500.

Mr. BANNING. That is not a fair answer.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no doubt there are outstanding contracts. We appropriated $250,000 last year and we now run that up to $325,000 this year, and yet gentlemen make demands for a still larger appropriation.

Mr. SAYLER. Let me ask the gentleman whether he does not know——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired and debate on the pending amendment is exhausted.

Mr. SAYLER. I desire to say a word in response to the gentleman from Indiana.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted.

Mr. SAYLER. I rise to oppose the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. One speech has been made in favor of the pending amendment and one speech against it.

Mr. SAYLER. I will withdraw the amendment.

Mr. CHITTENDEN. The gentleman withdraws the amendment and I renew it.

Mr. SAYLER. I cannot allow myself to be taken off the floor in that manner. I believe I had the ear of the Chair, and was recognized.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman if he makes the proper motion.

Mr. SAYLER. I have withdrawn my amendment, and will now renew it.

I only want to correct an impression which might be created by the last remark of the gentleman from Indiana, and it will only take a moment for me to do it. The gentleman stated we had $250,000 appropriated for this building last year, and of that on the 1st of this month $27,500 remained. If the gentleman will look at the estimates of last year, he will find a year ago we had $250,000 appropriated, and had remaining unexpended from the previous fiscal year between two and three hundred thousand dollars; and it was for that reason we submitted at the time to the appropriation of only $250,000, or rather agreed to it, because that gave us nearly $500,000 for the current year, which is about the amount necessary.

Mr. HOLMAN. Why did not the gentleman fight it then?

Mr. SAYLER. We did fight it then because it was not as much as we ought to have had; and I undertake to say if more money had been appropriated the building would have been in a better condition and the work would have been better done than it has been. And it will not do for the gentleman to create the impression upon this committee that $250,000 was only employed last year and $27,500 of that was left over to the 1st of this month unexpended, because we had really some $500,000 last year and ought to have that amount this year.

Mr. CHITTENDEN. I do not mean in what I have to say to damage whatever reputation I may have here for being a strict economist, but I should be glad if the gentleman from Indiana and every other gentleman present who favors his policy in regard to these public buildings would listen to me for a single moment. I assume those gentlemen have during their life-time been engaged in constructing buildings of a private character, and, if they have, they certainly know that the largest possible extravagance consists in prolonging the period of construction.

Now I take the ground in full view of my belief that this Government during the next five years will have great difficulty in equalizing its revenues and expenditures. I take the ground that in respect to this public building in Cincinnati, and those at Chicago, Saint Louis, and Philadelphia, the strictest economy requires their completion at the earliest possible day. That is not only true on general principles, but it is especially true at this time, in view of the idle labor, the cheapness of material, the clamor for work, and a certain duty that the Government owes the people under existing circumstances. The gentleman proposes to go on and appropriate $300,000, more or less, to build a story perhaps of the building at Cincinnati. Instead of that he should ascertain the entire amount required for the completion of that building and that is the sum to appropriate. The dallying policy of feeding out the least possible sum which the Committee will consent to give for the construction of these buildings has been pursued long enough. They should either be abandoned or completed.

Now, gentlemen, I appeal to those who have been engaged in private building or in public building, to say whether there is recorded in the experience of any such men anything that does not confirm the position I take in regard to the matter. The true policy for the Committee on Appropriations is to examine the public buildings which have been begun and cannot be abandoned, to ascertain the total sum of money required to complete them, and to appropriate that sum of money. There is no other policy that does not follow closely after that of the great Tweed ring of New York, which is historical now, in building the court-house. They began by appropriating $500,000 more or less, have spent about $12,000,000, and there the building is; it has been from fifteen to twenty years in process of construction and it is not yet completed. And such in effect is the policy of the gentleman from Indiana, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. I favor the amendment.

Mr. BANNING. In order that the amendment may be understood

I will state that it proposes to appropriate $400,000 for the building at Cincinnati, being the same amount which is appropriated for the buildings at Chicago and Saint Louis.

The question was taken on Mr. BANNING'S amendment; and on a division there were—ayes 68, noes 27.

Mr. HOLMAN. No quorum has voted, and as this is a very extraordinary proposition I must insist on a quorum.

Mr. BANNING. Why, the gentleman objected to our call for a quorum a little while ago.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Indiana demand tellers?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir. I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. BANNING were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 82, noes 35.

Mr. HOLMAN. No quorum has voted, but I will not insist upon a further count, but will ask for a vote in the House.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Post-office and court-house, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: For continuation of building, $325,000.

Mr. O'NEILL. I move to strike out "$325,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$400,000" for the building at Philadelphia, and I do it for the same reasons which apply to the case of the Cincinnati building.

Mr. HARRISON. Before the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL] commences I desire to say that the Clerk read with such rapidity that I missed a paragraph preceding this, where I had an amendment to offer. If the Clerk reads with that rapidity it is impossible for us to catch up with him.

Mr. HOLMAN. I object to going back.

Mr. ATKINS. I must say, in reply to the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. HARRISON,] that I think he does the Clerk great injustice.

The CHAIRMAN. There is no question before the committee.

Mr. ATKINS. I must say that there are two or three paragraphs between the last one voted on and that in regard to Chicago and the one now before the House, and if he did not offer his amendment it was on account of his own inattention, and not through any fault of the Clerk.

Mr. HARRISON. I was here attending and watching an opportunity to offer the amendment.

Mr. ATKINS. Then how can the gentleman explain that he allowed three paragraphs to be read beyond the one to which he desired to offer an amendment?

Mr. O'NEILL. I would suggest to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that he agree that this amendment shall be put on the bill now and that we subsequently have a vote in the House upon it, as we have done in regard to the item for the building at Cincinnati. I do not wish to embarrass this bill, and I do not make this proposition for an increase of appropriation for the Philadelphia building merely on account of locality. The building and completion of a proper post-office is for the advantage of every one. It is not merely local. In Philadelphia, with our large population and large business interests, we are now suffering from the disadvantage of a very small and inconvenient building.

Now the gentleman may say he has cut down this bill to the amount of fourteen and a half millions of dollars from the estimates made, but at the same time time by adding $150,000 for an increase of the appropriations for the buildings at Cincinnati and Philadelphia he is not burdening the bill very much in consideration of the convenience of the business people. The estimate made, as I think I have understood at the Department, was originally $750,000 for each of these buildings. That estimate was corrected in the Treasury Department, and then a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury put, I think, the estimate for the Philadelphia building at $500,000.

Now we will have to be content if we can have an appropriation for this building of $400,000, as that is the amount just voted for Cincinnati. While these buildings are in progress of erection and the wants of the community in this respect are so well known, I do not see why the gentleman should hesitate to permit this amount to be appropriated. I certainly do not want to vote for any extravagant appropriations, but I do want such an appropriation for a building which is necessary as will enable this building to be completed within a reasonable time. The delay of a day is a great injury to the business interests of the country.

Now, although I represent here a district in which one of these buildings is located, I can assure this committee that I am not actuated merely by a desire to obtain some advantage for the locality in which I reside. We need this new building in Philadelphia, and we want it completed as soon as possible. It has been lingering along for years. A great error was committed when so small an appropriation was made for the present fiscal year. I endeavored during the last session to have $750,000 appropriated, but democratic economy decided that $350,000 was enough.

Mr. HOLMAN. Do I understand the gentleman from Philadelphia [Mr. O'NEILL] to say that there are no public buildings in that city?

Mr. O'NEILL. No, sir; I made no such statement. What I stated was this, that I was not influenced by motives of local interest, but that we had a post-office which was exceedingly inconvenient and entirely inadequate for the business of Philadelphia.

Mr. HOLMAN. Philadelphia has public buildings that under ordinary circumstances will answer for many years to come. We propose by this bill to appropriate the same amount that was appropriated for this purpose last year, $325,000, and I consider that that is sufficient.

A great deal has been said recently about corruption and dishonesty in the administration of this Government. That has been the staple commodity of politicians upon the stump in this country. Yet gentlemen must know that so long as these lavish appropriations are made for the erection of palatial buildings, buildings that are far beyond the wants of the communities for which they are provided, corruption and dishonesty in the expenditures of the Government are inevitable.

I have heard a great deal said upon this side of the House upon the necessity of retrenching down to the necessities of the public service. Yet with the appropriation for the Cincinnati post-office increased $150,000 beyond the amount contained in this bill when it was reported from the Committee on Appropriations, I can hardly hope to resist this general tide of extravagance and bring the appropriations back even to the old order of things, about which such indignation has been excited all over the country.

I think that $325,000 is a very ample appropriation for the post-office in Philadelphia. Yet we find all the gentlemen who have public buildings in process of erection in their cities or towns acting in consort with each other to force up these appropriations to the highest point. But a few months since the people of the country were denouncing this extravagance in public expenditure. No purity in the administration of the Government can be possible while such lavish appropriations are made. It is the very magnitude of the sums which are placed under the control of your public officers that excites that unfortunate cupidity which brings with it corruption and dishonesty and saps the very foundation of this government. Yet gentlemen propose to add hundreds of thousands of dollars to this bill which, when it came into the House, proposed to appropriate within a fraction of $15,000,000.

Mr. CHITTENDEN. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly, with pleasure.

Mr. CHITTENDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] if he has not within his own experience discovered that it cost $2 to be five years in erecting a building where it would cost $1 to erect it in two years, when it can be properly completed in that time?

Mr. HOLMAN. O, yes; I heard that argument brought forward here twelve years ago; just that strain of argument was begun at that time. It has resulted in the demoralization of the public service, in the wide demoralization of the service. The same argument would justify the paying the public debt at once, of loading down the people instantly with burdens which in a time of great depression would crush out the business interests of the country. That argument is used to justify the erection of these imperial palaces, costing two or three times as much as is required, for the public service. These palatial structures are beyond the wants of the service and in violation of the good faith of a plain Government like ours. I ask for a vote on this proposition.

Mr. HARRISON. I move to strike out the last word, and I do it because of the imputation thrown out by the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN,] when he charges cupidity upon members here because they desire wise appropriations, and not foolish ones.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman misapprehends me.

Mr. HARRISON. Do not interrupt me now.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman misinterpret me and then refuse to let me be heard? I said the appropriation of these large sums of money excited that cupidity which is sapping the foundations of this Government.

Mr. HARRISON. Very good. I have been before the Committee on Appropriations and urged them to give us, in Chicago, an appropriation that would enable us to complete our building. They refused to do so, and call it economy. I say it is rural folly, fit only for the gentleman's own little district.

We have in Chicago now a building which has already cost the Government $4,000,000. Admit that it was folly to commence the ercetion of such a building; it is there. Chicago is the first post-office in the country in respect of newspaper delivery; it is the second post-office in America in regard to letter distribution; it is the third post-office in America in respect to the income derived from its registered-letter department.

What have we in Chicago in the way of public buildings? The internal-revenue department, taking in $8,000,000 a year, is located in a tinder-box, rented from a man who stands high in his party and who gets his $28,000 a year for rent. We pay other rentals, amounting in all to $70,000 a year. What do we get for them? That great city, which was burned up a few years ago, is now compelled to rent at an enormous rental mere tinder-boxes, and the gentleman calls that economy. Sir, the gentleman looks at the estimates sent in here; but he has never figured—I dare him to say on this floor that he has figured—what is absolutely necessary. When an estimate comes in he cuts it down. He is like the man mentioned by Thackeray who bought an old hat for threepence, but found out afterward that it could have been bought for twopence, and was miserable ever afterward. [Laughter.] That is not economy, Mr. Chairman; it is the very essence of wastefulness.

We have our great post-office, our internal-revenue department, our custom-house in those tinder-boxes. And what was the gentleman's policy last year? We asked an appropriation that would have enabled us to make a contract for putting a roof on the building now in course of construction. He refused it, and beat us on this floor. The result was that the architect could not make a contract, and the building is there idle; the roof could not be put upon it; and another year must pass before it can be completed. Yet the gentleman calls this economy. The whole amount necessary to finish that building would not cost the Government $45,000 a year in the shape of interest on its obligations; yet the gentleman goes on and lets us pay a rent of $70,000 to $80,000 to men who lobby here with the Departments to have their buildings rented by the Government. The gentleman calls this economy! Sir, it is folly. There is no economy in it. Gentlemen may go before the country with an appearance of economy; but I say to the gentleman that there is brain enough in this country to distinguish real from false economy; and the people are not going to be fooled by a mere appearance. We have injured ourselves by this sort of policy; we have injured the party. A few districts may approve such a system; but the country in general pronounces it folly. We are called imbeciles, because we are in some localities paying from $70,000 to $100,000 rent when bonds sold at 4½ per cent. would finish the buildings, and the interest upon those bonds would not exceed $45,000 a year. Are we going to conduct this Government so differently from the business of a private institution?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I arise to oppose the amendment of the gentleman from Chicago, [Mr. HARRISON].

Mr. Chairman, I discover that there has been an onslaught made upon the Committee on Appropriations and that in some instances they have been induced to consent to appropriations far beyond the proper demands of the public service. I refer in particular to the appropriation made here yesterday for the public grounds around this building—an appropriation of $100,000. If these grounds belonged to a private individual and were to be improved in like manner, it would be done for $10,000 or $20,000.

Now gentlemen representing large cities come in here and insist, as does the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that they are suffering for want of great public buildings. Sir, when the letter-carrier system was adopted it was done upon the ground that there would be no necessity for large post-office buildings, which is true; we do not need them and it is a waste of the public money to build them. Yet now, when letters are carried from the post-office and delivered to the business man at his counter, gentlemen here argue that they require large buildings and are suffering for the want of them. Sir, the only object is to get ornamental public buildings in their respective cities. There is no necessity at all for such structures. I hope the Committee on Appropriations will be sustained upon this proposition.

Mr. Chairman, I reside in a city where this letter-carrier system is in operation. I have been in favor of it, have always voted for it. But, sir, there is no crowd around the post-offices in our large cities, and no need of large buildings. The letters are distributed there to all business points. I hope the committee will be sustained.

The amendment to strike out the last word was withdrawn.

Mr. FREEMAN. Mr. Chairman, I renew the amendment to strike out the last word. Sir, it seems to me a strange spirit pervading this House which, in the name of economy, leaves public works of vast importance if not absolute necessity with the prospect of being uncompleted for years, while the sum annually paid for ill-conditioned accommodations for the public service far exceeds the interest on the sum necessary for their completion. It would have been far better never to have commenced these structures than to allow them to drag on year after year in their present condition. But as they have been commenced, as their completion cannot be delayed without additional cost and loss to the Government, arising, among other things, from the necessity for their protection from exposure to the changing seasons and the deterioration incident thereto, the loss of interest on the sum already invested, the large rents paid for the necessary quarters for the various branches of the public service, it would seem to be but the part of wisdom and true economy to complete these buildings as speedily as possible. The amount appropriated in this bill is utterly insufficient for that purpose, and unless it be increased the Government will be the loser in the long run. I hope that members of this House, and more especially gentlemen more immediately representing sections of the country where these buildings are under way, will rise above the narrow, contracted spirit which seems to govern the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations like a nightmare, and will in the interest of public spirit, of wisdom, and true economy adopt this amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to oppose the pending proposition and call for a vote.

The amendment to strike out the last word was withdrawn; and the question recurred on the amendment of Mr. O'NEILL to strike out $320,000 and insert $400,000.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 54, noes 49.

Mr. EDEN. I make the point that there is no quorum. If this system of extravagance is to be inaugurated, I want it done with a quorum in the House.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. O'NEILL were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 74, noes 67.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. We will take a vote on this amendment in the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Appraisers' stores, San Francisco, California, for continuation of building, $50,000.

Mr. PIPER. I move to amend the clause just read by striking out "$50,000" and inserting "$100,000."

Mr. Chairman, the building for appraisers' stores for which the Committee on Appropriations have put in the bill $50,000 is situated in the city of San Francisco. It is a building two hundred and twenty feet in length and one hundred and twenty feet in breadth, and is intended for various purposes; for the district and circuit courts of the United States, for the marshal's offices and all the other offices necessary for the conduct of the Federal judicial business of the ninth circuit of the United States. In addition it is intended for offices for collectors of internal revenue, for headquarters of the Army, &c. It will accommodate the appraisers of the port of San Francisco for offices and warehouses, with a warehouse capacity, I believe, of 18,000 tons in addition. The building is a plain brick structure, with no ornamentation whatever. It is now up four stories, and about ready for the roof. Upon it already has been expended, I believe, $583,000. The amount necessary for its final completion, as estimated by the Government architect, is $217,000.

For the offices and court-rooms which this building will accomodate when completed, the Government is now paying a rental of about $24,000, independent of storage capacity and the offices occupied by the appraisers.

The present circuit and district courts for the ninth judicial district are now located in an old, broken-down building totally improper and inadequate for the purpose. It is a building which was shattered by an earthquake, is in danger on account of fire, and may be destroyed at any time. All the court records of the circuit and district courts are contained in that building. The entire records of the vast landed property of the State of California, derived from Spanish and Mexican titles, are located in that insecure building.

The Committee on Appropriations have seen proper to appropriate $50,000 for the continuation and completion of this building, an amount which if this building were completed would be saved to the Government every year. Therefore I submit in the interest of economy, in the interest of the safety of the public records, in the interest of the public and the Government itself, this building should be completed at the earliest possible moment, and I ask that this committee will unhesitatingly vote to increase this appropriation to $100,000, as I have proposed.

Mr. HOLMAN. This building is one of seven buildings which have been commenced and put in progress of erection in the city of San Francisco, seven separate and distinct buildings. The old building known as the Appraisers' store building in the city of San Francisco is now in use. This is a new and elegant structure, one for which we have already appropriated $588,000, and the Committee on Appropriations think the appropriation of $50,000 for that work is very ample. I now ask for a vote.

Mr. LUTTRELL rose.

The CHAIR. Debate is exhausted.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I ask my colleague to withdraw his amendment and I will renew it.

Mr. PIPER. I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I renew it.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I agree with all my colleague has said in relation to the present appropriation. I believe that the appropriation reported in this bill should be increased to $100,000 at least. This building is under construction. We have expended, it is true, a great deal of money, but we are putting up a first-class building there. The commercial interests of the country demand this building shall be constructed as speedily as possible. We are now paying enormous rents in San Francisco for public buildings, and why it is when we have the money we should withhold it, and not complete this building, I cannot understand. I know the building can be finished in a very few months, and we would thereby save every year as much money as is proposed to be appropriated in this bill. I hope the amendment will prevail. If the building is completed within the next year, it will be the means of saving as much as is now proposed to be appropriated. This cannot be done.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 38, noes 29; no quorum voting.

Mr. PIPER demanded tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and Mr. PIPER and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 53, noes 94.

So the amendment was disagreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For court-house and post-office, Saint Louis, Missouri: for continuation of building, $400,000.

Mr. STONE. I move to strike out "400" and insert "500," so as to increase the appropriation to $500,000.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it is almost impossible, it would seem, to convince members of this House of the absolute necessity and importance of adopting the amendment I have proposed. I consider the majority of this House have already settled by the votes given on this bill that they defer altogether to the wisdom of the Committee on Appropriations in reference to the wants of every section of this country. This building has been standing for several months for want of an appropriation. The only men employed about it are high-salaried men, the superintendent, the watchmen, and the foreman. The material is there on the ground, and the bone and sinew to put it up are there. All we want is the appropriation. I therefore ask gentlemen to vote for my amendment.

The question being taken on Mr. STONE'S amendment, there were—ayes 26, noes 72.

So (further count not being demanded) the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Court-house and post-office, Parkersburgh, West Virginia:
For completion of building, fences, grading approaches, and furniture, $5,000.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out "$5,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$20,000."

I dislike to antagonize any report from the Committee on Appropriations as I have every confidence in that committee. But I desire to say that this appropriation is so wholly inadequate that I must ask that it may be increased. The city of Parkersburgh is the only place where by law the circuit court of West Virginia can hold its sittings. The court now uses the court-house of the State, which is otherwise occupied much of the time, and the court is often subjected to inconvenience in holding its sessions.

There have been now apppropriated about $200,000 for this building; and the Supervising Architect has reported that it will require $20,000 more to complete it. The unexpended balance is not enough, I understand, to do the painting and the glazing, and to furnish the fastenings of the doors and windows, &c. The building is uninclosed. I take it that it is very bad policy, after so much money has been expended, to allow the building to stand in an unfinished condition, exposed to the weather, unpainted, and without fastenings to the doors and windows. The building is absolutely needed for post-office and court-house purposes. I hope it will be the pleasure of the committee to sustain the amendment I have offered, and give the $20,000 which are asked for.

Mr. HOLMAN. The amount of money on hand for the building at Parkersburgh is $11,000. That was the amount on the first day of this month. The building is well on to completion and it may require possibly about $15,000 altogether to complete it. It is a building that perhaps my friend from West Virginia will agree ought not to have been erected. It is being erected at a very large cost and is not one of those buildings that is imperatively required for the service of the Government.

But lest we may have put this appropriation too low, with the consent of the members of the Committee on Appropriations around me, I will move to make the amount $10,000; so as to make the entire appropriation for furnishing the building and completing its internal works, $21,000. I feel very confident that my friend from West Virginia will find that very ample. I ask him, therefore, to modify his amendment by making the amount $10,000.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. If the gentleman will put the amount at $15,000, I will accept that.

Mr. HOLMAN. We think $10,000 very ample.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. Very well; I accept it, and modify the amendment so as to make the amount $10,000.

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Court-house, custom-house, and post-office, Evansville, Indiana: For completion of building, $20,000.

Mr. FULLER. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out "$20,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$49,000."

For the information of the Committee of the Whole, I desire to have a letter from the superintendent of the building read.

The Clerk read as follows:

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF CONSTRUCTION,
UNITED STATES CUSTOM-HOUSE, POST-OFFICE AND COURT-HOUSE,
Evansville, Indiana, January 29, 1877.

DEAR SIR: Will you please inform me as to the prospect of the passage through Congress of the appropriation for the above-named building, included in the Treasury estimates for the present session. The balance yet subject to appropriation under the act of January 16, 1873, as amended by the act of June 23, 1876 is $50,000 in round numbers, perhaps really only $49,000. The total appropriation is limited to $200,000, exclusive of the cost of site, which has cost about $99,000. Total appropriations previous to this session, $250,000.

There have been expended on the building proper, and for expenses connected therewith, (not including the real estate or site,) about $87,000. The building is nearly ready for the roof, and there is more than enough money already appropriated and subject to requisition to pay everything due on existing contracts, place the edifice under roof, and make everything ready for the interior finish. In my opinion, the structure can be completed within the appropriation of $200,000, except perhaps the iron fencing, sidewalks, and other outside work, which is generally done by extra appropriations. This is also the case, I believe, with the movable furniture. The authorities at Washington, I know, have steadily determined and endeavored to complete the building within the limits authorized by law, and doubtless will succeed.

So far as I am concerned, it is my earnest desire that this may be done, and that our city may have a good, substantial, handsome edifice, that will supply all her requirements in this regard for a generation or so to come. If Congress at this session will appropriate the $49,000 or $50,000 balance of the whole amount authorized, I doubt not that this sum will suffice to complete the building by the early spring of 1878 in a very satisfactory manner.

Hoping to receive early and favorable information from you in regard to the appropriation now pending, and thanking you for the interest heretofore manifested and the influence exerted by you in this behalf, I remain,

Very respectfully and truly, yours,

JAMES H. MCNEELY,
Superintendent.

Hon. BENONI S. FULLER,
Representative First Congressional District, Washington, D. C.

Mr. HOLMAN. As the hour of twelve o'clock has arrived, I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and had come to no resolution thereon.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. DE BOLT: The petition of the officers and directors of the Merchants' Exchange, of the Board of Trade of Saint Louis, and of the letter-carriers of said city, that the pay of said carriers be increased, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. FINLEY: A paper relating to the establishment of a post-route from Volusia, on the Saint John River, to Leesburgh, on Lake Eustis, via Yallaha, Florida, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HOUSE: The petition of school directors of Davidson County, Tennessee, for the donation of Ash barracks in said county for school purposes, to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LAPHAM: The petition of Edgar Parker and other citizens of Geneva, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. LUTTRELL: The petition of the Vinicultural Society of Saint Helena, California, for the amendment of the revenue laws relating to the importation of foreign wines and liquors, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of Milton S. Latham and others, of California, that if a subsidy be granted for a mail between the United States and China it be a semi-monthly mail, and the subsidy applicable alike to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. MCCRARY: Papers relating to the petition of W. A. Britton, late marshal for the western district of Arkansas, for compensation for certain services performed by him, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. POWELL: The petition of J. R. Budd and 33 other citizens of Wayne County, Pennsylvania, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. PURMAN: The petition of Amos Hunt and 35 other citizens of Washington City, District of Columbia, for the extension of the Capitol grounds and the erection of library and Supreme Court buildings, to the Committee on Public Bulidings and Grounds.

Also, the petition of citizens of Falls Church, Virginia, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. JAMES B. REILLY: Four petitions, three from citizens of Pottsville, Pennsylvania, the fourth from citizens of Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania, for aid in the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad, to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad.

By Mr. SAVAGE: The petition of T. Worthington, of Ohio, that he be granted a pension until paid for civil services, to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THOMPSON: The petition of Abbie G. H. Todd and 93 others of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Massachusetts, and Daniel G. Todd and 63 others, for legislation restraining the manufacture of intoxicating liquors and the importation thereof into the United States to such an amount only as shall be required for medicinal and mechanical purposes in the arts, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, two petitions, one from Thomas Pickett and 36 others of Beverly, Massachusetts, the other from the Asiatic Bank of Salem, Massachusetts, and numerous bank officers of said city, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the same committee.

By Mr. WARD: The petition of ship-owners, merchants, and underwriters of the port of New York, against crippling the usefulness of the United States Coast Survey by curtailing the usual appropriations for its support, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. WELLS, of Missouri: The petition of the board of directors of the Merchants' Exchange of Saint Louis, Missouri, for the repeal of the bankrupt laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means

By Mr. WIGGINTON: The petition of John W. Burrows and 125 others, for a mail-route from Mariposa to Hites Cove, Mariposa County, California, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware: A paper relating to the establishment of a post-route from Lewistown to Rehobeth, Delaware, to the same committee.

IN SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 22, 1877—10 a. m.

The recess having expired, the Senate resumed its session.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent at this time to make sundry reports.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. PADDOCK in the chair.) The Chair must rule that reports are not in order. The understanding of the Senate is that no business shall be transacted between the hours of ten and twelve. That is the agreement made by unanimous consent.

Mr. EDMUNDS. So much the worse for the people who labor under disabilities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Vermont move that the Senate take a further recess until twelve o'clock?

Mr. EDMUNDS. No, sir; I do not make any motion to interrupt public business at this stage of the session.

Mr. CHAFFEE. I move that the Senate take a further recess until twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate took a recess until twelve o'clock.

The Senate re-assembled at twelve o'clock m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. BYRON SUNDERLAND, D. D.

On motion of Mr. SPENCER, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

EULOGIES ON THE LATE SPEAKER KERR.

Mr. McDONALD. I desire to give notice that on Saturday next, at the close of the morning hour, I shall ask the Senate to take up the House resolution respecting the death of Hon. Michael C. Kerr, late Speaker of the House of Representatives.

DISABILITY BILLS.

Mr. EDMUNDS. There may be memorials to be presented, but I ask unanimous consent to make a few reports at this time as I wish to leave the Senate Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator will proceed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I am instructed by the Committee on the Judiciary to report back all the disability bills that we have been able to examine. I first report the petition of John R. F. Tatnall, praying for the removal of his political disabilities, adversely. He appears by the books of the Treasury Department to be a defaulter to the Government. I move that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 3859) to remove the political disabilities of Manning M. Kimmell, late of Cape Girardeau County, Missouri, we report adversely for the same reason. He appears to be a defaulter to the Government. That I move to have indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 4149) to remove the political disabilities of Lloyd I. Beall, of Virginia, we report adversely, for he appears to be a defaulter to the Government. I move that that be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 4207) to remove the political disabilities of F. E. Shepperd, of Virginia, we report adversely because he was dismissed from the Navy instead of having his resignation accepted. There are a good many cases of this character that I think when we can have an opportunity to look at them again at the next session we ought to modify the rule upon which we have acted and bring in the most of these cases; but at present, following the rule that we have had at this session, we feel obliged to report against these cases, but without prejudice, so that we can probably change the rule as to almost all of them at the next session. This bill I move to have indefinitely postponed for the present.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The petition of Dr. H. W. M. Washington praying for the removal of his political disabilities we report adversely upon, for the same reason. There is nothing that touches the honor of any of these gentlemen, and I am now speaking according to the rule that we feel obliged to follow so far. I move that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDUMNDS. Also the bill (S. No. 1137) to remove the political disabilities of Charles L. Scott, of Alabama, because there is a House bill pending before us on the same subject, which, when we come to act upon it, will be disposed of. I move that the bill be postponed indefinitely.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (S. No. 1138) to remove the political disabilities of Henry Myers, of Georgia, we report adversely, because he appears to be a defaulter to the Government. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 4437) to remove the political disabilities of Frank S. Armistead, a citizen of West Virginia, we report adversely, because he appears to be a defaulter to the Government, and in a very large amount. The others are not defaulters in very large sums. I move its indefinite postponement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 4439) to remove the political disabilities imposed upon John H. Forney, of Calhoun County, Alabama, by the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States we report adversely, because he appears to be a defaulter to the Government. I move its indefinite postponement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 4448) to remove the political disabilities of A. W. Burnet, of South Carolina, we report adversely because he was a member of a State Legislature and has already been relieved by the act of the 22d of May, 1872, volume 17 of the General Statutes, page 142. He is not under disabilities at all now. I move the indefinite postponement of the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask that the committee be discharged from the petition of J. L. M. Curry, praying the removal of his political disabilities. It is said to be a petition. It is only a letter and we are unable to get any information to find out what he was or why he was, if I may so say.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I should like to state to the chairman of the committee that Mr. Curry was a member of the Thirty-seventh Congress.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We could not find anything about him. We had only before us a letter.

Mr. JOHNSTON. That letter is addressed to me, and as it contains the request to have his disabilities removed, I thought it would be sufficient. If the Senator will make no report on that case I will have the petition presented in a proper form.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Very well, I withdraw the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report is withdrawn.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Upon the bill (H. R. No. 4475) removing the political disabilities of Joel S. Kennard, of Savannah, Georgia, we report adversely because he appears to be a defaulter to the Government. I move its indefinite postponement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Upon the bill (H. R. No. 4204) to remove the political disabilities of William Sharp, of Norfolk, Virginia, we report adversely for the simple reason that he was dismissed. There is nothing that affects his honor, but he falls within the rule I have spoken of. I move its indefinite postponement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (S. No. 1237) to remove the political disabilities of H. H. Lewis, of Baltimore, Maryland, we report adversely. He was dismissed from the Navy instead of having his resignation accepted, and we feel obliged to report against him. There is nothing that affects his character at all that we know of at the present time. I move its indefinite postponement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 223) to relieve A. B. Conrad, of Virginia, of all political disabilities, we report adversely. He was dismissed from the Navy instead of accepting his resignation, and he falls within the same category, but there is nothing that affects the morality of his conduct that we know of. I move its indefinite postponement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The petition of W. E. Wysham, of Baltimore County, Maryland, praying for the removal of his political disabilities, is also reported adversely for the same reason, that he was dismissed from the Navy instead of having his resignation accepted. I move that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I make the same report in regard to the bill (H. R. No. 2811) to remove the political disabilities of C. H. Williamson, of New York, who was dismissed. I move its indefinite postponement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I make the same report as to the bill (H. R. No. 3151) to remove the disabilities of John Johnson, of the county of Granville, and State of North Carolina, who was dismissed. I move the indefinite postponement of the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I make the same report upon the bill (H. R. No. 3264) to remove the political disabilities of C. H. Kennedy, of Virginia, who was dismissed the Navy. I move that the bill be postponed indefinitely.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. In regard to the petition of Oscar Hinrichs, we report that he was in the Coast Survey, as we ascertain, neither in the Army nor the Navy, and he is entirely covered, if he was ever under disability, by the act of the 22d of May, 1872, and he is under none now, so that I move the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. In regard to the bill (H. R. No. 3892) to remove the political disabilities of George Watson Carr, a citizen of the State of Virginia, he appears to be a defaulter to the Government, and we report adversely upon it for that reason. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I now come to a more agreeable packet. The bill (H. R. No. 3083) to remove the political disabilities of C. M. Wilcox, of Maryland, we report favorably without amendment.

Mr. WEST. Have it passed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I cannot stop to put anything through now.

Mr. EDMUNDS also, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the petition of John S. Marmaduke, praying for the removal of his political disabilities, reported a bill (S. No. 1278) to remove the political disabilities of John S. Marmaduke; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1617) to remove the political disabilities of George S. Hawkins, of Florida, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4273) to remove the political disabilities of A. C. Myers, of Maryland, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1136) to remove the political disabilities of Wade H. Gibbes, of South Carolina, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of William Butler, of South Carolina, praying for the removal of his political disabilities, reported a bill (S. No. 1272) to remove the political disabilities of William Butler, of South Carolina; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of S. P. Moon, M. D., of Virginia, praying for the removal of his political disabilities, reported a bill (S. No. 1274) to remove the political disabilities of S. P. Moon, M. D., of Virginia; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committeee, to whom was referred the petition of Catesby ap R. Jones, of Alabama, praying for the removal of his political disabilities, reported a bill (S. No. 1277) to remove the political disabilities of Catesby ap R. Jones, of Alabama; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of W. F. Carrington, of Virginia, reported a bill (S. No. 1276) to remove the political disabilities of W. F. Carrington, of Virginia; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H R. No. 2197) for the relief of Henry B. Kelly, of Louisiana, from political disabilities imposed by the fourteenth amendment, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of J. P. Major, praying for the removal of his political disabilities, reported a bill (S. No. 1275) to remove the political disabilities of J. P. Major; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 3260) to remove the political disabilities of Lawrence S. Baker, of Tarborough, North Carolina, we report favorably, with amendments. The bill is not in exactly the correct form, and we report an amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (S. No. 1096) to remove the political disabilities of R. C. Gatlin, of Arkansas, we report favorably, with an amendment, the amendment making it conform to the proper mode.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 3636) to remove the political disabilities of Richard S. Kinney and William R. Jones we report with amendments. One of the amendments is to strike out one of the names, because we do not like two names in a bill which must pass by a two-thirds vote, so that as the bill stands as amended it is to remove the political disabilities of Richard S. Kinney, and we strike out William R. Jones and report on his petition a new bill.

The bill (S. No. 1273) to remove the political disabilities of William R. Jones, of Texas, was read twice by its title.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (S. No. 915) to remove the political disabilities of D. H. Hill, of North Carolina, we report with amendments, the amendments being merely to put it in proper form.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 3730) to remove the political disabilities of John D. Simms and Samuel V. Turner, of Virginia, we report with amendments. Simms was dismissed from the Navy, and we therefore, on the same principle which I have stated, are obliged to leave him out. As to Turner we report favorably.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill (H. R. No. 3791) to remove the legal and political disabilities of William A. Webb, of Virginia, we report favorably with an amendment, the amendment being to put the bill in proper form.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. BOUTWELL presented the memorial of W. K. Platt & Co., and Charles Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and S. F. Hayward and A. F. Spamn & Co., of New York, remonstrating against the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 431) for the relief of the heirs of W. A. Graham; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. ALCORN presented a petition of citizens of Mississippi, praying that the telegraph business may be transferred to the superintendence of the Post-Office Department, and for cheaper telegraphic facilities; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a memorial of the Legislature of Mississippi, in favor of an appropriation by Congress to deepen the water at the mouth of Pascagoula River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. DAVIS presented the petition of J. N. H. Hoffman, editor of the Morgantown Post, West Virginia, praying that the telegraph business may be transferred to the superintendence of the Post-Office Department, and for cheaper telegraphic facilities; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. WINDOM. I present a resolution of the board of trade of Minneapolis, Minnesota, requesting their Senators and Representatives from the State of Minnesota to procure the passage of a joint resolution that will direct the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw from sale any and all public lands lying on the Mississippi River and its tributaries above the falls of Polagema that might be overflowed by the construction of reservoirs as feeders of the Lower Mississippi in times of drouth, as recommended by the United States Engineer Department. I move its reference to the Committee on Public Lands.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WINDOM. I also present a similar resolution from the Saint Paul Chamber of Commerce, in favor of the withdrawal from sale and location the lands mentioned in the memorial I have just presented, and, further, that their Representatives and Senators use all honorable means to secure an appropriation for the completion of the surveys of the sources of the Mississippi River as recommended by the Engineer Department. I move its reference to the Committee on Commerce.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY presented a resolution of the Detroit Board of Trade, in favor of an appropriation for the erection of a light-house and fog-signal on Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WRIGHT. I present resolutions passed by the business men of the city of Burlington, in the State of Iowa, recommending action looking to a speedy resumption of specie payments; and to that end they recommend the adoption of a system to provide for a long-time bond bearing a low rate of interest, and providing that when a sufficient amount of gold has been accumulated by the sale of bonds the legal-tender act shall go into force. They recommend the present as the most favorable period for the introduction of the proposed plan. I understand that the Committee on Finance have reported upon the subject.

Mr. MORRILL. A bill upon the subject was reported yesterday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will lie on the table.

Mr. ALLISON presented a memorial of Myron H. Silverheels, chief counselor of the Seneca Nation of New York Indians, on behalf of said nation, remonstrating against the passage of House bill No. 4257, to authorize the Seneca Indians to lease lands, &c.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. KERNAN presented a memorial of citizens of Salamanca and West Salamanca, in the State of New York, remonstrating against the passage of an act in reference to the leasing of lands in the Allegany Indian reservation; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WRIGHT, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3186) for the relief of Margaret Janet Burleson, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was recommitted the bill (S. No. 111) for the relief of John Montgomery and Thomas E. Williams, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. BOUTWELL, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1130) for the relief of the executors of the estate of John S. Miller, deceased, reported it without amendment.

DIGEST ON INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a resolution to print additional copies of the digest of the opinions of the Attorneys-General and of the decisions of the Federal courts in reference to international law and kindred subjects, have instructed me to report it without amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That of a digest of the opinions of the Attorneys-General and of the decisions of the Federal courts with reference to international law and kindred subjects, prepared at the Department of State, there be printed, in addition to the usual number, 500 copies for the use of the Senate, 1,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 copies for the use of the Department of State.

Mr. STEVENSON. I should like to ask the Senator from Rhode Island what will be the cost of this publication?

Mr. ANTHONY. About $8,000.

Mr. STEVENSON. The entire cost?

Mr. ANTHONY. The entire cost.

The resolution was agreed to.

REPORT ON EUROPEAN SHIPS OF WAR.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a resolution to print one thousand copies of the letter of the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting the report of J. W. King, chief engineer United States Navy, on European ships of war, have instructed me to report it without amendment and ask its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That 1,000 copies of the letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting the report of J. W. King, chief engineer United States Navy, on European ships of war, be printed for the use of the Secretary of the Navy.

REPORT ON FISH AND FISHERIES.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a resolution to print extra copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the years 1875 and 1876, have instructed me to report it, with an amendment. I wish the Clerk to read it as amended, and I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That there be printed 4,500 extra copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the years 1875 and 1876; of which 1,000 shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,500 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 for the use of the commissioner of fish and fisheries.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred a resolution to print extra copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the year 1877, have instructed me to report it with amendment, and recommend its passage. I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That there be printed 4,500 extra copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the years 1874 and 1875, of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,500 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 for the use of the commissioner of fish and fisheries.

EULOGIES ON THE LATE SENATOR CAPERTON.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution to print eulogies upon the late Senator Caperton, of West Virginia, have instructed me to report a bill as a substitute for the resolution and recommend its passage. I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

The bill (S. No. 1271) to authorize the printing and distribution of the eulogies delivered in Congress on the announcement of the death of the late Allen T. Caperton, a Senator from the State of West Virginia, was read twice by its title and considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that nine thousand copies of the eulogies delivered in the two Houses of Congress upon the late Allen T. Caperton, a Senator from the State of West Virginia, be printed; three thousand copies for the use of the Senate and six thousand copies for the use of the House of Representatives; and that the Secretary of the Treasury have engraved and printed the portrait of Mr. Caperton to accompany the same, for which the sum of $500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. ANTHONY. The committee have reduced the number from twelve thousand to nine thousand.

Mr. DAVIS. Is nine thousand the usual number or is it less than usual?

Mr. ANTHONY. The practice has varied; but latterly the number has been as high as twelve thousand. The committee thought that nine thousand was a sufficient number, and will adopt that rule in the future.

Mr. DAVIS. That is to be the rule for the future, I understand?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes, sir.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EULOGIES ON THE LATE SPEAKER KERR.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution to print copies of the eulogies delivered on the late Speaker Kerr, have instructed me to report back a bill as a substitute. The concurrent resolution from the House called for only two thousand copies, but members of the House have called upon the committee and requested that it be raised to a larger number, which the committee have done. I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

The bill (S. No. 1270) to authorize the printing and distribution of the memorial addresses on the life and character of the late Michael C. Kerr, Speaker of the House of Representatives, was read twice by its title, and considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that 9,000 copies of the memorial addresses on the life and character of the late Michael C. Kerr, Speaker of the House of Representatives, be printed, 3,000 copies for the use of the Senate and 6,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and that the Secretary of the Treasury have engraved and printed the portrait of Mr. Kerr to accompany the same, for which the sum of $500 or so much thereof as may be necessary is appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment; ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACKSONVILLE AND SAINT AUGUSTINE RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. WEST. I am directed by the Committee on Railroads, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1248) to amend an act entitled "An act granting the right of way through the public lands to the Jacksonville and Saint Augustine Railroad Company," approved June 7, 1872, to report it with an amendment; and as this is a bill relating to a railroad company in a southern State merely having reference to the right of way, in compliance with the wishes of the two Senators from the State of Florida I urge its passage now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the motion? The Chair hears none.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Railroads with amendments.

Mr. COCKRELL. Has the bill just been reported from a committee?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has been reported from the Committee on Railroads this morning.

Mr. COCKRELL. A bill of this kind is before the Committee on Military Affairs affecting one terminus of that railroad.

Mr. WEST. I am convinced that if the Senator from Missouri will hear the amendments reported from the Committee on Railroads, he will be satisfied that the bill will answer every purpose.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there a copy of the bill that I may examine it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments have not been printed, but are in manuscript. The bill will now be read as proposed to be amended.

The CHIEF CLERK. The bill if amended as reported from the committee would read as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That all the rights conferred by an act entitled "An act granting the right of way through the public lands to the Jacksonville and Saint Augustine Railroad Company," approved June 7, 1872, are hereby revoked and transferred to the Saint John's Railway Company, the same being a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Florida, which said company shall have the right, by and with the consent of the Secretary of the Interior to enter upon and appropriate such and so much of the public lands or lots of land, the property of the United States, as may be required for depots, shops, side-tracks, or other necessary uses of said road: Provided, That no lot or tract of land so taken shall exceed forty acres in any one place: And provided further, That no military reservation shall be crossed or appropriated unless the consent of the Secretary of War shall be first obtained; and the order of transfer of the Secretary of War and the conveyance of the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall be a full and complete title in and to said company of any lot or tract of public land so transferred and conveyed. The said Saint John's Railway Company shall be a postal and military road.

Mr. COCKRELL. Strike out the last clause and I shall have no objection to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendments of the committee.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is at one end of that road a very large military reservation. It is of great value. There is a bill pending affecting that part of it. I have no objection to the bill, except so far as it affects that military reservation. It does seem to me that it would be exercising considerable power for Congress to vest in the Secretary of War permission and authority to appropriate that land just as he may choose to that company, and land right in the heart of the city of Saint Augustine. It is valuable land. If the bill only affected the other portions of the land I should have no objection to it; but it does seem to me that there ought to be some restriction upon that portion of the bill which affects the military reservation.

Mr. CONOVER. I think the bill was amended by the committee so as to protect any of these military reservations. The matter is to be left in the discretion of the Secretary of War; and if a reservation is required for use or needed by the Government, it cannot be crossed or in any way interfered with at all. It is especially provided for by the amendments of the committee that such military reservations as the Secretary may deem unnecessary for Government purposes, he can give this right of way to the company to pass over, and that is all that is asked for. If we cannot vest that discretion in the Secretary I do not know where we can place it.

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to direct the attention of the Senator from Louisiana to one or two things that occur to me in connection with this bill. I heard it read, and can only speak here from memory in hearing it read, not having had my attention directed to it before. As I understand it, there has been a grant of land or some privileges given to a former company as to a company now existing by former legislation.

Mr. CONOVER. The Senator will allow me to state that in 1872 a bill was passed granting the right of way to the Jacksonville and Saint Augustine Railroad Company. That company is defunct; there is no more of it. The bill grants the right of way simply to a railroad company already in existence which is running a line of road, and that is all.

Mr. WRIGHT. That does not contradict the statement which I have made, that by prior grant or prior legislation there had been some privilege granted to another company. Am I right in the supposition that it is proposed by this bill to transfer the privileges and rights given by a former act from one company to another company named in this bill?

Mr. WEST. Yes, and I have risen to reply to the Senator and tell him the reason.

Mr. WRIGHT. It does not make any difference as to the reason. What I was getting at is this: whether the bill ought not on its face to provide that the grant heretofore made with the first company shall not be revoked except by the consent of the former company. I ask whether there ought not to be a provision in the bill that the grant shall be revoked by and with the consent of the former company. The reason why I suggest that is that it does not make any difference what may be the ground on which this transfer is to be made, we cannot tell but that the former company may at some time or other insist that the Government has not been acting in good faith with it by this legislation, and I therefore suggest to the Senator from Louisiana whether it would not be well to thus amend the bill.

Mr. CONOVER. The former company, the Saint John's Railway Company, really owns this road now; they are to-day the same company. I think the Senator from Louisiana has a letter from the vice-president of the former company which he may see fit to read.

Mr. WRIGHT. Then what objection can there be to a provision such as I suggest?

Mr. WEST. None; and we had better have it placed in the bill. I think the suggestion made by the Senator from Iowa is eminently proper, and in accordance with that suggestion I shall move after the word "obtained," in line 18, to insert:

Such transfer and revocation being made by and with the consent of the Jacksonville and Saint Augustine Railroad Company.

Mr. CONOVER. I did not hear the suggestion of the Senator from Iowa, but I have no objection to such an amendment, and I understand that to meet the point raised by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. WRIGHT. Let the Secretary report that part of the bill as it would read if amended as proposed.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

And provided further, That no military reservation shall be crossed or appropriated unless the consent of the Secretary of War shall be first obtained, such transfer and reservation being made by and with the consent of the Jacksonville and Saint Augustine Railroad Company.

Mr. ALCORN. I call the attention of the Senate to one point in the bill. While there is a provision the amount shall not exceed forty acres at any one place that shall be appropriated of the Government's land, there is, as I heard the bill read, no restriction whatever with regard to the military reservation. That may be appropriated by these companies, with the consent of the Secretary of War. I ask if I am correct?

Mr. CONOVER. I think the bill provides that such lands as may be required shall be retained by the Government, and lands may be given to the company in the discretion of the Secretary of War, not exceeding forty acres at any one place.

Mr. ALCORN. I know there is such a provision in the bill, but there is no restriction upon the Secretary as to the military reservation.

Mr. CONOVER. It is possible that there may not be more than forty acres of land there.

Mr. ALCORN. There may be a thousand for aught I know.

Mr. WEST. The restriction is embodied in the limitation upon public lands; and military lands, as I understand it, are just as much public lands as any other lands; they are lands of the Government of the United States.

Mr. ALCORN. I think they are not public lands in the ordinary sense.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the last clause be read relating to the military reservation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, [Mr. ANTHONY in the Chair.] The part of the bill referred to by the Senator from Missouri will be read.

Mr. WRIGHT. Will the Senator from Missouri allow me to refer to the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana made at my suggestion?

Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suggest that instead of using the words "being with the consent" it should read "only to be." We would assume by employing the language "being with the consent" that they have consented. Let it be in such a way that we shall have their consent to this change hereafter. I suggest to insert "only to be made" instead of "being made;" so as to read:

Such transfer and revocation only to be made by and with the consent of the Jacksonville and Saint Augustine Railroad Company.

Mr. WEST. I accept the suggestion and shall modify the amendment which I have proposed accordingly.

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Now I ask that the clause relating to the military reservation be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That no lot or tract of land so taken shall exceed forty acres in any one place: And provided further, That no military reservation shall be crossed or appropriated unless the consent of the Secretary of War shall be first obtained; and the order of transfer of the Secretary of War and the conveyance of the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall be a full and complete title in and to said company of any lot or tract of public land so transferred and conveyed, such transfer and revocation only to be made by and with the consent of the Jacksonville and Saint Augustine Railroad Company. The said Saint John's Railway Company shall be a postal and military road.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is to the proviso that I desire to call the attention of the Senate. There is a large military reservation at Saint Augustine, and that reservation is very valuable. I think the official papers here show us that the company have no right to that quantity of land. The Government is willing to give them a right of way over it; but to give them forty acres of land in the heart of Saint Augustine would be a fraud upon the rights of the people of this country. I ask the Clerk to read the communication which I have here attached to a petition on this subject; and there is also a map which will show exactly the status of the whole matter.

Mr. MORRILL. As evidently the paper now asked to be read would take up the whole of the morning hour, I hope the Senator from Florida will allow this bill to be passed by. There are several little matters which are important to be acted upon this morning, and if the paper presented by the Senator from Missouri shall now be read it would take up the whole of the morning hour.

Mr. McMILLAN. Would it be in order to offer an amendment to the bill now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An amendment would be in order.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move to insert as an additional section to the bill the following:

SEC. 2. That this act and all other acts to which it is amendatory or supplementary may at any time be amended, altered, or repealed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask the Senator from Florida if he would have any objection to let the bill lie on the table and be printed, so that we can see exactly what it is to-morrow.

Mr. CONOVER. I will not make any objection to the suggestion of the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. MORRILL. Then I move that the bill lie on the table and be printed as proposed to be amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will lie on the table, if there be no objection.

Mr. COCKRELL subsequently said: I offer an amendment to Senate bill No. 1248, reported from the Committee on Railroads this morning, and ask that the bill, with the amendments which have been adopted and which are now pending, shall be printed, so that we may examine them to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That order will be made.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MORRILL asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1279) relating to the production of grape-brandy; which was read twice by its title, and ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. KERNAN. I am requested by parties in New York to introduce a bill.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to introduce a bill (S. No. 1280) to authorize the New York Land and Ocean Telegraph Company, a corporation under the laws of New York, to buy land and maintain lines of telegraph cables on the Atlantic coast of the United States, connecting the same with Europe; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT UTICA.

Mr. CONKLING submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds be instructed to inquire into the propriety and necessity of completing the public building at Utica, New York, for which the site has been purchased.

PAPERS WITHDRAWN.

On motion of Mr. CLAYTON, it was Ordered, That John Bowles have leave to withdraw his petition and papers from the files of the Senate.

BILL RECOMMITTED.

Mr. WADLEIGH. I move that the bill (S. No. 1110) for the relief of Edwin R. Clarke and the papers in the case be recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs, there being new evidence in relation to the claim.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT TO AN APPRORIATION BILL.

Mr. HARVEY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

BUILDING FOR THE NATIONAL MUSEUM.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask the Senate to take up a bill that will not take more than three or four minutes in relation to the National Museum. It is rather important that this bill should be acted upon that it may go to the House. The bill is one which has been reported by the action of the joint committee of the two Houses, that is to say, of the committee of the Senate and the subcommittee of the House, and meets their unanimous approval. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1252) for the erection of a fire-proof building for the National Museum.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It appropriates $250,000 for the erection of a fire-proof building for the use of the National Museum, three hundred feet square, to be erected under the direction and supervision of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, in accordance with the plan of Major-General M. C. Meigs, now on file with the Joint Committee of Public Buildings and Grounds, on the southwest corner of the grounds of the Smithsonian Institution; the building to be placed west of the Smithsonian Institution, leaving a roadway between it and the latter of not less than thirty feet, with its north front on a line parallel with the north face of the buildings of the Agricultural Department and of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mr. MORRILL. I shall not occupy any time in an explanation of this bill, for I presume every Senator recognizes the prime necessity there is for it. The bill is so carefully guarded that there will be no danger of any further demand upon the Treasury, and I think it will meet the approbation of all who examine it.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOT SPRINGS RESERVATION.

Mr. DORSEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 2382) granting the right of way to the Hot Springs Railroad Company over the Hot Springs reservation in the State of Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate as in Committee of the Whole proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Lands, with an amendment to strike out the preamble of the bill, and all after the enacting clause, and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

That so much of section 5 of an act of June 11, 1870, in relation to the Hot Springs reservation of Arkansas, as provides for the appointment of a receiver by the court, be, and the same is hereby, repealed: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the right of the United States to collect and receive rents already due.

SEC. 2. That it shall be the duty of the President of the United States, upon the passage of this act, to appoint three discreet, competent, and disinterested persons, who shall constitute a board of commissioners, any two of whom shall constitute a quorum, who are hereby authorized to perform and discharge the duties specified by this act, and for that purpose shall meet at Hot Springs, in the State of Arkansas, within thirty days after their appointment, and shall, before entering upon the discharge of their duties, subscribe to the usual oath for civil officers, and shall, at their first meeting, organize by the election of one of their number as chairman of the board, having given ten days' notice of the time and place of meeting in some daily paper published at Hot Springs, which notice shall be continued during the entire session of said board of commissioners, and all the evidence herein provided to be taken by said board shall be taken at Hot Springs.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of said commissioners, after examination of the topography of the reservation, to lay out into convenient squares, blocks, lots, avenues, streets, and alleys, the lines of which shall correspond with the existing boundary-lines of occupants of said reservation as near as may be consistent with the interests of the United States, the following-described lands, to wit: The south half of section 28, the south half of section 29, all of sections 32 and 33, in township 2 south and range 19 west; and the north half of section 4, the north half of section 5, in township 3 south and range 19 west, situate in the county of Garland, and State of Arkansas, and known as the Hot Springs reservation.

SEC. 4. That before making any subdivision of said lands, as described in the preceding section, it shall be the duty of said board of commissioners, under the direction and subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to designate a tract of land included in one boundary, sufficient in extent to include, and which shall include, all the hot or warm springs situate on the lands aforesaid, to embrace, as near as may be, what is known as Hot Springs Mountain, and the same is hereby reserved from sale, and shall remain under the charge of a superintendent, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall prevent the Secretary of the Interior from fixing a special tax on water taken from said springs sufficient to pay for the protection and necessary improvement of the same.

SEC. 5. That it shall be the duty of said commissioners to show, by metes and bounds on the map herein provided for, the parcels or tracts of lands claimed by reason of improvements made thereon or occupied by each and every such claimant and occupant on said reservation; to hear any and all proof offered by such claimants and occupants and the United States in respect to said lands and in respect to the improvements thereon; and to finally determine the right of each claimant or occupant to purchase the same, or any portion thereof, at the appraised value, which shall be fixed by said commissioners: Provided, however, That such claimants and occupants shall file their claims, under the provisions of this act, before said commissioners, within six calendar months after the first sitting of the said board of commissioners, or their claims shall be forever barred; and no claim shall be considered which has accrued since the 24th day of April, 1876.

SEC. 6. That it shall be the duty of said commissioners to fix by appraisement the value of all improvements upon said reservation, and the value of all improvements on the lands reserved herein, or upon lands condemned or taken for the purposes herein named; and to fix the cash value of every and each subdivision that said commissioners shall make of said lands.

SEC. 7. That the said commissioners shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers touching the occupancy or improvements of or on said lands, or any other matter in anywise belonging or appertaining either to the said lands or the improvements thereon; shall have power to examine under oath all witnesses that may come before them; and all testimony shall be reduced to writing, and preserved as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 8. That said commissioners shall have power to remove or cause to be removed all buildings or obstructions upon the said Hot Springs reservation when the same may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, as also all obstructions to streets, alleys, or roads to be laid off, straightened, or widened, as herein provided for.

SEC. 9. That the commissioners shall have power to straighten or widen any of the present streets or alleys in the town of Hot Springs, and to lay off such additional streets, alleys, and roads in said Hot Springs reservation or in the town, before the sale or disposition of any of the property herein mentioned, as the convenience of the public and the interest of the United States may require, and for that purpose may condemn all buildings that they may find necessary to condemn in order to straighten or widen said streets and alleys, or to lay off new streets, alleys, and roads, and also all buildings or improvements on the reservation herein made, and to fix the value on all property thus condemned.

SEC. 10. That it shall be the duty of said commissioners, without delay, to file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior the map and survey herein provided for, with the boundary-lines of each claim clearly marked thereon, and with each division and subdivision traced and numbered, accompanied by a schedule, showing the name of each claimant, and of each lot or parcel of land, the appraised value thereof, numbers to correspond with such claim upon the map; also, all of the evidence taken by them respecting the claimants' possessory right of occupation to any portion of the Hot Springs reservation and their findings in each case; also, their appraisal of each tract or parcel of land, and the improvements thereon; and it shall be the duty of said commissioners to issue a certificate to each claimant, setting forth the amount of land the holder is entitled to purchase, and the valuation fixed thereon, and also showing the character and the valuation fixed upon the improvements of said tract or parcel of land, and to issue a certificate or certificates to all persons whose improvements are condemned, as herein provided, showing the value of said improvements.

SEC. 11. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior, within thirty days after said commissioners file said report and map in his office, to instruct the United States land officers of Little Rock, Arkansas, land district to allow said lands to be entered as hereinafter provided, and to cause a patent to issue therefor; and it shall be the duty of the land officers authorized to sell said lands to give twenty days' public notice in the Little Rock and Hot Springs newspapers that said lands are subject to entry in accordance with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 12. That any claimant or occupant, his heirs or legal representatives, in whose favor said commissioners have adjudicated, shall, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, have the sole right to enter and pay for, at the price fixed by said commissioners, the amount of land the commissioners had adjudged that they were entitled to purchase, at any time within twelve months next after the land officers give the public notice herein required.

SEC. 13. That upon the failure of any claimant or occupant in whose favor the commissioners have adjudged to pay the valuation fixed upon said land within the time and in the manner herein prescribed, then said lands, together with all other lands that no one has an adjudicated right to purchase under this act, shall be sold, by direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to the highest bidder at public sale, at the land office at Little Rock, after notice of such sale has been advertised three months in some newspaper in the town of Hot Springs, and in such other papers as he may designate, said lands and improvements to be sold together; and the proceeds arising from the sale thereof shall be paid to the receiver of public moneys at the land office in Little Rock, Arkansas.

SEC. 14. That any claimant or occupant who does not desire to purchase the lands adjudicated to him or her at the valuation fixed by said commissioners shall have the right to remove any improvements made on said land, at his or her own cost, before the time fixed for the payment for said lands.

SEC. 15. That all parties who do not enter the lands that the commissioners adjudicate they have the right to enter, and who do not remove their improvements before the same are sold at public sale, and all persons whose improvements have been condemned, their assigns or legal representatives shall, after said public sale, present their certificates of appraisement for such improvements to the register of the United States land office at Little Rock, who shall indorse upon each certificate the amount paid for the particular subdivision of land upon which the improvement therein described is situated; and such certificate so indorsed shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who shall certify the same to the Secretary of the Interior; and upon his indorsement the certificate shall be paid out of the fund arising from the sales of lands herein provided for, and covered into the United States Treasury for that purpose by section 16 of this act.

SEC. 16. That the money arising from the sale of the lands shall be paid into the Treasury in the same manner as other moneys arising from the sale of public lands, and held for the purpose herein specified and at the further disposal of Congress; and the money arising from water-rents shall be under the control of the Secretary of the Interior, and expended by him for the purposes hereinbefore stated, an account of which shall be annually rendered to Congress, showing the amount received, the amount expended, and the amount remaining on hand at the end of each fiscal year.

SEC. 17. That the United States marshal for the judicial district of Arkansas in which the Hot Springs may be situated shall execute all processes required to be executed by this act.

SEC. 18. That said commissioners shall hold their offices for the period of one year from the date of appointment, and shall have power to employ competent engineers to make the maps and surveys herein provided for, at a reasonable compensation; to employ a stenographer, who shall also act as clerk, at a compensation of not more than $8 per day; to rent an office and purchase the necessary stationery; and the compensation of said commissioners shall be $10 per day each, all of which shall be paid by the Secretary of the Interior upon the certified vouchers of said commissioners.

SEC. 19. That the right of way be, and the same is hereby, granted to the Hot Springs Railroad Company, a company duly incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Arkansas, to construct, maintain, and operate its line of railroad upon, over, and across the Hot Springs reservation in the State of Arkansas, as follows: Commencing on the east line of the south half of section 33, in township 2 south of the base-line, in range 19 west of the fifth principal meridian, in the county of Garland, and State of Arkansas, at a point about six hundred feet from the southeast corner of said section; thence running up a ravine parallel to and south of the Benton wagon-road, westwardly through said section, to a point where the same will intersect with the Malvern stage-road at a point south of the graveyard on said reservation.

The right of way hereby granted shall consist of a strip of land fifty feet wide on each side of said railroad, measured from the center line thereof, from the point on the east line of said section of land where said railroad enters the same to the terminus of the track of said road: Provided, That said railway company may purchase upon the same terms as individuals land for shops, depots, and other purposes, not exceeding twenty acres: Provided, however, That Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal this section,

Mr. CLAYTON. Would it be in order now to offer amendments to the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An amendment is in order.

Mr. CLAYTON. In section 1, commencing in line 7, I move to strike out the following proviso:

Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the right of the United States to collect and receive rents already due.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to repay to the settlers upon said reservation all rents collected from them by said receiver, and for that purpose a sufficient sum is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

I should like to state the object of the amendment. As is known, this property has been in dispute for many years, probably for forty years. The Government made a reservation of it in 1832, I think. During that period of time persons have visited these springs from all parts of the United States and latterly from all parts of the world to seek the benefit of the healing waters. Of course they had no accommodations there, unless they were provided at their own expense.

Mr. SARGENT. If the friends of this bill want to debate it, it had better go over, because I am anxious to proceed with the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. CLAYTON. I do not want to debate it.

Mr. SARGENT. No objection has been made to the Senator's amendment.

Mr. DORSEY. There is no objection to it.

Mr. CLAYTON. I know there ought to be no objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLAYTON] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. WRIGHT. It may be that there ought not to be any objection to this amendment; but there are some things I should like to understand about it before I can say so for myself. I understand that under the law as it stands at present there has been a receiver appointed, who has been in charge of this property, and he has been receiving the rents in the name of and for the Government. As a matter of course, there has been not a little expense attending the administration of that receivership, and the expense has either been paid by the Government, or it has been deducted from the rent that has been received from time to time. Now, if the Government is to repay all the rents that have been received, then it will follow that the money that the Government has paid out to this receiver will be lost. Is not that true?

Mr. CLAYTON. It will not make any tax on the Government because the money received from the sales under this bill will yield a revenue to the Government. I suppose the expense of collecting these rents may have amounted to $4,000 or $5,000; but the rents themselves are enormous. The people have been required to pay rents for the land they have occupied and for the buildings which they have put on this land. I think there is no other instance in the existence of the Government where the Government has charged settlers on the public domain rent for occupying land, and especially rent upon their own improvements.

Mr. WRIGHT. I understand that by the Supreme Court of the United States it was adjudged that this land belonged to the United States, that it was the property of the United States; and there was provision made in the decree for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of this property as the property of the United States; and there being buildings and tenaments on this property, this receiver received money from them in the form of rents; and he has been paid during the time he discharged his duties a salary. Now, if all the moneys received shall be repaid the settlers, then the Government loses the amount that it has paid the receiver, to begin with.

Mr. CLAYTON. The Government appointed the receiver to take charge of the land, and it would not lose a cent.

Mr. WRIGHT. Then there would have to be an appropriation for the refundment of the amount that has thus been paid, because, as I understand it——

Mr. CLAYTON. The amendment which I have offered provides for that.

Mr. WRIGHT. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask the Senator to yield to allow me to make a suggestion to him.

Mr. WRIGHT. I was speaking to my friend on the other side of the Chamber. As I understand it, there is no provision in this bill that from funds realized by the sale of this property the amount already paid to the receivers shall be refunded, but that the expenses for administering this law shall be paid out of the moneys received from the sale, and as to the money heretofore expended by the Government there is no provision that that should be refunded. I suggest, therefore, that under the amendment as it stands now, there would be a loss to the Government to that extent. Of course I can see that the Senator may answer me by saying that the Government would realize say ten, fifteen, or twenty thousand dollars by the sale of this land, and thus get into their hands more than they have paid the receiver, but they also have the expenses to meet for administering the trust under this law, and if the expense of administering the law in connection with the amount already paid by the receiver should be more than would now be received, then the settlers get all the money back and the Government loses to that extent. I do not think that is the intention.

Mr. CLAYTON. I am willing to have my amendment so amended as to provide that the expense attending the collection of these rents shall first be deducted before restoration takes place. I will modify my amendment so as to read:

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to repay to the settlers upon said reservation, deducting the expense incurred in collecting such rents, all rents collected from them by said receiver; and for that purpose a sufficient sum is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. WRIGHT. As I understand it, this bill has been reported from the Committee on Public Lands, and it is proposed to strike out the first section of the substitute reported from the committee and substitute what the Senator now offers.

Mr. CLAYTON. I only move to strike out the proviso to the first section.

Mr. WRIGHT. I understand that by a decision of the Supreme Court it has been adjudged, as I have already said, that this land belongs to the United States, and the Government has appointed a receiver who has proceeded to execute the trust. The court provided by their decree that this money should be collected and that it belongs to the United States, and the receiver has been acting in the discharge of that trust. Now, the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas proposes in substance to reverse the order which has been made by the Supreme Court of the United States and to determine and decide that this money does not belong to the United States, but shall be repaid to these parties. I have very great doubt as to the correctness of this amendment, to say the least of it.

While I am on the floor I wish to say one thing more, and I say it to my friend who has this bill in charge. I have had no opportunity to examine the bill. I said the other morning when the bill was called up that some matters connected with this subject had been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and were now under consideration by a subcommittee of that committee. It seems that they relate to another and a different phase of this question rather than the one presented by this bill. It can be seen that this bill is a matter of very great importance. It involves the title and disposition of a very valuable property belonging to the United States. I understand that the matter has passed carefully through the hands of the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. SARGENT. I am compelled to call for the regular order. The morning hour has expired, I believe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no regular order.

Mr. DORSEY. I hope the Senator will allow this bill to be passed.

Mr. SARGENT. There is no hope at all of the bill being passed. The Senator from Iowa now has been speaking fifteen minutes and the colleague of the Senator from Arkansas wishes to reply to him, and the Senator himself wishes to discuss the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no unfinished business.

Mr. SARGENT. I move then——

Mr. WEST. I beg pardon of the Chair. I rise to a point of order. There is unfinished business by the understanding, which we may take up and let it go over and then the deficiency bill may come up; but I cannot consent to have the announcement from the Chair that there is no unfinished business.

Mr. DORSEY. I hope the Senator from California will allow fifteen minutes for the conclusion of this bill.

Mr. SARGENT. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. BOUTWELL] has risen and is doubtless desirous to take up another bill; the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WHYTE] desires to take up another bill; and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STEVENSON] desires to take up another bill.

Mr. DORSEY. But this bill is already before the Senate, and it has been read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. After the legislative appropriation bill was passed yesterday no other business was taken up, and therefore there is no unfinished business.

Mr. SARGENT. I move to lay aside this bill for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of the deficiency bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California moves to lay aside the pending and all prior orders for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. WEST. Mr. President, let me call attention to what was agreed upon in the Senate yesterday. This is the language that I addressed to the Senate:

I hope now to obtain the consent of the Senate that that bill, known as the railroad bill, may be laid aside without prejudice to its order of business, as the unfinished business of the Senate until the appropriation bills can be disposed of.

And the Chair decided that there was no objection to that understanding. Therefore I believe the proper course is to call up the railroad bill on every occasion as the unfinished business, and then let it be laid aside in order that the appropriation bills may be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair was not advised of that understanding. Such being the understanding, the Chair will call up the unfinished business which is the railroad bill.

Mr. WEST. Let it come up and then it may go over.

Mr. SARGENT. I have not the slightest objection; but I want to get at the deficiency bill.

Mr. DORSEY. I desire to give notice, while yielding to the Senator from California to let him go on with the deficiency bill, that as soon as that is disposed of I shall again call this bill up—I hope this afternoon, certainly to-morrow morning; and I shall ask the Senate to act upon it one way or the other. This bill has been before the Senate and in committee more than a year. A large number of people, more than four thousand, have suffered, I fancy, beyond what anybody on this floor knows. Three or four or five days ago I called the attention of the Senate to this measure, and said then that I would call it up last Saturday. Of course there were reasons why that could not be done at that time; but the moment the deficiency bill is passed I shall desire the Senate to take it up.

Mr. ALCORN. I suggest to the Senator from Arkansas, with some knowledge of the hardships which his constituents are now undergoing, that he introduce a resolution here suspending the office and duties of receiver of the Hot Springs property and relieve those people from the taxation to which they are now subjected. It is very evident that this bill will not pass at this session of Congress, and he will here interpose fruitlessly to secure the purpose which he has in view. I therefore suggest to him that he introduce a resolution suspending the office of receiver and the collection of rents on that property, and the citizens at that place may come here at a subsequent day and, perhaps, obtain ample justice at the hands of Congress. I think, in truth, that charity demands something of this sort should be done, and I make that suggestion to the Senator from Arkansas. He cannot have this bill passed at the present session, it is very evident.

Mr. DORSEY. I know of no reason why this bill should not pass. I cannot agree with my friend from Mississippi that the bill cannot be passed at this session. I think it will pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from California to postpone the present and all prior orders, to proceed to the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

Mr. WEST. I understand that the Senator from California, after the explanation which I have made, will not press his motion. I ask that the unfinished business be taken up with the understanding that I will waive it upon the same condition that it was laid aside yesterday.

Mr. SARGENT. I will state that after the deficiency bill is disposed of I want to call the attention of the Senate to the naval appropriation bill, and that the Committee on Appropriations will claim the right of way until their business is considered.

Mr. WEST. I shall make no objection, but I do not want the railroad bill to lose its place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California withdraw his motion?

Mr. SARGENT. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business, being Senate bill No. 984, known as the railroad bill, is before the Senate and will be laid aside by general consent to take up the deficiency bill without losing its place.

Mr. WRIGHT. Is it the understanding that the railroad bill shall not lose its place but that it is to be laid aside informally?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The railroad bill is to be laid aside informally.

Mr. WRIGHT. Of course giving place to appropriation bills all the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SARGENT. I move to proceed to the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and prior years, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 22 the following:

To enable the accounting officers of the Treasury to pay the accounts of Egbert C. Sammis, late consul at Stuttgart, as follows: For contingent expenses of consulate for the year ended June 30, 1875, $240.57; for salary for a part of the fiscal year 1873 and for a part of the year 1874, $455.83.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 39 the following:

Assay office at Helena, Montana Territory:

That the unexpended balance of the appropriation for wages of workmen for the assay office at Helena, Montana Territory, for the current fiscal year, be, and the same is hereby, made available for the payment of the contingent expenses of said assay office, not to exceed the $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out lines 55 to 57, inclusive, in the following words:

For official postage-stamps, for the use of the Internal Revenue Office, in transmitting stamps by mail, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 71:

Transportation of United States securities:

For transportation of notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1876, $69,449.25.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 76 the following clause:

Coast Survey:

For repairs of vessels belonging to the Coast Survey, $8,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 83:

TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENTS.

Territory of Arizona:

For amount due Coles Bashford, late secretary of Arizona Territory, for salary, as per certificate of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1876, $385.93.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 90:

Territory of Colorado:

For amount due John L. Routt, late governor of Colorado Territory, for salary, as per certificate of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, being a deficiency for the fiscal year, $1,876.80.

Mr. DAVIS. I am not able without having all the reports before me to tell why these deficiencies take place. Here are several of them, following one another, relating to the different Territories. As I understand, we appropriate each year for salaries and for the expenditures of the territorial governments. I have no special reference to Colorado, but I observe that there are deficiencies in nearly all the Territories. I should like to hear how it is that some of the Territories have deficiencies and others have not. The estimates generally were given for the salaries, as I understand. There may be explanations, but I do not know what they are.

Mr. SARGENT. The deficiency under consideration relating to the Territory of Colorado arose in this manner: Congress provided that the United States judges should hold until their successors, being State officers, were elected and qualified, and made an appropriation down to the 1st day of August, supposing that that would cover the period. The election and qualification, however, of these judges did not take place until the 21st day of November. Consequently, there is a deficiency, and we appropriate to supply that gap. The $6.80 due the governor occurs in the same way. The Senator will observe that these are very small items. In the Territory of Montana, to which I call the attention of the Senator, there is a deficiency for the fiscal year 1876 for legislative expenses of $2,370.97. That arose from the fact that there was a removal of the capital from Virginia City to Helena, and these necessary expenses were incurred for that purpose. Thus, there are different explanations for the different matters arising in this way. We acted only upon the regular estimates of the Department, and excluded all cases except where the officer certified that the amounts were due. In all cases where they certify that the matter was to be examined, while due, we have rejected the case. We have required the accounting officers to act, and have required the Secretary of the Treasury, under his signature, to certify to the correctness of the different items.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, I am very much astonished to find that there are deficiencies coming up here to be covered by appropriation bills; and for the special edification of my friends upon the opposite side, to show their growth in economy, I call their attention to a very important message which was communicated to the Senate and House of Representatives on the 17th day of June, 1876, by the Chief Executive of the nation, styled by highly indorsed authority the greatest living general of the age. I read from Executive Document No. 177, a message of the President of the United States to the Senate and House of Representatives, dated June 17, 1876:

The near approach of a new fiscal year, and the failure of Congress up to this time to provide the necessary means to continue all the functions of government, makes it my duty to call your attention to the embarrassments that must ensue if the fiscal year is allowed to close without remedial action on your part.

Article 1, section 9, of the Constitution declares:

"No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law."

To insure economy of expenditures and security of the public treasure, Congress has from time to time enacted laws to restrain the use of public moneys, except for the specific purpose for which appropriated, and within the time for which appropriated, and to prevent contracting debts in anticipation of appropriate appropriations.

Revised Statutes, section 3679, provides:

"No Department of the Government shall expend, in any one fiscal year, any sum in excess of appropriations made by Congress for that fiscal year, or involve the Government in any contract for the future payment of money in excess of such appropriations."

Section 3732 provides:

"No contract or purchase on behalf of the United States shall be made unless the same is authorized by law or is under an appropriation adequate to its fulfillment, except in the War and Navy Departments, for clothing, subsistence, forage, fuel, quarters, or transportation; which, however, shall not exceed the necessities of the current year."

Section 3678 as follows:

"All sums appropriated for the various branches of expenditure in the public service shall be applied solely to the objects for which they are respectively made, and for no others."

Section 3690 that—

"All balances of appropriations contained in the annual appropriation bills, and made specifically for the service of any fiscal year, and remaining unexpended at the expiration of such fiscal year, shall only be applied to the payment of expenses properly incurred during that year, or to the fulfillment of contracts properly made within that year; and balances not needed for such purposes shall be carried to the surplus fund. This section, however, shall not apply to appropriations known as permanent or indefinite appropriations."

I quote now the language of the President:

The effect of the laws quoted, taken in connection with the constitutional provision referred to, is, as above stated, to prohibit any outlay of public money toward defraying even the current and necessary expenses of Government after the expiration of the year for which appropriated, excepting when those expenses are provided for by some permanent appropriation, and excepting in the War and Navy Departments, under section 3732.

The number of permanent appropriations are very limited, and cover but few of the necessary expenditures of the Government.

They are nearly all, if not quite all, embraced in sections 3687, 3688, and 3689 of the Revised Statutes. That contained in section 3687 is applicable to expenses of collecting the revenue from customs; that in section 3688 to the payment of interest on the public debt; and that in section 3689 to various objects too numerous to detail here.

It will be observed that while section 3679, quoted above, provides that no Department shall in any one fiscal year involve the Government in any contract for the future payment of money in excess of the appropriation for that year, section 3732, also quoted above, confers, by clear implication, upon the heads of the War and Navy Departments full authority, even in the absence of any appropriation, to purchase or contract for clothing, subsistence, forage, fuel, quarters, or transportation not exceeding the necessities for the current year. The latter provision is special and exceptional in its character, and is to be regarded as excluded from the operation of the former more general one. But if any of the appropriation bills above enumerated should fail to be matured before the expiration of the current fiscal year, the Government would be greatly embarrassed for want of the necessary funds to carry on the service. Precluded from expending money not appropriated, the Departments would have to suspend the service, so far as the appropriations for it should have failed to be made.

A careful examination of this subject will demonstrate the embarrassed condition all branches of the Government will be in—and especially the executive—if there should be a failure to pass the necessary appropriation bills before the 1st of July, or otherwise provide.

Now, Mr. President, here is the highest authority in the country, the highest authority in the party which controls this Senate, and this authority says that the heads of Departments have no right or authority to make contracts or incur liabilities in excess of the appropriations expressly provided by law. I am astonished at these deficiencies coming here, in the face of these express declarations and statements from the President quoting the law and quoting arguments to sustain his position.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, the reading which the gentleman has indulged in has been very well applied. I commend to him that kind of literature. I approve of it very thoroughly. If he would follow the advice of the writer of that document in a great many other matters, I have no doubt there would be an improvement in his political course. There is nothing in this bill, as far as I know, that is inconsistent with the principles he has laid down. If there is, the Senator certainly has selected a very poor item upon which to hang his observations. The law of Congress provides that certain judges shall serve out a certain term, and we do not appropriate money enough to pay for that term. The money cannot be taken out of the Treasury unless that appropriation is made. The object of this bill is, considering that they have obeyed the law and filled out that term, now to pay them for it. No Department has contracted that expense, no one has has contracted it except these men that have kept on. Suppose there had been an entire failure of the appropriation bill last year for salaries of Senators and members of the House of Representatives and the Senator up to this time had received no pay, and a deficiency bill was brought forward to pay him his back salary, would he think that the principles to which he has referred would prohibit or would make it immoral or unconstitutional to pass such a law? These cases arise continually. General laws are put on the statute-book imposing duties on the various Departments of the Government, and those general laws prohibit any Department from making a contract for supplies in excess of the appropriations made by Congress. The Constitution does not, however, say anything of the kind. So far as I know, there is no provision here for the payment of any contract in excess of appropriations. Sometimes it happens that there may be a few dollars in excess of an appropriation. It is very difficult to make the expenditures of the Departments come to the exact chalk-line of the appropriations. Frequently there are balances that go into the Treasury under the care which the Departments exercise—and which has been done in all administrations—not to exceed the amount of appropriations, not to come quite up rather than to go beyond them; and that was the case during the past fiscal year, and will be the case at the end of the present fiscal year. There is nothing, so far as I know, in the item under consideration at any rate, to excite the fears of my friend that we are violating the law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 95:

For payment of salaries of the chief-justice and the associate justices of Colorado, from the 1st day of August to the 21st day of November, 1876, $2,750.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 99:

Territory of New Mexico:

For legislative expenses for the Territory of New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 102:

Territory of Wyoming:

For legislative expenses for the Territory of Wyoming, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1876, $180.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 106:

Territory of Montana:

For legislative expenses of the Territory of Montana, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $153.17; and for the fiscal year 1876, $2,370.97; in all, $2,524.14.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 187, to increase the appropriation "For pay of officers and men of the Navy, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877," from $500,000 to $1,400,000.

Mr. DAVIS. On what page is that amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Page 9, line 187.

Mr. DAVIS. Then the bill is not being read through regularly.

Mr. BLAINE. The amendments are being read in their order.

Mr. DAVIS. This bill is not very long, and I would prefer that it should be read through in the regular manner. However, I do not ask the Clerk to go back.

The amendment now pending increases the amount appropriated in the House bill by $900,000. I take it that there is a reason for it or the Senate committee would not have advanced the amount to such a large extent; I should be glad to know what that reason is. I presume it is for the regular salaries; but the Senator having the bill in charge can say.

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to have read a letter of the Secretary of the Navy in regard to this matter. I hope Senators will pay attention to it, because it is a very interesting and careful explanation of the whole matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT.
Washington, February 15, 1877.

SIR: I am informed that the deficiency bill for the current year as it has passed the House of Representatives, while it provides that the officers of the Navy now "on furlough" shall be paid as if on "waiting orders," appropriates only the sum of $500,000 to meet the deficiency in the amount appropriated last year for the pay of the officers and men of the service. Under these circumstances, it is my duty to present to your committee, and through you to Congress, the facts which are necessary to enable them to act understandingly in this matter.

The estimates of the Department last year for the various expenses payable out of the appropriation "pay of the Navy" were for $7,600,000. These estimates were founded upon a carefully prepared table, made up in the office of the acounting officers of the Treasury, showing the amount actually needed under the provisions of existing laws to pay the navy as it was then employed. This table is published in full on pages 15 and 16 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 20, 1876 and a copy is hereto annexed. Notwithstanding this showing, and the estimates founded upon it, the amount appropriated for this purpose for the current year was $5,750,000, or $1,850,000 less than the amount actually estimated for and required.

The law at the same time reduced the number of enlisted men from eighty-five hundred to seventy-five hundred; but this, though a measure of ultimate economy, actually increased the payments for the current year, since our seamen are for the most part paid off at the expiration of their service, and this required the discharge and paying off of one thousand men more than would ordinarially have been discharged and paid off during the year.

Upon the passage of the appropriation bill last year the Department felt constrained, in consideration of the smallness of this appropriation and of the reasons given for its reduction, to take every means authorized by existing laws to bring the expenses of this branch of the service as near as possible to the amount appropriated. To this end, the number of officers on duty was cut down to a point as low as was consistent with the proper employment of the Navy, and all unemployed officers were reduced to the lowest pay known to the law by being placed on furlough, a condition which for many years has been regarded as a punishment. By this harsh and somewhat odious means the Secretary has been able to reduce the necessary expenditures of this appropriation about $300,000, if the furlough is continued to the end of the present fiscal year. But the furlough pay is certainly not adapted to the circumstances and necessities of the present time and cannot now be enforced upon the service as a whole without great hardships and privations, if not absolute injustice, and the House of Representatives has, very properly, I think, provided that these officers shall be paid as if on waiting orders. But in order to pay them and the other officers and men of the service the pay to which they are entitled by law it is necessary that the money should be appropriated by Congress.

By reducing the number of officers on sea pay from eight hundred and twenty on the 1st of January, 1876, to six hundred and forty-nine on the 1st of Janunry, 1877, (a reduction of two hundred and thirteen,) and curtailing every expease where it could be done without injury to the service, the amonnt required for this year has been further reduced about $300,000, so that the amount of money actually necessary to pay the charges coming upon the appropriation "pay of the Navy" for the current year, under the provisions of existing laws, if the officers remain as they are, is, as near as can be ascertained, $7,000,000, and if the furloughed officers are to be paid as if on waiting orders $300,000 more will be required, making in all $7,300,000, or $1,550,000 more than the amount appropriated. I have annexed hereto a detailed statement of the number of officers on the Navy list on the 1st of January, 1877, with the number on each rate of pay at that time, and the actual amount payable per annum to each at that rate and the aggregate amount required for all these expenses for one year. This amount is a little over $7,000,000, which, with the $300,000 to make up the difference between furlough and waiting-orders pay, will make the sum of $7,300,000.

The appropriation "pay of the Navy" is not an appropriation upon which the department can economize. The number of offices is fixed by existing laws, and their pay is also fixed, and becomes due, day by day, by law, and is required for their daily support at home and abroad. The name, rank, and duty of every officer of the Navy are to be found in the Navy Register, and the "Pay Table," showing the amount of each officer's yearly pay, is also to be found on the third page of the same book. The amount required for the pay of the officers can be ascertained by a simple sum in arithmetic, and by adding the amount necessary to pay 7,500 men at $320 per year, and the other incidental expenses directed by law, the whole amount may easily be found; and it certainly needs no argument to show that a requirement of $7,300,000 cannot be discharged with $5,750,000, nor a deficiency of $1,550,000 be met by an appropriation of $500,000.

It is proper that I should also remind you that a large number of our officers and men are now serving abroad on distant stations, in accordance with the policy of our Government and the purposes for which navies are established and maintained; and that unless a sufficient sum is appropriated for their pay they will not only be left without their daily support in foreign ports, but the Department will have no means of protecting the credit of the Government by payment of the drafts drawn to meet their expenses; and that if Congress should fail to make an adequate appropriation for this purpose it will be the obvious duty of the Secretary of the Navy, whoever he may then be, to bring our ships on foreign stations home at once.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

GEO. M. ROBESON,
Secretary of the Navy.

Hon. WILLIAM WINDOM,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations, U. S. Senate.

Mr. SARGENT. It would not be an adequate remedy in this case to bring our ships home from foreign stations. To be sure, our gallant officers and seamen should not be left abroad in a beggared condition, but at home they would not receive the pay which the law intends that they should have, and would be compelled to rely upon the charity of friends. Therefore the alternative which the Secretary points out would be a most painful one, but the least he could do would be to order all ships that are abroad home, in order that the officers and seamen might be among their friends, and, if they were compelled to beg, might not be among strangers and disgracing our country abroad.

By the lists which I hold in my hands, referred to in this letter, it will be shown as plain as a sum in simple addition that the amount that is required by the Secretary of the Navy to pay the officers and seamen is absolutely necessary. The Committee on Appropriations, knowing that the sum was large, have done all they could to make every allowance, to figure down all that they could, to reduce the amount to the lowest possible point; and we bring the deficiency down to $1,400,000. The House assumed that there was a deficiency and gave the sum of $500,000, but upon what principle it would be impossible to ascertain, I think. In fact the debates cast no light upon it. It seems to be an arbitrary figure. It is impossible to pay $2,000,000 of bills with $500,000 appropriation; that is obvious, and there is no figuring that can be done by the Secretary of the Navy which would reach that point.

I ask to have published in the RECORD, as part of the showing in this case, the tables which I send to the Clerk's desk; one a statement showing the amount required to pay officers of the Navy, as they are borne upon the Navy Register, January 1, 1877; the other a careful statement showing what would be the compensation of all the officers of the Navy, if they were on sea duty; what their compensation if they were on shore duty; what if they were on leave or waiting orders, and what if they were on furlough.

Statement showing amount required to pay officers of the Navy as they are borne upon the Navy Register, January 1, 1877.

	Sea pay.			Other duty pay.			Furlough pay.
	No.	Pay.	Amount.	No.	Pay.	Amount.	No.	Pay.	Amount.
Admiral				1	$13,000	$13,000
Vice-admiral				1	8,000	8,000
Rear-admirals	4	$6,000	$24,000	5	5,000	25,000	3	$2,000	$6,000
Commodores	1	5,000	5,000	13	4,000	52,000	8	1,500	12,000
chiefs of bureaus				3	5,000	15,000
Captains	10	4,500	45,000	19	3,500	66,500	20	1,400	28,000
chief of bureau				1	5,000	5,000
Commanders	20	3,500	70,000	41	3,000	123,000	29	1,150	33,350
Lieutenant-commanders	27	3,000	81,000	40	2,600	104,000	19	1,100	20,900
Lieutenants, after five years	89	2,600	231,400	51	2,200	112,200	30	900	27,000
first five years	56	2,400	134,400	32	2,000	64,000	22	800	17,600
Masters, after five years	1	2,000	2,000
first five years	64	1,800	115,200	20	1,500	30,000	15	600	9,000
Ensigns	27	1,200	32,400	21	1,000	21,000	25	400	10,000
Midshipmen	70	1,000	70,000				8	300	2,400
Medical directors	2	4,400	8,800
chief of bureau				1	5,000	5,000
after twenty years				10	4,000	40,000	2	1,500	3,000
Medical inspectors	3	4,400	13,200
after twenty years				6	4,000	24,000	1	1,500	1,500
fourth five years				5	3,600	18,000
Surgeons:
third five years	4	3,500	14,000	7	3,200	22,400	6	1,300	7,800
second five years	4	3,200	12,800	9	2,800	25,200	2	1,200	2,400
first five years	6	2,800	16,800	7	2,400	16,800	5	1,000	5,000
Passed Assistant Surgeons:
after five years	11	2,200	24,200	11	2,000	22,000	12	850	10,200
first five years	1	2,000	2,000	7	1,800	12,600	3	750	2,250
Assistant Surgeons	25	1,700	42,500	13	1,400	18,200	12	500	6,000
Pay Directors:
chief of bureau				1	5,000	5,000
after twenty years				3	4,000	12,000	5	1,500	7,500
fourth five years				2	3,600	7,200	2	1,400	2,800
Pay Inspectors	2	4,400	8,800
fourth five years				9	3,600	32,400	2	1,400	2,800
Paymasters, fleet	2	4,400	8,800
third five years	3	3,500	10,500	17	3,200	54,400	2	1,300	2,600
second five years	3	3,200	9,600	9	2,800	25,200	5	1,200	6,000
first five years	2	2,800	5,600	4	2,400	9,600	3	1,000	3,000
Passed Assistant Paymasters:
after five years	8	2,200	17,600	3	2,000	6,000	7	850	5,950
first five years	5	2,000	10,000	4	1,800	7,200	3	750	2,250
Assistant Paymasters:
after five years	8	1,900	15,200	1	1,600	1,600	2	600	1,200
first five years	4	1,700	6,800	4	1,400	5,600	1	500	500
Chief engineers:
chief of bureau				1	5,000	5,000
fleet	5	4,400	22,000
after twenty years				5	4,000	20,000	2	1,500	3,000
fourth five years				15	3,600	54,000	4	1,400	5,600
third five years	4	3,500	14,000	6	3,200	19,200	2	1,300	2,600
second five years	6	3,200	19,200	8	2,800	22,400	1	1,200	1,200
first five years	7	2,800	19,600	2	2,400	4,800	2	1,000	2,000
Passed assistant engineers:
after five years	19	2,200	41,800	26	2,000	52,000	20	850	17,000
first five years	10	2,000	20,000	10	1,800	18,000	12	750	9,000
Assistant engineers:
after five years	4	1,900	7,600	4	1,600	6,400	4	600	2,400
first five years	20	1,700	34,000				9	500	4,500
Chaplains:
after five years	1	2,800	2,800	6	2,300	13,800	8	950	7,600
first five years	1	2,500	2,500	4	2,000	8,000	4	800	3,200
Professors of mathematics:
after fifteen years				3	3,500	10,500
third five years				4	3,000	12,000
first five years				5	2,400	12,000
Secretaries, (admiral and vice-admiral)				2	2,500	5,000
Naval constructors:
chief of bureau				1	5,000	5,000
third five years				1	3,700	3,700
second five years				4	3,400	13,600
first five years				6	3,200	19,200

Statement showing amount required to pay officers of the Navy, &c.—Continued.

	Sea pay.			Other duty pay.			Furlough pay.
	No.	Pay.	Amount.	No.	Pay.	Amount.	No.	Pay.	Amount.
Assistant naval constructors:
second four years	.....	.....	.....	2	$2,200	$4,400	.....	.....	.....
first four years	.....	.....	.....	3	2,000	6,000	.....	.....	.....
Civil engineers:
after fifteen years	.....	.....	.....	1	3,500	3,500	.....	.....	.....
second five years	.....	.....	.....	4	2,700	10,800	.....	.....	.....
first five years	.....	.....	.....	5	2,400	12,000	.....	.....	.....
Warrant officers:
after twelve years	18	$1,800	$32,400	41	1,600	65,600	32	$600	$19,200
fourth three years	6	1,600	9,600	4	1,300	5,200	5	500	2,500
third three years	11	1,400	15,400	7	1,300	9,100	1	450	450
second three years	15	1,300	19,500	22	1,000	22,000	12	400	4,800
first three years	18	1,200	21,600	5	900	4,500	6	350	2,100
Mates	16	900	14,400	27	700	18,900	3	250	750
Cadet midshipmen	.....	.....	.....	256	500	128,000	.....	.....	.....
Cadet engineers	19	500	9,500	71	500	35,500	.....	.....	.....
Volunteer officers:
acting master	1	2,000	2,000	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
acting ensign	1	1,200	1,200	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
passed assistant surgeons	1	2,000	2,000	.....	.....	.....	2	750	1,500
assistant surgeons	4	1,700	6,800	6	1,400	8,400	9	500	4,500
Active list as borne on Register January 1, 1877	649	.....	1,355,500	948	.....	1,647,600	392	.....	332,900

Amount required to pay officers on the retired list.

Grade in which retired.	No.	Pay.	Amount.
Rear Admirals	38	$4,500	$171,000
Commodores	18	3,750	67,500
Captains	12	3,375	40,500
Commanders	19	2,625	49,875
Lieutenant-Commanders	15	2,250	33,750
Lieutenants	17	1,950	33,150
Masters	15	1,500	22,500
Ensigns	5	1,050	5,250
Midshipmen	2	750	1,500
Medical and Pay Directors and Inspectors, and Chief Engineers	23	3,300	75,900
Surgeons and Paymasters	19	3,150	59,850
Passed Assistant Surgeons, Paymasters, and Engineers	18	1,650	29,700
Assistant Surgeons, Paymasters, and Engineers	32	1,425	45,606
Warrant Officers	38	1,350	51,300
Chaplains	7	2,100	14,700
Professors of Mathematics	4	2,625	10,500
Naval Constructors	4	3,150	12,600
	286		725,175

RECAPITULATION.

	No.	Amount.
Officers on sea pay	649	$1,355,500
Officers on other-duty pay, (including 327 cadet midshipmen and engineers at Naval Academy)	948	1,647,600
Officers on furlough pay	392	332,900
Officers on retired list	286	725,175
Officers whose nanes are not borne on the Navy Register, embracing secretaries to commanding officers of squadrons and Naval Academy, clerks to commanding officers of squadrons and vessels, fleet paymasters, paymasters of vessels, at inspections, navy-yards and stations, &c.	.....	199,400
Enlisted men and appointed petty officers	7,500	2,400,000
Mileage, extra pay to men enlisting under honorable discharge, exchange, &c.	.....	350,000
		7,010,575

Officers on sea pay, January 1, 1876	862
Officers on other-duty pay, January 1, 1876	887
Officers on leave or waiting-orders pay, January 1, 1876	208

	No.	At sea.		On shore duty.		On leave or waiting orders.		On furlough.
Admiral	1	$13,000	$13,000	$13,000	$13,000	$13,000	$13,000	$6,500
Vice-admirals	1	9,000	9,000	8,000	8,000	7,000	7,000	3,500
Rear admirals	12	6,000	72,000	5,000	60,000	4,000	48,800	24,000
Commodores	25	5,000	125,000	4,000	100,000	3,000	75,000	37,500
Captains	50	4,500	225,000	3,500	175,000	2,800	140,000	70,000
Commanders	90	3,500	315,000	3,000	270,000	2,300	207,000	103,500
Lieutenant-commanders	86	3,000	258,000	2,600	223,600	2,200	189,200	94,600
Lieutenants:
after five years	170	2,600	442,000	2,200	374,000	1,800	306,000	153,000
first five years	110	2,400	264,000	2,000	220,000	1,600	176,000	88,000
Masters:
after five years	1	2,000	2,000	1,700	1,700	1,400	1,400	700
after first five years	99	1,800	178,200	6,500	147,500	1,200	118,800	59,400
Ensigns	73	1,200	87,600	1,000	73,000	800	58,400	29,200
Midshipmen	78	1,000	78,000	800	62,400	600	46,800	23,400
Medical and pay directors and medical and pay inspectors, and chief engineers ranking with commanders	81	4,400	356,400	4,000	324,000	3,000	273,000	136,500
Surgeons:
third five years	17	3,500	59,500	3,200	54,400	2,600	44,200	22,100
second five years	15	3,200	48,000	2,800	42,000	2,400	36,000	18,000
first five years	18	2,800	50,400	2,400	43,200	2,000	36,000	18,000
Passed assistant surgeons:
after five years	34	2,200	72,600	2,000	66,000	1,700	56,100	28,050
first five years	11	2,000	22,000	1,800	19,800	1,500	16,500	8,250
Assistant surgeons	50	1,700	85,000	1,400	70,000	1,000	50,000	25,000
Paymasters:
third five years	24	3,500	84,000	3,200	72,000	2,600	62,400	31,200
second five years	17	3,200	54,400	2,800	47,600	2,400	40,800	20,400
first five years	9	2,800	25,200	2,400	21,600	2,000	18,000	9,00
Past assistant paymasters:
after five years	18	2,200	39,600	2,000	36,000	1,700	30,600	15,300
first five years	12	2,000	24,000	1,800	21,600	1,500	18,000	9,000
Assistant paymasters:
after five years	11	1,900	20,900	1,600	17,600	1,200	13,200	6,600
first five years	9	1,700	15,300	1,400	12,600	1,000	9,000	4,500
Chief engineers:
fourth five years	7	4,200	29,400	4,000	28,000	3,000	21,000	10,500
third five years	12	3,500	42,000	3,200	38,400	2,600	31,200	15,600
second five years	15	3,200	48,000	2,800	42,000	2,400	36,000	18,000
first five years	11	2,800	30,800	2,400	26,400	2,000	22,000	11,000
Past assistant engineers:
after five years	65	2,200	143,000	2,000	130,000	1,700	110,500	56,250
first five years	32	2,000	64,000	1,800	57,600	1,500	48,000	24,000

Statement showing amount required to pay officers of the Navy, &c.—Continued.

	No.	At sea.		On shore duty.		On leave or waiting orders.		On furlough.
Assistant engineers:
after five years	12	1,900	$22,800	$1,600	$19,200	$1,200	$14,400	$7,200
first five years	29	1,700	49,300	1,400	40,600	1,000	29,000	14,500
Chaplains:
after five years	15	2,800	42,000	2,300	34,500	1,900	28,500	14,250
first five years	9	2,500	22,300	2,000	18,000	1,600	14,400	7,200
Professors:
after fifteen years	3	3,500	10,500	3,500	10,500	2,600	7,800	3,900
third five years	4	3,000	12,000	3,000	12,000	2,100	8,400	4,200
first five years	5	2,400	12,000	2,400	12,000	1,500	7,500	3,750
secretaries Admiral and Vice-Admiral	2	2,500	5,000	2,500	5,000	2,500	5,000	2,500
Constructors:
third five years	2	3,700	7,400	3,700	7,400	2,700	5,400	2,700
second five years	4	3,400	13,600	3,400	13,600	2,400	9,600	4,800
first five years	6	2,200	19,200	3,200	19,200	2,200	13,200	6,600
Assistant constructors:
second four years	2	2,200	4,400	2,200	4,400	1,700	3,400	1,700
first four years	3	2,000	6,000	2,000	6,000	1,500	4,500	2,250
Civil engineers:
after fifteen years	1	3,500	3,500	3,500	3,500	2,600	2,600	1,300
second five years	4	2,700	10,800	2,700	10,800	1,800	7,200	3,600
first five years	5	2,400	12,000	2,400	12,000	1,500	7,500	3,750
Warrant officers:
after twelve years	91	1,800	163,800	1,600	145,600	1,200	109,200	54,600
fourth three years	15	1,600	24,000	1,300	19,500	1,000	15,000	7,500
third three years	19	1,400	26,600	1,300	24,700	900	17,100	8,550
second three years	49	1,300	63,700	1,000	49,000	800	39,200	19,600
first three years	29	1,200	34,800	900	26,100	700	20,300	10,150
mates	46	900	41,400	700	32,200	500	23,000	11,500
cadet midshipmen and engineers	327	500	163,500	500	163,500	.....	163,500	81,750
cadet engineers, (graduates)	19	500	9,500	500	9,500	500	9,500	4,750
Volunteers:
acting master	1	2,000	2,000	1,700	1,700	1,400	1,400	700
ensign	1	1,200	1,200	1,000	1,000	800	800	400
past assistant surgeons	3	2,000	6,000	1,800	5,400	1,500	4,500	2,250
assistant surgeons	19	1,700	32,300	1,400	26,600	1,000	19,000	9,500
	1,989	.....	4,205,100	.....	3,632,500	.....	2,950,000	1,475,000
Officers on retired list	.....	.....	725,175	.....	725,175	.....	725,175	725,175
Secretaries and clerks not borne on Register	.....	.....	199,400	.....	199,400	.....	199,400	199,400
Enlisted men and appointed petty officers	.....	.....	2,400,000	.....	2,400,000	.....	2,400,000	2,400,000
Mileage, &c	.....	.....	350,000	.....	350,000	.....	350,000	350,000
	.....	.....	7,879,675	.....	7,307,075	.....	6,624,575	5,149,575

In submitting the naval appropriation bill from the committee of conference at the last session of Congress, I called attention to the fact that the estimates required $7,600,000, and that those estimates were based upon proper calculations, taking the number of men and the salary allowed to each, and that by that bill there was an allowance of only $5,750,000, or, in other words, $1,850,000, left entirely unprovided for. I then asked Senators if it was proposed that the men who had periled their lives in defense of their country, the men who had become illustrious for their services to the country in our Navy, were to be left to starvation. I know the sentiment of the Senate was not in favor of this, but it was thought and said at that time that the matter would be made good and must be made good in a deficiency bill.

Furthermore, in making that statement to the Senate, I said that it was the view of the House conferees that the Navy could be put upon furlough pay; that there should be no more leave pay or waiting-orders pay, but that officers not actively employed should be put upon furlough pay; and they insisted that this would make a reduction sufficiently large to cover these amounts. In fact, the Secretary carried out that idea which was insisted upon by the House conferees, and has so far as possible used the furlough pay; but in his annual report to Congress at this session he shows the injustice of this system of applying that which has heretofore been treated as a punishment to meritorious officers. The House of Representatives, seeing the force of this logic and perhaps convinced by the applications of officers themselves who were subjected to this semi-punishment, made an indefinite appropriation to cover the difference between waiting-orders pay and furlough pay since the 1st day of September, 1876, the time that that furlough pay went into operation; but they make no provision for the remainder of the year; and by the careful calculation we have made upon this matter we find that that indefinite appropriation will amount to $150,000, by no means bridging over the million and a half of dollars which is necessary for the matter, but only 10 per cent. of the amount. We have taken that 10 per cent. and deducted it from the million and a half, leaving the $1,400,000, which we recommend.

The Secretary of the Navy stated upon this matter in his annual report:

> But however small the appropriations may be, it is nevertheless the duty of the Department to reduce the expenses of the service upon the same scale, as far as it can be done within the provisions of existing laws. This it has endeavored to do, though it is not often economical nor always possible to confine the expenses of a military establishment within fixed and unyielding limits. This is especially the case with the naval service, scattered all over the globe, often at the mercy of the natural elements, and always liable to international conditions, which neither the Department nor the Government can foresee, for which they are not responsible, and which they can neither direct nor control. In endeavoring to adapt itself to this necessity, the Department has been crippled in carrying on much important work which was already in progress and which is rendered more expensive by this delay; and it has also been constrained to put in force upon the service generally the provisions of law which authorized it to place officers on furlough pay. The power of Congress to limit the appropriations for "pay" to the requirements of this provision of existing law and the power and duty of the Department, when so limited, to put the provision in force will hardly be questioned by any one who can bring to the consideration of the subject an unbiased legal judgment.
>
> That the intent of Congress was so to limit the appropriations is unquestionable, in view of their statements, debates, and actions at the time, and of the fact that they were fully informed that the appropriations made upon this principle would impose upon the Department the duty of carrying out the spirit of their legislation, as far as it could be done under the law as it stood on the statute-book, rather than to make a deficiency by disregarding their action and its intent. The "pay" provided by these provisions, however, was not adapted to the circumstances and necessities of the present times, and they had grown obsolete in practice, except for the purpose of punishment; and whatever was their original intent, they cannot now be enforced upon the service as a whole without great inconvenience and privation to officers and their families, entailing, in many instances, personal hardship which, in the case of the deserving, amounts almost to absolute injustice.
>
> You are fully aware how disagreeable this duty was to the Department; but you understood, also, how it had no alternative but to discharge it. Burdensome as its effect has been to the naval service, I am gratified to be able to say that it has been received by the officers generally with dignity and courage. There has been some fault-finding and some foolish criticism; but the fault-finding, as far as I am informed, has been confined to those who have been least affected, and who, in the present as in the past, have the least cause to complain of the favor of the Government or the action of the Department. Those who are charged with the burdens of official duty must expect always to meet the criticism of that class who, without consideration or responsibility themselves, are ever ready to question the motives and actions of others.
>
> After careful consideration of this subject, being convinced that Congress when they fully understand it will have no real desire to withhold from any branch of the service the pay which would accrue to it under the ordinary operations of the laws and customs governing the action of the Department, and will not wish to deprive well-deserving officers, whose lives are consecrated to their country's service and to whom no personal fault is imputed, of the means for the proper support and education of their families, I have, besides the ordinary estimates for the next fiscal year, submitted an additional one for the sum of $1,550,000, to supply the inevitable deficiency in the "pay" appropriation, and to enable the Department to rescind its order placing all unemployed officers on "furlough-pay," and to make up to those who have been or may be so reduced, without fault on their part, the amount of pay which they would otherwise have received. Congress will be earnestly pressed to make this provision, and if they do so the Department will have great gratification in carrying it out; otherwise the service and the Department will have no alternative but to submit to the deficiency and the reduction which it entails.

This amendment proposed by the committee not only repairs this difficulty, which is so well stated by the Secretary, but it makes provision for the remainder of the fiscal year. The $500,000 appropriated by the House, with their indefinite appropriation, will pay the expense for the pay of officers and men down to the middle of April. What is to become of the officers of the Navy after that time, down to the 1st of July, when the regular appropriations come to be applied? Of course they are to remain entirely without their pay. The law fixes the amount of their pay, fixes the number of the officers, and it seems to me that it is as plain as any sum in arithmetic that we must make the appropriation. If we think the pay of officers is too great, if these men do not earn the amount, then by some careful system we must reduce the pay; but, the law standing as it is, the appropriation must be made. Otherwise we repudiate obligations to a very meritorious class of officers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 198:

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

Surveying public lands:

Surveying public lands in Oregon: Amount due Jesse Applegate for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1871 and prior years, $342.01.

Mr. DAVIS. This is one of a class of claims in this bill—I do not know how many, but probably twenty or more—and one explanation perhaps will cover them all. This particular one is for the year 1871 and prior years. I should be glad to hear from the Senator having charge of the bill how it is that this deficiency occurred and why it has been standing five or six years without any provision having been made for it.

I want to say here that the officers of the Government ought to learn to keep, and they should be compelled to keep, within the law, and not constantly exceed it by their expenditures. There are, as I have said, perhaps twenty deficiencies running along here now, one after another. One explanation probably will answer for the most of them; but there certainly ought to be a stop to officers constantly, almost in every instance, exceeding their appropriations. If this is allowed to go on, and we make it up whenever it comes up in a deficiency bill, we may just as well say at once, "Go along and expend what you think proper and we will foot the bill in the end." This practice ought to be stopped, and I hope that Congress and the officers of the Government in future will stop it. I am not objecting especially to what is here referred to. I have no doubt the Government owes the money, and I shall make no particular opposition to the amendment, but I want it to get to the ears of those having charge of the public expenditures that they ought to stop when they get to the end of their appropriations. We saw that the Government Printing Office, the other day, would not print a bill, would not print anything to come here to lie upon our tables, because the appropriation for the public printing was exhausted. If that was carried out in all the Departments of the Government, we should not have this deficiency bill so large as it is, and in many instances be compelled to provide for deficiencies that have slept for five or six years and then come up for payment.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, the items here under consideration are not necessarily in excess of appropriations. A contract under the law, in every sense regular, is given for the survey of five or six townships in a region, for instance in Oregon, where there may be mountains, where there may be lakes, or something of that kind, and the townships are necessarily fractional, or a part of them, and just how much land may be contained in those townships cannot be known until after the survey. A contract is entered into with a surveyor to survey those townships, and an estimate, as near as can be arrived at, is made to the Department of the amount that will cover the work which he will perform. In one-half of the cases, or more probably, the amount which it is estimated it will cost is greater, and then he is paid the less amount and we never hear of it again. In the other case the amount is a little larger perhaps than was called for and then he comes in with his bill, which he is just as much entitled to be paid as any portion of his compensation. Meanwhile the time of the appropriation may have gone by. These surveys are made in one fiscal year; the next fiscal year there may be some trouble about a line, to know whether it was run correctly.

You will find, in one of these amendments an appropriation for expenses incurred in examining surveys, amounting to $110, I think. Some dispute arises between the Land Office and the surveyor whether the work has been done exactly in accordance with the requirements of the contract, and they will not pay him until he satisfies them fully that he has done his work just as required. Meanwhile the appropriation may have lapsed, and it is necessary to provide for the payment of the amount in a deficiency bill. These are small items, as you will find in looking over the bill, that arise in the way I have stated. In some cases where the work is quite large, embracing a number of townships, or where it embraces the lines between States and Territories, the amount of excess may be considerably more; but I do not understand that it arises by exceeding the amount of the appropriation by the Department.

Mr. DAVIS. I understand that these contracts are made by the rod or mile, and not by the mountain or lake. Therefore, when they know how many rods or miles are to be surveyed, they know what amount of money they have to cover that. The contracts are made, as I understand, not by the township, but by the mile, and the work is paid for by the mile. They can stop when they get to the boundary agreed on.

Mr. SARGENT. But they contract to survey certain townships. They do not subdivide that portion of the township that is not to be surveyed into sections and quarter-sections, provided they are fractional. If they did, that would cost the Government a great deal more. Suppose it be a lake, suppose the estimate is made that the lake will take off one half the township, when it will take off only a quarter or a third, they do not want to leave a botched piece of work, and the estimates for an exact calculation are not in the Department and cannot be until the work is completed.

Mr. DAVIS. I do not understand that a lake or a mountain will have anything to do with the estimates of the Department at all. It is calculated at so much per rod or so much per mile.

Mr. SARGENT. They do not run the line across the lake; but if the estimate supposed is for two miles across and it turns out to be but one mile, the surveyor would be paid for only one mile.

Mr. DAVIS. There are no estimates of that kind, so far as I know anything about the matter. A contract is made with a surveyor to survey so many rods or so many miles at so much per rod or mile.

Mr. WITHERS. That is not the way I understand it from the explanation given to the committee, and we endeavored to procure the fullest information possible on the subject. I was informed that the system adopted in the survey of the public lands would be that the surveyor-general would give a contract to some individual to survey so many townships. They assume an arbitrary estimate of the amount the surveys will reach in a township and generally assume a quantity, less of course than it would be if the whole could be surveyed. For example, if the surveys of certain townships would aggregate say $6,000, they would make the contract with the party to do $5,000 worth of surveying in this township, supposing that $5,000 would cover the surveys in the township. In some instances this $5,000, if there be much loss of ground, will more than pay for all the surveys in it. Then the balance is turned into the Treasury. If there be little loss of ground it will not pay, and when the surveys are finally paid there will be a deficiency; but it is impossible that the surveyor can know every time he closes a line that he can sit down then and make a calculation of how much it will come to. He goes on and completes the survey, and, when completed, he adds up the amount of the completed work; and if it is less than the amount he contracted for, the surplus is turned into the Treasury; if more, he shows the amount of work he has done; it has then to be approved by the surveyor-general and sent to the General Land Office, and must be then recommended by the Department and reported to Congress before it can be paid for.

Mr. DAVIS. I do not want to prolong the debate, for I am as anxious as any Senator can be to proceed with the bill; but neither of the Senators in charge of it who were on the subcommittee has yet explained to my satisfaction how these deficiencies occur. It is a very well known fact that we every year appropriate a certain amount to each one of these Territories. It has been the habit, and is the habit because the law allows it, that if a little more or a little less is surveyed this year it goes on and is paid for next year. They will not stop on the line of a township because annual appropriations are made here; but there is no reason in my judgment why these deficiencies should come in. As I said, I do not want to continue the debate and I shall say nothing more on the subject.

Mr. WITHERS. If the fiscal year expired, that is if the 30th of June came before the contract was entirely completed, the money then appropriated would go into the Treasury. That is the statement made to the committee, at any rate.

Mr. DAVIS. If you examine into the subject, you will find very little money going into the Treasury. It is going out of the Treasury all the time.

Mr. WITHERS. I will state to my friend that a portion of these amounts that he has criticised represents money which was appropriated for that very purpose, but not having been consumed at the end of the fiscal year it has been turned into the Treasury, and it is proposed by this bill to re-appropriate it.

Mr. STEVENSON. I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his point of order.

Mr. STEVENSON. I submit to the Chair that this is a private claim, and not a just provision for any deficiency. I do not think some private claims due since 1870 and 1871 should be preferred by being put on deficiency appropriation bills, while others have to come here and wait their time in Congress and in the Departments. I submit that this is a private claim, and it has often been ruled that similar amendments were not in order on general appropriation bills.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, this is not in any sense a private claim. It is an expense incurred for which there was an appropriation made, a regular estimate of deficiency, by the Secretary of the Treasury. It originated on account of an appropriation made in an appropriation bill, and is for work proper to be done by law. It is not a claim for damages by this party; it is not an unliquidated matter; it is a distinct, clear application of the law, and is supported by a regular estimate.

Mr. STEVENSON. I do not know that I could refer to the place in the RECORD, but I have seen the rule enforced twenty times on claims similar to this one. This was a balance due this man for work performed. It is a demand for money due by the Government and it is liquidated, but still it is a private demand and it is a personal demand.

Now, sir, without going into the merits of this amendment I am opposed to this sort of thing. Unless the Senate of the United States will stop paying deficiencies, going back five, six, seven, eight, and nine years, you never will know, and you never can know what the expenditures of the Government are.

Mr. BLAINE. Will the honorable Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. STEVENSON. Certainly.

Mr. BLAINE. Did he ever know of what would properly be termed a private claim being recommended in a regular estimate from the Treasury Department?

Mr. STEVENSON. I have known of some that were recommended which the President of the Senate has held to be private claims, and I can turn the attention of the Senator from Maine to several cases of that sort. I have had some recommended, and they have been ruled out of the bill.

Mr. SARGENT. Not in the regular estimates?

Mr. STEVENSON. Not in the regular estimates. But these are not in the regular estimates.

Mr. SARGENT. These are in the regular official estimates.

Mr. BLAINE. The regular, formal estimates.

Mr. STEVENSON. I am opposed at any rate to loading down the general appropriation bills with amendments of this character.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair overrules the point of order. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 205:

Amount due Jesse Applegate and D. W. Applegate for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1871, and prior years, $471.37.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 210:

Amount due W. H. Byars for expenses incurred in examining surveys, in order to test the accuracy of the work under instructions from the surveyor-general of Oregon, March 13, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873, $238.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 216:

Amount due Howard and Huffer, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873, $108.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator from California to explain that. I do not find that item in the estimates.

Mr. SARGENT. This amendment was offered in the Senate by the Senator from Oregon, who is not now here, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations. It was referred with this other class of cases to the Senator from Virginia, [Mr WITHERS,] who examined them all in the subcommittee and reported them from the subcommittee to the general committee. I have no letter from the Secretary of the Interior bearing upon that particular item. You observe it is very small; it is $108. The item is hardly sufficient in amount to stand upon. It seems to be of the same general character with those we have just adopted, and being vouched for by the Senator from Oregon, we inserted it in the amendments reported by the committee.

Mr. WITHERS. I see that almost all these cases here which I examined were in one of the estimates contained either in Executive documents 18 or 19, one being a re-apportionment of money already appropriated and turned back into the Treasury, and the other estimates of appropriations sent to us by the heads of the different Departments. There are two or three exceptions. My memory is not sufficiently clear now to enable me to state positively with regard to the particular amendment under consideration. The items are in all cases, however, substantiated by documentary proof sent up by the Department having the matter in charge, stating that the case had been audited there and the amount found to be justly due. This general statement will cover all the cases of this class relative to surveys of public lands.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 220:

Amounts due A. Gesner and John S. Kincaid, for surveys executed under contracts with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $1,073.42.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 225:

Amounts due J. W. Meldrum, H. Meldrum, W. H. Odell, B. F. Vaughn, and N. O. Walden for surveys executed under contracts with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875, $2,618.35.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 231:

Amount due E. P. Henderson, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875, $931.79.

The amendment was agreed to,

The next amendment was to insert after line 235:

Amount due William H. Odell, deputy surveyor, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1876, $1,854.98.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 240:

For amount due J. H. Huffer for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $140.31.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 244:

For amount due F. W. Colbrook, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $187.24.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 249:

For compensation of clerks and draughtsmen in the office of the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 253:

Surveying public lands in California: Amount due W. H. Carleton, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of California, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1871 and prior years, $103.24.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 258;

For compensation of clerks and draughtsmen in the office of the surveyor-general of California, being a deficiency for the fiscal 1877, $2,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 262, in the appropriations for the Interior Department:

For rent of office, pay of messenger, fuel, and other incidental expenses, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 265:

Surveying public lands in Washington Territory: Amount due W. R. Ballard, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Washington Territory, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $324.31.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 271:

For compensation of clerks and draughtsmen in the office of the surveyor-general of Washington Territory, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following words after line 275:

Surveying public lands in Florida: Amount due M. A. Williams, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Florida, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $759.59.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 280:

Survey of public lands in Utah: Amounts due Joseph Gorlinski and Bailey and Burrill, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Utah, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875, $392.28.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 285:

For rent of office, pay of messenger, fuel, and other incidental expenses, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $250.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following clause after line 288:

Surveying public lands in Montana: Amounts due McFarland & Kellogg, McFarland & Bonnell, and Post & Koch, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Montana, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875, $213.30

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 294:

For rent of office, pay of messenger, fuel, and other incidental expenses, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 297:

Surveying public lands in Arizona: Amount due T. F. White, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Arizona, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875, $351.10.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 302:

Surveying public lands in Louisiana: Amount due James L. Bradford, for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Louisiana, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875, $484.13.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 307:

Amount due James L. Bradford for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Louisiana, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $614.38.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 311:

For compensation of clerks and draughtsmen, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $1,500.

Mr. DAVIS. I think that ought to be explained. There ought to be an explanation in regard to all such items as that.

Mr. SARGENT. I only know with reference to this item that the regular appropriation for this year was cut down so small that in several of these land offices they could not discharge their duties. The appropriation was not made, but of course they had the offices to keep up, and that is the sum required for clerks and draughtsmen. The money has not been spent yet, but it should be spent before the end of the year. In a note accompanying these estimates of deficiency appropriations, the Secretary says:

The foregoing deficiencies—

The remark applying to several items—are owing to the fact of the great and unusual reduction made by Congress in the appropriations for 1876–'77.

It is known, of course, to Senators that this appropriation was made after the fiscal year commenced, and that a sudden and very great reduction was made. Up to the time the appropriation was made these officers naturally had a right to suppose that it would be on the scale of appropriations heretofore made, or somewhere near that amount.

Mr. DAVIS. I understood that this item was to meet a deficiency of 1875.

Mr. SARGENT. It is for 1877, for this fiscal year, and we thought it necessary, as the public business had to be carried on, in these cases to allow the deficiency.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 314:

Surveying public lands in Dakota: Amount due James C. Blanding, deputy surveyor, for surveys executed under contract of February 26, 1874, with the surveyor-general of Dakota, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $139.63.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 320:

For rent of office, pay of messenger, fuel, and other incidental expenses, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $450.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 323:

Office of surveyor-general of Nebraska and Iowa: For rent of office, pay of messenger, fuel, and incidentals, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 327:

Office of surveyor-general of New Mexico: For compensation of a translator of Spanish language, clerks, and draughtsman, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $1,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 332:

Office of surveyor-general of Nevada: For compensation of clerks and draughtsmen, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $1,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 336:

For rent of office, fuel, and incidental expenses, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 339:

Examination of the public surveys, Colorado: For examining surveys in the field, in order to test the accuracy of the work before approving the same, under instructions from the surveyor-general to E. H. Kellogg, dated August 14, 1876, being for the service of the fiscal year 1877, $110.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following after line 346:

Survey of Indian reservations.—Arizona Territory: For the survey and subdivision of the Colorado River Indian reservation by Chandler Robbins, designated by the late Secretary of the Interior, being for the service of the fiscal years 1875 and 1876, $1,314.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following paragraph after line 353:

Dakota Territory: For the survey of that part of the Sioux Indian reservation in the Peoria bottom lying east of the Missouri River by T. B. Medary, designated by the late Secretary of the Interior, being for the service of the fiscal years 1875 and 1876, $1,310.43.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 360, to insert:

For the survey of the Devil's Lake Indian reservation, in Dakota Territory, by Charles H. Bates, designated by the late Secretary of the Interior, being for the service of the fiscal years 1875 and 1876, $1,384.18.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 366, to insert:

Dakota Territory: For the survey of a part of the Sioux Indian reservation located on White River, west of the Missouri River, in Dakota Territory, by James W. Miller, designated by the late Secretary of the Interior, being for the services of the fiscal years 1874 and 1875, $11,659.75.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 373, to insert:

Idaho Territory: For the survey of the Fort Hall Indian reservation, Idaho, by D. P. Thompson, designated by the late Secretary of the Interior, being for the service of the fiscal years 1874 and 1875, $4,520.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 379, to insert:

Oregon: For survey of the Malheur Indian reservation for the Snake and Pi-Ute Indians in Oregon, by Thompson and Meldrum, under their contract dated October 24, 1874, being for the service of the fiscal years 1874 and 1875, $5,254.36.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 386:

Nebraska: For amount due White and Hall for surveying the Otoe Indian reservation in the State of Nebraska, under contract of July 3, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $2,019.15.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 392, to insert:

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Idaho: To pay L. F. Cartee, surveyor-general of Idaho, for expenses incurred in investigating certain surveys, under instructions from the General Land-Office dated November 19, 1868, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1871 and prior years, $299,94.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 399 to insert:

Indian affairs:

Incidental expenses, Indian service in Arizona: For payment of amount certified to be due Cornelius Brice by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874, $117.05.

Mr. SARGENT. The committee withdraws this amendment. It was incorporated in the bill by a mistake of the clerk. There are a large number of those small Indian agencies which Congress should take hold of and treat by themselves. This single item happened to be in the estimates of this year. The committee did not intend that it should be in the bill. There is quite a large number of that class which we think Congress should act upon altogether and we do not want to select this single case.

Mr. WITHERS. There are several hundred such claims.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 405:

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior for the care and support of Indians at the Fort Peck agency during the balance of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, $50,000.

Mr. DAVIS. This is another Indian deficiency or rather something that is necessary for the support of the Indians. The amount is $50,000 and it ought to be explained. I ask the Senator having charge of the bill whether this appropriation was recommended by the Committee on Indian Affairs and what are the facts connected with it.

Mr. SARGENT. The chairman of the committee understands the subject thoroughly, and I will ask him to explain it.

Mr. WINDOM. Prior to the current fiscal year the Indians at Fort Peck had received $100,000 as their appropriation. There were two other tribes of Indians located at other points, one of which received $30,000 and the other $35,000 per annum, making $65,000 in addition to the $100,000. Last year the Indian appropriation bill transferred these other two tribes of Indians to the Fort Peck agency, but did not add anything to the appropriation; so that the three tribes which had received $165,000, the Sioux at Fort Peck, and these other two tribes, the Assinaboines and Gros Ventres, were reduced to $100,000; there was necessarily a deficiency, and the Government is unable to supply it, and this year the appropriation will be, even with this deficiency, $15,000 less than the preceding year, as it would make $150,000 for the Indians at Fort Peck, including the Assinaboines and Gros Ventres, instead of $165,000, the sum which they have hitherto received.

Mr. DAVIS. One of the questions which I asked was whether or not this appropriation had been considered and recommended by the Committee of Indian Affairs or whether it was a case selected out of the many cases of this kind by his own knowledge as being more meritorious than others.

Mr. WINDOM. It is not one of the class of cases at all reported upon in the document to which I suppose the Senator refers.

Mr. DAVIS. I understand that.

Mr. WINDOM. The recommendation of the Committee is based upon a letter which I hold in my hand, signed by Thomas J. Mitchell, United States Indian agent at Fort Peck, and also by William B. Hazen, colonel Sixth Infantry, who is stationed at that point, showing the absolute necessity for this appropriation. The letter can be read if the Senator desires it. The committee acted upon those recommendations together with a letter from the Department of the Interior, signed by the Secretary, urging an appropriation to supply the deficiency.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the amendment of the Committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was in line 424, under the head of "Expenses of the United States Courts," to increase the appropriation for defraying the expenses incurred in the prosecution of whisky and cotton cases and Credit Mobilier case, payment of counsel, &c., from $68,750.55 to $69,755.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 439, to insert:

For expenses of the United States courts, to be disbursed by the Attorney-General, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, as follows:

For payment of bailiff and criers, fuel, lights, stationery, and other contingencies, $250,000.

For payment of United States district attorneys and salaries of their assistants, $90,000.

For payment of fees of clerks of courts, $42,000.

For payment of fees of United States commissioners, $25,000.

For payment of fees of jurors, $170,000.

For payment of fees of witnesses, $143,000.

For rent of court-rooms and miscellaneous expenses, $30,000; in all $750,000.

Mr. WHYTE. I should like to know whether in this appropriation, which covers a vast extent of territory, the words "and other contingencies" have reference to the numerous United States marshals who have been scattered over the country within the last few years?

Mr. SARGENT. It has no reference to them at all. The Senator will not find a single item that can be construed to attach to them

Mr. WHYTE. These are expenses for the current year.

Mr. SARGENT. They are expenses for the current year.

Mr. WHYTE. Has the money appropriated to pay the expenses of bailiffs and criers been used in paying the marshals, thereby creating a deficiency?

Mr. SARGENT. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. WHYTE. Is there any such information at all?

Mr. SARGENT. None at all; there is no such information. I will state that the Committee on Appropriations cut down the first item of $250,000 below the estimate, with the fear that the amount which we allowed would not be enough; but we did that on account of the desire of the political friends of the gentleman that there might not be enough to cover the service to which he refers. I think as the clause stands here now, it relates only to the ordinary processes of the court.

Mr. DAVIS rose.

Mr. SARGENT. If my friend will allow me one moment, as I see he has risen to his feet, I will state that the ordinary appropriation for the courts of the United States for the fiscal year before the present was $3,000,000, and there was allowed subsequently a deficiency of $65,000, and also a deficiency of $250,000, making about $3,300,000 for the ordinary expenses of the courts last year. For this current fiscal year the appropriation was made of $2,500,000, nearly a million of dollars less than the amount appropriated before. There was no reason to suppose that the courts of the United States could be run for a million dollars less money this year. They must have as many jurors, they must have as many officers, as many district attorneys, &c. They must have light and fuel, and stationery, and other contingencies, and occupy rented rooms where the United States does not own the buildings. In fact the presumption would be that with the growth of population and business the labor of the courts would increase. There would naturally be more crime among 42,000,000 people than among 41,000,000 people; that is, the tendency would be rather to increase the business of the courts; but, without much mature consideration, I think Congress at the last session cut down that amount to $2,500,000, and this addition will not bring it up to the appropriations usually made for the expenses of the United States courts.

Mr. DAVIS. As the Senator has just said, this item and three or four others increase the amount to $750,000. That was a large increase, a large deficiency. It has been examined carefully, I am told, by the gentleman who had special charge of the bill; but, nevertheless, I believe that it is more than it ought to be. It is $750,000 more than was appropriated for that purpose; and, as I said a moment ago, it is time that the officers of the Government were keeping within their appropriations. If they know that there is to be a deficiency of $750,000 in a single branch of the service, for the Department of Justice, when a few years ago the entire Department was run with $750,000, and even less, there will be no economy in their expenditures. It is time for the officers of the Government to stop, and not to go on incurring expenses until they have expended $750,000 more than has been appropriated. If they can exceed the amount by $750,000 they can spend so many millions, just as many millions as they think proper, and there is no stop, there is no end to it. It appears that the appropriations made by Congress are no longer a guide for the Department to go by; but the officers of the Government spend just what they require and what they wish, and then come and ask it to be made up in the shape of a deficiency, and it is given. My voice, for one, is to say to these gentlemen, Stop when the amount appropriated has been expended. They know at the beginning of the year what amount is appropriated for them, and they have no right as officers of the Government to go outside of the appropriation.

Mr. SARGENT. This money has not been spent, for it is not yet appropriated. If you do not want your courts, do not appropriate the money. I have no more interest in having United States courts than the Senator from West Virginia and California has no more interest in having United States courts than has his own State. If you do not want jurors, do not spend this money; but, if you have these jurors, the law says they must have certain fees; and the question is, are you going to pay them or not? The Senator said that some time ago the entire expense of United States courts was but $750,000. Some time ago there was no expense on account of the United States courts.

Mr. COCKRELL. When was that?

Mr. SARGENT. I do not know what time the Senator referred to, and I cannot tell; but we can go back to a period when there were no United States courts at all. At one time we had but thirteen States. How many have we now? At one time we had four or five Supreme judges of the United States, and now we have nine. In every direction the business has grown.

Look at the items in the amendment. Is there anything suspicious about them? Are they not all required by law? Would you have all your United States district attorneys to resign, or shall they go on and discharge their duties? If they discharge their duties, the law says they shall be paid. The courts have large control. They appoint their bailiffs and criers, and those whom it is necessary to appoint; and where is the power to say they shall not have their bailiffs, if bailiffs are required? We have left it in their power to appoint bailiffs, and if they have the power to appoint them we must pay them. The fees of the clerks of the courts are fixed by law. Are the clerks to resign, and are we to say that we cannot pay any officers, and when you go to the courts with business, or when a person comes and makes a complaint of a criminal matter, cognizable under the laws of the United States, or when there is an attempt to break up whisky frauds or anything of that kind, are we to say the courts cannot do anything because there is no money to pay these fees, when the law says that these expenses shall be incurred?

In the first place, it would be impracticable to apply such a rule. There are persons all over the country, in every State in the Union, holding these different positions. It would be impracticable to make it apply to all these courts. If there is a single suspicious item in the bill which ought not to be a deficiency, the objection might be made to that, or if we had appropriated last year for the present fiscal year the amount ordinarily appropriated there might be question raised. But in the courts of the United States the system of justice is not a complex system. It runs along just about the same, gradually increasing, if anything, with the growth of the country, as it must. Every once in a while some Senator brings forward a bill here, and insists that his State has grown too large for one district court to do its business, and he persuades Congress to make two district courts in his State, and a division line is run, and there is the addition of a judge and a district attorney; a court-room must be prepared for the court to meet in; the lights, the fuel, the expense of clerk hire, &c., are incurred. Congress is to blame if these things grow year by year, but it is a natural and necessary growth. Take the State of New York. Can you get along with one district court there? Take the Senator's own State. That may be able to get along with one district court; I do not know about that. My own State manages to get along with one although we have an extensive frontier, nearly as long as the Atlantic States upon the Gulf, and the distance to be traversed is very great. I say the courts are not to blame when Congress establishes them. They must carry out their functions, and to shut their doors is to deny justice to the people, and to deny it to the United States itself in the prosecution of public offenders in those courts.

The explanation of the deficiency is very plain from the fact that we cut down the appropriation last year nearly a million dollars, and we now ask that the courts may be continued. If Senators do not want to continue the courts, shut them up. I have no more interest than other Senators in the courts of the United States, and no more interest in the subject as a member of the Committee on Appropriations than the Senator from West Virginia, who himfelf is a member of that committee.

Mr. DAVIS. In what I said about the courts I especially avoided being personal in my manner. I am sorry that the Senator from California has seen proper to look at it in another light.

Mr. SARGENT. I did not mean to do so.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, it is not the courts. If you will take up the report of the Attorney-General for last year you will find that it is the marshals. Almost the first State that strikes the eye when you take up the report of the Attorney-General is Arkansas. What do we find there? We find it has two districts, and there was expended in one of those districts $137,000 for marshals.

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. INGALLS in the chair.) Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. DAVIS. Yes, for I should like to have an explanation.

Mr. CLAYTON. I can explain that matter very readily. The district in Arkansas to which the Senator refers extends over the Indian Territory and includes a very important jurisdiction, a jurisdiction over all the offenses committed in the Indian Territory. There is where the expense comes from in Arkansas.

Mr. DAVIS. I do not know that the marshals have a great deal to do over there. The courts may have something to do.

Mr. CLAYTON. The marshals do not get the amount of money.

Mr. DAVIS. I of course do not know just the amount that goes into the Indian Territory, but I venture to say it is comparatively small.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask my colleague on the committee to yield to me a moment.

Mr. DAVIS. Certainly.

Mr. DORSEY. The Senator is entirely mistaken about the expense of marshals being small for the Indian Territory. Almost the whole amount named by the Senator, I think 95 per cent. of it, is expended in the Indian Territory.

Mr. CLAYTON. Fully that.

Mr. DORSEY. This court is not an ordinary United States court, but it has the executive, legislative, and judicial power for all the Indian Territory. It is a criminal court and tries all cases of murder and other crimes committed in that vast Territory which is under its jurisdiction.

Mr. DAVIS. May I ask the Senator whether both of the districts in his State extend into the Indian Territory?

Mr. DORSEY. Only one of them, the western district.

Mr. DAVIS. Than there is a much larger amount for the other district than is given to the other States.

Mr. CLAYTON. How much more?

Mr. DAVIS. It is a much larger amount. It is $34,000 for marshals alone. Take the State of New Jersey, which contains three times probably or twice the population of Arkansas, and the appropriation there is $13,000.

Mr. CLAYTON. To what district does the Senator refer?

Mr. DAVIS. The western district.

Mr. CLAYTON. That covers the Indian Territory.

Mr. DAVIS. There are two districts. The eastern district is $34,000 in round numbers, and the western is $137.000.

Mr. DORSEY. If the Senator will yield to me I will explain the fact.

The western district has no accommodation to confine prisoners convicted of crime. These persons are all confined in the eastern district in the penitentiary at Little Rock, and the money paid for keeping these prisoners I think amounts to from $16,000 to $18,000 a year, which is used simply to pay for keeping prisoners which belong to the other district.

Mr. CLAYTON. For the Indian Territory.

Mr. DORSEY. For the Indian Territory.

Mr. DAVIS. I took Arkansas because it was almost the first southern State, but I might take any other southern State. Take Alabama, which is the first State on the list. We find there are three districts in the State of Alabama, and the footing is $65,000. Take the State of New Jersey and it is $13,000. Now there is some reason, there is some cause why one State of twice the population of another should cost about one-fourth of what the smaller State costs. It shows in this item of expenditure in the Department of Justice so far as the marshals are concerned that there is a very great inequality. When you look at the Southern States their expenses are very much larger, sometimes five or six or eight or ten times as large, probably per capita, than in Northern States; and it is in that direction in my opinion that much of this money goes and not to the courts proper, which should be held of course. If you turn to the little State which I in part represent, the State of West Virginia, which is not unlike that of Arkansas in population, what do you find? You find there that $26,000 defrays the expenses of marshals.

Mr. CLAYTON. That is more than would be required for Arkansas, leaving out the Indian Territory.

Mr. DAVIS. In the one district of Arkansas, the eastern district, there is $34,000 required.

Mr. CLAYTON. My colleague explained that. He stated that about $18,000 was caused on account of keeping prisoners belonging to the district comprising the Indian Territory.

Mr. DAVIS. Then there is the item of $137,000, and that, the Senators say, is on account of the Indian Territory. If the two Senators shall have the opportunity, in a little while longer they will have it all in the Indian Territory. We know that both the districts cannot be in the Indian Territory.

I have been stating the expenditure for marshals for 1876. We have not yet the report for 1877, the present fiscal year. When we do get that, I venture to say that we will find a different state of things, and even more inequality, for I am told that in some precincts in some of the States there were as many as a hundred men acting as deputy marshals on the day of election to protect the election polls. I do not know whether it is true or not, but that is the report; and I have no doubt a part of this $750,000 which we are now asked to appropriate is made necessary for that reason.

Mr. DORSEY. I do not know how it was in West Virginia as to the number of deputy marshals about the polls, and I do not know how much the marshals in that district are paid, but I know in Arkansas, and, I believe, in the other Southern States not a single penny was paid to deputy marshals for services on the day of election. I do not think my friend from West Virginia can point to an item that has come from the Department of Justice showing that a dollar was expended for these deputy marshals on the day of election. Certainly, with us there was not a cent paid, for the men served without pay.

Mr. CLAYTON. I understand they cannot be paid for that service under the law, unless it is in the case of a city of 20,000 inhabitants, and we have no such city in our State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was after line 458 to insert:

And for the fiscal year 1872, $2,000; for the fiscal year 1873, $30,000; for the fiscal year 1874, $5,000; and for the fiscal year 1876, $180,000; in all, $217,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 465 to insert:

To pay the United States judge for the eastern judcial district of Arkansas his actual expenses for holding two terms of court in the western district of that State, $650, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SARGENT. I wish to call attention to the text of the bill beginning at line 493, where it is provided that—hereafter no contract shall be made for the rent of any building, or part of any building, to be used for the purpose of the Government until an appropriation therefor shall have been made in terms by Congress, and that this clause be regarded as notice to all contractors or lessors of any such building or any part of building.

This is probably intended to apply to the city of Washington; for if it be made to apply to the whole country it would be a very great inconvenience. I think that is substantially the law so far as this city is concerned, and I move to insert after the word "Government," in line 495, the words "in the city of Washington."

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest the words "in the District of Columbia."

Mr. SARGENT. Very well, "in the District of Columbia" instead of "city of Washington."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reported by the Clerk.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 495, after the word "Government" it is proposed to insert the words "in the District of Columbia;" so as to read:

For rent of building on the corner of Eighth and G streets, known as Wright's building, $9,000, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877; and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to terminate said lease on or before the 30th day of June next; and hereafter no contract shall be made for rent of any building or part of any building to be used for the purposes of the Government in the District of Columbia, until an appropriation therefor shall have been made in terms by Congress, and that this clause be regarded as notice to all contractors or lessors of any such building or any part of building.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was after line 501, to insert:

To repair the roof and make additions to the heating-apparatus of the General Post-Office building, $9,212.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 517, in the appropriation for the national museum in charge of the Smithsonian Institution, to increase the appropriation "for restoring to their proper place in the national museum cases removed to the international exhibition and re-arranging the collection," &c., from $20,000 to $37,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 520 to insert:

To make up deficiency for Capitol police for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, as follows: For one captain, $68; for three lieutenants, at $200 each, $600; for twenty-seven privates, at $184 each, $4,968; and for three privates in charge of Botanic Garden, at $184 each, $552; making, in all, $6,208.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 530, to insert:

To pay the expenses of the monetary commission provided for by the joint resolution of August 15, 1876, $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert, after line 534:

To pay the per diem and expenses of the special commission appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, July 17, 1875, to investigate the management of affairs at the Osage Indian agency, $2,107.40, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 540, to insert:

SENATE.

For clerks to committees and pages for the current fiscal year, $5,000.
For pay of folders, $740.
For horses and wagons, $2,000.
For furniture and repairs for the current fiscal year, $4,600; and for the fiscal year 1876, $526.15; in all, $5,126.15.
For packing-boxes, $50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 551, to insert:

To defray the actual and necessary expenses of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and other expenses necessarily incurred in making the investigations directed by Senate resolution of December 5, 1876, in the several States named therein, the sum of $40,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary; said appropriation to be paid into the contingent fund of the Senate. And the disbursing officer of the Senate shall advance such parts of the sum above appropriated to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate as the chairman of said committee shall in writing direct, for the purposes aforesaid; and the Sergeant-at-Arms shall, as soon as practicable, make a detailed report of the expenditures thereof, with proper vouchers, which, when so made, shall be received by said disbursing officer, and returned with his accounts to the proper officer of the Treasury Department.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 567, to insert:

For payment of the expenses of the investigation in regard to the immigration of Chinese by the joint committee of the two Houses on that subject, $2,012 85; which sum shall be added to the contingent fund of the Senate and paid out on the certificate of the chairman of said committee on the part of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 573, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives to pay the special police authorized by the concurrent resolution of January 31 1877, $9,900; one half to be paid into the contingent fund of the Senate, and the other half to be paid into the contingent fund of the House of Representatives.

Mr. WEST. There does not appear to be any specified per diem fixed by the amendment, but I understand from the aggregate of the amount there will be a compensation of $3 a day to these men. In this same bill, on the preceding page, in line 521, provision is made for the regular policemen, who I understand get $4.33 a day. I believe that there ought to be a little more liberality extended toward these men, and that we should bring them up at least somewhat nearer to the compensation of the regular police. In order to test the sense of the Senate in regard to the question, I move to add one-fourth of the amount, which will increase their pay to $3.50 a day as against $4.33 a day for the regular police. I move to strike out "$9,900" in lines 577 and 578 and insert "$11,550," which would be an increase of fifty cents a day.

Mr. SARGENT. I hope that amendment will not be made. The amount of $3 a day to these special policemen is ample. Senators will remember that when there was a call for this work we were all, on both sides of the Chamber, importuned by persons who desired this position. There were a thousand applicants where only a small number could be employed.

Mr. WITHERS and Mr. DAVIS. There were ten thousand applicants.

Mr. SARGENT. I am told there were 10,000 applicants. I put it at ten to one, but others who perhaps had more leisure seemed to have found a hundred to one, and I think the compensation of $3 a day is sufficient.

Mr. WEST. We pay the other men four dollars and a half nearly.

Mr. SARGENT. Suppose we do. We require the other men to work night and day.

Mr. WEST. So do these.

Mr. SARGENT. Not necessarily.

Mr. WEST. They do.

Mr. SARGENT. They do not need to do so. The others are required to be picked men; men who have permanent charge of all the property of the Capitol; men who are on duty night and day for the purpose of preventing the property of the Government from being carried off, and they are extremely trusty men. The others are merely those who were picked up to see that there was no riot about the Capitol at this time. It seems to have been an entirely unnecessary precaution because there was no danger of anything of the kind, certainly not after the passage of the electoral bill, but we have got them on duty and will pay them a pretty good compensation for their service. Of course we pay more to the regular officers, who are picked men and valuable on account of their experience and service, and who are weeded out from time to time until we get the very best men, and who have very responsible duties and prolonged duties, whom we leave here in charge of everything when we go away from the Capitol during the vacation, and it does not seem to me that these merely temporary persons, who have very light duty to do, should expect to receive the same rate of pay. I hope the amendment will not be adopted.

Mr. WEST. I think the Senator is scarcely correct in saying that there is a distinction between the character of service rendered by these men. So far as my observation goes the special police are doing all the duty around the Capitol, by day and by night during the sessions of the Commission; and if we are to employ men temporarily at a less rate than we pay a permanent force it is a different rule from what prevails in ordinary business. But let the Senate decide upon the question. In my own judgment the amendment as recommended by the committee does not compensate these men sufficiently, and I have moved to raise their pay half a dollar a day and thus make it three dollars and a half a day, still leaving it below the regular amount paid other policemen.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. WEST] to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was in line 583, under the head of "House of Representatives," after the word "of" to strike out the words "July 14," and insert "March 15;" so as to read:

To pay for two thousand copies of Barclay's Digest, ordered by resolution of the House of March 15, 1871, $2,000; and hereafter the Digest shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House, as the House shall from time to time direct; and for such additional services hereby required the journal clerk shall be paid the sum of $1,000 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations are concluded. The bill is still in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. SARGENT. I wish to offer an amendment on behalf of the committee. After line 386 I move to insert:

Survey of Indian lands in North Carolina:
For the survey of the lands of the Eastern band of the Cherokees in North Carolina, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $2,159 27.

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to know from the Senator having charge of the bill if this appropriation is for work that has been performed.

Mr. SARGENT. Yes, sir. By an act passed at the last session we authorized the transfer of a piece of land to these Indians which was obtained for them by a decree of the court. It was necessary to survey it, and the Department was required to have the survey made. No appropriation being made therefor they applied such money as they had, the modest sum of $800, upon it, and this amendment is to supply the balance. The work was done under the direct requirement of the statute.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask the Senator further whether he recollects an item of the same character in another bill during the present year?

Mr. SARGENT. In regard to a survey in North Carolina?

Mr. DAVIS. Yes, sir.

Mr. SARGENT. O, yes; in the Indian appropriation bill there was a provision for the survey of a piece of land, but not this survey.

Mr. DAVIS. My inquiry was not for the purpose of opposing the amendment, but I thought probably it was for the same survey. I thought that in the Indian appropriation bill there had been such an appropriation made, but the Senator convinces me that this is for a different piece of land and a different survey.

Mr. SARGENT. We laid this item aside in the committee until that matter was explained, and we found is related to a different survey.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MERRIMON. As soon as the bill is reported to the Senate, I desire to say that I shall ask to reserve for a separate vote the amendment embraced between lines 440 and 458, inclusive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will note that amendment as one to be reserved.

Mr. BLAINE. I desire to offer an amendment to the bill on the twenty-fifth page, and I should like to have the Secretary read from line 582 to 589 inclusive.

Mr. WITHERS. Will the Senator withhold his amendment a moment, as I have an amendment to offer on the part of the committee?

Mr. BLAINE. Certainly. I supposed the committee were through when I rose.

Mr. WITHERS. After line 54 I move to add the following:

For suppressing counterfeiting and fraud:
For payment of the claims for service rendered and expenses incurred by different parties in the secret-service division of the Treasury Department, as per letter of the Solicitor of the Treasury, namely: to James T. Porter, $239.80; H. T. Hutchinson, $259.25; Western Union Telegraph Company, $36.84; Andrew J. Carnes, $147; Henry Finnegrass, $337; J. W. Schoenecker, $580.15; Louis Delano, $313.04: making, in all, $1,913.68.

I will state that those recommendations and estimates were before the committee at a time when the full committee were present, but they could not obtain satisfactory evidence of the ground upon which the claim was based. Subsequently that evidence was furnished and found to be satisfactory. Three of the cases were covered by Senate bill No. 1193, which was reported yesterday from the Committee on Claims, and the report was fully sustained by the evidence, and the bill was referred to the Committee on Appropriations. In accordance with the suggestion of that committee and with the evidence before the Committee on Appropriations, we recommend the payment of these claims.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLAINE. I ask the secretary to read from line 582 to 589 inclusive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the portion of the bill indicated by the Senator from Maine.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

To pay for two thousand copies of Barclay's Digest, ordered by resolution of the House of March 15, 1871, $2,000; and hereafter the Digest shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House, as the House shall from time to time direct; and for such additional services hereby required the journal clerk shall be paid the sum of $1,000 per annum.

Mr. BLAINE. I am aware of the very great delicacy that is both instinctive and necessary when discussing in either branch any matter concerning the internal organization of the other; yet any piece of legislation which requires the assent of both branches may be fairly discussed and amended by the other.

I do not rise with any view of attempting on the part of the Senate, if they should view the subject as I do, to force upon the House any other conclusion than that which the House itself shall finally decide to be correct, but I do it rather for the purpose of giving the opportunity, as I have had some consultation with some of the members of the House, to reconsider the action embraced in the clause which has been read. It takes away summarily and finally all interest on the part of the late journal clerk of the House, who has been so well known for the thirty years' service there, in a work of great magnitude and very great merit. There are gentlemen on this floor who served in the House before Barclay's Digest was prepared and who served afterward, and they know how the rules and orders and processes of the House were simplified by that very admirable compend of parliamentary law, one of the most meritorious and complete that this country has ever seen.

As I say, I do not desire to either criticise what was done in the House or to induce the Senate to come into any conflict with the House, but rather by offering an amendment to let this matter go to a committee of conference, in which I would be entirely willing that the Senator from California, who has charge of this bill, should take the matter into consideration upon conference with the House and see whether justice may not require that something of the kind which I now offer as an amendment shall be added thereto. I move to insert at the end of the paragraph which has been read the following:

But if the text or the substantial portions thereof of Barclay's Digest be used, the author shall be allowed for copyright the amount per copy heretofore paid for the full period of the copyright under the laws of the United States, reckoning from the original issue of the work.

I only desire to secure to Mr. Barclay the interest in this work, the labor of his brains, that every other author in the United States gets. Of course if it comes in the shape of a claim against the United States, that is remanding a man to rather a hopeless court of justice, at least one in which justice is very often delayed until the heart is made sick. If this amendment shall be the means, with the entire consent and courteous desire of the House, to do, on reconsideration, what they may think to be just, I shall be sure that the Senate will not regret doing an act of that kind, and my friend will not regret taking it in charge in the conference which will ensue in which he will be the chief.

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine how many copies have been printed during recent years of Mr. Barclay's Digest?

Mr. BLAINE. There was a rumor submitted in the House which proves a mistake that Mr. Barclay had received about $50,000 from the net profits of this work. He has, I believe, received about $5,000.

Mr. SARGENT. How much is it per volume?

Mr. BLAINE. I do not know that.

Mr. SARGENT. He has been getting $1 a copy.

Mr. BLAINE. That was the amount paid heretofore for the copyright. The amount was made up of the allowance for the copyright and the labor of preparation. Of course it would be the duty of the House to sift out and determine what is copyright and what is fairly to be deducted for the labor of preparation, as the duty is to be placed upon the present journal clerk of the House. That will be for the House to determine; but my object is merely to keep life and interest in the work in this man's brain, which is a very great work. I do not ask that he shall have a perpetual franchise, but only propose that he shall have the benefit of the copyright, which every other author in the United States enjoys in his work. It strikes me that the House itself will see that it is an exceedingly reasonable proposition, and if they do not, of course the Senate will have to concede whatever the House shall finally determine; but at all events let the matter either go to the House for reconsideration on their part, or for such adjustment in the conference committee as may be deemed fair and courteous all around. I think the Senator from California will see that the amendment in that respect is fair and entirely courteous to the House. I could not possibly move any amendment in any other sense, and at the same time I hope it will prove just to Mr. Barclay.

Mr. SARGENT. The Senator's amendment is entirely unnecessary for the purpose of enabling the House to reconsider this matter, because we have changed the date from July 14 to March 15, and that gives jurisdiction of the whole subject if the House, or any member of it having seen this debate, should desire to press an amendment of the kind suggested.

Mr. BLAINE. Such a change by the House would be hanging a very long tail to a very small amendment.

Mr. SARGENT. It would be entirely parliamentary, and much more so than for the Senate to assume to direct the House how to make up its Digest or to keep its Journal, or to do anything else that relates to its internal functions. We certainly should direct the House by assuming to legislate upon the matter. I do not say as an abstract proposition that we have not the right to legislate upon anything contained in any bill, but there is a kind of delicacy between the House and the Senate which I have observed upon all appropriation bills and upon all conference committees; as, for instance, they leave us to judge of our deficiencies as a rule, and we leave them to judge of their deficiencies as a rule. If the amount claimed by either side is extraordinary, it may be questioned in the conference committee, and perhaps after consultation the amount may be reduced, but if it be insisted upon by the House to which it belongs, uniformly we have held that they have the right to determine the amount.

Mr. BLAINE. That is what I have said. The Senator from California will remember that I stated that if the House should insist, the Senate would have to concede. There is no doubt of that whatever.

Mr. SARGENT. When the House comes in and desires to make up a Digest at the expense of a thousand dollars per annum, the amendment of the Senator would add to that thousand dollars per annum $2,000 more per annum; that is, it would make it cost three times as much as the House propose to pay, because they receive regularly two thousand copies of Barclay's Digest. They have heretofore bought and paid for that number, and for us to step in and provide that there shall be a dollar paid to Mr. Barclay up to and including $2,000 would be to defeat the purpose of the House in getting a cheap Digest. The House simply refused to be the customer of Mr. Barclay in running off his Digest. It may be that the journal clerk will make up a Digest containing none of the elements of the work of Mr. Barclay, or none except that which is common property. The clerk of the House would have no right if he has not the copyright to copy into his work original matter from Mr. Barclay's book, but he has the right to go to the great sources of information. Jefferson's Manual is very largely drawn upon and very ably by Mr. Barclay in the shape of copious extracts. He also draws upon the Journals of the House of Representatives and upon the Journals of the Senate, resolutions and extracts, but so far as he has tied them together by commentary of his own, that perhaps is copyrighted, and ought not to be taken.

Because Mr. Barclay for the past fifteen years has enjoyed the use of those extracts from the Senate and House proceedings, it seems to me that no caveat is raised against the House or against the Senate if they want to use them, and that they do not violate the copyright by having a digest made up upon a system which they see fit to select. I think that it would be rather an ungracious thing for us to go to the House of Representatives and say to them that they shall do this thing. We like Mr. Barclay. I like him very much. The Senator from Maine is very fond of his friends, and very fond of Mr. Barclay naturally. He was the journal clerk of the House during all the period that the Senator presided with so much ability as Speaker of the House, and the association between them naturally excited in the Senator's heart, always warm anyhow toward his friends, a very close feeling of friendship. I have myself a very strong feeling of friendship for Mr. Barclay, but I cannot see that it is my duty to entertain an amendment taking $2,000 out of the Treasury for any such purpose.

Therefore, as a practical proposition, I am opposed to the amendment, and as interfering with the most natural and obvious prerogatives of the House of Representatives I am also opposed to it.

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Maine whether it is the intention to give Mr. Barclay the value of the copyright in addition to what he has heretofore received? As I understand, what he has heretofore received has been compounded of what would be properly a copyright and the labor of producing it, just as the $6,000 in the bill is appropriated to the present journal clerk. He is given $1,000, by the present bill for taking Mr. Barclay's brain and putting it in the form of a book. Now, Mr. Barclay has had a compensation heretofore, which is made up both of what the journal clerk is to do now and what he had a right to as copyright. I agree with the Senator from Maine as to the great value of the work and the debt which the House of Representatives owes to Mr. Barclay, and the right he has, in any form whatever, to the use of the product of his brain. If a copyright is of any value in the world, and the common sense of mankind has so determined, Mr. Barclay has the same right to that property that any one of us has to any of our property. To use that without giving him any compensation is—I say with all due respect and not believing that the House intended it—really an outrage upon him. What he ought to have, so that he may be treated by the House of Representatives just as he would be treated by booksellers, is hereafter to be allowed a compensation for his copyright, as he has had heretofore. I think he does not complain. He has had heretofore, in a round sum, what was compensation for his copyright and for his manual labor. He ought to have hereafter, if the House of Representatives choose to have the manual labor performed by somebody else, what is equivalent to a fair compensation for his copyright. If the Senator's amendment reaches that far and no farther, it is right and ought to be adopted. If it goes beyond that, the propriety of its adoption may not be so clear.

Mr. BLAINE. I desire to say that my amendment is specifically limited to granting him compensation for copyright. It is limited also to granting that compensation only for the period that the copyright is guaranteed by the laws of the United States, reckoning back to the original issue of the work, not going forward at all. In other words, the effect of the amendment is that we shall give the House of Representatives, if they choose, upon reconsideration, the opportunity to do for him what would be done for any other author. Of course this book is not a book for general sale; it is a special book. It must be limited to the House of Representatives, and to the few copies that are sold for the use of legislative bodies throughout the country. For general sale the book is valueless. If the House of Representatives turn him from their door without any reward for the labor of his brains, he has no market for his book. It is adapted wholly to the House of Representatives. It is of no use in this body, it is scarcely known here; and I am very sure, when I address Senators who have not served in the House, they are probably not competent to know the vast amount of labor that was compressed and condensed in getting up that work; but those who have served in the House, and especially those who served in the House before the Digest was prepared and after it, know that far beyond the pecuniary compensation that will come to him in any event the House of Representatives for all time will owe to John M. Barclay a debt of gratitude.

Mr. MERRIMON. I would ask the Senator why Mr. Barclay has not been compensated in the past for these valuable services?

Mr. BLAINE. He has been all along, every year, but now he is out he is on the retired list. He has been in the public service for thirty years and is now in private life; and the proposition is that this Digest shall be prepared by the journal clerk of the House and he is to be paid for it.

Mr. Barclay loses the direct compensation for the direct labor, which properly enough goes to the journal clerk of the House, who will add all the new matter that comes from year to year and properly belongs to the journal clerk of the House; but the great labor which laid the foundation of that which will constitute the basis of the body of the rules of the House of Representatives for a century to come was the work of Mr. Barclay. The compilation of that work going from 1779 down to 1861, which was the date of the first issue, embraced every decision, every controverted point in the whole history of the House of Representatives. It was a work of great labor.

Mr. SARGENT. Does the Senator remember under what auspices the original volume was published? Did Mr. Barclay prepare it and send it to Congress on his own motion, or did he do the work under a resolution of Congress?

Mr. BLAINE. He had been preparing it for twelve years. When he had got it ready Congress assumed the auspices of it and patronized it, but it was a labor of love and of years.

Mr. DAWES. It came to be known in the House of Representatives that he in his leisure hours had got up such a work, just as it is known that there is in preparation in any one of the Departments here a valuable document. The House of Representatives came to know that fact and by resolution they published it, and they gave him $2,000 to get it up and $2,000 each year for two thousand copies. That included what would be called elsewhere a copyright of the work of each year. Now they propose, properly enough, to give the Journal clerk a thousand dollars for doing this work, and the other thousand dollars which went to Mr. Barclay in the light of compensation for his brain-work he loses.

Mr. SARGENT. The Senator from Maine proposes to pay him as much as he ever has been paid heretofore.

Mr. BLAINE. No; I say as much as he was paid for copyright. The House determines that.

Mr. SARGENT. Let the amendment be read.

Mr. BLAINE. Let it be read, and you will see it is for copyright. The House can adjust that very easily. I only want to keep the subject afloat, so that it can be settled in the conference committee.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

But if the text or the substantial portions thereof of Barclay's Digest be used, the author thereof shall be allowed for copyright the amount per copy heretofore paid for the full period of the copyright under the laws of the United States, reckoning from the original issue of the work.

Mr. SARGENT. That is exactly what I said. The Senator proposes to pay him as much as he was ever paid.

Mr. BLAINE. Not at all. I only propose to pay the amount heretofore paid for copyright.

Mr. SARGENT. I do not care what you call it, "copyright" or "copy-book," it is $2,000 if the House uses two thousand copies, and if the House uses four thousand copies it is $4,000; and that is as much as the House ever paid him for his services there and the use of his book, and we cannot tell what number of years it may continue. See how the thing will tend. The present journal clerk may stay there for ten years or he may stay for twenty years.

Mr. BLAINE. I hope he will, if he is as good a clerk as Mr. Barclay, stay there for thirty years.

Mr. SARGENT. Very well. I have no hope to express in the matter. If I had any wish to express, it would be that a person of different politics should be in the place hereafter.

Mr. BLAINE. I differ with my friend from California. Mr. Barclay staid there without regard to politics. He was there thirty years without regard to what political party was in power in the House, and any journal clerk of equal competency ought to be retained in the same position without regard to his politics.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is entitled to the floor.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, I am very well aware of the entire indifference of my friend, the Senator from Maine, to the political opinions of any one, [laughter,] and I doubt not that indifference will be maintained on this occasion. I am not so disinterested in reference to those matters. I agree with most of the Senators around me, the Senator from Maine being an exception, that a man's politics are a merit. My democratic friends think that democratic politics are a merit, and that the country is the better on that account; I believe just as firmly that a man is the better for being a republican, and prefer to choose republicans for public office. My friend from Maine, however, does not agree with me in this, and I perhaps ought to apologize for stating my opinion so strongly after receiving his censure.

Mr. MERRIMON. A man had better be a patriot than be either.

Mr. SARGENT. We find very few patriots who have no politics. I would not trust a man in any public station who has not made up his judgment and expressed his opinion in relation to the merits of parties. We have heard a great deal about men rising above politics, but I never knew a man who was worth a pinch of snuff who did rise above them. I believe that politics are necessary to the existence of the country. If a man has good judgment and the disposition to investigate, he will come to a conclusion upon all matters in the interest of what he thinks for the good of the people. Owing to the different constitutions of men's minds they may come to different conclusions honestly, but it is to the credit of their integrity, it is to the credit of their industry that they do arrive at conclusions upon whatever may be presented to them. I prefer a man who has opinions and is not afraid to express them.

Mr. BLAINE. I hope it will not hurt the interests of Mr. Barclay for the Senator to remember that Mr. Barclay happens to be a very decided republican.

Mr. SARGENT. Not at all. I am very fond of Mr. Barclay, but at the same time I do not think it is just that, after the United States has purchased from him year after year a book he has published, we should be required to purchase that book after we have got through with it; and I do not see that it is right for us to compel the House of Representatives when they want their present journal clerk to make up a digest, to buy the digest of a former journal clerk.

Mr. BLAINE. My amendment does not do it. It only says if the digest of Mr. Barclay shall be used—it does not say the former clerk at all—he shall be allowed the usual copyright that every author has.

Mr. SARGENT. The amendment says "the text or the substantial portions thereof." So that a part of Barclay's Digest is the extracts which it contains, and it is a large part of it. It is a mere compilation. Now we are to make it a sealed book unless we compel the House of Representatives to be at the expense of $2,000 more than they want to pay.

Mr. MERRIMON. I understand that Mr. Barclay never copyrighted his work; that he has rendered valuable service to the House of Representatives; and I infer, from the suggestion of the Senator from Maine, that he has received reasonable compensation for the work he has done. In that case it seems to me it would not be wise to treat him as one entitled to copyright. He is not entitled to that. But if he has not received adequate compensation, I would prefer to vote him a sum in gross as reasonable compensation for his work, so that it would become the property of Congress.

Mr. BLAINE. Let it go back to the House. They will adjust to it to suit themselves.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, I have a word to say. The debate seems to have drifted a good way from the original proposition. My objection to the amendment of the Senator from Maine is that it is violating a principle that we have always insisted very strenuously should be maintained, and that is, it is interfering in the affairs of the other House. We have always denied them the right to dictate, or in any manner interfere with the employés of the Senate, and, without distinction of party, we have maintained our position in several contests between the two Houses on that line; and they also, I know, will claim the same privilege. This is a departure from the principle which has hitherto controlled the Senate in this matter and goes over to the other side and interferes in what may be termed their own household, their own domestic matters. Therefore I object to it.

If the design be simply as the Senator from Maine suggests, to bring the matter within the purview of a conference committee, as has appropriately been remarked by the Senator from California, that is already done by virtue of the amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations. To be sure, this is a trivial matter; but it suffices to bring within the province of conference committees all that is in this paragraph or may be put in. That is the practical construction.

Mr. BLAINE. A very vicious one.

Mr. WITHERS. The Senator from Maine may dissent, but I think I am right that such is the practice now; whether rightfully or wrongfully, I do not pretend to assert.

Mr. SARGENT. It is unquestionably the practice, and has been ruled by the presiding officers of both Houses during the past ten years.

Mr. WITHERS. That is certainly so as a question of fact. As to the copyright, I understand that Mr. Barclay has already taken out a copyright for his work; and it is therefore going out of the way and making unnecessary legislation to provide for any infringement of that copyright or for pecuniary compensation to him if there be any infringement, because the law of copyright of which he now enjoys the protection would furnish him the appropriate remedy if it should be violated.

For these reasons, I feel constrained, reluctantly I admit, to oppose the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine.

Mr. BLAINE. I do not want to enlarge the scope of the discussion, but from what the Senator from California has said and what the Senator from Virginia has echoed from him and approved, it seems to me their views would lead to very much more evil than I was aware might be put in the power of a conference committee. The bill as it came from the House contained a misprint, "July 14," purely a clerical error. It is corrected by the Committee on Appropriations so as to read "March 15." Now, I understand the Senator from California and the Senator from Virginia to hold that, according to the usage and the practice of the two Houses, you can tail on to that correction of a clerical error in date any provision of law that applies to any other part of that paragraph.

Mr. SARGENT. Anything that is germane to that paragraph. The Senator from Maine knows that that is the practice in both Houses.

Mr. BLAINE. "The Senator from Maine" does not know, with all due respect to the Senator from California, any such thing. While I do not know a great deal about the rules at this end of the Capitol, I know that that was never recognized as law in the other end of the Capitol.

Mr. SARGENT. Does the Senator say that?

Mr. BLAINE. Yes, sir.

Mr. SARGENT. Well, Mr. President, I will not reply to the Senator.

Mr. BLAINE. To say that an amendment changing a date in a paragraph can be made a parliamentary basis for any change in any part of the bill or any part of that paragraph is giving to a conference committee a power which neither branch has ever conceded to it, in my judgment; which neither the rules of the House nor the Senate concede to it, and which no parliamentary practice nor consideration of public safety can concede to it. I protest against that doctrine. I protest against it as being parliamentary law. I protest against conference committees being appointed, conceiving that they enjoy that power. And therefore I say that the amendment which I have offered—of course it need not have led to this long discussion—is one that in my judgment could not properly come in under a mere correction of date; for if that be made the law, then a clerical error of date corrected in italic letters in that way may be made the pitfall for any imaginable or unimaginable danger that never was dreamed of in either House.

Mr. SARGENT. I assert as my distinct recollection that the Senator from Maine, when the presiding officer of the House, ruled that that was parliamentary law which he now says is not.

Mr. BLAINE. I wish the Senator would refer me to the record of that decision. In the absence of proof he cannot ask me to take his ipse dixit for that.

Mr. SARGENT. I have a distinct recollection.

Mr. WHYTE. I can see no objection to this amendment, for certainly there is general legislation in the very body of this section that comes in the appropriation bill from the House of Representatives. It legislates "that hereafter the Digest," without saying what Digest, "shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House, as the House shall from time to time direct." Now the House of Representatives asks us to agree to that. When we agree to it, we have a perfect right to add an amendment that that legislation shall be effectual, provided it does even-handed justice; and I hope that in this body, at least, even-handed, non-partisan justice can be done. Mr. Barclay has prepared a Digest with great care. He has obtained a copy-right for that digest; and, if it is used by the journal clerk of the House of Representatives, Mr. Barclay ought to be paid for his copy-right; and I propose to vote for some proceeding that will protect that gentleman in the enjoyment of the fruit of his labor and of his intelligence. I cannot vote for the amendment as proposed by the Senator from Maine. It is a little too cloudy for my understanding. It may be obtuse in me in not perceiving the end of the road to which it may carry us; but I would rather have it a little more definite that it is in the language in which he puts it. I will propose to him this amendment.

Provided, however, That the text or any substantial part of the compilation of John M. Barclay shall not be used unless an agreement be first entered into with the said Barclay for the use of his compilation as copyrighted.

Mr. BLAINE. I am entirely willing to accept that amendment. I will withdraw my amendment if the Senator from Maryland will offer that.

Mr. SARGENT. I hope we shall have a vote.

Mr. DAWES. Of course I cannot object to that. I desire to see justice done to Mr. Barclay, but I suggest to the Senator from Maryland that there is but one side to that proposition, and that is Mr. Barclay's side. He can make his own terms.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Maine having been withdrawn——

Mr. BLAINE. One moment. I desire the attention of the Senator from Maryland, through the Chair, to know whether this would not be more appropriate and better than either of the amendments:

But if the text or the substantial portions thereof of Barclay's Digest be used, the author thereof shall be allowed a reasonable compensation for copyright for the full period of copyright under the laws of the United States, reckoning from the original issue of the work.

That leaves the House to determine what reasonable compensation is. It does not make the matter so complicated.

Mr. WHYTE. The trouble about that is that it leaves it hereafter an open question as to what is to be reasonable compensation.

Mr. BLAINE. That, in any event, will be settled by the House.

Mr. WHYTE. I have no objection, if the Senator from Maine is satisfied with it in that form; but according to the amendment that I proposed they cannot use his book without having an agreement to pay him for it.

Mr. BLAINE. Well, I withdraw my amendment in order to have a vote on that of the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Provided, however, That the text or any substantial part of the compilation of John M. Barclay shall not be used unless an agreement be first entered into with the said Barclay for the use of his compilation as copyrighted.

Mr. DAVIS. I believe that this is a matter for the House to dispose of, and not for us. We are now, under the direction of the Chief Clerk of the Senate, preparing what would be to us a similar book, and if the House should undertake to regulate the manner in which we should pay for it or have it done I think the Senate would resent it.

Mr. WINDOM. I do not rise for the purpose of discussing this question, but to appeal to the Senate to vote upon it. It is not a very important matter. There is another appropriation bill pending which we hope to have passed before we adjourn to-night.

Mr. MERRIMON. Mr. President, I do not like this amendment exactly. I believe that this man has done a valuable service to the Government, and that the Government, not the House of Representatives, ought to own this work. I am willing, therefore, if he has not received a reasonable compensation, to vote him a sum in gross that will compensate him for his services and let this work belong to the Government. It is valuable to nobody else. I do not agree that it is the business of the House, and not ours. It is interesting to the Government to own this man's labor; it is interesting to the Government to own it, not merely for the use of the House but of the Senate as well, and of anybody else who may be interested in administering the Government. It is a book that ought to belong to the Government, and, therefore, I desire for one to see the Government buy it; but if he has not already received compensation the question as to how much he ought to be paid will be a matter of inquiry which can be very easily made.

Mr. BLAINE. I think the Senator from Maryland will see that his amendment goes a little too far, as the Senator from Massachusetts pointed out, in giving Mr. Barclay the right, if he were an unreasonable man, to do an unreasonable thing: to put some impossible condition or name some exorbitant price. I think it is giving too much power into the hands of Mr. Barclay, and, as I have modified my amendment, I suggest, if the Senator from Maryland will withdraw his now, to let this be voted upon:

But if the text or the substantial portions thereof of Barclay's Digest be used, the author thereof shall be allowed reasonable compensation for copyright for the full period of copyright under the laws of the United States, reckoning from the original issue of the work.

That leaves the House the right to use it or not, and, if they do use it, they shall pay him a reasonable compensation for copyright. It is not coercive at all.

Mr. SARGENT. The amendment insisted on by the Senator from Maine leads me to suppose that this work never has been copyrighted. I do not know whether it has or has not been.

Mr. WHYTE. I can inform the Senator that it has. I have seen it.

Mr. SARGENT. You say that it has been. Then why this consideration for the copyright shown by the Senator from Maine? It is inconsistent with the idea of copyright that this gentleman should have received his annual salary, amounting to $2,000 a year, for this work. I think the better way would be, if this action is to be taken at all, to adopt the amendment of the Senator from Maryland. That amendment provides that this work of a man's brain, that is said to be so valuable, shall not be used without his consent, not except by contract with him. That is fair and right. If we want it, then make the contract with him, pay him the contract price; if we do not want it and want to make up a work by another journal clerk, let it be done without inquiring whether any part is used, because if that part is used it would be called a material part of the book, and he would be paid his $2,000 all the same.

Mr. MERRIMON. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question? Was it not part of his work as journal clerk to make up this Digest?

Mr. SARGENT. I think not. He received his pay as journal clerk right along for many years. During the time in which he was not employed he got together this compilation. Congress paid him $2,000. It was a very comfortable thing for him, a pretty soft place. I suppose it paid him pretty well. Even though he received only $15,000 for getting up the book, it was pretty good pay.

Mr. COCKRELL. He had a regular salary all the time.

Mr. SARGENT. He had a regular salary all the time. I think he got a pretty good salary. He was well paid, because he was a favorite in the House of Representatives and they put his fees up pretty high.

Mr. WITHERS. We have an officer of the Senate paid who is also the author of a compilation which is used in the Senate, and to some extent used in the House. Suppose the House should say that they would not use this compilation unless the author complied with certain conditions, what should we think of it? And yet the same thing is here proposed to be said.

Mr. MERRIMON. But if the book was purchased for the use of the Government, the Government would have to pay for it and not the Senate.

Mr. WITHERS. Then the Senator had better introduce a bill providing for the purchase of this book from Mr. Barclay.

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. BLAINE. Now I offer the amendment that I send to the desk.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

But if the text, or the substantial portions thereof, of Barclay's Digest be used, the author thereof shall be allowed reasonable compensation for copyright for the full period of copyright under the laws of the United States, reckoning from the original issue of the work.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 21, noes 16

Mr. EATON. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas. 23, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Barnum, Blaine, Boutwell, Bruce, Burnside, Chaffee, Christiancy, Clayton, Conover, Cragin, Dawes, Dorsey, Harvey, Hitchcock, Logan, McDonald, Maxey, Merrimon, Morrill, Teller, Wallace, West, and Whyte—23.

NAYS—Messrs. Alcorn, Allison, Bailey, Bogy, Booth, Cameron of Wisconsin, Cockrell, Cooper, Davis, Eaton, Goldthwaite, Ingalls, Johnston, Kernan, McCreery, McMillan, Ransom, Sargent, Windom, Withers, and Wright—21.

ABSENT—Messrs. Anthony, Bayard, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Conkling, Dennis, Edmunds, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Gordon, Hamilton, Hamlin, Hereford, Howe, Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Kelly, Mitchell, Morton, Norwood, Oglesby, Paddock, Patterson, Randolph, Robertson, Saulsbury, Sharon, Sherman, Spencer, Stevenson, Thurman, and Wadleigh—31.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SARGENT. I reserve that amendment for a separate vote in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will note the reservation.

Mr. WINDOM. I ask unanimous consent that the five-minute rule be applied to this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer the following amendment, to be inserted after line 31:

To pay Mrs. Jane Baldwin, widow of Caleb Baldwin, late judge of Alabama claims commission, $216.58, to be paid out of the money awarded the United States under the treaty of Washington; being the balance of the salary of said Caleb Baldwin from December 18, 1876, to January 1, 1877.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer, with the consent of the Senator from California, the following amendment to come in after line 580:

To pay the expenses of the electoral commission provided for by the act approved January 29, 1877, entitled "An act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877," $7,000; said sum to be disbursed upon the certificate of the president of said commission: Provided, That any person employed by said commission may receive such compensation as may be allowed by said commission, in addition to any other compensation or salary he may be receiving as an officer of the Government.

Mr. DAVIS. I do not understand the amendment fully. What is it—a deficiency?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir; it is in the nature of a deficiency. It is to pay the expenses of the electoral commission.

Mr. DAVIS. We passed a bill for that purpose the other day.

Mr. ALLISON. We passed an independent measure; but it properly belongs to this bill and should go into it.

Mr. DAVIS. Is this instead of or in lieu of the special bill passed the other day?

Mr. ALLISON. It is in lieu of it and instead of it.

Mr. DAVIS. I notice that authority is given there to pay additional compensation to officers now in the service of the Government. What does that mean?

Mr. ALLISON. That means to pay people who sit up late at nights and perform additional service to their ordinary duties; and it means to pay the additional expenses which are necessary for reporting the doings of the commission. There is no trouble about it.

Mr. EATON. Mr. President, I was afraid my friend from West Virginia was going to object. There ought to be no objection made. If these people are worthy of their hire they ought to be paid.

Mr. ALLISON. They are performing a very important, valuable, and meritorious service; and I hope there will be no objection to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I move to amend on page 17, in line 392, by inserting the following proviso:

Provided, That the rate of payment to said White and Hall shall not exceed the rate per mile allowed by law for the year 1873 for surveying the public lands in Nebraska.

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to know what the amendment means.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I will explain it in one minute, if the Senator desires. The survey was made in one year and the remainder of it was made in the following year, and in the latter year the rate allowed by law was greater than that which was allowed at first. This specifies that the rate paid these men shall be the same as that which was allowed afterward for the same work.

Mr. SARGENT. Was this done in 1873?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. It was. This proviso requires that the rates fixed by law should apply to them and not the rates fixed in the following year.

Mr. SARGENT. It seems to me entirely unnecessary, then. If the law fixes the rate of compensation and if a settlement can be effected at the Treasury why disturb it?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. The only object in offering the amendment was to prevent any possible question with the First Comptroller, who very often raises doubts when parties think there is no reasonable ground for them.

Mr. SARGENT. I think the Senator had better not insist on the amendment. It will lead to discussion.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I am sure it would do no harm.

Mr. SARGENT. I could not assure the Senator how it would be settled in conference.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. If the Senator objects to it I will withdraw it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. MORTON. I desire to add to the bill the following amendment:

The sum of $772.15 for the payment of costs in the case of Milligan vs. Spooner and others, tried and decided in the circuit court of the United States in the State of Indiana, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated.

Mr. SARGENT. I hope the Senator will explain the amendment.

Mr. MORTON. It is an old matter, which was supposed to have been settled, and which ought to have been settled a long time ago. It will be remembered that in 1864 a military tribunal was organized in the State of Indiana by the direction of the Secretary of War to try certain persons charged with conspiracy against the Government of the United States. It consisted of eight or ten officers, who were all either colonels or brigadiers then in the service of the United States. The trials were held, and a number of persons were convicted. Among others Milligan was convicted, and sentenced to death. The punishment was commuted by President Johnson to imprisonment in the penitentiary. Afterward, an appeal being taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, the court decided that the tribunal which tried Milligan had no jurisdiction, because the courts of the United States were open in the State of Indiana at the time, and such a court could not legally be organized, as it could have been in a State where the courts of the United States were not then open. In consequence of this decision, Milligan was released from imprisonment. He then brought suit against the persons who composed that military court and one or two other persons for false imprisonment and action for damages. That action was tried. It occupied a long time, and great expense was incurred. Inasmuch as the Supreme Court had decided that the military tribunal had no jurisdiction to try these parties under the law, technically there was no defense, but the facts of the case were proven for the purpose of mitigating damages, by permission of the court, and the jury brought in a verdict of five dollars in favor of Milligan. It was a case in which the defendants had no interest; in which they had acted by order at the time, where they performed their duty, having been detailed by the Secretary of War for that purpose, and believed that they had jurisdiction to try the case, and were acting, as they supposed, in the discharge of duty. The Government of the United States promptly assumed the defense of the case, employed counsel, and paid them. I had supposed until recently that the costs were paid, but it has come to my knowledge very recently that the costs were not paid. It is a matter of entire justice to the defendants to have the costs paid by the Government.

Mr. MERRIMON. Were the commission military officers?

Mr. MORTON. Yes, sir; they were military officers, and detailed by an order of the Secretary of War to sit on the board.

Mr. DAVIS. Were not the officers paid as all other officers are paid?

Mr. MORTON. The amendment is not for their compensation at all. They were detailed to sit on this court and try these parties. They did so. They found some of them guilty. Afterward the Supreme Court of the United States decided that this military tribunal had no jurisdiction to try the case, and then Milligan brought suit against the members of this court for false imprisonment and obtained a technical verdict of $5. Their defense, of course, could not be perfect, because it had been decided that the court had no jurisdiction to try the case.

Mr. SARGENT. Is this appropriation for the costs?

Mr. MORTON. Yes, sir; for the costs in the case. The Government very promptly assumed the defense of the case and employed counsel. It was a matter for which the parties were not at all responsible and were in no wise to blame, and it is a matter of absolute and simple justice that the Government should pay the costs.

Mr. DAVIS. I believe the Senator said it was in 1864.

Mr. MORTON. It was in 1864 that the tribunal was organized. The suit was brought against them for false imprisonment I think in 1869.

Mr. COCKRELL. When was it decided?

Mr. MORTON. It was decided in 1869. The action for false imprisonment was brought before Judge Drummond in Indianapolis.

Mr. DAVIS. Who paid the expenses? Who now are out of money, and to whom is the money proposed to be given?

Mr. MORTON. If this money is not paid by the Government it will have to be paid by the defendants.

Mr. DAVIS. Has it not been paid up to the present time?

Mr. MORTON. No, sir; it has not been paid.

Mr. DAVIS. Who is it coming to?

Mr. MORTON. It is coming to the officers of the court, to the witnesses and to the parties; anybody against whom the charge is made in the books of the court.

Mr. SARGENT. It is to satisfy the judgment.

Mr. MORTON. Yes, sir; to satisfy the judgment. The judgment was $5 and costs.

Mr. DAVIS. Of course, the amendment is unusual and would not be in order if there was any question made upon it. The Senator from Indiana has not been able to attend the Senate, and, of course, for that reason if for no other we ought not to object.

Mr. MERRIMON. How much is the amount?

Mr. MORTON. Seven hundred and seventy-two dollars. I think my colleague is acquainted with nearly all the facts and knows whether my statement is correct or not.

Mr. McDONALD. I am quite fully acquainted with the matter so far as the general facts of the case are concerned, and which have been correctly stated by my colleague. The original suit brought by Milligan, or rather the application for a writ of habeas corpus, on which the decision of the Supreme Court was had, to which my colleague refers, was instituted by myself, or by the firm of which I was a member, and it was brought to the Supreme Court. After the determination of that case I had no further connection with the suits that grew out of the decision of the court. The Supreme Court, as is well known, in the case of ex parte Milligan decided that military commissions could not take jurisdiction of or try accusations against citizens in States that were not in a state of war, and that Indiana was not in a condition that made her citizens amenable to such a tribunal.

The suit referred to in the amendment was instituted in the State court by Mr. Milligan after his discharge from the penitentiary, and transferred to the Federal court on account of the fact that it was a suit against persons who were acting under Federal authority. Under a statute then in existence, which I believe has since been repealed, such persons were entitled to have their cases transferred to the Federal court. The case was tried in the Federal court. A long and protracted trial was had in which able counsel were employed on both sides. The Government assumed the defense of these parties, and the Department of Justice directed that counsel should be employed for their defense. I supposed that all the expenses had been paid, but it seems that this remnant has been left. That is about all there is of it. I know nothing about this amount yet being unpaid, but I take it the statement of my colleague in regard to that matter is sufficient for the Senate, as it is sufficient for me. Certainly the Government up to this time has defrayed the expenses of that litigation so far as these defendants were concerned, upon the ground, I apprehend, that they were at the time military officers in the service of the United States, and that they were acting in the matter under a detail and therefore governed by the authority of their military superiors in taking cognizance of these cases.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Indiana.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be concurred in in gross except the two reserved amendments.

Mr. SARGENT. I withdraw my request to have the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine [Mr. BLAINE] reserved. We shall have charge of that matter in the conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The only remaining amendment to be reserved is the amendment reserved by the Senator from North Carolina, [Mr. MERRIMON.] The other amendments will be concurred in in gross.

The amendments were concurred in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment received will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, inserted after line 439 the following:

For expenses of the United States courts, to be disbursed by the Attorney-General, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, as follows:

For payment of bailiffs and criers, fuel, lights, stationery, and other contingencies, $250,000.

For payment of United States district attorneys and salaries of their assistants, $90,000.

For payment of fees of clerks of courts, $42,000.

For payment of fees of United States commissioners, $25,000.

For payment of fees of jurors, $170,000.

For payment of fees of witnesses, $143,000.

For rent of court-rooms and miscellaneous expenses, $30,000; in all, $750,000.

Mr. MERRIMON. The sum of money proposed by the clause of the bill embraced between lines 440 and 458 is so extraordinary and for such unusual purposes that I do not desire to see the amendment adopted as recommended by the committee until I know something more about it. At the last session two millions and a half of dollars were appropriated to pay the expenses of the judiciary, and now we are called upon to appropriate $750,000 more for that purpose and the particular and extraordinary expenses specified are, first:

For payment of bailiffs and criers, fuel, lights, stationery, and other contingencies, $250,000.

Regularly all the expenses embraced here, except such expenses as may be embraced by the general term "and other contingencies," are such as must be paid at any term of a court that shall be held, and the court cannot get along without paying them. Then the next item is:

For payment of United States district attorneys and the salaries of their assistants, $90,000.

Ordinarily in the regular course of business in making up the estimates the authorities ought to be able to ascertain with almost exactness the amount of money which shall be necessary to pay such expenses; and yet we are called upon to appropriate $90,000 for that purpose.

Mr. SARGENT. Will the Senator allow me a moment?

Mr. MERRIMON. Certainly.

Mr. SARGENT. This matter was fully explained in the Committee of the Whole. We cut down the appropriation last year about a million dollars, although the estimate was exact, and this now makes up three-quarters of that deficiency, not quite a million dollars. We cut the appropriation down on these very items. Of course you cannot make a flexible system of your courts. You must have so many jurors, so many terms of court. The number of district attorneys is fixed by law and their salaries are fixed by law, and if, when we are called upon to appropriate $3,000,000, we appropriate $2,000,000, we cannot complain if before the year is out they come to Congress and say that they need more money.

Mr. MERRIMON. But we appropriated two million dollars and a half, and what strikes me is that these large extraordinary expenditures are for subjects that require to be paid for at the regular terms of court, such as the salaries of the district attorneys, fuel, lights, and stationery.

Mr. SARGENT. The difficulty is this: These deficiency appropriations come to us when the year is half over. We have delayed and a great many causes have delayed them. The last year we appropriated about $3,400,000 for this very service which this year we appropriated $2,500,000 for.

Mr. MERRIMON. It looks to me very much as if the authorities have expected a fund and have relied upon this deficiency bill to supply a deficiency created when they ought not to have done it. I apprehend that thousands and tens of thousands of dollars have gone to pay for deputy marshals all over the land. I had occasion recently to know something of that matter in the State of South Carolina, where the deputy marshals were appointed by scores and hundreds and some of them illegally. They were on duty many days, and such work as that has created this deficiency, as I apprehend, at all events.

Then there is another consideration. Without wishing to delay the Senate with this matter, I only want to bring it to the attention of the Senate in order to see what the judgment of the Senate is upon this proposed amendment. There is a broad difference here between the estimate of what was absolutely necessary to pay a reasonable deficiency on the part of the House and on the part of the Senate Committee. The House Committee, it seems, or the House, at all events, believed that the appropriation was sufficient without the additional appropriation of $750,000 proposed by the committee of the Senate. It is most extraordinary that this addition should be a necessity of the public service, and before I can give my vote for such an amendment, I must have more information about the details of this proposed appropriation.

Mr. SARGENT. The House simply did not make any appropriation for this purpose at all. The Senator cannot find a line in the bill to defray the expenses of the courts. When we had cut down the appropriations for the courts a million of dollars, the House provided for no deficiency. Here come the Attorney-General and the constituted authorities of the country who are authorized to give us information, and they tell us that there is a deficiency. In this item there is not a line for marshals. Nobody can deny that a deficiency exists, as it must exist when you take off one-third of the appropriation for the courts of the country. You can stop the courts if you see fit, for of course the courts cannot expend the money without an appropriation; so that in the operation of your courts you cannot summon a grand jury or do an act by the grand jury, you cannot call an offender before the court, if you do not pay for the service of the courts. If you do not propose to give the money for this service, why not say that you will go without courts?

Mr. MERRIMON. I do not propose to go without courts.

Mr. SARGENT. Then you must pay for them.

Mr. MERRIMON. I do not propose to go without grand juries, and I do not propose to go without the officers of the courts. I do not propose to have courts without paying the obvious and necessary expenses of the courts; but what I do oppose is that for one purpose and another there shall be a hundred thousand deputy marshals employed, and it is said that the Government must pay this additional amount, that the money has been expended and it ought not to have been used except for the particular purpose for which it was appropriated. The Senator from California says that the House has made no appropriation for purposes like this at all.

Mr. SARGENT. I said not for this item.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg to call the attention of the Senate and of the Senator to the appropriation provided for embraced in lines 413 to 415:

For expenses of United States courts to be disbursed by the Attorney-General, being a deficiency for the fiscal years 1876, as follows.

Mr. SARGENT. Exactly, for 1876. That is for 1876, the year before, when an appropriation was made of three millions and a half. With such an appropriation as that a deficiency was created, and yet for this year the Senator would contend there should be no deficiency at all, when the appropriation was $1,000,000 less than the year before.

Mr. MERRIMON. I stand corrected in that respect. I see it is for 1876, but that does not do away with the point I was making against this proposed appropriation. I apprehend that under the general term, "and other contingencies," are embraced all the extraordinary expenses that have been incurred to pay thousands of deputy marshals all over the Union who were unnecessary for the administration of justice. I shall ask for the yeas and nays upon the amendment.

Mr. WINDOM. I will detain the Senate but a moment. I think that the Senator from North Carolina is mistaken as to the use of this money during the present fiscal year. He seems to think that this large deficiency is an addition for some improper purposes in connection with the use of marshals, I suppose last fall at the election.

Mr. MERRIMON. Yes, sir; at the election.

Mr. WINDOM. If the Senator will examine the appropriations of previous years he will find that even with these deficiencies we appropriate $65,000 less than we did for the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1876. During that year there were none of these expenses which he fears were improperly incurred during the last year, and yet there were $65,000 more appropriated then than for the current year. The regular appropriation for 1876 was $3,000,000. There were various deficiencies appropriated, making it $3,315,000 for the year 1876. The whole trouble is just here: Congress at the last session declined and refused to appropriate enough money to carry on this service. Congress refused to appropriate what was known to be necessary for the judicial expenses of the Government. I stated on the floor of the Senate at the time, and I repeat it now, that in fixing that amount last year no regard whatever was paid to the recommendations of those gentlemen who had the control of the Departments and who would know what was necessary in order to carry on the service. It is true that the Senate did agree to this reduction in conference, but they agreed to it, as stated on the floor at the time, because there was no other way of getting the bill through, and it was understood at the time that a deficiency would arise because there was not enough money appropriated. We appropriated only two million and a half last year when both Houses agreed that $3,000,000 was not enough for the year 1876, and added deficiencies making it $3,315,000. Can anybody expect that the Government can be carried on in that way or that $2,500,000 will pay for service which required $3,315,000.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. WINDOM. I will yield to the Senator enough of my time, if he wishes to ask me a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The five-minute rule applies, and the Senator's time has expired.

Mr. SARGENT. By common consent, the Senator from North Carolina can proceed.

Mr. MERRIMON. I was simply going to ask the Senator a question as to whether this deficiency, taken in connection with the regular appropriation made at the last session for the judiciary, would pay the increased expense of employing an extraordinary number of deputy marshals during the last fall.

Mr. WINDOM. I do not understand that it is to be applied to that at all.

Mr. SARGENT. And will not be.

Mr. WINDOM. And will not be.

Mr. MERRIMON. Where will the money come from to pay them?

Mr. WINDOM. I do not know that they will be paid. That was simply omitted.

Mr. MERRIMON. Then is all that service to go without pay?

Mr. SARGENT. We have left any appropriation for that purpose out of this bill.

Mr. WINDOM. We have not appropriated anything for it by this bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to call the attention of Senators to the appropriations that have been reported, and I presume they are official. I have here the letter of the Secretary of War, transmitting estimates of appropriations required for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, and from that I read that the estimates for 1876, were $3,605,250 under the head of the Judiciary Department; that the estimates for 1875 were $3,409,750 and the appropriations for 1875 were $3,405,250. I hold in my hand the same letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting estimates of appropriations required for the service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and under the total recapitulation by the Department of Justice the estimates for 1877 were $3,850,040 and the appropriations were $3,364,343.31. The estimates for 1876 was $4,100,260 and the appropriations for 1876 were $3,887,549.46. I have now the same estimate of the Secretary of the Treasury for the year ending June 30, 1878, and on page 118, under the total recapitulation for the Department of Justice, the estimate for 1878 is $4,422,990, while for 1877 the estimate is $3,850,040, and the appropriation for 1877 was $3,364,343.31. The Secretary of the Treasury says that the appropriations for this Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, were $3,364,343.31.

Mr. MERRIMON. That is, for the Department of Justice?

Mr. COCKRELL. It includes the whole service. We are now asked to add to that by an appropriation of $750,000 under these general clauses. Then on page 20 we find for the fiscal year 1876 an appropriation of $180,000, making $930,000 of deficiency, $750,000 for 1877 and $180,000 for 1876, when the difference between the estimates for 1877 and the appropriations, according to the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, was only $400,000 and something over, the estimates being $3,850,040 and the appropriations $3,364,343.31. It does seem strange to me that there should be so great a discrepancy.

Mr. SARGENT. There is a very simple key to the difficulty of my friend. The appropriation was $2,500,000 for the purpose to which the amendment applies and in addition to that, of course, the Department expenses, the civil expenses, the hire of these clerks, &c. There is the postage which does not come under this item of $2,500,000. We appropriate for postage $40,000 or $50,000. The whole civil service of the Department is distinctly provided for. Then the expenses for the adjudication and prosecution of crimes against the United States, $25,000; a separate provision is made for that service. My friend is not listening to me and consequently I cannot explain to him.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am listening to the Senator.

Mr. SARGENT. I say that the one item of $2,500,000 stands by itself and covers exactly the same cases that we here report a deficincy for; but the deficiency does not apply, and the $2,500,000 do not apply to the clerks employed here in the Department of Justice and all the expenses running there. It does not apply to the item for postage in the Department of Justice; it does not apply to the item for the adjudication and prosecution of crimes against the United States, which is $25,000.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. SARGENT. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. What did the appropriation of $3,364,343.31 for the year 1877 include and embrace?

Mr. SARGENT. It embraced a very large class of cases.

Mr. COCKRELL. Everything in the Department of Justice?

Mr. SARGENT. No, sir; not at all. The Senator has the book right before him and he will find it all tabulated, so that there is no necessity for me to repeat it to him. The Senator will see by a glance that it does not include the expenses of the Department of Justice here for thirty or forty clerks. It does not embrace the items which I have read and which are appropriated separately.

Mr. MERRIMON. I wish to ask the Senator from California what are the leading items embraced by the words in line 444, "and other contingencies."

Mr. SARGENT. All I can say is that it means "such contingencies." It says "fuel, light, stationery, and other contingencies;" and there is not the slightest objection to using the word "such" there.

Mr. WINDOM. "And other such?"

Mr. SARGENT. "And other such contingencies." It means ice, I suppose, and all those little things that courts would have to be provided with under the law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole, inserting the words between lines 440 and 458.

Mr. MERRIMON. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BOGY. While I would regret to prevent a necessary appropriation for the legitimate expenses of the courts of this country, yet it seems to me that this character of expenses has increased very much in the last few years. I am inclined to think that this expense is caused in a great measure by the employment of marshals at the polls at elections. I know in my State a large number of marshals were employed. I will say that in my city a large number of marshals were employed where there was no necessity for them at all, and even some of the leading republicans of that city protested against such a wastage of money. There was no necessity for it, no use whatever, and it was gotten up by sharp politicians just to pay a few dollars to a few needy loafers. The leading men of that party in Saint Louis protested against such an abuse, and yet a large number of marshals were employed for the city of Saint Louis. Will anybody tell me that there was really any necessity for marshals there? I was in New Orleans last fall where I saw some eight or nine hundred deputy marshals who had been employed at the polls during the election in New Orleans, and a harder looking set of fellows I never saw in my life. They were not very good men to keep the peace surely, when they all looked like law-breakers. I understood they had been employed and were under pay, and it was rumored they would be under pay until they got their pay. They had been in service two or three days then waiting for their pay. If that be so, it is a wastage of money which ought to be checked, ought to be stopped, and ought to be stopped at once.

Mr. SARGENT. This does not apply to them.

Mr. BOGY. I presume the court expenses, as they are called, are swelled by the employment of marshals; I speak of marshals employed under the act of Congress to be present at the polls to see that no disturbance takes place. A large number of marshals were employed to see that everything was done fairly and quietly in the city of Saint Louis, where there was no occasion at all for their employment, no necessity for it, none whatever. I think that these expenses have swelled in that way to a very large amount. Many of them, of course, are unlawfully incurred. So it is, Mr. President, that these court expenses have, within the last few years, absorbed such large amounts, when some years ago the item was comparatively limited, and I think it becomes the duty of every member of Congress to look into that little item, and check it, if it is possible that it can be checked.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are called for on this amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WITHERS. I wish to make a statement before the vote is taken, as some of my personal and political friends are very sensitive on the question of marshals, and I do not know that I violate any rule or courtesy in so doing. I will state that there was in committee stricken out of the bill the provision for the payment of deputy marshals; that the amount of $250,000 would be sufficient to cover it, and I supposed that was amply sufficient to remove my objection on that account.

Mr. SARGENT. We did not want to put it on this bill.

Mr. WITHERS. We did not want to put it on this bill, as we knew it would embarrass it.

Mr. SARGENT. I hope after that explanation the yeas and nays will not be insisted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the demand insisted upon?

Mr. SARGENT. I hope the question will be taken without the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered. They can only be dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Mr. MERRIMON. I do not intend to be stubborn about this matter. It can be disposed of in the conference committee. I withdraw the call for the yeas and nays. I shall not vote for the amendment, however.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The call for the yeas and nays will be considered as withdrawn.

The question being put, it was declared that the noes appeared to prevail.

Mr. SARGENT. I will ask for the yeas and nays if Senators seem disposed to make this a test.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are again called for.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. SARGENT. I want to say one thing. The Senator from Virginia has made a frank statement in reference to this matter, having the leave of the other members of the committee to do so. He has shown by his statement, if he is believed by his brother Senators, that this bill does not touch the matter on which they are so sensitive. Now, if they wish to stop the courts let them vote down this amendment. I do not believe they wish to do that; but the effect will be to stop the courts. He gives his assurance and the rest of us give our assurance that we did not put marshals on this bill, because we did not desire to embarrass the bill at this last moment of the session. At some future time I shall have the pleasure perhaps of reviewing that matter before the Senate. In the mean time it is eliminated from the bill. The Senator from Virginia, who was on the subcommittee, gives his assurance to that effect. Under those circumstances it seems to me as these expenses are natural and proper in themselves, and such as we usually appropriate for, they ought to be allowed.

Mr. MERRIMON. Not $90,000 for district attorneys and assistants.

Mr. SARGENT. Why not? That is a necessary expense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A division is called for on this amendment.

The question being put, the ayes were 33.

Mr. SARGENT. I believe a further count is not insisted on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is a further count insisted upon? It is not. The amendment is agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. No. 4681) for the removal of the disabilities of Robert H. Chilton, of the State of Georgia; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 196) authorizing the President to designate and set apart a site for a colossal statue of "Liberty enlightening the world," and to provide for the permanent maintenance and preservation thereof.

The message also announced that the House had passed a resolution to print 300,000 copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1876.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. STEVENSON. I move to take up—I do not propose to consider it this evening—the bill——

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. SARGENT. I want to go on with an appropriation bill. I hope Senators will give us indulgence to pass the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. STEVENSON. I do not want to interfere with the naval appropriation bill. I want the bill I wish taken up considered in the morning hour to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not understand the motion of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. STEVENSON. I move to take up a bill on the Calendar to make it the unfinished business for the morning hour to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That motion cannot be entertained under the rules.

REVISION OF THE LAWS.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I ask that a House bill may be laid before the Senate, and I think with two minutes' explanation I shall be able to satisfy the Senate that the bill should pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. No. 4668) to perfect the revision of the statutes of the United States and of the statutes relating to the District of Columbia; and it was read twice by its title.

Mr. BOUTWELL. The Senate will observe that some days ago a House bill of the same title passed the Senate, with careful consideration, as it was thought; but it happened that there was an error in the bill, it being provided that advertisements by the Executive Departments of the Government should be subject to a provision of law which was limited to treaties and laws. The bill was vetoed by the President very properly, and the veto was sustained by the House of Representatives. The House has passed the bill omitting the objectionable provision, precisely as it was considered and agreed to by the Senate. The Senator from Michigan, [Mr. CHRISTIANCY,] who is a member of the Committee on the Revision of the Laws, and myself have very carefully compared this bill with the engrossed bill which was vetoed by the President, and we are able to say that this bill corresponds with the bill that was considered by the Senate in every particular save the clause which was objected to by the President.

Mr. CONKLING. What was that clause?

Mr. BOUTWELL. That was the clause which provided that advertisements by the Executive Departments should be subjected to a provision of law which was limited to treaties and laws. I ask upon this statement, which I can assure the Senate conforms to the facts, that this bill may be passed without being read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? The Chair hears none.

The bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SARGENT. I report back from the Committee on Appropriations the bill (H. R. No. 4616) making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, with amendments, and ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill reported by the Senator from California? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CONKLING. If the Senator from California has no objection, I rise to move an executive session.

Mr. WINDOM. I desire to make a single remark before the motion is put, if I can have consent to do so. This appropriation bill reported by the Senator from California contains I believe but eight amendments, which can be as readily understood by the printed bill which can be distributed as it can be to-morrow upon a new print. The Senate is well aware that we may have a report from the commission to-morrow morning, by which we may be delayed for two or three days. If we can pass this bill to-night, which I am satisfied can be done in less than one hour, it can then go to a conference committee. The time will not be lost. I submit that question to the judgment of the Senate, as to whether we ought not to remain and pass it. I think we ought.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York insist on his motion for an executive session?

Mr. CONKLING. I do not wish to interfere with the purpose of the Committee on Appropriations. I suggest that the bill be taken up and left as unfinished business for to-morrow. As it is now five o'clock, it is not very likely that the Senators will be able to keep a quorum here without a recess.

Mr. SARGENT. I am willing to stay and work.

Mr. CONKLING. What are the Senator's impressions, that he can pass the bill now without a recess?

Mr. SARGENT. I think we can get through with it by six o'clock.

Mr. CONKLING. Can you keep a quorum?

Mr. WINDOM. I can only say that if a quorum will not stay now they will have to come back here in April or May.

Mr. SARGENT. I am willing to submit the matter to the Senate on the motion to take an executive session.

Mr. CONKLING. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Before submitting that motion the Chair will lay before the Senate bills of the House for reference.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. No. 4681) for the removal of the disabilities of Robert H. Chilton, of the State of Georgia, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The joint resolution (H. R. No. 196) authorizing the President to designate and set apart a site for a colossal statue of "Liberty enlightening the world," and to provide for the permanent maintenance and preservation thereof, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

PRINTING OF AGRICULTURAL REPORTS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That there be printed 300,000 copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1876; 224,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, 56,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 20,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. DAVIS. As I see the chairman of that committee here, I ask, as that is important, that he pass upon it at an early day and report it back to the Senate.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business which was laid aside by common consent.

Mr. SARGENT. I shall object to any arrangement by which we can get by ten o'clock to-morrow. I want to proceed with the naval bill to-morrow at ten o'clock, if the Senate now go into executive session. If they will stay with me and work an hour, then they need not come until twelve o'clock to-morrow. Otherwise I shall be here at ten o'clock to-morrow and insist on proceeding with the naval bill.

Mr. WINDOM. I want to say that I think ten o'clock to-morrow will probably be too late and the bill will not pass for two or three days. It may be a test between remaining here another hour now and coming here this spring to hold another session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business laid aside by unanimous consent is the bill (S. No. 984) to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862, and also to alter and amend the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, in amendment of said first-named act.

Mr. CONKLING. Now I insist on my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SARGENT. While the doors are being closed I ask that the naval bill be printed with the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That order will be made.

BRIDGE OVER SINEPUXENT BAY.

Mr. DENNIS. I ask permission to report from the Committee on Commerce a House bill that it will not take two minutes to pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland reports the following bill. The Clerk will report the title for information.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. No. 3163) to authorize the Ocean City Bridge Company to maintain and operate a bridge heretofore erected over and across Sinepuxent Bay, in Worcester County, Maryland.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE BUSINESS.

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eight minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened; and (at five o'clock and ten minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to morrow, Friday, February 23, at ten o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 22, 1877.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides that a new legislative day has been reached, and the Chaplain will now offer prayer.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. I. L. TOWNSEND.

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL

On motion of Mr. HOLMAN, by unanimous consent, the bill (H. R. No. 4187) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, with amendments by the Senate, was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed with the Senate amendments.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

On motion of Mr. HOLMAN, by unanimous consent, the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriation for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, with amendments by the Senate, was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed with the Senate amendments.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union to resume the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. But I will withhold that motion for a short time, that matters which gentlemen desire to bring forward that will give rise to no debate may be disposed of.

LIGHT-HOUSE ON STANNARD'S ROCK.

Mr. HUBBELL, by unanimous consent, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, asking Congress for an appropriation for a light-house and steam fog-signal on Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HUBBELL. The attention of other States to this matter is desired, and I ask that the joint resolution may be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

The joint resolution is as follows:

Joint resolution asking Congress for an appropriation for the erection of a light-house and steam fog-signal on Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior.

Whereas the Light-House Board have for several years deemed it necessary to the interests of commerce that a light-house and fog-signal should be erected on Stannard's Rock, in Lake Superior;

And whereas a bill making an appropriation therefor has been introduced in the House of Representatives, but has not yet been acted on;

And whereas the great and increasing commerce of our lakes (exceeding our ocean tonnage) imperatively demands the prosecution and completion of the work named at an early day: Therefore,

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Michigan, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be requested to use all honorable means to procure the necessary appropriation for the erection of a light-house and fog signal on Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior, under the superintendence of the Light-House Board.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing preamble and resolution to the governors and Legislatures of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York, requesting their co-operation, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

JOHN T. RICH,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

ALONZO SESSIONS,
President of the Senate.

Approved February 13, 1877.

CHARLES M. CROWELL.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,
Office of the Secretary of State, ss:

I, E. G. D. Holden, secretary of state of the State of Michigan, do hereby certify that I have compared the annexed copy of a joint resolution asking Congress for an appropriation for the erection of a light-house and steam fog-signal on Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior, with the original filed in this office February 13, 1877, and that it is a true and correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole of such original.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Michigan, at Lansing, this 13th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1877.

[SEAL.]

E. G. D. HOLDEN,
Secretary of State.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to what extent he yields, whether for legislation or for the introduction of bills and memorials only? The gentleman stated that he yielded with a qualification, and the Chair does not think that is usual.

Mr. LANE. There is no question but that he has yielded.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is some business that ought to be attended to and I am willing to yield for it.

The SPEAKER. What class of business?

Mr. HOLMAN. That which can be disposed of by unanimous consent.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Mr. LANE, by unanimous consent, presented the petition of the Board of Trade of the City of Portland, Oregon, praying for the passage of the bill for the extension of time for the completion of the Northern Pacific Railroad; which was referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

The petition is as follows:

BOARD OF TRADE,
Portland, Oregon, January 10, 1877.

To the honorable the Senate of the United States in Congress assembled:

Resolved. That the Board of Trade of Oregon, recognizing the importance of the Northern Pacific Railroad (when built) in developing the commercial interests of Oregon and Washington Territory, heartily indorse the bill for extension of time for completion of said railroad, and earnestly asks Congress, in the interest of the commerce of this North Pacific coast, (now suffering for want of railroad connection.) to pass said bill this present session, as recommended by Committee on Pacific Railroad.

Respectfully forwarded, by instruction of the Board of Trade of Oregon.

[SEAL.] WILLIAM REID, Secretary.

LOWER WILLAMETTE AND LOWER COLUMBIA RIVERS.

Mr. LANE also, by unanimous consent, presented the petition of the Board of Trade of the City of Portland, Oregon, praying for an appropriation for the improvement of the Lower Willamette and Lower Columbia Rivers; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed in the REBORD.

The petition is as follows:

BOARD OF TRADE,
Portland, Oregon, January 12, 1877.

To the honorable the Senate of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the increase of exports of wheat, flour, salmon, and other products from Portland and Columbia River to sister States and foreign countries now exceeds $10,000,000 yearly, and in consequence foreign ships of larger tonnage and in greater numbers than heretofore known have been attracted to Portland,

And whereas it is essential for the welfare of the people and commerce of Oregon and Washington Territory, if such shipping is to be continued, to have removed the obstructions now existing on the Lower Willamette and Lower Columbia Rivers,

And whereas plans for the permanent improvement of such rivers from Portland to the sea have been submitted by the United States Department of Engineers, and an appropriation asked: Therefore,

Resolved, That this board earnestly petitions Congress to pass this session the appropriation now asked by the Government for the Lower Willamette and Lower Columbia Rivers, as the necessities of our shipping and commerce require that these improvements be immediately proceeded with.

Respectfully forwarded, by instruction of the Board of Trade of Oregon.

[SEAL.] WILLIAM REID, Secretary.

REDUCTION OF THE TAX ON BANKS.

Mr. HUMPHREYS. I ask unanimous consent to present a petition from 100 citizens of Knox County, Indiana, on the subject of reducing the tax on banks. I do not concur in the request of the petitioners, but as a Representative it is my duty to present their petition.

No objection being made, the petition was received, and referred to Committee of Ways and Means.

STAMPING UNSTAMPED INSTRUMENTS.

Mr. WALLING, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4687) to extend the time for stamping unstamped instruments; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

EXPEDITION TO THE ARCTIC SEAS.

Mr. WILLIS, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, by unanimous consent, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 4339) to authorize and equip an expedition to the arctic seas, and moved that the same be recommitted to the committee, and that the accompanying report be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WILLIS also, by unanimous consent, presented the memorial of John D. Jones and others, praying for the passage of a bill organizing an expedition to the arctic seas; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

FORECLOSURE SUITS.

Mr. WILLIS also, by unanimous consent, presented the memorial of the association of the bar of the city of New York, urging the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 4561) to provide for appearance on behalf of the United States in foreclosure suits; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WILLIS. I ask that the memorial be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. HURLBUT. I object to the printing in the RECORD. There is no sense in cumbering up the RECORD with such things.

SAMUEL TRAVERS.

Mr. KEHR, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Commerce, reported adversely upon the petition of Samuel Travers, owner of the brigantine Solferino, of Baltimore, for damage, &c.; and the same was laid on the table, and the report ordered to be printed.

Mr. JOHN REILLY. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table Senate bill No. 1083.

Mr. EDEN. I object, and call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. WALLACE, of South Carolina. Let us get through with some bills.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would be glad to get them through, but the regular order is demanded, which is the motion of the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN.]

Mr. HOLMAN. I waived that motion, wishing to yield to gentlemen who have matters which they desire to bring before the House.

The SPEAKER. It was not the gentleman from Indiana who demanded the regular order; the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EDEN] demanded it.

Mr. EDEN. I withdraw the call.

STATUE OF LIBERTY ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. By the instruction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, by its unanimous order, I beg leave to report the joint resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk, and ask that it be put upon its passage.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Joint resolution authorizing the President to designate and set apart a site for the colossal of "Liberty enlightening the world," and to provide for the permanent maintenance and preservation thereof.

Whereas the President has communicated to Congress the information that citizens of the French Republic propose to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of our Independence by erecting, at their own cost, a colossal bronze statue of "Liberty enlightening the world" upon a pedestal of suitable proportions, to be built by private subscription, upon one of the islands belonging to the United States in the harbor of New York;

And whereas it is proper to provide for the care and preservation of this grand monument of art and of the abiding friendship of an ancient ally: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to accept the colossal statue of "Liberty enlightening the world" when presented by citizens of the French republic, and to designate and set apart for the erection thereof a suitable site upon either Governor's or Bedloe's Island, in the harbor of New York; and upon the completion thereof shall cause the same to be inaugurated with such ceremonies as will serve to testify the gratitude of our people for this expressive and felicitous memorial of the sympathy of our sister republic; and he is hereby authorized to cause suitable regulations to be made for its future maintenance as a beacon, and for the permanent care and preservation thereof as a monument of art and of the continued good will of the great nation which aided us in our struggle for freedom.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H. R. No. 193) was received and read a first and second time.

The question was upon ordering it to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I do not think it necessary to add any words to the language of the joint resolution itself. The French people propose to give us as a mark of their friendship and respect a statue one hundred feet high, to be illuminated as a beacon for all time to come to welcome the stranger and the patriot to the great port of this country. I ask that the resolution be now put upon its passage.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York, moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

HARBORS OF REFUGE ON THE OHIO.

Mr. SAYLER. I ask unanimous consent to submit for consideration and adoption at this time the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be requested to report upon the expediency and utility of constructing a harbor of refuge upon the Ohio River at the mouth of Crawfish Bayou, on the eastern border of the city of Cincinnati, and to make a like report as to the mouth of Little Miami River, above said city.

Mr. CONGER. Does the gentleman mean an ice-harbor?

Mr. SAYLER. Yes; a harbor of protection from the flow of ice.

Mr. CONGER. Let that be put in the resolution.

Mr. SAYLER. I have no objection. I will modify the resolution by inserting after the words "harbor of refuge," the words "from flows of ice."

The resolution as modified was then adopted.

Mr. SAYLER moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

A. M. GAROUTTE.

Mr. KASSON. I ask unanimous consent to have taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on War Claims Senate bill No. 949, for the relief of A. M. Garoutte, late captain and assistant-quartermaster of the United States Army.

No objection was made, and the bill was accordingly taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on War Claims, not to be brought back by a motion to reconsider.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. COOK, from the Committee on Military Affairs, by unanimous consent, reported adversely upon the following; which were laid upon the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 358) in relation to Army officers who have been commissioned from the ranks;

A bill (H. R. No. 4318) to authorize the President to restore John Jackson to his former rank in the Army; and

The memorial of Alexander Sutorius, late captain Third United States Cavalry, for re-instatement as captain of cavalry in the United States Army.

ABRAM C. MILLER.

Mr. MACKEY, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4688) for the relief of Abram C. Miller, late lieutenant Company E, Eighteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

P. D. GAITHER.

Mr. WALLACE, of South Carolina, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4689) for the relief of P. D. Gaither; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

SAMUEL M. FREEMAN.

Mr. CASWELL, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was read and referred to the Committee of Accounts:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized and directed to pay out of the contingent fund of this House to Samuel M. Freeman the sum of $86.40 for services rendered under the Doorkeeper of this House from the 22d of July to the 15th of September, inclusive, at the rate of $1.60 per day.

GENESEE DISTRICT, NEW YORK.

Mr. DAVY, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4690) to amend section 2535 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, extending the western boundary of the district of Genesee, in the State of New York, to the western line of Orleans county; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

IMMEDIATE TRANSPORTATION OF IMPORTED MERCHANDISE.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I am instructed by the Committee on Ways and Means to report back House bill No. 4634 to amend the statutes relating to the immediate transportation of imported merchandise, with a substitute, which I ask may be considered at this time. The bill was referred by the committee to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the amendments suggested by him have been incorporated in this substitute. I will state briefly that the substitute proposes to amend the definition of the word "vehicle" in the statute so as to allow the transportation of merchandise when placed in trunks or in iron-bound safes, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury. At the present time merchants in the interior importing goods under the law are compelled to wait until a full cargo can be accumulated. This bill is to obviate that difficulty, and I ask that the substitute and the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury be now read.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to reserve the right to object.

The SPEAKER. The right will be reserved until after the substitute and letter have been read.

The Clerk read the substitute, as follows:

A bill to amend the statutes relating to the immediate transportation of imported merchandise:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the term "vehicle," used in sections 2994, 2995, 2998, 3001, and 3007 of the Revised Statutes of the United States shall be construed to include safes and trunks for the conveyance and transportation of imported merchandise; such safes and trunks to be of such size, character, and description as shall be from time to time prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 2. That the privileges relating to immediate transportation without appraisement conferred by sections of the said Revised Statutes from 2990 to 2999, both included, shall be extended to any and all packages of merchandise, excepting the articles excluded therefrom by said section 2990, which may be contained in any packed package whenever it shall appear from the invoice or bill of lading and manifest that such packages are consigned to and destined for either of the ports mentioned in section 2997 of the said Revised Statutes, and in subsequent acts extending the same privileges to other ports; and every entry shall embrace all the packages imported by or consigned to any one party which may be destined to any one of the ports so mentioned. The remainder of the packages embraced in such packed packages not intended for immediate transportation, as herein provided, may be entered at the port of first arrival in the manner now provided by law for the entry of imported merchandise generally at the ports of first arrival.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized to modify in such manner as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, the forms of oaths prescribed in section 2841 of the Revised Statutes.

The Clerk read the letter as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 16, 1877.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of this date, in which you inclose for the views of the proper officers of this Department a bill now before your committee which proposes to make certain changes in the sections of the Revised Statutes, relating to the immediate transportation of goods without appraisement.

The first section of this bill proposes to permit the transportation, in packing-trunks or safes, of such size and character as may be prescribed by this Department, of goods intended for immediate transportation, the more special object being understood to be to carry in that manner goods of small bulk, but of great value, where they are not sufficient to fill a car.

If Congress should see fit to adopt such a measure, I apprehend that its execution would be practicable, and that it could be carried out without greater danger to the revenue than is incurred in the transportation of other goods, under the sections of law before mentioned, provided such transportation shall be permitted only under such regulations as may be prescribed by this Department.

The second section proposes to confer the privilege of immediate transportation without appraisement upon packages arriving from foreign countries packed in packages with other goods, which may be intended for entry at ports of first arrival, whenever it shall appear by the invoice or bill of lading and manifest that any of such packages are intended for the ports named in section 2997 of the Revised Statutes.

The privileges proposed by this section appear to be an extension of those conferred on importations of packed packages by the act of May 1, 1876, Statutes of 1876, page 49; and if the first section of this act shall be adopted allowing goods to be shipped without appraisement in packing trunks or safes instead of sealed cars, I fail to see any special objections to the second section as a question of law or safety.

The only question that suggests itself in connection therewith is as to its practical working, and on this point no proper judgment could be given, except after a submission of the matter to the experts of this Department, which would delay a reply to your note for a week or more.

The somewhat sweeping change in the forms of oaths proposed in section 3 would not appear to be necessary for the purposes of the act.

A modified form, in place of that section, is herewith inclosed, which seems to me sufficient, provided the other parts of the bill shall meet the approval of Congress.

The bill submitted is herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

CHAS. F. CONANT,
Acting Secretary.

Hon. H. C. BURCHARD,
Committee of Ways and Means, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized to modify, in such manner as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, the forms of oaths prescribed in section 2341 of the Revised Statutes.

Mr. CARR. I object.

Several members called for the regular order.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. This report is prvileged; and as the bill has now been read, I hope there will be no objection to making it a special order for consideration in the House to-morrow, after the morning hour.

Mr. CARR. I object to any action upon the bill.

The SPEAKER. The report is a privileged one. The gentleman has the right to make it at any time, but for commitment only.

Mr. HALE. How does the report become privileged?

Mr. CARR. I object to all consideration of the bill.

Mr. HALE. There are certain reports only of the Committee of Ways and Means which are privileged, just as there are certain reports of the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. The Chair was advised by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] that he had the right to report this bill at any time. The right of the Committee of Ways and Means under the rules is to report at any time for commitment.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That applies to certain measures only.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. To all bills referred to them.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. O, no.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. If the gentleman will refer to the rule he will find I am correct.

The SPEAKER. The recollection of the Chair sustains the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. BURCHARD.] He will, however, refer to the rule.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I have no objection, of course, to the gentleman reporting this bill, as a personal right; but I doubt his right to do so under the rules.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. The rule is that the Committee of Ways and Means is privileged to report at any time for commitment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair so understands.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. And I ask that this bill be set for consideration to-morrow after the reading of the Journal, and from day to day until disposed of, if its consideration is objected to at the present time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will read the rule, which sustains his recollection:

It shall be the duty of the Committee of Ways and Means to take into consideration all reports, &c.; * * * and said committee shall have leave to report for commitment at any time.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] withdraws his objection, and I yield to him.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan has not been recognized as making the objection. It comes from the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. CARR.]

Mr. CONGER. I understand from the gentleman that the clause relating to the modification of fees is not in the substitute. If it is, I ask that it may be stricken out.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to report this bill for commitment?

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I desire to report it at this time for consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules that while a motion is pending to go into Committee of the Whole that can be done only by unanimous consent.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Then I ask that the bill may be made a special order for consideration in the House to-morrow immediately after the reading of the Journal, and from day to day until disposed of.

The SPEAKER. That would require unanimous consent.

Mr. RICE and others objected.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will now test the sense of the House upon the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to resume the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. BUCKNER in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The pending question was upon the amendment of Mr. FULLER, to strike out $20,000 and insert $49,000 as the appropriation for completing the building for court-house, custom-house, and post-office at Evansville, Indiana.

Mr. PIPER. I rise to oppose this amendment. I regret to do so, for as a general principle I believe that all our public buildings should be completed at as early a day as possible. But I see no good reason for making this an exceptional case; for it must be remembered by every gentleman here that this building received last year a special appropriation twice as great in proportion to the cost of the building as the appropriation in any other instance.

Furthermore, it seems to me that this little town somewhere down on the Ohio River, in the lower part of Indiana, is not of sufficient importance to make it a special favorite in our appropriations for public buildings. What its imports are, I know not. I presume that quinine is the principal one; and I have no doubt that the principal exports are whisky, staves, and hoop-poles. [Laughter.] Besides, it will be found upon examination that of the $50,000 appropriated last year, $39,500 remained unexpended at the beginning of this month; so that an additional appropriation now of $20,000 would make nearly $60,000 to be used for this building. This, it seems to me, must be ample. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move pro forma to strike out the last word. I agree with the gentleman from California [Mr. PIPER] in all that he has said except as to the imports and exports of the city of Evansville. Of course the people there are not engaged in such vast enterprises as many of the citizens of California; yet they are a laborious and enterprising people and deserve well of the whole country.

But, Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman that the appropriation in the bill ought not to be increased. Indeed the building ought not to have been erected. There was no excuse for commencing it. It stands on the same footing as the building at Parkersburgh, West Virginia, and other buildings of that class. It ought never to have been commenced; and the amount already expended is fully up to what was intended to be the entire cost of the building, $250,000. It is one of those works for which there is no excuse, if I must say so to my colleague, [Mr. FULLER.]

But the building is upon our hands. We appropriated for it last session $50,000, of which $39,500 remained unexpended on the first day of the present month. We now propose to appropriate $20,000 more to complete the building; and this is $20,000 in excess of the limitation imposed upon the whole cost of the structure by the act under which the work was commenced.

The appropriation of $20,000 with $39,500 now on hand makes, as my friend will perceive, $59,500 to be expended on that building. And I do insist my friend from that district, [Mr. FULLER,] vigilant as he always is in behalf of the interest of his constituents, should bear in mind the appropriation for the balance of this fiscal year and this appropriation for the next fiscal year will be fully up to the average of appropriations made for public buildings throughout the country with the exception, perhaps, of the buildings in the great cities of Chicago, Saint Louis, Cincinatti, and Philadelphia. Those great structures, to be sure, have swallowed up everything. They are influential in our legislation and have been able to place the figures beyond what is believed to be proper by fair-minded gentlemen who are able to give the subject impartial consideration.

As to this Evansville improvement it should not have been entered upon. It has already obtained all that was asked for when the building was originally commenced, and all that it was then understood it would cost. Thirty-nine thousand five hundred dollars to go upon as an unexpended balance for this year, and $20,000 for next year in my judgment is a sufficient appropriation, and I do think my friend with a proper regard to economy ought not to ask for any more. Therefore I believe the argument made by the gentleman from California [Mr. PIPER] in support of his amendment is substantially correct.

Mr. FULLER. I wish to inform my colleague from Indiana, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that he is mistaken when he says the amount of money intended to be allowed by law for this building at Evansville has already been appropriated or will be when this appropriation is made. When the law was passed for the purpose of building a post-office and court-house in the city of Evansville, it was on condition we were to appropriate $100,000 for the purchase of the site, and $200,000 for building the structure. One hundred thousand dollars was appropriated, and of that $99,000 was used in the purchase of a site. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars was appropriated for the purpose of constructing the building. One thousand dollars was left over and above the cost of the site, to go toward the structure of the building. That would make $201,000 we were entitled to under the law, leaving a balance of $49,000 yet to be provided. We are informed by the superintendent of that building that if $49,000 be appropriated, which is the amount we are entitled to under the law, that structure will be completed by the early spring in 1878. The only difference is, if we do not appropriate the whole amount now, that building will have to be carried over another year, and will take two years to complete it instead of one.

I ask my friend, or any other gentleman in this House, if he can tell me why the Government loses one dollar by the completion of this building. If we make the appropriation of $49,000 its completion will be secured at the earliest possible moment. We passed a law to erect this structure, and it is now near completion. The money is to come out of the Treasury some time, and I want to know how the Treasury can lose one dollar by appropriating the full amount necessary to complete the building.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ATKINS. I wish to say one word in regard to this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted.

Mr. ATKINS. Then I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I do not see why the building at Atlanta should be completed more than other buildings now in the course of construction throughout the country.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman means Evansville, Indiana.

Mr. ATKINS. Yes, sir; I mean Evansville, Indiana, and not Atlanta.

Mr. COOK. I hope my friend will not trouble Atlanta.

Mr. ATKINS. I had Atlanta in my mind, and the reason why I had Atlanta in my mind is this: we did not make any such appropriation for Atlanta or Nashville. To the latter we only gave $13,000 in addition to what is already on hand. We gave nothing to Memphis and a great many other cities. I say, therefore, to the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. FULLER,] who represents Evansville district, that we have given proportionately a larger amount for the building in that city than we have to any other cities of this country, with the exception, perhaps, of the buildings in the four large cities. I think the remarks of the chairman of the committee are exceedingly appropriate, therefore, and I believe we have given enough; but we do not propose to complete all these buildings now, for we cannot do so unless this House is ready to increase the revenues of the country by increasing the taxes upon the people. We have got to do one of three things—we have to economize in this as well as in other matters, or we have to raise more taxes, or else issue bonds and create additional loans. I do not think it is the policy of Congress to raise more taxes or to create any new loans, and therefore we had better limit these appropriations and keep them at least within the margin of the revenues of the Government.

I think the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. FULLER] in asking for an increase of the appropriation here reported is asking us to do more than is required, and more than has been granted in the way of appropriations to buildings in other cities, excepting it may be the buildings in large cities, and so far as they are concerned I do not entirely agree with the chairman of the committee, because I think the large cities should have had their appropriations extended to $400,000. Still, in order to gratify my friend, the chairman of the committee, I voted with him, although I believe public policy is much better subserved by larger appropriations for those cities, as we would thereby save the large rents which are now paid for the use of private buildings for public purposes.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I move to strike out the last word.

Gentlemen will readily see this is an exceptional case. It only requires an increase of the appropriation a few thousand dollars to complete this building and make it ready for occupation, while the Government is paying perhaps three times the amount of the interest in the way of rent.

It appears from the report which was read that it only requires about $30,000 to complete this work. At the same time let me say that Evansville has been very modest. The work originally was designed to cost only about $250,000, and I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, for the benefit of my friend from California [Mr. PIPER] that when the Government invests its money in a building in Evansville it can do so with more safety than in a building in California. The gentleman has informed us that his city, San Francisco, has been visited by an earthquake, and that the Government building was destroyed there. There has been no such visitation in Evansville.

Mr. PIPER. I beg leave to correct the gentleman. I made no such assertion.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I understood the gentleman to say that the old Government building was destroyed by an earthquake.

Mr. PIPER. That building does not belong to the Government, but to a private individual.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I have yet to discover that public property is more exempt from such ravages than private. At all events it is evident from the gentleman's statement that San Francisco has been visited by earthquakes.

Mr. PIPER. Do you never have them in Indiana?

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. No, sir.

Mr. PIPER. Then you do not know the history of your own State. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I would be very much pleased if the gentleman would give me the date of an earthquake in Indiana.

Mr. PIPER. Eighteen hundred and twelve.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. There was no Indiana in 1812. The gentleman is somewhat deficient in history himself. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONGER. I desire to ask the gentleman from Indiana a question. I wish to ask him whether he does not claim for Indiana all the rights and privileges of all the other States of the Union, including earthquakes? [Laughter.]

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana. I would say to the gentleman from California that Indiana is not so liable to be visited by earthquakes as States situated on the coast.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. FULLER. I desire to make one further remark in answer to my colleague from Indiana, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the pending amendment is closed.

Mr. FULLER. I move to strike out the last word.

If only this appropriation of $20,000 should be made there will be left a balance of unappropriated moneys belonging to the custom-house at the city of Evansville, amounting to $29,000. Now if you count the rents we pay for the custom-house, post-office, and court-rooms, they will amount to a larger sum than the interest of $29,000 for twelve months. On the score of economy therefore there is no force in the argument of my colleague from Indiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to oppose my colleague's proposition. The truth is we have not got the money. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ATKINS] has spoken truly in regard to that. Every gentleman must see, if he will examine the condition of the Treasury, and the probabilities of the Treasury for the next two years, that we have not got the money; and you have either to increase taxation or to make a new loan and issue new bonds, or you have got to retrench expenditures even below the present point of expenditure.

My friend should bear in mind that this custom-house is not an exceptional case, and that you cannot increase that item of appropriation without as a matter of common justice increasing all the others of the same class. There is indeed a larger amount made available from this time to the end of the next fiscal year for the Evansville building than for any other of the buildings of the same class. The work there has not been conducted with economy. In that town, or perhaps I should say that in that large and growing city, situated virtually at the head of deep-water navigation of the Ohio River, the cost of the site alone exceeded $98,000. The site alone was permitted to cost the enormous sum of $98,000. I see no reason why, in a case where the amount of business does not now justify such buildings for years to come, there should be an appropriation larger than the appropriations made for other works of a similar character. I cannot insist on it for my own State, and my friend should not insist on it for his own district.

Mr. FULLER. I move to strike out the last two words.

I cannot allow the misrepresentation of my colleague to go unanswered. He speaks of Evansville as a small town at the head of navigation on the Ohio River. I will inform my colleague that Evansville is a city of 40,000 inhabitants, and is the headquarters for the commerce of five rivers, the Ohio, Green River, Cumberland, Tennessee, and Wabash. My friend therefore, is very much mistaken, and does not seem to be more familiar with the history of his own State than my friend from California, [Mr. PIPER,] who professes to understand all about Indiana. Evansville, as I have said, has a population of 50,000, and is as enterprising a city as you can find in this whole country.

Mr. HOLMAN. I beg pardon of my friend. He misunderstood me if he thought I spoke of Evansville as a small town. It is certainly one of the most prosperous cities of that valley. It is not one of the great cities of the country, but it is one of the prosperous cities of the good State of Indiana; and I am pleased that my friend has been induced to rise in vindication of the city of Evansville.

Mr. CONGER. Has it decreased in size and business since it got out of the district of the gentleman's colleague?

Mr. FULLER. It increases very rapidly, daily.

Mr. CONGER. I ask whether it has decreased?

Mr. FULLER. No; it has not decreased. It is increasing every day.

The question was taken on Mr. FULLER'S amendment, and there were—ayes 16, noes 45.

Mr. FULLER. No quorum has voted, and I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. FULLER and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 53, noes 69.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Repairs and preservation of public buildings: For repairs and preservation of public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $100,000.

Mr. GOODIN. I submit the following amendment, to come in after that paragraph:

For construction of post-office building at Topeka, Kansas, $50,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order that that is not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. SMALLS. I offer the following amendment, to come in after the paragraph last read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase the lands and buildings now occupied as a custom-house, or any other buildings, at Beaufort, South Carolina, together with such adjoining property as may be necessary to provide accommodation for the offices of the said custom-house, the post-office, and such other public offices as it may be proper to establish therein; including such wharves and buildings as may be required by the Light-House Board; and for this purpose there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $30,000, (if so much be necessary,) to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That no money hereby appropriated shall be used or applied for the purposes mentioned until it shall appear that the State has duly released and relinquished to the United States the right to tax, or in any way assess, the site, or the property of the United States that may be thereon, during the time that the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof.

Mr. ATKINS. I raise the point of order upon that amendment, that there is no provision of law providing for that appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken.

Mr. SMALLS. What is the decision of the Chair?

The CHAIRMAN. There is no existing law under which this appropriation can be made.

Mr. SMALLS. Then I understand that the Chair sustains the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Lighting and buoyage of the Mississippi, Missouri, and Ohio Rivers: For maintenance of lights on the Mississippi, Ohio, and Missouri Rivers, and such buoys as may be necessary, $125,000, to be expended under the direction of the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to a question of order. The last clause of that paragraph is subject, I believe, to a point of order: the words, "to be expended under the direction of the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army." Upon that point of order I wish to state that the Committee on Appropriations, in inserting this clause, thought that a very material reduction of public expense might be made by dispensing with one corps in the public employment on the Western rivers. There is necessarily a body of gentlemen employed under the Chief of engineers on the Mississippi River and the tributaries of that river, and it was believed by the committee, and has been believed for several years, that valuable economy might be promoted by putting the lighting of the river and its tributaries under that branch of the public service. But communications received from the Chief of Engineers this morning and from other sources satisfy me that for the present that economical reform cannot be hoped for. I therefore make the point of order upon that clause that it is new legislation.

Mr. BANKS. I rose to make the same point, but I am satisfied with the statement made by the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN.]

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection the words will be stricken out.

Mr. BANKS. They must be stricken out if the point of order be sustained. This is not allowed by any existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair then sustains the point of order and the words will be stricken out.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For establishing a day-beacon on Anita Rock, San Francisco Harbor, California, $2,300.

Mr. CONGER. I offer the following amendment to come in after that paragraph:

For completing light-house at Point Austin light-station, at Pointe au Barques, Michigan, $75,000.

In 1873 Congress made an appropriation of $10,000 for commencing the construction of a light-house at this point. The Secretary of the Treasury in his estimates for last year recommended the construction of this light-house out on a rocky reef four miles out in Lake Huron, or rather in Saginaw Bay, at its junction with Lake Huron, and that the work upon the reef should be commenced, providing the whole expense of the light-house should not exceed $85,000.

Last year Congress adopted that proposition and authorized the change to the reef, limiting the amount of the cost to $85,000. The Light-House Board reported that the light-house, instead of being built inland, on shore, can be built out in the lake on this reef for that amount, and have made in their report an estimate of $75,000 to build it, and I ask the attention of the committee to the fact that this point is the most dangerous point for the navigation of all the vessels of the Northern lakes. The whole fleet from the Northern lakes, from Chicago to Lake Superior, pass this point. There has been lost upon the reefs where this light-house is proposed to be built within the last eleven years over $5,000,000 worth of property. There have been lost there and in that vicinity within the last eleven years, and mostly within the last six years, thirty-three lives of our citizens. At this point there are several reefs running out into the lake at its junction with Saginaw Bay, which all who have traversed the lakes know to be the most dangerous point on all the lakes, the point most dreaded by sailors and by travelers, Saginaw Bay. I ask, then, that this appropriation may be made, to go on with and continue a work authorized by Congress, and that the light-house be placed in the most desirable position for the safety and lives of our sailors and citizens. I need not speak of the merits of this work. All those who have read the report of the Light-House Board, and especially the communication which they made last year upon the subject, will be aware of the absolute necessity of a light-house there. I believe that the Committee on Appropriations will not oppose the appropriation for this light-house. It is built out on a reef on the water, and the appropriation should be made to finish it at once. There is, perhaps, no place where there is a greater necessity for such a light-house.

Mr. ATKINS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CONGER. Certainly.

Mr. ATKINS. I believe this light-house is not yet begun?

Mr. CONGER. The site of the light-house was selected on the land, and then, owing to the request of most of the captains and sailors upon the lake, last year Congress ordered that the light-house be built, not on the mainland, but on this reef.

Mr. ATKINS. The original estimate for the light-house was $85,000?

Mr. CONGER. Yes.

Mr. ATKINS. And the sum of $10,000 was appropriated?

Mr. CONGER. Yes.

Mr. ATKINS. How much of that sum has been expended?

Mr. CONGER. I do not know; a portion of it was expended this last year by the Light-House Board in making the proper surveys for building the light-house upon the reef, and their estimates have been sent in to the Committee on Appropriations.

One word further. I would not urge, this year, an appropriation for this particular light-house only that being familiar with that region, passing by this point as I do several times a year; having seen, as members may see to-day, the skeletons of wrecked vessels lying there on the reef and on the shore; knowing as I do that over thirty lives have been lost in that vicinity during the gales of past years, most of them in the September gales of two years ago; having seen the petitions of almost every captain on the lakes, and of the insurance companies and chambers of commerce in lake cities urging the necessity of this light-house for the protection of the navigation of the great lakes, I feel compelled by a sense of duty to urge that this appropriation be now made in order to avert these great dangers to life and property.

Mr. HOLMAN. By the act of March 3, 1873, there were appropriated $10,000 for this work. On account of the unsatisfactory location selected by the act of 1873 nothing has ever been done, so that this work has not yet been commenced. It is a work authorized, but no appropriation has been made for it that has yet been made available, the $10,000 appropriated heretofore not having been yet expended.

This work stands substantially upon the same footing as a great many works of the same kind on the Northern lakes, the Pacific coast, and the Atlantic coast. At a time when the condition of the public Treasury would justify it, I have no doubt that quite a large number of works of this class should be erected. But the appropriations made by this bill for this particular branch of the service are as fully up to the capacity of the country to bear burdens for the present as I think they ought to be.

That this work will be built ultimately when the country is in such a condition as to justify the expenditure, I have no doubt. But I trust the gentleman from Michigan will not press this appropriation at this time. We cannot enter upon this work and at the same time refuse to enter upon quite a large number of works of a similar character.

Mr. CONGER. I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of making a single remark further. There are several places upon these lakes which have been recommended as locations for additional light-houses. I will not urge the House to make appropriations for them now as they are not of such immediate and vital necessity. In 1873 Congress admitted the necessity for this work and made a preliminary appropriation. Finding, as the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations says, that the proper place had not been selected for its erection, Congress last year authorized its erection upon the reef. On account of the great danger at that particular point, Pointe au Barques, the most dangerous place on the whole lakes, Congress last year authorized a life-station to be established there, and it has already been established. If I had time I could satisfy every gentleman here of the absolute necessity of having this light-house erected there at this time. There has been kept a light on the shore at one of the mills there and at private expense for many years past as a warning to vessels to avoid this reef.

I desire to say to this committee that there pass this reef every year from thirty-five to forty thousand vessels. There is no place in the United Stafes where so many vessels pass by a given point on the lakes as at this point. By actual count of officers authorized by the Treasury, at the light-house at the head of Saint Clair River it is found that from thirty-five to forty thousand vessels each year pass this point and are exposed to the perils of this navigation.

The question was then taken viva voce upon the amendment of Mr. CONGER, but before the result was announced,

Mr. BRADLEY said: If the gentleman will withdraw his amendment I will renew it.

Mr. ATKINS. The committee is now dividing.

Mr. CONGER. I will withdraw the amendment.

Mr. BRADLEY. I renew it, and desire to occupy a few moments upon it.

Mr. ATKINS. I make the point of order that the committee is now dividing.

Mr. BRADLEY. I do not wish to be interrupted.

Mr. ATKINS. We must proceed with this bill if we would get through with it.

Mr. BRADLEY. I believe I was recognized by the Chair, and had already commenced my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being made that the committee was dividing, the Chair must sustain the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. Does the Chair rule that debate cannot continue upon a new amendment, even if the committee is dividing?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so rules.

The question was again taken upon the amendment of Mr. CONGER, and upon a division there were—ayes 53, noes 46.

Before the result was announced,

Mr. HOLMAN said: No quorum has voted, and I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and Mr. CONGER and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes, 75 noes 73.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For establishing day-beacons on the coasts of Maine, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts, $10,000.

Mr. HALE. I move to strike out this clause, because the subject is provided for in a subsequent part of the bill, where better language is employed to cover the purpose.

The motion of Mr. HALE was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I move to amend by inserting the following:

For steam fog-signals on Whalesback Island, in the harbor of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, $5,000.

I ask that a letter on this subject be read.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let it go.

Mr. HALE. If there is no objection to the amendment, all right.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For commencing the construction of a light-house at Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior, Michigan, $25,000.

Mr. LE MOYNE. I move to amend by striking ont $25,000 and inserting $50,000. An application having been made for the commencement of this work, the Committee on Appropriations have recognized the importance of the work by reporting an appropriation for the purpose. But $25,000 will be entirely inadequate to make even a beginning. As has been suggested, this appropriation would perhaps pay two or three salaries, but it would really do nothing more. The Light-House Board has recommended to the committee an appropriation of $100,000 as proper to be made this year to begin the work. This amount would really make a commencement. But instead of reporting such an appropriation, the committee proposes to give only $25,000, which will be of very little utility in beginning the work, and will not really be economical.

I would like to have read a resolution on this subject adopted by the Board of Trade of Chicago, and would also call the attention of the committee to the fact that the Legislature of Michigan has unanimously passed a resolution, which was presented this morning, urging upon Congress the importance of this work.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not think that this motion is in very good faith, if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LE MOYNE] will allow me to say so. The appropriation as it stands in the bill is subject to a point of order, and such a point would have been made had it been expected that an effort would be made to increase the amount. This is a new work entirely; the bill contains the first authority for beginning it; and it does seem to me that an appropriation giving $25,000 to begin a work of this kind is very ample. I can assure my friend from Illinois that if it had been understood there would be an effort to increase the amount, a point of order would have been made upon this appropriation. When we have reported an appropriation for beginning a new work, which is subject to a point of order, I do not think that we are treated with fairness when the gentleman undertakes to increase the amount.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Indiana make a point of order?

Mr. HOLMAN. It is too late to do so, I presume.

Mr. LE MOYNE. Would the gentleman make a point of order on his own bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course members of the Committee on Appropriations frequently differ upon questions of this kind. The committee are perfectly familiar with this subject, and $25,000 would not have been reported if it had not been understood that this was to be satisfactory for the present year.

The CHAIRMAN. The document sent up by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LE MOYNE] will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, by order and on behalf of the Board of Trade of the City of Chicago, and representing in large measure the marine interest of the great lakes, beg leave to respectfully represent unto your honorable bodies that a dangerous reef of rocks, known as "Stannard's Rocks," exists in Lake Superior, directly in the usual course of vessels navigating those waters above Marquette, and that no appropriate light or other appliance exists to indicate the location of said rock and warn mariners of the danger to which they are exposed; therefore, your memorialists respectfully pray your honorable bodies that you will at the present session make the necessary appropriation, as asked by the Light-House Board, and authorize the early construction of a suitable light-house at the place indicated, to the end that the perils of navagation incident to the exceedingly dangerous character of this obstruction may be abated.

And your memorialists will ever pray, &c.

D. H. LINCOLN, President.

Attest: CHAS. RANDOLPH, Secretary.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, February, 1877.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. LE MOYNE, it was not agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING.

For labor and expenses of engraving and printing, namely: For labor, (by the day, piece, or contract,) including labor of workmen skilled in engraving, transferring, plate-printing, and other specialties necessary for carrying on the work of engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, the pay for such labor to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury at rates not exceeding the rates usually paid for such work; and for other expenses of engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States; for paper for notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, including mill expenses, boxing, and transportation; for materials other than paper required in the work of engraving and printing; for purchase of engravers' tools, dies, rolls, and plates, and for machinery and repairs of the same, and for expenses of operating macerating machines for the destruction of the United States notes, bonds, national bank notes, and other obligations of the United States authorized to be destroyed, $800,000.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I move to amend by inserting at the end of the paragraph just read the following:

Provided, That the work be performed at the Treasury Department.

Mr. HOLMAN. I desire to reserve a point of order on that amendment.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Will the gentleman state his point of order?

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose the point would hardly be sustained, as I observe that the amendment is in the form of a condition upon the appropriation. I shall have to withdraw the point.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to give briefly my reasons for offering this amendment. In the first place, this work is now being performed by the bank-note company, and they are receiving for it a larger sum than would have been expended by the Treasury Department for the same work. The proposition under which the work would have been done at the Treasury Department was much lower than that of the bank-note company, but the latter has received the contract. Now, I offer this amendment in good faith, believing that this work should be performed by the Government in the Treasury Department. We have the material; we have everything necessary for the performance of the work. Besides, the execution of the work here in the Department gives employment to hundreds of the widows and orphans of our brave soldiers, whose only means of support is in the performance of such work. Only a few weeks ago four hundred of these widows and orphans were dismissed, and the contract was given to this bank-note company. Now, I hope that every man on this floor who has a spark of sympathy in his breast for the widows and orphans of those who fell in defense of their country's flag will vote for this amendment.

Why should this work be given to the bank-note company? There is a secret in the matter which I do not wish to call in question now; but, sir, it was an outrage, because the bank-note company is receiving for this work very much more than the sum at which it was proposed to be done in the Treasury Department. I hope the amendment will prevail. It simply provides that the work shall be executed in the Department, leaving the Secretary of the Treasury to regulate the prices to be paid.

Mr. HOLMAN. This work may be done in the Treasury Department now. The only effect of the gentleman's amendment is to take this subject from the control of the Secretary of the Treasury and require the work to be done at a particular place. The duty of the Secretary of the Treasury is to have the work done as cheaply as possible; and in the judgment of the Committee on Appropriations it is very unsafe to restrict him as to the methods and means by which this work shall be done. If it can be done as cheaply in the Treasury Department, it ought to be done there, and undoubtedly will be. If part of it can be done more cheaply elsewhere, then the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury is plain. This provision has stood as a part of the law for several years, and it is certainly safer to leave it under the control of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. LUTTRELL. In reply to the gentleman's point——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted.

Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS. I move to strike out the last word; and I rise, Mr. Chairman, more for the purpose of correcting a statement the gentleman from California [Mr. LUTTRELL] has made than to oppose his proposition. He is entirely mistaken in his premises in reference to the cause of the discharge of the employés of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing during the last winter. The only work now being done to any extent by the bank-note companies is the printing of the internal-revenue stamps, and that has been provided for by a bill which passed the House a short time ago. That has been and would have been restored otherwise without any action of the House. The national bank-notes are the only bills which were being printed outside, and they have been and are being rapidly withdrawn into the Treasury. There are only a few classes, or rather a few particular denominations, which have not yet been brought back into the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. A proposition such as that proposed by the gentleman from California would perhaps defeat the work being done in the bureau here under the Treasury Department, if the bureau is able, as I believe it is, to do the work more cheaply than it can be done elsewhere. I think the language of the amendment is unfortunate. It ought to provide "if it can be done as cheaply in the Department as elsewhere."

One word further and I will yield the floor to the gentleman from California. The contract for printing the internal-revenue stamps was let in 1874, and is not a recent change. The effort of the Department has been to get it back into the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Mr. LUTTRELL. We ought not go outside to have any work of this character performed when we have the means and material to do the work.

Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS. I am in favor of having it all done here.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Then I hope my amendment will prevail.

I wish to say, in reply to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that if we are to judge the future by the past we will have to pay a much larger sum in having this work done by the bank-note companies than by having it done in the Treasury Department.

Mr. ATKINS. As the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has stated, I think we can safely leave this whole matter with the Secretary of the Treasury. I do not believe this House ought to hamper the Secretary of the Treasury by any such provision as that proposed in the gentleman's amendment. He has now this whole thing in his charge, and is better qualified to judge how this work should be done, so as to protect the Government and protect the currency, than we possibly can be.

As to the question of economy which the gentleman from California raises, I do not think there is anything in that; for the reason if other companies shall be required to do some of this printing, or part of this printing, the Government Bureau is relieved of that much expense so far as that is concerned. Besides, I think it is a matter of safety and protection to the currency that its engraving should be done at different establishments, that it should not all be done in any one establishment, although that should be the Treasury Department. I think it is better to divide it. There is less opportunity for collusion, less opportunity for fraud, and that is what we wish to avoid. I think for the protection of the currency this matter should be left to the option of the Secretary of the Treasury, who will act for the benefit of the Government and for the protection of the currency.

Mr. BANKS rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted.

Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS. I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. BANKS. I renew it. What has been said, Mr. Chairman, by the gentleman who has just taken his seat in regard to the discretion properly lodged with the Secretary of the Treasury is undoubtedly correct, and I should regret either to make or to hear made any intimation that we distrusted the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury in that regard. But while the present Secretary may take one view of this policy another Secretary might take a different view, and thus we would be changing from time to time in regard to one of the most important of measures and duties of the Government, and that is the protection of the currency in behalf of the people as well as the Government. This ought to be done under some permanent provision of law, so there should not be from time to time a continual change in the method of doing it. Inasmuch as the machinery has been provided and the Treasury building has been strengthened in order that the work might be done there, and inasmuch as there is a guarantee, a security, a guard over any counterfeiting or falsification of the currency of the country which the Government cannot have over contractors or private establishments, it seems to me, if it can be done as well and cheaply there, it ought to be done in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. As the gentleman from Michigan has given the House the assurance that the Department has endeavored to get this work——

Mr. ATKINS. Let me say that is the proposition he makes, to leave it to the Secretary of the Treasury to have it done in the Treasury Department or elsewhere.

Mr. BANKS. I am for a proposition that shall direct the Secretary of the Treasury to do this in the department of the Government provided for that purpose until otherwise provided by law.

If the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS] can state to the committee that the Department is endeavoring to get this work back into the hands which have been employed under it, and to do it under the inspection and eye of the Government, I should be satisfied with that without any further action. But it seems to me that if the Government is going to provide this paper currency, it should take it under its own supervision and guard, and not trust it to anybody else—whether it should be done cheaper or not—over whom it could not have supervision and control.

Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS. I desire to say that the subcommittee which had this matter in charge gave the subject careful examination. The Secretary of the Treasury has been before us and also the experts in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. That subcommittee, I think, is unanimous in the impression that this work should be done in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing if it can be done there as cheaply as it can be outside; and we are of opinion, after a full investigation of the subject, that it can be done as cheaply; and that there will thus be given to the people in regard to all the securities of the Government far greater security because of the system of checks adopted in the bureau. There is a check there on every sheet of paper which goes into the bureau, guaranteeing perfect safety in the execution of the work.

The Secretary of the Treasury, however, is anxious to have the bureau conducted upon something that may be considered a strict business basis. He has been working to bring that about, and at the same time to get back into the bureau all the work of the Government; and I believe that he is doing that in good faith. I would have no objection to the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. LUTTRELL] if it were somewhat differently worded.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I am willing to accept any amendment the gentleman may suggest if the object I have in view be secured.

Mr. BANKS. I suggest the addition of these words:

Provided it can be done as cheaply, as perfectly, and as safely.

Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS. I think the language suggested by the gentleman from Massachusetts will answer very well. I wish to add one word further in reference to the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts. It is really very important that there should be stability in the work of this bureau. The great difficulty has been that work has been given to it at one time and taken from it at another. There should be some regular system. At the same time a healthy competition will not hurt the bureau.

Mr DURHAM. I move to strike out the last word. Two years ago, in the last session of the last Congress, the Committee on Banking and Currency took a great deal of testimony in regard to this matter of engraving and printing. If gentlemen will take the trouble to look for them they will find two reports on that subject now in the document-room, one of the majority and the other of the minority of the committee. Those reports show this fact which controverts one position taken by the gentleman from California. The bureau did not propose to do the work as cheaply as it was done in the office at New York. What has occurred since that time I do not know.

But I differ with my friend from Michigan in this respect, that I undertake to say that it is not safe to have all this work done in the bureau at this point. I want as much of the work done here as can be done, keeping in view the consideration of safety. The economy is a small matter in comparison with the safety of the printing and engraving.

Why is it not as safe to do all the work in one office as in two or three? Every Secretary that has had control of this matter heretofore has deemed it prudent as a matter of security to have the work done in three different offices. The gentleman says Secretary Bristow did not. I beg the gentleman's pardon. Secretary Bristow did think it necessary to have this work so done. I do not speak of the common ordinary stamps, but of the currency of the Government. The very statement of the proposition I make will prove that what I say is true. For instance, take a greenback. You print the back of the greenback at one place, and then one impression on the face of it at another; finally, the numbering is put on here in the Department. When this is done, how can there be any collusion? If you have one set of plates at New York, and another at Philadelphia, and another here, how can you bring these plates together so that there can be any counterfeiting done? It would be easy to get all the plates together where you have the work all done at one office and so defraud the Government, whereas it would be utterly impossible to do that where the work is done in three different offices. My judgment is, having investigated this subject during three long months, that you do not have perfect security unless you have the printing done in more than two offices. I mean you ought to have parts of the work done in two offices outside of the office of the Printing and Engraving Bureau here. But so far as it can be done consistently with security it should be done here, because we have the capital, the material, and the employés here. But I beg gentlemen not to overlook this grand consideration, that it is more important to have confidence in these bills and other securities than to effect the saving of a few dollars, or to secure the employment of a few females that may be here in Washington City.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I think the gentleman misunderstands this matter. I understand that Secretary Bristow was in favor of doing this work in the Department. That is my understanding, and has been my understanding for the last three years.

Mr. DURHAM. Why I can go into a New York office and show a contract signed by Secretary Bristow giving this work, or a part of it, to a New York company.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Yes, because you made a law compelling him to do so. Now, this amendment provides that the Secretary of the Treasury may make his own contract and direct that work shall be performed in the Treasury Department, provided it can be performed as cheaply and safely as in any other way. I accept the amendments of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS] and the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. BANKS,] and I hope that the amendment as modified will be adopted.

The amendment, as modified, was read, as follows:

Provided, The work be performed at the Treasury Department: And provided further, That it can be done as cheaply, as perfectly, and as safely.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Now I think the amendment covers everything that is necessary in the premises, and I hope it will prevail.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is apparently unimportant; let it pass.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

COAST SURVEY.

Survey of the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf coasts: For every purpose and object necessary for and incident to the continuation of the survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and the western coast of the United States, and the Mississippi River to the head of ship navigation, with soundings and observations of deep-sea temperatures in the Gulf Stream and the Gulf of Mexico, and observations of currents along the same coasts, the continuation of the survey of the Pacific coasts of the United States, with soundings and observations of deep-sea temperatures in the branch of the Japan Stream off, and observations of other currents along the same coasts, and the preparation, engraving, lithographing, and issuing of charts, the preparation and publication of the Coast Pilot and other results of the coast survey, the purchase of materials therefor, and including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, and pay and subsistence of engineers for the steamers engaged on those coasts, $350,000.

Mr. BANKS. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out $350,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $500,000, and I do it for the purpose of asking a question of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. I would like to know if this is a reduction upon the appropriation heretofore made for this purpose, and if this is the sum that is regarded as necessary by the Coast Survey Department?

Mr. HOLMAN. The appropriation is lower than the estimate and lower than the appropriations for several years past, somewhat. The aggregate appropritaion for the Coast Survey in this bill is about $417,000. The appropriations are about the same as those which used to be made prior to the war, say between the year 1850 and the year 1860. It has been thought, in view of the progress made in the work of the survey, that an appropriation now corresponding with that period would be quite ample. An appropriation of $417,000 is certainly quite a large appropriation, besides that during the last two or three years heavy appropriations had been made for vessels for this service, which diminishes largely the claim ordinarily made upon this fund for the construction and repair of vessels to be engaged in his work. We think that $417,000 is a large enough sum to be appropriated at this time, although estimates are higher.

Mr. BANKS. Since the period to which the gentleman from Indiana has alluded, the coast survey has been greatly extended. It was at that time limited to but a small part of the coast; a small part of the work of survey had been completed then and in the fifteen or sixteen years which have elapsed since then the surveys have been largely extended, so that they now embrace a great part of the coast line of the Republic. Now this work is to be completed or continued with more or less care throughout the whole of this coast line through the year. The changes of currents and the changed condition of the coast in itself require constant attention to this work; and if we withdraw any portion of the appropriation, so as to reduce the means or to reduce the number of persons employed in the work, the deficiency will have to be made up hereafter by an increase of appropriations. We shall have to make appropriations hereafter to supply the defects occasioned by the suspension of the work upon any part of the coast. It is the worst possible economy to reduce this appropriation to such an extent as to prevent the most complete attention to the survey of the coast. It will have to be done hereafter, and not only have to be done but the deterioration and injury occasioned by the neglect of this year will have to be appropriated for another year. And it seems to me that if this reduction is to be made it ought not to be agreed to by this committee except upon the most careful consideration and the most direct proof that the amount proposed to be appropriated is sufficient for the emergencies of the time. I am not prepared to speak myself of the amount absolutely necessary.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BANKS] will bear in mind that for the last few years the appropriations have been very large. And although the coast surveys have been quite extended, especially on the Pacific coast, the appropriations have been such as to enable the board having charge of the coast survey to make very large progress in the work. It is obvious that as large appropriations are not required at this time as were needed a few years ago. The field is being diminished. The large field we had six or seven years ago is largely diminished.

The gentleman will observe another fact. This is confined to the Coast Survey proper, and does not extend to the expenses of inland surveying, inland triangulation by the coast survey. It is confined to the coast survey, and not to any other purpose; so that in fact in that way there is an enlargement of the appropriation for the surveys of this Department.

Mr. BANKS. One great object, and one great national benefit derived from these coast surveys, is that by establishing points on the coast line there is a guide by which we can make surveys of the territory of every State hereafter perfectly uniform; not only of one State with another, but of the whole with the exact boundaries and monuments fixed upon the coast line.

Now to reduce the appropriation for this purpose to the amount here proposed will interfere with this work of triangulation and survey, which is necessary in order to complete the surveys of a large number of States where the surveys have not yet been completed. It is necessary in order to make those surveys correspond one with the other and with the monuments upon the coast line, that this work on the coast should be completed in the most perfect manner, and I think it would be unwise economy to reduce the appropriation for that purpose.

I remember that some twenty or twenty-five years ago, or a longer period ago than that, a map of the State of Massachusetts was prepared at great expense. It was made from different surveys. When they came to bring the surveys together, those surveys having been conducted by different persons, it was found that they did not correspond with each other, and the work would have to be done over again. That would be exactly the result in the surveys of the different States in the interior. If they had no guides in the form of monuments, established upon the coast, for their surveys, it is likely they would be found not to correspond with each other and with those monuments. On that account we ought to be careful not to diminish this appropriation so far as to impair the work.

Allow me to call the attention of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to another consideration. Upon these coast surveys depend more or less the larger commerce as well as the minor commerce of every port along the entire coast. The currents are continually being changed by the tides and other natural causes, and a continual watch and care and a continual notation of these changes, with monuments indicating what they are, are absolutely indispensable to the safety as well as the increase of that commerce. I believe these two considerations will justify the Committee of the Whole in making the increased appropriation I have proposed.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of saying that it is the belief of scientific men that the establishment by astronomical observations of geodetic points in the interior and near the coast will serve every purpose, without carrying out this exceedingly expensive system of triangulation which has been entered upon. I concede that it is very proper to establish upon the coast the necessary geodetic points, and they are now being established, and will continue to be established under this appropriation. But in reference to inland surveys, it is undoubtedly sufficient that geodetic points shall be established by ordinary astronomical observations.

I will state further that this subject has been examined with a great deal of care by the Committee on Appropriations, and it is the belief of that committee that the amount here proposed is sufficient to carry on with a reasonable degree of promptness the surveys that are now in progress and to enable the board to extend their work to any extent required by the commerce of the country.

I withdraw my pro forma amendment.

The question was then taken upon the amendment moved by Mr. BANKS; and upon a division there were—ayes 16, noes 63.

No further count being called for, the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

For compensation in lieu of moieties in certain cases under customs-revenue laws, $100,000.

Mr. HURD. I move to insert after the paragraph just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the office of appraiser of merchandise at the port of Toledo, in the district of Maumee, in the State of Ohio, be, and the same is hereby, abolished, and the duties of said office shall hereafter be performed by the collector of customs without additional compensation.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

Propagation of food-fishes: For introduction of shad into the waters of the Pacific and Atlantic States, the Gulf States, and of the Mississippi Valley, and of salmon, whitefish, and other useful food-fishes into the waters of the United States to which they are best adapted, and for continuing the inquiry into the causes of the decrease of food-fishes of the United States, $40,000.

Mr. LANE. I would like to inquire how this money is expended, and under whose direction, if the gentleman in charge of this bill can inform me?

Mr. HOLMAN. It is expended under the direction of Professor Baird.

Mr. LANE. I move to increase the amount to $45,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well; let that amendment go.

Mr. ATKINS. There is no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

For photographing, engraving, and printing plans for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $1,000.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. I move to amend by inserting after the paragraph just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the payment of John T. Morris, of Texas, $1,000, for the capture of the mail-robber J. C. Reed, in pursuance of a reward offered for that purpose by the agent of the Post-Office Department and in pursuance of an act of the first session of the Forty-third Congress.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will reserve any point of order upon that amendment until the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THROCKMORTON] can point out the act to which reference is made.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. It will be found on page 170 of the Statutes at Large of the first session of the Forty-third Congress. I will explain this amendment, and then, perhaps, the Committee on Appropriations may remember the facts.

The stage between San Antonio and Austin, Texas, was robbed by three persons, and the agent of the Post-Office Department in that State advertised in the public newspapers a reward of $3,000 for the capture of the robbers. He immediately informed the Department here by telegram of that fact, and the Department applied to Congress for an appropriation to pay the reward. Congress passed an act appropriating $3,000 to pay for capturing these mail-robbers.

This man John T. Morris, under the promise of the mail-agent in Texas, who offered the reward, and also in pursuance of an act of the Legislature of Texas offering a reward, pursued and captured the chief of these robbers, and in the capture killed him. His body was identified and the State of Texas paid the reward. But when application was made to the Department in Washington for the proportion of the reward for the capture of this person, the Department refused to pay it, on the ground that the reward was not offered by the Department until after the robber had been captured.

Notwithstanding the fact that the agent of the Post-Office Department in Texas had offered the reward through the newspapers, and although Congress had made an appropriation for the purpose, yet because this man was captured before the Postmaster-General had offered the reward the Department refused to pay him.

The papers establishing every fact that I have stated are in my hands. The case was before the Committee on Appropriations during the last session of Congress; and I must say, as usual with that committee, they reported the papers back to the House and asked that they be referred to the Committee of Claims. The case has rested with the latter committee from that time till the present; but I have here a report prepared by the chairman of the subcommittee (on which the whole committee have not yet acted) recommending this appropriation.

It has been nearly three years since this reward was offered by the post-office agent in Texas and by the Postmaster-General; but for the reason I have stated the Postmaster-General refuses to pay the reward.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman state again the reason for the refusal? I did not hear it distinctly.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. After the robbery had occurred, the agent of the Post-Office Department in Texas published in the newspapers an offer of reward for the capture of these robbers. He telegraphed his action to the Postmaster-General, who applied to Congress for an appropriation; and an appropriation was made. The Postmaster-General then offered the reward; but before he did so this robber had been pursued and captured. Because he was captured before the Postmaster-General offered the reward, the Department refused to pay him.

I will say further that the State of Texas offered a reward and has paid its portion of the reward for the capture of this man J. C. Reed, one of the most notorious desperadoes, mail robbers, and train robbers in the southern or western country.

We think that the man who made this capture is entitled to payment. I hope the Committee on Appropriations will not object to the amendment. I hold in my hand the papers which establish all the facts. The gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. BROWN,] the chairman of a subcommittee of the Committee of Claims, has prepared a report recommending this appropriation, but the general committee has not yet acted upon this subject.

Mr. HOLMAN. The question is whether an item like this ought to go into an appropriation bill. I find that the language of the act making this appropriation is as follows:

To enable the Postmaster-General to offer a reward for the apprehension of parties concerned in the late mail robberies in Missouri, $5,000; and for the same purpose, in the matter of the late robberies in Texas, $3,000.

Here is an appropriation of money. The Postmaster-General refuses to use the money because before the appropriation was made the capture had occurred. The mail robber had been captured before the act was passed.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. Now will my friend let me interrupt him a moment? Prior to this the Post-Office agent in Texas offered the reward through the papers and notified the Postmaster-General of the fact. Here is his sworn statement to that effect. The Postmaster-General applied to Congress and Congress made an appropriation. He then offered the reward; but the robber was pursued and captured before the date of the offer by the Postmaster-General. I have the papers here proving every statement I have made.

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course the act of the agent of the Post-Office Department was entirely without authority. Even the Postmaster-General himself could not offer a reward except in pursuance of law. Such a law was passed in the Forty-third Congress in the language which I have read. After it was passed, the reward was offered; but before it had been offered the mail robber was captured. The only question now is whether Congress shall appropriate money to pay for a voluntary service, not rendered under or in pursuance of any law or of any legal offer of reward. The question is whether we shall appropriate $1,000 to pay for this voluntary service? It is such a service as every citizen is interested in performing, and at first blush there would seem to be no reason why a citizen performing a proper act, apprehending a robber, an act in which all good citizens are alike interested, should afterward insist upon being paid a reward.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. I beg to remind my friend that the man who made this capture did so at the risk of his own life, and in doing so was obliged to kill this robber. Unquestionably it was the duty of every good citizen to pursue and if possible capture this robber; but I ask how many men in this broad country would undertake a dangerous service like this unless some stimulus should be offered by the Government for the performance of this patriotic duty?

Mr. HOLMAN. Was the man who made this capture a public officer?

Mr. THROCKMORTON. No, sir; he was not; but for the purpose of making this capture he was specially invested with authority as a deputy sheriff of my own county. He was not a public officer, but in order that he might lawfully make the arrest he received this deputation of authority. At the imminent risk of his own life he pursued this man, and in the attempt to capture him had to kill him. The body of the robber was abundantly identified as that of the perpetrator of this outrage upon the public mails. He was known as one of the worst desperadoes in the entire country.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I will trouble the committee but a moment longer; and in the first place I will be glad if the gentleman from Pennsylvania will let me know the exact point in reference to which he has inquired.

Mr. CLYMER. I ask whether the person who made this arrest did so instigated thereto by an offer of reward on the part of the agent of the Post-Office Department.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. Yes, sir; I can state that fact, although just now I cannot state exactly as to the amount of the reward offered.

Mr. CLYMER. This same agent of the Post-Office Department, as I understand the gentleman, then made the request of the Postmaster-General that he should apply to Congress for an appropriation to cover the amount of the reward?

Mr. THROCKMORTON. Not that he should offer a reward. I will state the fact. I have here the deposition of the post-office agent himself. As soon as the robbery occurred the post-office agent published it in the newspapers at Austin and all over the State of Texas, offering a reward for the apprehension of these three robbers. Then he immediately telegraphed to the Department and asked the Postmaster-General to confirm his action. The Postmaster-General applied to Congress, and Congress made the appropriation; but in the meantime this party got upon the trail of these robbers, followed them up, and captured this one.

Mr. CLYMER. But the appropriation was made.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. The appropriation was made, but the Postmaster-General had not published it. There may have been a few days, a short time, intervening. My colleague [Mr. HANCOCK] brought the matter before Congress, and the appropriation was made. Now, the fact is that the State of Texas has paid her portion of the reward.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out the last word. Can the gentleman give us any information of the amount of the reward offered by the post-office agent in Texas, for it would seem to me, whatever that was should govern the amount to be paid by the Government of the United States rather than the amount of the specific appropriation.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. I think the post-office agent offered a reward of $3,000 for the capture of these robbers, and that the Postmaster-General asked Congress for an appropriation, which was made.

Mr. HOLMAN. What I wish to know is, what was the reward in the first instance offered for the arrest of these robbers by the post-office agent in the State of Texas?

Mr. THROCKMORTON. It is my recollection that the State of Texas offered a similar reward, a reward of $3,000 for the capture of these three robbers, and that State paid $1,000 for the capture of this one.

Mr. HOLMAN. I find that the State of Texas, by an act approved April 8, 1875, paid to this claimant $1,000, being one-third of the reward offered by the State for the apprehension of these robbers, there having been three robbers engaged in the robbery.

Mr. THOCKMORTON. That is my recollection.

Mr. HOLMAN. The State of Texas seems properly to have taken this thing in hand, and the party making the arrest of one of these robbers received from that State a reward of $1,000, and I do not think the gentleman should insist on duplicating that reward.

Mr. THOCKMORTON. I only insist upon what is right.

Mr. HOLMAN. It seems doubtful whether substantial justice would authorize it, as this party has already received $1,000 from the State of Texas.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. He is entitled to the sum proposed by my amendment under the law, and I hope it will be adopted.

Mr. THROCKMORTON'S amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GUNTER. I offer the following amendment, to come in after the amendment just adopted on the motion of the gentleman from Texas.

The Clerk read as follows:

For retracing and conspicuously marking the boundary line between the State of Arkansas and the Indian Territory, $9,900, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. HOLMAN. The amendment is subject to the point of order that this is a new work, and beside, we have passed the subject of surveys in the bill, to which, if in order, this amendment would be germane.

Mr. GUNTER. I wish to call the attention of my friend from Indiana to the act of Congres which was passed at the last session of the Forty-third Congress, which fully authorizes this appropriation.

This appropriation merely carries out the provision of that law. Therefore it is not subject to the point of order that it is not provided for by law, because, as I have already stated, the act of the last session of the Forty-third Congress expressly provided for it.

Mr. HOLMAN. If there is a law authorizing this appropriation I should be glad to see it; but my further point is that the subject of surveys of the public lands to which this is germane has been passed. We had this subject before us during the past year, and the committee did not think the appropriation should be made. I make the point of order, first, that no law has been produced authorizing this survey, and consequently that it is not germane to this part of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from Arkansas has any law authorizing this appropriation, he will send it up to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. GUNTER. I send up to the Clerk's desk the law which was passed during the Forty-third Congress.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the boundary line between the State of Arkansas and the Indian country, as originally surveyed and marked, and upon which the lines of the surveys of the public lands in the State of Arkansas were closed, be, and the same is hereby, declared to be the permanent boundary line between the said State of Arkansas and the Indian country.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior shall, as soon as practicable, cause the boundary line, as fixed in the foregoing section, to be retraced and marked in a distinct and permanent manner; and if the original line when retraced shall be found to differ in any respect from what the boundary line would be if run in accordance with the provisions of the treaties establishing the eastern boundary line of the Choctaw and Cherokee Nations, then the surveyors shall note such variations and compute the area of the land which in that case would be taken from the State of Arkansas or the Indian country, as the case may be; and the Secretary of the Interior shall also cause any monuments set up in any former survey, indicating any line at variance with the survey provided for in this act, to be obliterated.

Mr. GUNTER. I beg to say that that is a bill which was introduced in the Senate in the Forty-third Congress. It passed the Senate, passed the House, was signed by the President, and became a law; and the Secretary of the Treasury recommends an appropriation of $9,900 for the completion of the survey as therein indicated.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is of opinion that the amendment is not liable to the point of order made by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. BLOUNT. Does the Chair rule on the other point of order, that we had passed that portion of the bill to which this amendment is germane—the portion of the bill relating to surveys?

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has not in point of fact passed that portion of the bill. The subject of surveys is yet to be acted on.

Mr. BLOUNT. We passed it with the understanding that we should go back to that portion of the bill. I insist that the amendment is not in order at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Arkansas to withhold his amendment until the portion of the bill relating to surveys is before the committee.

Mr. GUNTER. I will do so.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. A few days ago I got the leave of the House to offer as an amendment to this bill what I send to the desk to be read.

I desire to say that this amendment which I offer under the instructions of the Committee on Elections, of which I have the honor to be chairman, appropriates the usual allowances made by each Congress for the necessary expenses incurred by gentlemen contesting seats on this floor. While the Committee on Elections has gone further than I would have done myself in approving the necessary expenses of both contestants and contestees, I will not take any issue with the committee as to that before the Committee of the Whole; but there are two cases—those last named in the amendment—which I must oppose.

The amount allowed in the Forty-first Congress for these expenses was $63,500. The amount allowed in the Forty-second Congress was $24,600. The amount allowed in the Forty-third Congress was $26,881. The amount now recommended by this committee is $17,718, from which amount I propose to move to strike off $2,783, leaving as the total amount, $14,935.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is understood that a point of order will be made on this proposition.

Mr. BLOUNT. The point of order cannot be made. This amendment was made in order by a resolution of the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. After the gentleman from Virginia has made his explanation I shall raise the question of order on these amendments.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. This morning the Committee on Elections had a meeting and placed an amendment in charge of the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. THOMPSON,] who will inform the committee in regard to it when he gets the floor. All the items in the amendment which I have sent to the desk are agreed to except the two last; all of them being very much below the expenses proved before the committee as having been actually incurred. In most cases the expense account included very exorbitant attorney fees, which the committee did not think it proper to allow.

The two last cases are those of Mr. Frost of Massachusetts and Mr. Morey of Louisiana. In both those cases they were the unsuccessful contestees. They held their seats until near the end of the Congress; and Mr. Frost drew as pay and mileage $7,005.36 and Mr. Morey $6,793.67. Now, according to the rule which has been adopted by the House they cannot properly be re-imbursed for expenses incurred in contesting a seat to which they were not entitled, as the House decided that they were wrongfully seated; and this decision of the committee is in direct conflict with the law passed by the last Congress, where it is provided:

That no sitting member who shall be unseated before the expiration of the Congress shall be entitled to the benefit of the appropriations of this act.

That is the law of the land. While it was confined to that special appropriation, I am satisfied it was intended by the law-making power to make it apply in all cases, so that no member who has been unseated and has drawn his mileage and pay up to the time of his being unseated shall be allowed any compensation.

Mr. HOLMAN. I trust the gentleman will send up his amendment to the desk, that it may be read.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I have sent it up. I will make no objection to the recommendation of the committee until the last two items are reached, which I will propose to strike out. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay J. V. LE MOYNE, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Le Moyne vs. Farwell, third district of Illinois, $1,200.

J. G. ABBOTT, contestant, expenses in the contested-election case of Abbott vs. Frost, fourth district of Massachusetts, $2,000.

William B. Spencer, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Spencer vs. Morey, fifth district of Louisiana, $734.05.

James H. Platt, jr., contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Platt vs. Goode, second district of Virginia, $1,000.

JOHN GOODE, jr., contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Platt vs. Goode, second district of Virginia, $500.

JOSEPH H. RAINEY, contestee, expenses in contested-election case Lee vs. Rainey, first district of South Carolina, $1,200.

Samuel Lee, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Lee vs. Rainey, first district of South Carolina, $1,200.

CHARLES W. BUTTZ, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Buttz vs. Mackey, second district of South Carolina, $1,200.

JERE HARALSON, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Bromberg vs. Haralson, first district of Alabama, $1,150.

S. S. FENN, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Fenn vs. Bennett, Idaho Territory, $1,000.

H. B. STRAIT, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Cox vs. Strait, second district of Minnesota, $1,500.

E. St. Julian Cox, contestant, expenses in the case of Cox vs. Strait, second district of Minnesota, $1,500.

R. S. Frost, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Abbott vs. Frost, fourth district of Massachusetts, $2,000

Frank Morey, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Spencer vs. Morey, fifth district of Louisiana, $734.05.

Mr. THOMPSON. On behalf of the Committee of Elections I desire to present three cases in addition to those already presented by the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let them be read, and I will then make my point of order.

The clerk read as follows:

Frederick Bromberg, first district, Alabama, $1,500.
C. B. Darrall, third district, Louisiana, $400.
John Lynch, sixth district, Mississippi, $500.

Mr. HOLMAN. I raise my point of order, not on a rule of this House, but on a law enacted by Congress. I send it to the desk to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 130. No payment shall be made by the House of Representatives out of its contingent fund or otherwise to either party to a contested-election case for expenses incurred in prosecuting or defending the same.

Mr. HOLMAN. What is the date of that?

The CLERK. March 3, 1873.

Mr. HOLMAN. Now my point of order is this: An appropriation bill comes before the House, and it is proposed to amend that bill by putting upon it an appropriation of money not authorized by law to pay contestants, when the law itself, the law of the land, expressly prohibits the application of money for such a purpose. I do not pretend to say that Congress might not repeal that law by the passage of another law. But I submit that in an appropriation bill we can only appropriate money in pursuance of law, and that a proposition offered cannot come in in contravention of that law. Unanimous consent given to the House that this amendment should be in order could only be consent to suspend the simple rules of the House on the subject, and not to suspend the law of the land, which expressly prohibits the application of money to such purposes.

It seems to me that this point of order ought to be sustained. It is not simply a rule of the House that might be waived by the House, but it is the law of the land. There is a proposition to appropriate money in express defiance of the law, expressly against the law. I admit that an independent bill might be brought into Congress to pay these claims, and the passage of that bill would repeal this law. But here is an appropriation bill. If the Chair pleases, I make the points on it as an amendment to an appropriation bill. I concede, as I have said, if a bill was brought in for this purpose it would not be subject to a point of order; because if it became a law of course it would overrule the existing law.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. The gentleman from Indiana wholly misapprehends the law. When the Chair becomes satisfied that the gentleman's construction of the law is false, of course his point of order and his conclusions will fall with it. What is the law which he has just read? It is not a law saying that no man shall be paid for his expenses in contesting an election by the two Houses of Congress, but it is simply this: under the old custom, from time immemorial almost, at least as far back as the beginning of our Government, the House by its own resolution out of its contingent fund paid all such cases. But in 1872, upon a motion made by a gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Poland] that both the contestant and the contestee should be paid out of the contingent fund of the House by a resolution of the House, the two Houses of Congress became alarmed, and determined in future to make all disbursements out of the Treasury for the payment of the contestant or contestee a part of the law of the land; in other words, that either House should not of its own motion pay out of its contingent fund parties to contested cases.

The gentleman misapprehends the law entirely. It only prohibits this House from doing it. This is the reason why, for the last two sessions of Congress, we have had to put these appropriations into the appropriation bill. That is the reason why, in the last Congress, we put into the appropriation bill cases of this kind. It was because the law will not allow the House by its own resolution to do it. If the Chair will hear the law read he will see that there is no prohibition of payments of this kind by law.

Mr. HOLMAN. But the law says that no payment "shall be made by the House of Representatives out of its contingent fund or otherwise."

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. Certainly the law is that the House shall not pay these claims out of its contingent fund, or otherwise, to either party to a contested election case, for expenses in prosecuting or defending the same. It simply takes the control of the matter from the House which it ought to do, because the House had become extravagant. And when the appropriation bill was up last year, the Chairman of the Committee of Elections was authorized to offer amendments of this kind to this miscellaneous appropriation bill, and it was done, and they passed in that bill.

Now it occurs to me that the amendment is not obnoxious to the point of order, and I had leave of the House to offer it as an amendment to this bill; but the amendment having been reported by the Committee of Elections, and not having been asked for by one of the Departments, I could not, I admit, have offered it as an amendment to this bill, unless I had first obtained the leave of the House to do it; but having obtained the leave of the House, it is in order to offer it, and it is for the committee to say whether they will vote it down or not.

Mr. CLYMER. It is, I think, manifest that the construction of the act of 1872 contended for by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRIS] is untenable. Surely, sir, when that act was passed it was the intention of Congress to stop what was then deemed a great existing and increasing abuse, this thing of persons contesting elections for seats in this body upon frivolous grounds and making money thereon. The law was passed in order to stop this, and that was the universal construction of it at the time, as gentlemen who served here then will remember; it was determined that this thing should stop then and there.

Therefore it is provided by law that payments for this purpose shall not be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, or in any other manner by the House. The only other way in which these payments can be made is in just the way which the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRIS] is now attempting, by a clause in an appropriation bill. Now, it was clearly intended that the power to do so, by going through the process which the gentleman has attempted here of getting permission of the House, by a suspension of the rules, to make such an amendment in order, should not be resorted to. I think the Chair can have no doubt that that was the intention of the law. There is the law against this payment, and therefore this amendment, under the circumstances, cannot be in order.

We might propose a new law embracing all these cases, pass the law through this House, send it to the Senate and have it passed by that body, and then have it signed by the President, and then the payment can be made. But the law to which I refer is not a mere rule of the House. I grant you that a rule of the House may be suspended by an order such as was obtained the other day by the gentleman from Virginia. It is competent for the House by a two-thirds vote to suspend a rule of the House and make it in order, in Committee of the Whole, to move an appropriation not authorized by law. But this is an attempt to make an appropriation in flat defiance of the law by a mere suspension of the ordinary rules of the House.

Let the gentlemen from Virginia introduce his bill; let it stand upon its merits; let it pass both Houses and be signed by the President, and then he will be right. But the payment of these claims cannot be taken out of the power of the House by any stronger language than that used in the act to prevent this abuse.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. One word in reply to my friend from Pennsylvania, [Mr. CLYMER.]

Mr. FORT. I wish to make a point of order before the gentlemen goes on. At the same time the rules were suspended to admit these other amendments, the rules were also suspended to permit me to introduce an amendment to pay Mr. Farwell, of Chicago, of the first district of Illinois, his expenses for his contest. I wish to have my amendment pending.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. It is out of order for the gentleman to offer his amendment while I am on the floor. If the point of order is sustained against my amendment it will rule out his amendment also.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FORT] will lose no right by waiting.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] to understand me. If the amendment I propose provided that this payment should be made by the House of Representatives, that would be in violation of the law, because the law says that no payment of this kind shall be made by the House of Representatives. But the law does not say that no payment of this kind shall be made by law by the concurrence of both the Senate and the House. This amendment is not in violation of that statute, but is entirely in order.

Mr. CLYMER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. CLYMER. Suppose there was an act of Congress providing that the Secretary of the Treasury should not make a certain payment, does not my friend admit that that law would be binding upon us? And wherefore is not a law binding which makes the same declaration in regard to this House?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. That law would be binding upon the Secretary of the Treasury, but it would not prevent Congress from directing the payment to be made in some other way. The point I make is that the law prohibiting the House from doing this thing does not prohibit the two Houses of Congress by law authorizing such a payment to be made.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Committee of Elections have adopted this rule with regard to the recommendations that they make to this House: that where a party had probable cause for a contest he ought to have compensation; but if he makes a contest without probable cause, then he ought not to have compensation. The position taken by the Committee of Elections is this: that the contest is not for the benefit of the individual, but for the public; that the people are interested in the result, and they desire to have the contest made where it ought to be made and to feel that the party making it is protected in making the contest.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman that for the present he confine his remarks to the point of order.

Mr. THOMPSON. I will; but I have never yet found that a man can sow successfully without first preparing the ground. With regard to the point of order, I hold that the law is merely a prohibition upon the House that it shall not pay the expenses of these contestants out of the funds which are especially under the control of the House. The law does not say that these payments shall not be made out of the Treasury by law. We say that the House has no right to take any fund which may be put under its control in order to pay these contestants out of that fund. But it is perfectly competent for the law-making power, for Congress to provide for the payment. The position taken by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] is this, that Congress has no power to provide for that payment. Now, I deny that.

Mr. CLYMER. I stated what was the law.

Mr. THOMPSON. I understand the gentleman's position, and I will answer it. He wants to state it over again, because he finds it is too weak and needs an extra prop. I say the position taken by the Committee of Elections is that Congress has the right to make these payments; is perfectly in harmony with the law. This is a bill which Congress has to pass; not the House alone.

The evil which that law undertook to provide against was the payment of these contestants by the House alone. We undertook to remedy that evil by providing that no payment of this kind should be made without it has the sanction of the Senate as well as of the House; and that it shall not then be made a law without it had the approval of the President of the United States, unless the bill is passed over his veto. That is certainly all the protection that ought to be had in a matter of this kind.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to say one word in conclusion on this point of order. The gentleman from Massachusetts misapprehends——

Mr. WELLS, of Mississippi. I raise the point of order that the gentleman from Indiana has argued the point of order once, and has no right to argue it again.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to hear the gentleman on this question.

Mr. HOLMAN. Gentlemen are very anxious to protect the Chair.

There are three propositions which I wish to state very distinctly: first, that no proposition upon an appropriation bill is in order unless it be in conformity with existing law; secondly, that this proposition appropriating money is expressly against law; and thirdly, that the only way in which appropriations of this kind can be made in conflict with a law such as we now have on our statute-books, is by an independent legislative provision. Suppose that a gentleman should bring forward a bill appropriating money for these several objects. That bill as a matter of course is not, in the technical sense, an appropriation bill, although it appropriates money; it is not one of the twelve great appropriation bills of Congress. It is independent legislation; it is not subject to any points of order, because it proposes directly to repeal the existing law pro tanto, to the extent of the appropriation. The whole point turns upon the fact that this is a bill making appropriations to carry out existing law, while the appropriations embraced in this amendment, instead of being in conformity with law, are expressly against law. I therefore insist that this money can be appropriated only by independent legislation and not upon an appropriation bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not say at this time whether or not the proposition of the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. HARRIS,] is in my opinion right or wrong, or whether the House should or should not make the appropriations he proposes. But I do think that the House has a right to pass upon this appropriation and ought to pass upon it. What is the objection raised to the reception of the proposition? It is that it changes existing law. Why is this an objection? Simply because a rule of the House has made it so; that and nothing else. The House can at any time introduce new legislation in an appropriation bill if it sees fit to change its rule for that purpose; and in this particular instance the rule has been suspended at the instance of the gentleman from Virginia, so as to make it in order for his motion to be entertained and acted on. This having been done, I think it is idle and wrong for us to undertake to defeat in this way what may be the purpose of the House. I submit therefore that the proposition is in order and ought to be passed upon as a pertinent subject of consideration. I know that abuses have arisen under just such legislation, and my impression is against this measure, but I am not disposed to meet it by quibbling. I believe the gentleman should be allowed the right accorded to him heretofore by the House.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Chairman, those who were present during the discussion when the law now in question was adopted are well aware that the only objection was to the mode of payment out of the contingent fund of the House. There was never any pretense that proper appropriations should not be made to meet the expenses of contestants of elections. The only trouble was that the House had assumed to appropriate whatever money it chose out of its own fund, without the approval of the law-making power. The object of the law having been accomplished, and permission having been given by the House to move this very amendment on this bill, the proper place for all such matters, it seems to me there can be no question that the amendment is in order. What may be its merits when the Committee of the Whole comes to decide upon them is another question.

The CHAIRMAN. The House having suspended in this case the rule forbidding any legislation upon a general appropriation bill, in contravention of existing law, the Chair is satisfied that the point of order is not well taken, and that the Committee of the Whole may, if it chooses, incorporate this amendment in the bill.

Mr. FORT. I now desire to offer my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the right of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FORT] to offer his amendment was included within the suspension of the rules.

Mr. FORT. I move to amend by adding to the amendment the following;

To Charles B. Farwell, of the first district of Illinois, $3,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRIS] accept the amendment?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I propose to offer an amendment to my own amendment to strike out certain items; but in order to prevent confusion I suggest that the Clerk proceed to read the items in order, and that those to which there is no objection be considered as adopted; or let the Chair submit each one separately to a vote. When we reach those items to which I object I will make the motion to strike out. So any other member can move to increase or diminish or strike out any single item as that item is reached.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from West Virginia has obtained unanimous consent, or a suspension of the rules to enable him to present his amendment, his right will not be lost by postponing it for the present.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. I desire that this amendment shall be considered in connection with the other claims.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay S. B. Elkins, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Pedro Valdez vs. S. B. Elkins, Territory of New Mexico, $500.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose this amendment is subject to a point of order; but I should be very glad before we proceed further, if the authority given by the House on this subject, which seems to have been a very extraordinary authority, could be read, so that we may know exactly what the order of the House was.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. My purpose is all should be considered at the same time.

The CHAIRMAN. That is a matter with the House at the proper time.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I will state, for the information of the committee, that all the items referred to in the amendment which I have sent up to the Clerk's desk were made in order by the House to this bill, as well as the item offered by my friend from Illinois [Mr. FORT] in favor of Mr. Farwell, of Chicago, and an item in favor of Mr. Bromberg, of Alabama. All others were not authorized to be offered to this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the first item in the amendment, and the vote will first be taken on that.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay J. V. LE MOYNE, contestant, expenses in contested election of Le Moyne vs. Farwell, third district Illinois, $1,200.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 74, noes 28.

Mr. HOLMAN. Is there a quorum present?

The CHAIRMAN. No quorum has voted. Does the gentleman insist on a quorum?

Mr. HOLMAN. I certainly do insist that a quorum shall vote on the question of paying these old claims.

Mr. LANE. I move the committee rise.

The committee refused to rise.

Mr. HOLMAN. I demand tellers on the pending amendment.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. HARRIS of Virginia were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 107, noes 37.

Mr. HOLMAN. I give notice that I will ask for a vote in the House on this item of the amendment.

So the item was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the next item.

The Clerk read as follows:

To J. G. ABBOTT, contestant, expenses in the contested election case of Abbott vs. Frost, fourth district of Massachusetts, $2,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a word in regard to this claim. The spectacle now presented by the House has had no example in its history for a number of years. This thing at one time had become a burning shame to this House, to both Houses, and to the whole country; that is, the allowance indiscriminately to contestants and contestees of claims for expenses during contests. So shameless had it become that it was known persons made contests for seats in this House in order to avail themselves of liberal appropriations out of the Treasury to pay so-called expenses of the contest. Then Congress deliberately passed a law that there should be paid by either House, out of its contingent fund or otherwise, neither to the contestant nor to the contestee any such claim. The question is whether the people of this country have ever condemned that law. I venture to say no gentleman will assert upon this floor that his constituents ever condemned that law or that he ever condemned it in their presence. It was a wise law, a law organized against fraud, a law not only in the interest of economy, but in the interest of honest government. It is the law of the land, and yet after four years we are now proposing to go back and hunt up old claims for contests, and in each case to pay the expenses of the contestant and the contestee.

Mr. WELLS, of Mississippi. Surely the gentleman from Indiana does not mean to say that in this amendment we are going outside of claims arising during the present Congress, for he must know that these are all claims arising during this Congress, and not outside of it.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir; they cover the entire period of this Congress—every contestant and every contestee—reversing a law the House deliberately made, a law of both Houses, passed because it was thought better for the country and better for gentlemen aspiring to seats in this House that no payments should be paid to either party, either to the contestant or the contestee. Why have not gentlemen brought forward a bill repealing that law? Why have not the Committee of Elections, if they thought the law was wrong, provided for its repeal?

Mr. WELLS, of Mississippi. If the gentleman from Indiana came here making a contest for a seat upon this floor, does he mean to say he should not be allowed the reasonable expenses of the contest?

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not know what I should do myself. I have never been put to the test, and am not prepared to say. I do not think I should contest any gentleman's seat.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire to say one word for all.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let me have one word—just a single fact. Has not every gentleman on this floor made his contest with the full knowledge of the fact that the law absolutely prohibited the payment of expenses either to the contestant or the contestee? The law provided for the payment of the expenses neither of the contestant nor the contestee, but on the contrary prohibited such payment being made.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I took some pains to examine this question in regard to the compensation of parties contesting seats upon this floor, and I find until 1871 or 1872, in the Forty-first Congress, no one had ever been paid except bona fide contestants who failed to get their seats.

The House out of its contingent fund paid only the contestant who made an honest contest, believing he had a right to the seat, but failed, enough to pay him his reasonable expenses. In the Forty-second Congress, the House, on the motion of Mr. Poland, of Vermont, adopted a resolution overriding the Committee of Elections, and providing that both contestant and contestee should be paid their reasonable expenses. Under that resolution the amount went up to $67,000. After that a law was passed which provided that the House of Representatives of its own motion should not pay out of the contingent fund or any other fund any amount to either contestant or contestee, but left the matter as it was before, that it might be paid by an appropriation act.

Now, in this case Mr. ABBOTT was the fortunate contestant. He gained his seat. He drew his mileage and his pay back to the beginning of the session. But while I voted against this item in committee—and I suppose there is no harm in saying how I voted there—I will not antagonize my friends on this floor in regard to it. But the reason that influenced me there will influence me here in voting against it. The view I hold is that of the old law, that nobody ought to be paid except the bona fide contestant who failed in getting his seat; because if he gets the seat he has his pay to provide for the necessary expenses of a contest like all the other expenses attending the position of a member of Congress. Such expenses constitute one of the incidents of the place, and the Government should not be held responsible for them. Suppose a gentleman is here contesting a seat who has come three thousand miles and is paid his expenses, he gets much more than gentlemen who had no contest at all. As the Government cannot equalize the pay of the members, I think the true way is to pay the honest contestant, because it is the right of the people that an election should be contested; but in no other case to pay any other person.

The question being taken on the pending paragraph of the amendment, there were—ayes 67, noes 40; no quorum voting.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. FORT were appointed.

Mr. FOSTER. Allow me to make the suggestion to the gentleman from Indiana that he let all these items pass and take a vote on them in the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let us take this vote in committee.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 69, noes 56.

Mr. HOLMAN. A quorum has not voted, but I will not insist upon that. We will take a vote in the House.

So (further count not being called) for, the paragraph was adopted.

The Clerk read the next paragraph in the amendment, as follows:

William B. Spencer, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Spencer vs. Morey, fifth district of Louisiana, $734.05.

Mr. FOSTER. I now suggest to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that it is evident that all these items in relation to electoral expenses will pass. I suggest that he allow them to pass and ask a vote in the House.

Mr. BLOUNT. Except those subject to the point of order.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think it will be better to take a vote on each. I ask that the order made by the House be reported, that we may know what cases are in order.

Mr. FORT. The gentleman can have a vote by yeas and nays in the House. I suggest that to save time he allow all the items to pass.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the order of the House may be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

(Wednesday, February 14, 1877, twelve o'clock m.)

Mr. JOHN T. HARRIS, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Elections, reported the following proposed amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill when the same shall be under consideration in the House, namely:

To Pay J. V. LE MOYNE, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Le Moyne vs. Farwell, third district of Illinois, $1,200.

J. G. ABBOTT, contestant, expenses in the contested-election case of Abbott vs. Frost, fourth district of Massachusetts, $2,000.

William B. Spencer, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Spencer vs. Morey, fifth district of Louisiana, $734.05.

James H. Platt, jr., contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Platt vs. Goode, second district of Virginia, $3,000.

JOHN GOODE, jr., contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Platt vs. Goode, second district of Virginia, $500.

JOSEPH H. RAINEY, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Lee vs. Rainey, first district of South Carolina, $1,200.

Samuel Lee, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Lee vs. Rainey, first district of South Carolina, $1,200.

CHARLES W. BUTTZ, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Buttz vs. Mackey, second district of South Carolina, $1,200.

JERE HARALSON, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Bromberg vs. Haralson, first district of Alabama, $1,150.

S. S. FENN, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Fenn vs. Bennett, Idaho Territory, $1,000.

H. B. STRAIT, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Cox vs. Strait, second district of Minnesota, $1,500.

E. St. Julian Cox, contestant, expenses in the case of Cox vs. Strait, second district of Minnesota, $1,500.

R. S. Frost, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Abbott vs. Frost, fourth district of Massachusetts, $2,000.

Frank Morey, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Spencer vs. Morey, fifth district of Louisiana, $734 05.

Mr. FORT, by unanimous consent, submitted a proposed amendment to the said bill to pay the expenses of Charles B. Farwell in the contested-election case of Le Moyne vs. Farwell, third congressional district of Illinois.

Mr. JOHN H. CALDWELL, by unanimous consent, submitted a proposed amendment to the said bill to pay the expenses of Frederick G. Bromberg in the contested-election case of Bromberg vs. Haralson.

Ordered, That the said proposed amendments shall be in order, to be submitted as amendments to the said bill when the same is under consideration in the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. I did not notice what was the order of the House in regard to the case next before the last.

The Clerk again read the portion of the order in reference to Mr. FORT's proposed amendment.

Mr. STEVENSON. I would like to inquire of the chairman of the Committee of Elections why the name of Mr. Farwell was omitted?

Mr. FORT. We have not arrived at that point yet. That will be stated when the amendment is discussed.

The question being taken on the pending paragraph of the amendment, it was agreed to.

The Clerk read the next paragraph in the amendment, as follows:

James H. Platt, jr., contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Platt vs. Goode, second district of Virginia, $3,000.

Mr. HALE. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out "$3,000," and insert "$5,400."

I offer this amendment because I believe that under any principle upon which the House has been acting in election cases this amount of money should be paid. I agree very largely with the proposition that legislation in the direction of paying large claims of contestants encourages contests, and I was heartily in favor of the law which is now embodied in the Revised Statutes. But the law, it will be noticed, while it forbids the House in any way to pay the expenses of the contestant, does not prevent legislation on the part of both Houses by embodying a provision in an appropriation bill, as is attempted here.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think my friend is mistaken. The point of order would have been a good one if the House had not given unanimous consent to allow this amendment to come in.

Mr. HALE. I offer this amendment for this reason. It is the hardest of hard cases. There is no question here as to false encouragement held out to contest a seat on this floor. There is no member here upon either side of the House who remembers the contest between Mr. Platt and Mr. GOODE who will not admit that Mr. Platt believed that he had a good case; that he came here believing himself elected; that he struggled to maintain what he believed to be his right. The committee divided, and the House divided, and Mr. GOODE was retained in his seat only by a very small majority; and I believe that the conclusions of the committe were such that had they been reached early enough, Mr. Platt would have obtained the seat upon the prima facie right. He lost the benefit he would have derived from sitting here and drawing his monthly pay. He contested a seat to which he believed he was entitled, and in that contest he spent of his own money more than the sum that I have offered here in this amendment. He has not charged one dollar for his time. The vouchers that he presents, as I am told, cover more than $5,400. He drew no salary from the House as a member, his opponent drawing the salary from the beginning. He was honest in his claim. It is not an old claim. It is in the present Congress, and if we pay anybody in these contested-election cases, where there is so fair a claim to the contest as Mr. Platt presented here we cannot consistently stop until we pay him what he honestly paid out in attempting to enforce the right which he believed he had to the seat. I believe it to be one of the best cases that could be presented here.

Mr. HOOKER. I have listened to the remarks of the gentleman from Maine with regard to this case, and I still think that the committee and the House ought not in any case to encourage contestants by offering large pay for the amount they may have expended in making the contest. A party who undertakes to come into this Hall to contest for a seat comes in upon his own responsibility and upon the merits of his case, like a party in court, and if he loses his suit he ought to pay the costs of his suit. It is offering a premium to every man who is defeated by however large a majority or by however small a majority to come into the House of Representatives and contest the seat of the sitting member. He takes the chances of success. If he fails in his contest he ought not to call upon the Government to pay the expenses of the lawsuit which he has instituted himself in his own interest and in his own behalf. I doubt very much whether, even in a case in which the contestant is successful, there ought to be anything like a large amount paid to the successful contestant.

Mr. HALE. I agree with the gentleman about that. I do not think there should be any swelling of these claims. But if in a fair contest the contestant has actually paid out by fair, good management sums of money, I think that those sums should be re imbursed, but I do not think that the expenses should be exaggerated.

Mr. HOOKER. I differ with the gentlemen in this: I think that the party who comes into this Hall for the purpose of instituting an inquiry as to whether the sitting member is lawfully here or lawfully entitled to his seat, comes in on his own responsibility, like a suitor in court, and he ought to pay the costs if he fails in successfully contesting the seat of the sitting member.

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. Allow me to suggest to the gentleman from Mississippi that in this case the claim of Mr. Platt to the seat was sustained by a majority of the Committee on Elections, and he was only refused his seat by a majority of four in this House. He certainly had a good case, and it certainly cannot be said that he made the contest improperly, for the judgment of the House refusing him the seat was only confirmed by a majority of four.

Mr. HALE. It was not a contest made for the sake of getting pay; that is very evident.

Mr. HOOKER. I accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. BROWN,] and in reply to him I will say that the judgment of the House, whether it was affirmed by a large or small majority, shows that in the opinion of those who had the power of deciding and passing upon this question this gentleman had not a good claim, and therefore, whether his case was decided against him by a large or small majority, he ought to pay the expenses of his own suit.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I move to strike out the last word, and in support of that motion I desire to say this, that I differ entirely from the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] as to the principle upon which payment of expenses of this kind can be made. I do not believe that we have the right to pay one dollar out of kindness and consideration for a man on either side of this body, neither for the contestant nor the contestee. If we pay at all we should pay upon the ground that the people of the United States are interested in the question whether the right man has the certificate, and the right man sits in the National Congress and discharges the duties here. It is the people of the United States that are interested, and while nothing should be paid to a man who has come here factiously, a man who has come here without a probable cause, yet if we pay in any of these cases it is upon the ground that the interests of the country require that such cases should be brought here for decision.

There is a further reason and it is in the same direction. A rich man may get the place, and a man of moderate means would be utterly unable to carry on the contest. A man may get the place who is poor and a rich man may contest with him and ruin him. It is not for the interest of the people of the United States that either of these men should be encouraged. And in a proper case I believe it is the duty of Congress to pay. I do not in this case say whether we should pay $5,400, or $1,000. I am not up for the purpose of arguing the question whether we should pay anything to this man, but I got up for the purpose of claiming that it is not a controversy between man and man; it is a controversy between two persons claiming to represent the people, and the people are interested that the right man should have the place.

Mr. HARRISON. I rise to oppose the motion. I am exceedingly glad to hear so sensible a speech from the gentleman from New York, [Mr. TOWNSEND.] He has spoken argument, and has not shown his temper or his teeth. But, sir, I must oppose that portion of the amendment which proposes an ex parte statement of expenses.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. Will the gentleman tell me in what part of my speech I spoke of ex parte statements of expenses?

Mr. HARRISON. O! I am not talking of you now; I am speaking of the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE.]

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. All right.

Mr. HARRISON. I have the happiness to agree with the gentleman from New York. Mr. Platt came here contesting in a House largely opposed to him politically. There were men on this floor who voted for him, not only voted against their party, but some of them who were friends of the contestee also voted for Mr. Platt. As the gentleman from New York [Mr. TOWNSEND] says, this question of expenses in a contested-election case is not a personal thing. It is the duty of a man who has been elected, or who believes honestly that he has been elected, to contest the seat and not permit the people of his district to be defrauded of their rights by any returning boards counting him out of his seat.

Now, what evidence have we that Mr. Platt had good grounds for contest? As the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] says, many persons make these contests for the sake of obtaining payment; but we know that Mr. Platt did not make such a contest, because some of us on this side of the House voted for him in spite of party affiliations, and because we were convinced by the testimony that he was entitled to the seat.

Now, I think he ought to be paid, but not more than the amount which the committee is supposed to have audited for him. It is fair to suppose that the Committee of Elections had before them and weighed the vouchers in the case, and they came to the conclusion that the amount they have reported here was the proper amount to be paid. I do not doubt the statement of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] that Mr. Platt did expend the amount he has named. But I take it for granted that the committee heard all the testimony and have allowed all that they believed he was justly entitled to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that debate on these various paragraphs shall cease, and that especially upon the pending paragraph it shall now cease.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire to make a word of explanation.

The CHAIRMAN. The debate on the pending amendment is exhausted.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire permission to make a statement to the committee.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I withdraw my amendment to strike out the last word.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I renew the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that debate shall cease after the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRIS] has been heard.

Mr. HALE. I desire to say a word.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I move that the committee now rise.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I do not think it is necessary to do that.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I ask that all debate on this proposition shall cease in ten minutes.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I have no objection to that.

Mr. CLYMER. I object.

Mr. LANE. I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was not agreed to; upon a division ayes 66, noes not counted.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire to make an explanation in regard to this matter. The whole account of Mr. Platt, as filed before the committee, was, I believe, some $5,400. I have never seen an account filed before that committee or before any other body which was better sustained by vouchers, even by receipts for one day's attendance of a witness. The amount expended in the way of pay of witnesses and of other persons was some sixteen hundred or eighteen hundred dollars. I speak from recollection, and therefore may not be strictly accurate. The remainder of the account, some thirty-seven hundred or thirty-eight hundred dollars, was for attorneys' fee. All the accounts were sustained by proper vouchers.

The committee in arbitrarily reducing the amount to $3,000 (and I concurred in that reduction) acted upon the ground that in our belief Mr. Platt had paid more to attorneys than, under the circumstances, a prudent man ought to have paid; at least, that consideration influenced me.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. I would inquire of the gentleman whether or not we had not previously adopted an arbitrary rule, that in no case would we allow a contestant or contestee more than $3,000; and whether or not, without any particular examination of the various items making up the account of Mr. Platt, we did not agree that there were enough proper items to amount to $3,000?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. That is true. The committee adopted previously a resolution that no claimant should be allowed more than $3,000. When Mr. Platt's account was reached (I had examined it myself previously, and could speak of it of my own knowledge) the committee summarily allowed $3,000, believing that his accounts properly amounted to at least that sum.

There is no doubt about his having paid out $5,400. All the evidence was before us, including the receipts of Governor Wise and his son, of Mr. Lyon and other attorneys, whose handwriting I know and am familiar with. I make this statement of the facts in the case, and the Committee of the Whole after having heard it may either increase or diminish the amount as they think proper. I have no suggestion to make.

Mr. HALE. I have but a word or two to say. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BAKER] has given an answer which perhaps was not heard by all the members here to the point made by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. HARRISON,] which was that the Committee of Elections audited this account and concluded that allowance should not exceed $3,000. My friend from Indiana [Mr. BAKER] has stated what was the action of the committee, and that has been very frankly admitted by the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. HARRIS,] the chairman of that committee.

The accounts, as just stated by the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. HARRIS,] are all on file, showing undoubtedly that Mr. Platt's expenses were more than $5,400. Now, I do not know but that he might have driven his lawyers to charge less; but this committee should remember the fact that the hearing of his case continued for days before the committee here; that for ninety days the testimony was being taken in four different places; that Mr. Platt, in enforcing what he believed to be his rights, had to be represented by good lawyers and in many places at once; and when he got through he had to pay their bills. They have taken his money; he is out of pocket. He spent this money in enforcing what he believed to be a good claim.

In a House where the party majority against him was nearly one hundred he came within four votes of being seated, in which case he would have drawn every dollar of pay from the commencement of the congressional term. I say again that if this is not a good case for allowing what has been expended in the prosecution of such a claim, there cannot be a good case presented to the American House of Representatives. I will not take up any more time, but ask for a vote.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. HALE, there were—ayes 68, noes 78.

Mr. HALE. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HALE and Mr. HARRIS of Virginia were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 78, noes 88.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I move to amend so as to make the amount $4,500.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union having had under consideration the Union generally, and particularly the bill (H. R. No. 4682) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. No. 1252) for the erection of a fire-proof building for the National Museum;

A bill (S. No. 1270) to authorize the printing and distribution of the memorial addresses on the life and character of the late Michael C. Kerr; and

A bill (S. No. 1271) to authorize the printing and distribution of the eulogies delivered in Congress on the announcement of the death of the late Allen T. Caperton, a Senator from the State of West Virginia.

The message also announced that the Senate had adopted, and requested the concurrence of the House in, a resolution for printing the Report of the Commissioner on Fish and Fisheries for 1875 and 1876; and a resolution for printing the Digest of Opinions of Attorneys-General, &c., as prepared in the Department of State.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HARRIS, of Georgia, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled, bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (S. No. 1185) to ratify an agreement with certain bands of the Sioux Nation of Indians, and also with the Northern Arapaho and Cheyenne Indians; and

An act (H. R. No. 2690) to refund to the mayor and city council of Baltimore certain moneys illegally assessed and collected for internal-revenue tax.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted—

To Mr. DIBRELL for the remainder of the session, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama, indefinitely, on account of serious illness in his family.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. HOPKINS, by unanimous consent, obtained leave for withdrawing from the files the petition and documents relating to the claim of Finley Patterson, no adverse report having been made.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. POPPLETON. I move that the House take a recess till ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. RUSK. I hope that when the recess is taken it will be till half-past seven o'clock this evening. It was generally understood that we should have an evening session to-night for business of the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The SPEAKER. No understanding of that sort was reached.

Mr. RUSK. I move that the House take a recess till half-past seven o'clock this evening, and that the session be devoted entirely to the consideration of reports from the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The SPEAKER. That would require unanimous consent.

Mr. RUSK. I ask unanimous consent.

Objection was made.

Mr. BANNING. I suggest to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. RUSK] that we occupy the time from ten till eleven o'clock to-morrow morning in the consideration of pension bills. I think every one will consent to that.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That may possibly interfere with the joint meeting of the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Iowa object?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir; I do.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. POPPLETON it was agreed to; and accordingly (at half past four o'clock p. m.) the House took a recess until ten o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at ten o'clock a. m.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. Pending that motion, I move that all general debate on the pending proposition, as well as on other propositions of the bill which have been passed over and which have been partially considered, be terminated in five minutes.

Mr. DUNNELL. It is not fair to include propositions which have been passed over.

Mr. HOLMAN. Say five minutes on each proposition passed over.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman mean to include the proposition in reference to surveys?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I object to that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair doubts whether that would be in order. The subjects referred to have been passed over and left open by unanimous consent, and the time to limit debate upon them would be when they are reached for consideration.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well; I will withhold that part of my motion until these subjects are reached. I move now that all debate on the pending proposition in the Committee of the Whole be closed in five minutes.

Mr. HALE. Say one minute.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well; one minute.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now ask for a vote on my motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. EDEN in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the item which was under consideration when the committee rose.

The Clerk read as follows:

James H. Platt, contestant, expenses in contested election case of Platt vs. Goode, second district of Virginia, $3,000.

The CHAIRMAN. There was an amendment pending to that amendment proposed by the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE,] to strike out "$3,000" and insert "$4,500," on which the question first recurs

Mr. HALE. I do not propose to debate the proposition.

Mr. HALE's amendment to the proposition was agreed to.

The question next recurred on the item reported by the committee.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask for a division of the committee.

Mr. HALE. There is no quorum, and it will break up the committee.

Mr. HOLMAN. I can see very well I must either break a quorum or let this proposition go to the House to be voted on there. When it does come up in the House I shall call for a separate vote on it.

The CHAIRMAN. The item as reported from the committee will be considered as agreed to with that understanding.

The next item was read, as follows:

JOHN GOODE, jr., contestant, expenses in the contested-election case of Platt vs. Goode, second district of Virginia, $500.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire to say the great disparity in the amount recommended for Mr. Platt and that recommended for Mr. GOODE occurred in this way: Mr. GOODE's friends, lawyers and witnesses, tendered their services without consideration. They traveled many miles in order to serve him. The contestant, on the contrary, had to pay his lawyers and witnesses and every one who assisted him.

The item was agreed to.

The next item was read, as follows:

JOSEPH H. RAINEY, contestee, expenses in contested election case of Lee vs. Rainey, first district of South Carolina, $1,200.

Mr. HOLMAN. I shall have to ask for a vote on all these amendments in the House.

Mr. BANNING. Too late!

Mr. CLYMER. The gentleman has that right.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course the gentleman has the right.

Mr. HOLMAN. I shall ask for a vote on all these propositions in the House, and other gentlemen will undoubtedly do the same thing. I ask, as it is manifest no definite expression can be had, these propositions be read over and if any gentleman desires a vote let him ask for it.

Mr. FORT. I object unless they all go together.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. Let them all be adopted.

Mr. FORT. Then I understand the gentleman from Indiana to say they might be read over and considered as passed.

Mr. HOLMAN. Unless some gentleman desires a vote.

Mr. FORT. They ought all to go together.

The CHAIRMAN. They will be considered as adopted by the committee unless otherwise ordered.

The Clerk read as follows:

Samuel Lee, contestant, expenses in contested-election case in Lee vs. Rainey, $1,200.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be considered as adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let me state that I do not consent myself to any of these propositions, but shall ask for a vote in the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

C. W. BUTTZ, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Buttz vs. Mackey, second district of South Carolina, $1,200.

JERE HARALSON, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Bromberg vs. Haralson, first district of Alabama, $1,150.

S. S. FENN, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Fenn vs. Bennett, Idaho Territory, $1,000.

H. B. STRAIT, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Cox vs. Strait, of the second district of Minnesota, $1,500.

E. St. Julian Cox, contestant, expenses in contested-election case of Cox vs. Strait, of the second district of Minnesota, $1,500.

The CHAIRMAN. Those amendments will be considered as adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

R. S. Frost, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Abbott vs. Frost, fourth district of Massachusetts, $2,000.

Frank Morey, contestee, expenses in contested-election case of Spencer vs. Morey, fifth district of Louisiana, $734.05.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I gave notice in regard to those two last items for Mr. Frost and Mr. Morey, who were unseated, that I should oppose them with all the power I had when they came into the House. I do not think they should have been allowed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the right to call for a vote on all these items in the House is reserved.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I may not have an opportunity in the House to say what I wish to say. I desire to say it now.

The CHAIRMAN. By order of the House debate is closed on the pending paragraph.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to a question of order. Was unanimous consent given by the House that this item should come before the committee? I wish to reserve the point of order.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. The House gave unanimous consent that these items should be in order.

Mr. FORT. The gentleman from Indiana knows that that consent was given, the entry in the Journal showing it was read in his hearing. If the gentleman wants to move to reduce the amount, let him do so.

Mr. HOLMAN. I reserve the point of order till it is ascertained that this was one of the items which the House consented should be in order.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I will explain to the gentleman from Indiana how the matter stands. The Committee of Elections recommended all the items which have now been read, except that in favor of Mr. Farwell. The committee did not act upon that item at all; but the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FORT] asked leave of the House to offer it as an amendment, and that leave was granted. Leave was also granted in the next case of the item offered by Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama, in the case of Mr. Bromberg; but no other leave was given.

Mr. HOLMAN. The reason that I made the inquiry was that I was detained in the Committee on Appropriations a few minutes on the morning when this occurred, and I was not cognizant of the facts.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire now to state——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is closed on the pending paragraph.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I understood the closing of debate to apply only to the case of Platt.

The CHAIRMAN. All debate is closed on the paragraph to which these amendments are offered. The Clerk will report the next paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

Charles B. Farwell, of the third district of Illinois, $3,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, if this proposition——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is closed.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to a question of order. If this proposition had been in the bill containing a number of items, each item would have been a single and distinct paragraph. My motion to close debate applied to the particular paragraph then before the committee. With the view I had at the time I would have been very glad to have applied the motion to close debate to the whole amendment, but I did not think that could be done. The rule is that we must confine the limitation of debate to the pending paragraph. Now, although this was one amendment it embraces quite a number of paragraphs, and the question is, whether each item is not a separate and distinct paragraph, although all are offered as one amendment?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. That is how I understood it.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Debate was closed on the paragraph and on all amendments to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands all these items to be amendments to the paragraph on which debate has been closed. Debate, therefore, is not in order on any of these items.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I ask unanimous consent to make a statement.

Mr. FORT. The gentleman will have an opportunity for debate in the House.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I wish to say what I have to say now.

Mr. CLYMER. I do not wish to interfere with the gentleman from Virginia, but I must insist upon the point of order that debate is closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has already decided that no debate is in order.

The Clerk read the next paragraph of the amendment, as follows:

Frederick Bromberg, first district of Alabama, $1,500.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be considered as agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, it is not agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood that the various items when offered were to be understood as agreed to in an informal manner.

Mr. HOLMAN. This is not a report from the Committee of Elections.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will put the question on agreeing to the paragraph.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 17, noes 19.

The CHAIRMAN. The paragraph is not agreed to.

Mr. BANNING. Mr. Chairman, I think the last vote was under a misunderstanding.

The CHAIRMAN. The last vote was on the case of Mr. Bromberg.

Mr. BANNING. I call for a division.

The CHAIRMAN. There has been a division.

Mr. BANNING. I call for tellers.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think we are getting into a state of strange confusion in regard to this matter. It was the case of Mr. Farwell that was before the committee.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. The item in regard to Mr. Farwell, it was announced, was agreed to. No objection was made, and the next paragraph was read.

Mr. HOLMAN. I was watching the proceedings as closely as I could, and if that item passed I was not conscious of it.

Mr. FORT. The record will show that.

The CHAIRMAN. It was understood that all the items to which no objection was made should be considered as agreed to, and that a vote of the committee be taken upon them in the House. And no objection was made until the case of Mr. Bromberg was reached.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. Debate was cut off in the case of Mr. Farwell and the Chair stated that it was passed under the rule. I protested against it at the time.

Mr. HOLMAN. There was no rule requiring that item to be adopted. I did not agree to it. I offered the proposition that unless objection was made each one of these items be regarded as agreed to. That was objected to, and we are now considering each item separately.

The CHAIRMAN. The objection was afterward withdrawn.

Mr. HOLMAN. I was not notified by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FORT] that it was withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The paragraphs were read and their adoption announced by the Chair until the case of Mr. Bromberg was reached.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well. We will have a vote in the House.

Mr. BANNING. On Mr. Bromberg's case also?

The CHAIRMAN. The item for Mr. Bromberg was not agreed to.

Mr. BANNING. I ask unanimous consent that the Bromberg case also be voted on in the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. BANNING?]

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not wish to consent to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Indiana object?

Mr. HOLMAN. It should not be adopted. There is no reason why it should be reported to the House because another bad case is to be reported.

The CHAIRMAN. It can only be done by unanimous consent and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] objects.

Mr. BANNING. I demanded tellers.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It is too late now.

Mr. BANNING. O, no. I demanded tellers at the time.

Mr. HOLMAN. If the gentleman demands tellers, I of course have to withdraw my objection and let the amendment go to the House as having been adopted.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next paragraph of the amendment was read, as follows:

C. B. DARRALL, third district of Louisiana, $400.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I make no point of order upon that amendment myself, but the leave of the Committee of Elections to report these amendments was exhausted with the name of Bromberg; all subsequent amendments have not been authorized by the House to be offered here. I make no point of order, but I think it my duty to apprise the committee of that fact.

Mr. COCHRANE. I make the point of order on that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read the next paragraph of the amendment, as follows:

JOHN R. LYNCH, sixth district of Mississippi, $500.

Mr. FORT. I desire to know why one of these cases is admitted while others are objected to? I supposed you were going to act fairly about this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has nothing to do with that.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order that this amendment was not authorized by the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so rules, and the amendment is not in order.

The Clerk read the next paragraph of the amendment, as follows:

To pay S. B ELKINS, contestee, expenses in the contested-election case of Pedro Valdez vs. S. B. Elkins, Territory of New Mexico, $500.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the same point of order upon that amendment.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Rock Island arsenal: For a rolling-mill and forging-shop (shop F) for the armory at Rock Island arsenal, Rock Island, Illinois, $50,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out "$50,000," and inserting in lieu thereof "$38,000."

I shall occupy the attention of the committee but a single moment. I wish to say that the amount proposed in the amendment offered by me is the amount necessary to complete this shop. The officer in charge of the arsenal reports that this amount is necessary for that purpose and ought to be appropriated. He informs me, as shown by his estimates submitted for the next fiscal year, that there are other shops there which have cost large sums of money, and which cannot be used and will be of no public utility until this shop is completed. I therefore trust that the amendment will be adopted, and the amount proposed substituted in lieu of that proposed by the committee.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Committee on Appropriations think that the appropriation is very ample.

The question was taken on Mr. HENDERSON'S amendment, and it was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For an iron-working and finishing shop (shop G) for the arsenal, $30,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out $30,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $100,000.

I wish to say in regard to this amount that at the last session of Congress the sum of $30,000 was appropriated for this shop. It was sufficient for the purpose of excavating and laying the foundations of the shop. The sum proposed to be appropriated by the Committee on Appropriations is a very small sum to go on with the work upon a building of such magnitude as that proposed, and I urge now, as I have done before the Committee on Appropriations, that the paragraph be amended so as to appropriate a sufficient amount to enable the officer in charge of the arsenal to go on economically with the work. I believe the sum of $100,000 is a very small amount for the purpose of pursuing the work there as economically as it ought to be done, and I shall be glad if the committee will adopt this amendment. I believe the sum proposed, $100,000, should be appropriated in the interest of true economy.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Committee on Appropriations think that the work in reference to the water-power cannot be entered on this year; indeed, we think that a commission should be appointed to examine this whole subject before any further appropriations are made.

The question was taken on Mr. HENDERSON's amendment, and it was not agreed to.

Mr. HENDERSON. I now move to insert after the paragraph last read the following:

For development of water-power and clearing out the pool, $80,000.

In regard to this amendment I will say, as I have urged so frequently before the Committee on Appropriations and as I urged at the last session of Congress, that this appropriation is absolutely demanded by every considsration of justice and of propriety, so as to enable the Government of the United States to perform its contracts, which have been made in good faith and ought to be carried out.

I have called the attention of the Committee on Appropriations to these contracts with the Government, and also to the resolution of Congress under which such contracts were made; I have also called the attention of that committee to the report of the very able and intelligent officer in command of this national work at Rock Island, showing the absolute necessity for this appropriation, and also to the letter of the Chief of Ordnance, sent to Congress at the last session, to the same effect; and I now ask the Clerk to read an extract from the report of the Chief of Ordnance made at the present session of Congress.

The Clerk read as follows:

WATER-POWER AT ROCK ISLAND ARSENAL.

On the 17th of February last I had the honor of submitting to the honorable Secretary of War my report on the necessity for a special appropriation of $157,350 for completing the development of the water-power, inclosing a report thereon from the commanding officer of the Rock Island arsenal. These reports were approved by the Secretary of War, and transmitted to the House of Representatives on the 19th of February, 1876. This item is included in the estimates from this office for the year 1878, and the necessity and propriety for an appropriation are fully set forth in the papers herewith submitted. This appropriation is required to carry out the agreements entered into by the Secretaries of War under the joint resolution of Congress of March 2, 1867, and there is no doubt that the interests of private parties require speedy action on the part of the United States. The work can be done more economically if the whole amount asked for be appropriated, and this is earnestly recommended.

Mr. HENDERSON. It will be noticed from the extract that has been read that the Chief of Ordnance informs this House that this work must be done for the purpose of carrying out in good faith contracts entered into by the Government.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HOLMAN. This subject has been very carefully considered by the Committee on Appropriations, and they are of opinion that this appropriation ought not to be made at this time.

The amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

For general care, preservation, and improvement of sewers, new roads, care and preservation of water-power, of permanent buildings and bridges, including painting, building fences, and grading grounds, and repairs and extension of railroads, and for care and preservation of the Rock Island bridge, and expense of operating and maintaining the draw, $20,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. I move to amend the paragraph just read by striking out "$20,000" and inserting "$35,000." The Secretary of War sent to Congress his estimate for the sum of $27,750 for the purposes expressed in the paragraph just read. The Committee on Appropriations have only appropriated for these purposes the sum of $20,000.

I am informed, Mr. Chairman, that the full amount estimated should be appropriated; and I would be glad to have the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations for a single moment if I can get it. I have moved this amendment for the purpose of increasing this amount very slightly over the estimates submitted by the Department, and if this amendment is adopted it will enable the officers in charge there to go on and clean out the deposit of mud and sand in the pool, and thus relieve the parties who are suffering very grievously from the neglect of the Government to carry out its contracts. The amount now asked is so very small that I hope the amendment will be agreed to. I call attention to the following from the report of the Chief of Ordnance:

The Moline Water-Power Company feel aggrieved because the quantity of water at its disposal is not sufficient. It is admitted that the passage to the pool is obstructed, and that to give the Moline Water-Power Company and the United States the full benefit of the development already made, measures must be taken to cause a sufficient flow of water into the pool to supply the necessary power. The Government is bound by its agreement (after taking possession of the water-power property) to do this work, and in the interest of the two parties interested, for economy, and particularly for the protection of valuable interests to the United States, the work should be done now, and the entire amount, $157,350, should be appropriated.

The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has said that it would be well to abandon this water-power. The following extract from the report of Major Flagler, in command at Rock Island, shows that such is not the fact:

I believe it would be unwise and not economical for the Government, after having expended so much money and built so great a water-power, to leave it unfinished. It is also clear that the acts of Congress on this subject and the contracts made with the Moline company require that the work shall be done.

The question was taken upon the amendment; and upon a division there were—ayes 30, noes 42.

No further count being called for, the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

For repairs of arsenals, and to meet such unforeseen expenditures at arsenals as accidents or other contingencies during the year may render necessary, $40,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. One more amendment, and the last. I move to amend by inserting after the paragraph just read these words:

For new machinery and shop fixtures, $5,000.

I want to say a single word as to this small sum. The officer in charge of the arsenal recommended the appropriation of a much larger amount, but he says he will get along with the sum of $5,000 as the smallest amount possible. It will be observed that it is for the purpose of putting machinery into shops which have cost the Government large sums of money, and which are utterly useless without this machinery. I hope, therefore, that this small favor will be granted to the arsenal, over and above the amount recommended by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I would ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HENDERSON] if without this appropriation the large sums of money already expended by the Government will not remain entirely unproductive?

Mr. HENDERSON. Undoubtedly.

The question was then taken upon the amendment moved by Mr. HENDERSON; and upon a division there were—ayes 37, noes 44.

No further count being called for, the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

Surveys of northern and northwestern lakes and Mississippi River:

For continuing surveys of Lakes Erie and Ontario; determination of points in aid of State surveys and construction of maps; continuation of triangulation south from Chicago and east to Lake Erie; survey of the Mississippi River; and miscellaneous, $75,000: Provided, That the proceeds of the sale of the steamers belonging to the survey of the northern and northwestern lakes shall be placed in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation for said survey, and the whole amount shall be immediately available.

Mr. YOUNG. I move to amend the paragraph just read by adding to it that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided further, That $50,000 of the foregoing sum shall be expended under the direction of the Chief of Ordnance in continuing the survey of the Mississippi River and its tributaries, with a view of determining the proper method of reclaiming from overflow the alluvial lands of the Mississippi delta.

Mr. CONGER. I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. CONGER. My point of order is that by law the expenditure of the appropriation made for this purpose must be under direction of the Treasury Department.

Mr. YOUNG. I think the point of order taken by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] is not a good one. This amendment is in pursuance of an existing law. By a law of 1872 or 1873 the Chief of Engineers was authorized to make a survey of the Mississippi River and tributaries, with a view of determining the very question suggested in this amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is mistaken about that. This is under the War Department. The Coast Survey is under the Treasury Department.

Mr. YOUNG. When the survey was prosecuted to a certain extent the appropriation made under that law was exhausted before the work was completed. At the last session of Congress, with the consent of the then chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the present Speaker of the House, I introduced just such an amendment as this, but by mistake, instead of putting the appropriation under the direction of the Chief of Engineers, it was permitted to remain under the direction of the office having charge of the coast survey. Having ascertained afterward that the amendment was improper in that particular, and that the appropriation should have been put under the control of the Chief of Engineers, I had it struck out in the Senate in the hope of getting the proposition changed so as to accomplish the object in view. In that way the amendment was lost last year.

There is perhaps no public enterprise demanding the attention of Congress that is of greater interest and importance to the people of the whole country than that looking to the reclamation of the overflowed lands upon the Mississippi River and its tributaries. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations last year was willing to accept this amendment; and I submit now to the present distinguished chairman of the committee it is simply a matter of justice to that section of the country that this much of the appropriation should be diverted to this purpose.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Michigan rise to discuss the point or order?

Mr. CONGER. No, sir; I withdraw the point.

Mr. Chairman, the appropriation under consideration is one which has been made for the lake survey for a series of fifteen or sixteen years. The sole object of the appropriation at first was the survey of the great lakes; and that has been the object until the last three years, I think. The survey of the lakes is almost completed. There only remain a portion of Lake Erie and a small portion of Lake Ontario to be finished, and then the sailing-charts of the navigators of our lakes will be complete.

By some means, three or four years ago, there was added to this appropriation a provision for the survey of the Mississippi River, having reference more to a survey for the purpose of placing lights upon the river than to leveeing it, as all members will recollect. "The determination of points in aid of State surveys and the construction of maps," was also in the old bill as it is in the coast survey appropriation. The connecting of points of survey on the lakes by triangulations merely with points in the different States accessible to such triangulations is the same principle on the lake survey that was established in the coast survey for defining points by triangulation in the States. It is therefore a part of the lake-survey system. The survey of the Mississippi River is merely incidental. It was collateral; it was conceded for a purpose because it was expected that it would occupy but a portion of one year and that it could be done by the officers making this lake survey. That is the object of the appropriation; that is the law of this appropriation, the continuation of this lake survey.

Now, according to the report of Colonel Comstock, in charge of the lake survey, it will take something like $175,000 to finish the lake survey and to complete the charts of the great lakes. But the Committee on Appropriations this year proposed originally to give only $50,000 for this purpose, as gentlemen of the committee will remember. Upon the representation of Colonel Comstock that a larger sum was necessary and must be had to make the lake survey available—to continue the use of the steamboats and the equipment for that survey—the committee, if I am rightly informed, increased the appropriation for this purpose to $75,000. It was then contemplated that this whole appropriation should be used for completing, so far as might be, the lake survey. Now this amendment proposes to divert two-thirds of this appropriation from its legitimate purpose to another work not connected with anything for which this appropriation was ever designed, but looking to the examination of the Mississippi River for the purpose of draining and reclaiming lands—an entirely different object from those connected with commerce; for no one pretends that the leveeing of the Mississippi has for its object the improvement of its navigation.

Mr. MONEY. That is one of its objects.

Mr. CONGER. It is one of the objects alleged here in this House; but everybody knows that the leveeing of the Mississippi, according to the old plan followed, is a system which brings constant successions of impediments to the navigation of the Mississippi. It may reclaim lands, but it produces bars in the river which obstruct navigation; and until the committee charged with the subject shall report a measure which shall not only improve the navigation but also reclaim lands, an appropriation for that purpose cannot be legitimately taken from this appropriation, which is designed to continue and complete the surveys of the navigable waters and lakes of the United States and make our sailing charts what they should be in order to insure the safety of property and life.

From my knowledge of this subject, which I have watched for years, I say that $75,000 is the lowest possible amount that will suffice to keep the boats running and to maintain the surveying parties of the hydrographic survey of the lakes during the present season. But if the committee will increase this appropriation by $25,000 or $50,000 and appropriate this extra amount in the way now proposed, I shall have no objection. But this appropriation has been increased from $50,000 to $75,000 upon the representation of Colonel Comstock, and I think this committee should not divert any part of this sum from its legitimate purpose.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. YOUNG. I will not occupy the time of the committee very long.

The CHAIRMAN. The debate is exhausted.

Mr. YOUNG. I move to strike out the last word of the paragraph. I will not occupy the time of the committee to controvert the points suggested by the gentleman from Michigan, but will modify the amendment I have offered so as to divert only $25,000 instead of $50,000 for the purpose indicated. I have always found the gentleman from Michigan very liberal toward us, and I trust he will urge no further objections to my amendment.

Mr. CONGER. Move to increase it and I will go with you.

Mr. YOUNG. I would do it cheerfully but I am satisfied a provision of that sort would not pass through the House. I am informed by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations they have gone to the utmost limit they can safely go in the amount appropriated in this bill. The amendment, modified as I have suggested, I trust will meet with the approval of the gentleman from Michigan and also of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. It only diverts $25,000 instead of $50,000.

Mr. HARRISON, Mr. Chairman, it is known that the Committee on Appropriations never makes an appropriation of one dollar more than is necessary for a specific purpose. This House can take that for granted. If they have consented to give $75,000 to the work of triangulation and surveying the lakes, surely we should not come here and ask to divert it to something else which has nothing to do with it. If the gentleman had offered an amendment to appropriate $100,000 and then proposed to apply $25,000 toward the object he has specified, we might readily agree with him; but to come here and ask this House, when the committee have cut it down from $150,000 to $75,000, to divert a part of it to an entirely different operation from the one intended, will not be good policy and will not be statesmanlike. I hope the House will vote down the amendment.

Mr. CONGER. If the gentleman will withdraw the amendment I will renew it.

Mr. YOUNG. I move to modify my amendment, and on that I will ask the attention of the committee for a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendment as it has been modified.

The amendment, as modified, was again read.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Chairman, it is apparent, the amendment of the gentleman upon its face is for the purpose of reclaiming lands.

Mr. YOUNG. That was the object.

Mr. CONGER. It is plain and clear that it is not for the survey of the Mississippi River. I wish to call attention to the language of the clause itself. After making the appropriation of $75,000, it goes on to provide that the proceeds of the sales of steamers belonging to the survey of the northern and northwestern lakes shall be placed in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation for said survey—that is, the appropriation of $75,000—and the whole amount shall be immediately available—that is, the $75,000 shall be immediately available—together with whatever may arise from the sale of boats as they close the survey. I ask the gentlemen of the Committee on Appropriations, I ask the gentleman from Tennessee on the committee if he will give me his attention a moment in reference to this matter?

Mr. YOUNG. Certainly; but I am not on the committee.

Mr. CONGER. I mean the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. BLOUNT.]

Mr. BLOUNT. What is the question?

Mr. CONGER. I ask whether this appropriation was not increased from the original estimate of the committee; that is, from $50,000 to $75,000 by the special and earnest request of General Comstock in charge of the survey?

Mr. BLOUNT. I was not on the subcommittee which prepared this matter.

Mr. CONGER. Then I ask any gentleman of the committee familiar with the subject, whether that is not the fact?

Mr. HALE. That is the fact.

Mr. CONGER. I ask any member of the committee whether after having first agreed to $50,000, after having come to the conclusion $50,000 would be enough for this survey, whether they did not on the representation of General Comstock, who has charge of the survey of the lakes, increase the amount to $75,000? I understand the gentleman from Maine who is on the Committee on Appropriations states that to be the fact. General Comstock himself so informed me. Had it remained at $50,000 I should have urged this committee to have increased it to $75,000. But that increase having been made, and believing that that can carry on the survey during the summer, I propose to let it remain so. But if this $25,000 should be diverted to another purpose there should be an increase of this appropriation.

Mr. BANKS rose.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending paragraph be closed in five minutes.

Mr. YOUNG. I hope that will not be done. This is too important a matter to be disposed of without some debate.

Mr. CONGER. If this amendment prevails other amendments will be necessary, and debate ought not to be cut off.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well. I do not press the proposition just now.

Mr. BANKS. The Committee on Appropriations, I hope, will allow me to say a word on this question; although I know they are anxious to have this bill proceeded with. The manner in which we transact the business of the House brings all the important current questions of the day into these appropriation bills. We have only five-minute speeches, and every member feels when he occupies the floor that he is perhaps impeding the passage of the appropriation bill itself. But if there is one question that can be brought to the attention of the House that is more important than anything else at the present time connected with the development of the material interests of the country, it is this question of the improvement of the Mississippi; and it seems to me that the appropriation proposed for that purpose is ridiculously small, considering its important bearing and the important results which should be aimed at.

There is nothing so important to the interior of the continent and to the continent itself, connected with its material interests, as the improvement of the Mississippi Valley and the development of its interests. There is a territory there capable of supporting more than a thousand millions of people. A large part of it must necessarily be reclaimed by the Government, and as preliminary to this there must be a survey of the Mississippi River and an estimate of the measures necessary to develop this vast and important and rich portion of the continent. The present appropriation for this purpose is only so much money wasted. We give just money enough to pay the men that are occupied, without enabling them to accomplish anything in the great work itself. We are postponing the development of the Mississippi Valley for ten, twenty, thirty, or fifty years, while the increase of products if the interests of this portion of the country were attended to would pay a million times over the cost necessary for their development.

Now I think the gentlemen of the Appropriation Committee, considering that they hold the avenues of legislation on all these subjects—for we cannot touch those subjects or vote upon them except on the propositions they allow to be presented—should look at this question in all its breadth and give us something that would be adequate to the necessities of the country and its legitimate and proper demands.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to amend by striking out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the survey of Lake Erie is almost completed. There is a small portion of Lake Ontario yet to be surveyed. And that completes the survey of the northern lakes. There are some vessels to be sold, which, it is believed by the Committee on Appropriations, will add about $20,000 to this fund. The funds resulting from the sale of vessels that are being dispensed with by reason of the completion of the surveys, and authorized to be applied to the purposes of this appropriation, will, when added to the amount here appropriated, make an aggregate of about $95,000 on the whole.

The survey of the Mississippi River is only authorized as a measure to promote commerce. I presume that no gentleman can pretend that the Government of the United States may promote mere private ends by the draining of swamps or the reclaiming of swamp lands. That is a matter which belongs to the several States. The diversion of $20,000 from this appropriation for the survey of the Mississippi River, to promote the interests of the navigation of that stream, would leave $70,000 to be expended in completing the survey of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario; and I see no good reason why that should not be done. I move, therefore, to fix this amount at $20,000, and strike out the last clause. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided further, That $20,000 of the foregoing sum shall be expended under the direction of the Chief of Engineers in continuing the survey of the Mississippi River and its tributaries.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let the proposition stop there—at "the Mississippi River." The appropriation, as it stands in the bill, is simply for a survey of the northern lakes and the Mississippi River and its tributaries.

Mr. CONGER. The words "its tributaries" are not in the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. The original purpose, Mr. Chairman, of this survey was to have a survey in the interests of navigation of the Mississippi River from Cairo. I suggest therefore that the diversion of $20,000 of this money to survey the Mississippi River in the interests of commerce is a proposition which we can all of us support. If there is any ulterior object in view in the offering of this amendment there might be a difference of opinion in regard to it. For myself, I think it should be confined to the survey of the Mississippi River in the interests of navigation. My proposition would leave $75,000 for the survey of the lakes and appropriate $20,000 to continue the survey of the Mississippi River.

Mr. CONGER. Does the gentleman mean to increase the appropriation now made by the bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. No, sir; the gentleman will perceive that we have authorized the sale of vessels during the coming fiscal year that are not now required in the survey of the northern lakes. The work is so far completed that two or three of the vessels which have been employed in that service may be sold.

Mr. CONGER. But will they be sold during the coming year?

Mr. HOLMAN. The amount received for these vessels can be made available during the next fiscal year for which this appropriation is made, and the amount so received, together with the $75,000, we think is sufficient for the present year. Let the survey of the Mississippi River continue to the extent of $20,000, which is about the sum which should be applied to that object.

Mr. CONGER. Let me suggest to the gentleman that he increase the amount of the appropriation $15,000 and then give $20,000 for the survey of the river, and that will leave $70,000 for the lake survey.

Mr. HOLMAN. These vessels, which are to be sold, are certainly worth $20,000.

Mr. HARRISON. But it is not provided that the amount received for them shall become a part of this appropriation. The language of the paragraph does not do it.

Mr. HOLMAN. We will correct the language if there is any doubt about it. I will move to add the words "in addition to the foregoing sum." The language of the paragraph is as follows:

For continuing surveys of Lakes Erie and Ontario; determination of points in aid of State surveys, and construction of maps; continuation of triangulation south from Chicago and east to Lake Erie; survey of the Mississippi River; and miscellaneous, $75,000: Provided, That the proceeds of the sale of the steamers belonging to the survey of the northern and northwestern lakes shall be placed in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation for said survey, and the whole amount shall be immediately available.

Mr. HARRISON. I will suggest to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, if he will hear me, that he strike out the word "provided" and put in the words "together with the amount."

Mr. YOUNG. I want to say a very few words in reference to the suggestion made by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. Now this is merely a circuitous way of doing what the gentleman might do directly, and that is to defeat the whole object and purpose of my amendment. It must be obvious that if the suggestions of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations are adopted they will defeat the entire object contemplated by my amendment. It may be that the steamers to which he has alluded will never be sold, and it may be that the Chief of Engineers or the officer having in charge the survey may, in construing the language which the gentleman proposes to incorporate in his bill, consider that the appropriation is for the purpose of improving the Mississippi River for the purposes of navigation and commerce and he will send snag-boats along the river to pull out snags instead of making the survey contemplated by my amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman misapprehends me. I an willing to say that $20,000 of this sum of $75,000 shall be applied to this object.

Mr. YOUNG. But the gentleman does not specify the object, and it is not a matter of importance to me and of no importance to the great enterprise I have in view to divert a portion of this appropriation for the purposes indicated by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

The object I have in view is to determine the proper manner of reclaiming the alluvial lands of the Mississippi Delta from overflow. The whole matter has been far more ably stated by the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BANKS] than I can do it. Every gentleman who has thought upon the subject must appreciate the vast importance of that enterprise. Now the committee will bear in mind that under a former law of Congress this survey was commenced and prosecuted almost to completion. The sum of $25,000 appropriated now, to be expended under the direction of the Chief of Engineers, would enable him, by the meeting of the next Congress, to complete the survey from Cairo to the Gulf. Two years ago this work was suspended because the appropriation was exhausted, and gentlemen are mistaken when they suppose that in this appropriation or in the former one it was intended to apply only to surveys for the purposes indicated by the gentleman from Indiana. It was the purpose of the law originally that the surveys of the Mississippi and its tributaries should be carried on, and I submit to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that an appropriation for this purpose, clear and distinctive, so that there can be no mistake about it, ought to be included in this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN?]

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to insert after the word "survey" in the last line of the paragraph the following words: "together with the foregoing sum of $75,000."

Mr. HOOKER. On that proposition I desire to say a single word. The amendment of my friend from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] designs to indicate the purpose for which this appropriation of $20,000 or $25,000, as the case may be, is made. If the appropriation is inserted in the bill in the terms which the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN,] the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, proposes, in all probability the entire amount will be expended in taking out snags from the river and making other improvements which are pertinent to the river, when the very object of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] and those in favor of his amendment is that the Government of the United States shall take some steps with a view to ascertain what will be the probable cost of the construction of such levees as will protect the great delta of the Mississippi from overflow. We may as well appropriate money for this purpose as for the lakes, for this great inland sea, as the statesman of former days Mr. Calhoun, called it, the internal sea of the continent, sweeping, as it does, from the Alleghany Mountains, with its thousand tributaries, down to the Gulf of Mexico.

The object and purpose of the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] are to indicate precisely what is desired; that is, that there should be some preliminary survey by which we may ascertain something about what will be the probable cost of the protection of this great region of country from the annual inundations of the Mississippi. I had the honor the other day to introduce a proposition to stop a single crevasse in the levees, which broke through in 1872, and which is known as the Bonnet Carré crevasse. When I proposed an appropriation to stop that crevasse, through which at its flood-tide the waters of the Mississippi flow for an extent of eighteen miles, sweeping along the whole seacoast of Mississippi, and threatening to overflow the city of New Orleans itself, I was met with the objection that there had been no preliminary surveys completed with reference to the construction of levees on the Mississippi.

Now, the proposition of the gentleman from Tennessee is that this amount shall be expended, not in cleaning out the channel of the river, but in ascertaining what will be the probable cost of the construction of these levees. Surely if it is to be used in this way, it will be better not to accept the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN,] which would permit it to be used for other purposes, but to plainly state the object for which this amount is appropriated.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does the gentleman suppose that my amendment limits the expenditure of this money to cleaning out the channel of Mississippi River, removing the snags, &c.?

Mr. HOOKER. It is necessary that the survey should be made to ascertain the probable cost of constructing these levees, because whenever we attempt to have an appropriation made with a view to the protection of that region of country from inundation we are met with the objection, as I was met the other day, that there has been no preliminary survey. The amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] proposes that this survey shall be made in order to ascertain something like an approximate estimate of what will be the cost of constructing the levees.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does the gentleman from Mississippi object to adding the proceeds of the sales of these vessels to the $75,000.

Mr. HOOKER. I do not object to that.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is my amendment. My amendment simply proposes to add the proceeds of the sales of the vessels to the amount appropriated by this bill.

Mr. YOUNG. I desire to say one word in reply to that. I am sure the committee does not understand the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana. If it is adopted, trammeled as the gentleman has it, dependent upon certain contingencies, the appropriation will not avail us for the purpose we have in view. I trust therefore the committee will vote down the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana and adopt the one I have myself submitted.

Mr. HOLMAN. If the gentlemen on the Lower Mississippi, who have no more interest in this matter than others have—the money may be expended in their midst, but my constituents are as much interested in this subject and a little more than the constituents of those gentlemen—if the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] thinks it is not wise policy to add the proceeds of the sales of these vessels to the aggregate in this fund, I would be glad to have him give some reasons for his opinion.

Mr. YOUNG. I have pointed out my objection to the amendment. I am willing to agree to such an amendment if the gentleman will allow me to draw it up. I do not want the appropriation which I ask to be made for the purpose of a survey of the Mississippi River to go into a general fund. If the amendment of the gentleman is made to apply alone to that part of the appropriation which I ask for, it will fail altogether, because, the remainder of the appropriation having no reference to that contingency, these vessels I know very well will not be sold as long as their services are needed in the survey of the lakes. Therefore it is that that portion of the appropriation which we are interested in will fail utterly of the purposes we have in view if his amendment is adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman who desires to take in charge the Mississippi River and its navigation——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate upon the pending amendment has been exhausted.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out the last word. The gentlemen who have sought to take in charge the navigation of the Mississippi River, as though it was a matter peculiarly their own instead of being a matter of interest to the vast region of country drained by the Mississippi and its tributaries—if they think that this fund should not be increased by adding to the $75,000 the proceeds of the sales of these vessels, I will withdraw the amendment.

But let me say a word. I asked for an appropriation of money for the survey of the Mississippi River with a view of helping navigation. These gentlemen seem to be favoring an appropriation, not with a view to improving the navigation of the river, but for private interests, the reclamation of farms on that river from overflow. If that is proper, I might ask the same thing for my constituents. The same thing might be asked for every river in the United States the banks of which are subject to overflow. But that is a purpose for which I think the Government could not properly make an appropriation. It is merely a private object. Under the power to regulate commerce, the Government has undoubtedly the right to remove obstructions from these great inland rivers, these great inland seas as they have been termed, for the purpose of improving their navigation. But where does the gentleman find the power on the part of the Federal Government to appropriate money to reclaim farms from the advance of rising water? That is a purely private object. Upon the same principle you might appropriate money to improve lands in any part of the country.

I do not see by what authority money can be appropriated to reclaim lands in Mississippi, Louisiana, Indiana, or any other State of this Union. It is an appropriation of public money for a purely private object. To improve the navigation of the river is clearly within the power of Congress; it concerns navigation. But when you undertake to improve farms upon the river, the farms on the Upper Mississippi or on the Missouri subject to overflow, would be as much entitled to the same protection on the part of the Federal Government. I am willing to appropriate money to improve the navigation of that river; that is within the constitutional power of Congress; it is a work beneficial to commerce and one in which the whole people of the country are interested. But the reclaiming of lands from overflow is certainly not within our province.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CONGER. I move to amend by striking out the last word. There can be no doubt, from the report of engineers and the universally received opinion of the country, that the making of proper levees to improve the navigation of the Mississippi River will protect these overflowed lands. The two objects go together; there is no question about that. Whatever tends to confine the waters of the Mississippi within their own channel, and especially within a narrowed channel, will deepen that river and will at the same time prevent the overflow of vast quantities of lands in the Southern States. The two objects may well be coupled together; and although we may have doubts, as I have myself, about our right to appropriate money for reclaiming lands, yet I have no doubt that the proper appropriation of money to confine the Mississippi within its bounds and make a channel direct to the Gulf will improve the entire navigation of the river and remedy the frequently recurring sand-banks there. The very means which will prevent overflow will improve vastly the navigation of the river.

Hence, I have no trouble upon that point. The wording of the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee is objectionable to me, but I do not care particularly for that. What I ask is that such an object as this may be carried on by an additional appropriation for the survey of the river, as the amount now named in the bill is already too small for carrying on the survey of the lakes. But let the appropriation be increased and both of these works may go on together. If this appropriation can be increased $20,000, or even $15,000, both objects can be accomplished. In view of the vast importance of both, I think this additional appropriation ought to be made. I move, therefore, as preliminary to the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. YOUNG,] to strike out $75,000 and insert $90,000. Then a portion of the appropriation can be taken for the survey of the Mississippi.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would consent to make the appropriation $80,000, together with the proceeds of these vessels.

Mr. CONGER. There need not be any change in the language in regard to proceeds of the vessels.

Mr. HOLMAN. Those proceeds will not be less than $20,000.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman should not stand upon $10,000 in a matter which interests half the country.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to make the amount $80,000.

Mr. KELLEY. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] withdraws his amendment and I renew it. Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether the sum named by one or the other of the gentlemen is a proper one for this work. I desire, however, to say that if any work can be proposed which will be national, it is work relating to the navigation of the Mississippi River. The last few weeks have given to engineers and legislators new light and positive instructions upon the question of the method of securing a system of free navigation to the ocean, to the States and Territories through which the Missouri, the Ohio, and other confluents of the Mississippi flow. I believe that to extend at intervals up the Mississippi from its mouth the plan so successfully executed by Captain Eads at its mouth will make those rivers navigable to the extent of twenty or thirty thousand miles. I am not advocating any special work; but I do say that no dollar should be withheld that is required for proper and adequate surveys and suggestions as to how this truly national work may best be done.

If anything can be national in this country the improvement of the Mississippi River is; and to talk of it as a scheme for protecting overflowed lands is to belittle or evade the question. The commerce of the greatest valley of the world is to be affected by this measure. If the opening of commerce to the whole northern portion of the Mississippi Valley, extending from the water-shed of the Alleghanies to the summit of the Rocky Mountains, (for such are the boundaries of that valley,) be not national, nothing can be. Niagara is local; Mount Hood is local; all the other great physical peculiarities of the country may be described as local, but the greatest commercial work that can be undertaken and the most thoroughly national is the ascertaining at the earliest possible day how the Mississippi and its tributaries may be most quickly and permanently opened to ocean commerce.

Mr. ATKINS. I do not wish to make any extended remarks on this subject. As I understand the amendment of my colleague [Mr. YOUNG] he proposes simply to carry out the design of the appropriation as originally made for the survey of the Mississippi River, and I do not see any reason why the language of the bill might not have been so framed as to carry out that original design. As it is, the language of the bill would clearly divert the sum from its original object. Now what harm can there be in adopting the amendment of my colleague, when it simply appropriates this fund as originally designed, unless this House proposes to change its purpose with regard to the survey of the Mississippi River? I shall not undertake to say one word as to the importance of this survey to the whole country.

The Mississippi River does not belong to the States through which it runs. It is national property. It is a national franchise. It belongs to this nation. It is the great ligament of this nation, and until you can sever the Mississippi River you cannot sever this Union. It is not worth while to talk about localities; it is not worth while to look at this thing with jealous eyes, with sectional eyes; it is a national object. It is as much to the interest of the northern man as to the man who lives at the Balize.

I trust it is not the purpose of this House to change the original design of this appropriation. If it is the purpose to let it stand as originally designed, then adopt the amendment of my colleague from the Memphis district.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MONEY. I move to strike out the last word.

The design of this amendment, Mr. Chairman, is simply to continue the law appropriating a sum for the navigation and improvement of the Mississippi River. The remarks of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] (and I hope I will have his attention) were certainly unworthy of him and the subject under consideration. He speaks of this as a scheme for the protection of private interests, for the protection of private property, to prevent the overflow of a few farms of alluvial land on the banks of the Mississippi. The work covers six sovereign States of this Union and is for the benefit of the whole country. It is to reclaim an area of 32,000 square miles, equal to one-half of New England, from the inundation and ravage of the waters of the Mississippi. Its object is strictly national, and in no sense can it be termed, looking to the scope and extent of the work and of its influence, a local measure. It is a subject in which every man in this Republic has an interest, the manufacturers of New England and of the Middle States as well as the agriculturists of the Western and of the Southern States. It is a subject which must, at a very early period, engage the attention of every statesman and every business man in the whole country. It cannot be ignored by the Congress of the United States any longer, because through the whole extent of the country, in the North and East as well as in the South and West, there is a demand that this extensive alluvial country shall be reclaimed. Political economists begin already to see in its capacity and its resources the means by which this national debt of ours may be paid. They begin to see that the whole cotton market of the world may be monopolized by the United States, by the cotton which may be produced when these alluvial lands are reclaimed, a product which brings more gold into our Treasury than all the other products, North, South, East, or West.

There is nothing in this amendment, nothing in any one single feature of it, which can be called a local measure. It is all national, national in its extent, national in its benefits and in its influence on the future of this country. I ask this committee will consider this question in all its grand extent and consequences before they reject an appropriation of the small amount of $25,000.

With all respect to the gentleman from Indiana himself, I must say that he has not acquitted himself this morning in a manner worthy of his reputation and his broad views on this national question. It is impossible for us to ignore a measure so important as this, and if this Congress refuses to appropriate the amount asked for, if it refuses to initiate a measure so grand as the reclamation of 32,000 square miles of the richest land on this continent, then it will prove itself unequal to one of the greatest questions which has presented itself to the American mind. And I tell you, Mr. Chairman, the people of this country will demand that other representatives shall come upon this floor and this great measure which to-day is being frowned upon shall be taken into consideration and helped to a successful issue. We appropriated over seven millions of dollars for the purchase of the barren, rocky, and ice-bound coasts of Alaska, worth nothing to this country, and here it is now proposed to refuse the appropriation of $25,000 to initiate the reclamation of 32,000 square miles in the heart of our country, inhabited by a homogeneous people, identified with us in every respect. I appeal to the good sense of this House to support this amendment and enable this work to have an auspicious beginning.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOLMAN. My proposition is to make the sum $80,000, and I rise now for the purpose of asking that debate on this subject be closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana asks that a vote shall now be taken on this proposition.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask the committee to consent that debate on this subject shall close. But in the first place I feel it is due to myself to say a word on what has just fallen from the lips of the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. MONEY.]

I have always taken the ground, and I believe that has been the common sentiment of our predecessors on this floor and in both Houses of Congress from the time Louisiana was acquired, from the time we have had the control of the Mississippi River throughout its whole course, that the improvement of its navigation is a work of national importance and that the appropriation of public money for that purpose is clearly within the power of Congress. At one period of our history questions were raised as to whether the power to regulate commerce did not confine the appropriation of money to the seaboard. But that doctrine gave way long since, and no question is now entertained that appropriations may be made from the public Treasury for the improvement of those great natural channels of commerce in the interior of our country. I favor the appropriation of any sum of money required for the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi River and its tributaries. These are works of common interest to the whole country and to the whole people. They affect the subject of commerce in its widest aspects.

But it is another question whether the Government should appropriate money having in view directly the reclamation of overflowed lands within the limits of States. I concede that it is proper and necessary in improving the navigation of the Mississippi River that dikes and levees should be built, and if incidentally the effect of constructing such works should be to reclaim adjacent lands, that would be entirely proper. I would not withhold the appropriation of money to construct a dike because incidentally benefit should accrue to the adjacent proprietor in reclaiming his land from the overflow of the river. On the contrary, I should very much rejoice that while a great public object is accomplished benefit should incidentally result to the citizens of the particular State where the works happen to be.

Mr. GUNTER. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. GUNTER. Does not the gentleman from Indiana know that a large portion of these lands overflowed in Louisiana and Mississippi and other Southern States consists of Government lands, not individual lands? And if they are Government lands, is it not legitimate to make an appropriation to reclaim them?

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman says they are Government lands——

Mr. GUNTER. No, sir; I ask you, do you not know that is the case?

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not know that such is the case. But if it were the case I would say that the Government never yet has undertaken the experiment of entering a State and carrying on public works with a view to the improvement of the value of its lands. I am willing to appropriate money for the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi River, and if the great delta of the Mississippi is thereby also improved, I should be very glad of it. But I deny the power of Congress to appropriate money out of the public Treasury for the specific purpose of reclaiming the lands of any State of this Union.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HURLBUT rose.

Mr. HOLMAN. After the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HURLBUT] shall have been heard, I will ask that the debate on this paragraph be closed.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I desire also to say one word.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that after these two gentlemen shall have been heard debate shall close.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. YOUNG. I reserve the right to close the debate, if I think it necessary to do so, after the gentleman from Illinois and the gentleman from Missouri have been heard.

Mr. HURLBUT. There is no subject which demands more careful attention of Congress, or which, in my judgment, has larger possibilities of good, than this which is now before the Committee of the Whole; the possibility, either by the direct action of the Government itself or by the joint action of the United States and the States, of so regulating the Mississippi River as to prevent the destruction which is imminent all over that country. I cannot understand how any gentleman who is at all familliar with that region can hesitate to help these people, whose system has been broken up by events in the last ten or twelve or fourteen years, to save the great works which have hitherto secured that vast belt of country bordering on the river from destruction. How any one can refuse help for that purpose, on the ground of those old constitutional restrictions which in practice have been destroyed long since, I cannot comprehend.

I hope the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. YOUNG,] who has this matter in charge, will distinctly put his amendment for the continuance of these surveys. We have already done this thing. We have authorized the engineers to commence their surveys, and they have made one report; and now it is proposed that we shall stop the opportunity of acquiring that correct information upon which some future Congress can act in giving relief to that great delta and putting it in a condition where it shall be what the joint action of God and man would make it, the very garden of the country. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. ATKINS. I desire to ask the gentleman from Illinois a question. Is it not his opinion that a system of levees would improve the navigation of the Mississippi and also improve the navigation of the tributaries of that river?

Mr. HURLBUT. There is no doubt that the Mississippi River is controllable by the appliances of modern science, and that every step that is taken toward deepening and regulating the bed of the river will act directly upon the improvement of the adjacent country, there can be no doubt of that.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. It will be perceived by reading the paragraph in the bill that it includes the surveys not only of the lakes, but also of the Mississippi River; and the object of the amendment is to specify what portion of this money shall be used for the survey of the Mississippi River as provided for in the pargraph. I regret very much that the gentlemen who represent the lake district should oppose this amendment with the view of preventing the Mississippi River from having its proportion of this money.

In conversation with General Comstock, but a few days ago, he told me he had commenced the survey of the Mississippi River at Cairo, and gone down below Columbus. It was a very tedious job. The work had to be done in the winter time, and he had removed a portion of his men from Lake Erie when work could not progress there and taken them to the Mississippi River; and he further said if hereafter Congress should appropriate money for the improvement of its navigation, or leveeing the river, millions of dollars would be saved by a proper survey being made now. He said that of the money expended on that river to-day for its improvement from Cairo to the mouth of the Illinois River, thousands of dollars would have been saved to the Government if there had been a proper survey made years ago, when they could have ascertained the current and the washing of the respective banks.

I trust there will be no further opposition to allowing a portion of this money to be used for that purpose. I cannot conceive the object of these gentlemen in opposing this amendment. They say the total amount of the appropriation is not sufficient to carry on the two works. But I hold under all the circumstances connected with the improvement of the Mississippi River, as well as the necessary surveys of the lakes, that they should be put on an equal footing. I trust the amendment authorizing the use of $25,000 for this purpose—that is, about one-fourth of the total appropriation—may be adopted.

The question being taken on Mr. CONGER's amendment, increasing the amount to $90,000, it was adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is next on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. YOUNG.]

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that that amendment may be again read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add these words:

Provided further, That $25,000 of the foregoing sum shall be expended under the direction of the Chief of Engineers in continuing the survey of the Mississippi River and its tributaries, with a view of determining the proper method of reclaiming from overflow the alluvial lands of the Mississippi Delta.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to amend the amendment by striking out all after the words "Mississippi River" and inserting the following:

With a view to the improvement of the navigation of that river and its tributaries.

Mr. YOUNG. I cannot accept that amendment.

The question being taken on Mr. HOLMAN's amendment to the amendment, there were—ayes 28, noes 82.

So (further count not being called for) the amendment to the amendment was not agreed to.

The question being taken on Mr. YOUNG's amendment, it was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

That upon the happening of the contingency on which the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue bonds of the United States in payment to James B. Eads on account of the improvement by a system of jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi River, under and by virtue of the provisions in the act of March 3, 1875, entitled "An act making appropriations for the repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to pay the sum that shall become due to the said James B. Eads in money instead of the issue of such bonds, and the sum necessary for said purpose is hereby appropriated.

Mr. HOLMAN. I desire to make a slight modification in that paragraph. I move to amend by inserting after the word "contingency" these words:

Prior to the 1st day of January, 1878.

This will leave the next Congress to deal with the subject as they may think proper.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. I ask the chairman of the committee to listen to the reading of it, that he may see if there is any objection to it. I do not see any myself.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add the following:

The balance of about $18,000 of the appropriation for surveys for sea-coast defenses now standing on the books of the Treasury Department is hereby also made available for the surveys and reconnaissances by the engineer officers attached to the headquarters of the various military divisions and departments, and for the publication of maps for the use of the War Department and of the Army.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think I must raise the point of order upon that. It is impossible to form any judgment as to the amount of this appropriation unless the gentleman has a statement of it from the Treasury.

Mr. HALE. The amount is not to exceed $18,000. This is only making available previous appropriations made to complete certain works that are now going on. The amendment was handed to me with a printed paper from the War Department, which I will not take up time to have read.

Mr. HOLMAN. The object is to continue this survey?

Mr. HALE. To complete it. I will modify the amendment by making it read "not to exceed $18,000."

Mr. HOLMAN. Let the amendment, as modified, be read.

The amendment, as modified, was read.

Mr. HOLMAN. As the hour of twelve o'clock has arrived, I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCKNER reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4632) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and had come to no resolution thereon.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. CABELL: The petition of citizens of Floyd and Montgomery Counties, Virginia, for a post-route from Christiansburgh, via Altizer's Store, in Montgomery County, Fulcher's, in Floyd County, Alum Ridge, and Indian Creek, to Greasy Creek, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. CAULFIELD: The petition of importers of Chicago for an amendment to the revenue laws changing the manner of transporting imported goods, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. CHAPIN: The petition of Adelia E. Ball and Edwin P. Ball, administrators, for an extension of letters-patent for an improvement in operating steam stamps, to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. CROUNSE: The petition of W. H. Stratton and others, of Nebraska, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. FELTON: The petition of citizens of Georgia, for a post-route from Cave Spring to Livingston, Floyd County, Georgia, to the same committee.

By Mr. FREEMAN: The petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, that pensioners be paid from the date of their discharge from the Army, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GLOVER: The petition of letter-carriers of Saint Louis, Missouri, for an increase of pay, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HATCHER: The petition of letter-carriers of Saint Louis, of similar import, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. HAMILTON, of Indiana: Two petitions from citizens of Columbia City, Indiana, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. KEHR: The petition of letter-carriers of Saint Louis, Missouri, for an increase of pay, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. LAWRENCE: The petition of L. Boyd and others, of Springfield, Ohio, for the abolition of the oath of office, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MORRISON: The petition of F. E. Atwood and other citizens of Alton, Illinois, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. PIERCE: The petition of H. M. Davis, widow of the late Rear-Admiral Davis, for a pension for herself and children, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPRINGER: The petition of John A. Petefish, and other citizens of Cass County, Illinois, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. TERRY: A paper relating to the establishment of a post-route from Dublin to White Gate, Virginia, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WARREN: Memorial and resolutions of the citizens of Brookline, Massachusetts, relative to counting the electoral votes, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WELLS, of Missouri: The petition of citizens of Saint Louis, Missouri, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

IN SENATE.

FRIDAY, February 23, 1877—10 a. m.

The recess having expired, the Senate resumed its session.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, I gave notice last night, when the Senate was rather full, at the time of the adjournment, that if the Senate did not go on then with the naval appropriation bill, I should ask to take it up at ten o'clock this morning. I trust that we may wait a few moments for a quorum, so that I may carry out my purpose. The Senate is rather thin now to proceed to business.

Mr. SPENCER. The bill might be read meanwhile.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California moves, as was the understanding at the close of the session last evening, the present consideration of the bill named. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

DISABILITY BILLS.

Mr. MERRIMON. I ask the Senator from California to let the naval bill be suspended, in order that I may pass a few disability bills reported from the Committee on the Judiciary yesterday. They will take but a minute or two.

Mr. SARGENT. I will not object. The naval bill may be laid temporarily aside.

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to know what bills the Senator from North Carolina proposes to call up.

Mr. MERRIMON. Disability bills.

Mr. DAVIS. I understand the bills are to remove political disabilities. Of course there is no objection to bills of that character reported from the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MERRIMON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 3260) to remove the disabilities of Lawrence S. Baker, of Tarboro, North Carolina.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

The first amendment was in the first line of the bill, to strike out the words "legal and;" so as to read:

That all political disabilities imposed, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out all after the words "North Carolina," in line 7, to the end of the bill, in the following words:

And that the said Lawrence S. Baker be, and he is hereby, restored to all the rights and privileges of a citizen of the United States of America.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in. The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read the third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. MERRIMON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 915) to remove the political disabilities of D. H. Hill, of North Carolina.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, in line 5, after the words "imposed by," to insert "the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States by;" and in line 6, to strike out the word "war" and insert "rebellion;" so as to read:

That the political disabilities of D. H. Hill, of North Carolina, imposed by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, by reason of his participation in the late rebellion, be, and the same are hereby, removed."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. MERRIMON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1278) to remove the political disabilities of John S. Marmaduke.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senate voting in favor thereof.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4616) making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the bill, the amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations being acted on as they were reached in order in the reading of the bill.

The first amendment was in line 14, to increase the appropriation for "pay of commissioned and warrant officers at sea, on shore, on special service, and of those on the retired list and unemployed, and for the actual expenses of officers traveling under orders, and for pay of the petty officers, seamen, ordinary seamen, landsmen, and boys, including men of the engineers' force, and for the Coast Survey service, seven thousand five hundred men, from $6,250,000 to $7,270,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert, the following clause after line 105:

For expenses of observing the transit of Mercury on May 6, 1878, at various points in the United States, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 159, to increase the appropriation "for equipment of vessels" from $700,000 to $970,000.

Mr. DAVIS. That is a large increase, an increase of $270,000 in this one item; and I think I am correct in saying that it is an increase over the estimate.

Mr. SARGENT. The estimate was $1,250,000 and last year the amount appropriated was $970,000.

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator no doubt has given the matter more thought than I have. Upon a further examination of the estimates I find that the estimate for the present year is a million and a quarter and that the amount appropriated last year was $970,000, exactly the sum that is now proposed, so that I withdraw any objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was in line 171, to increase the appropriation "for contingent expenses of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, namely: For expenses of recruiting and fitting up receiving-ships, freight and transportation of stores, transportation of enlisted men, printing, advertising, telegraphing, books and models, stationery, express charges, internal alterations, fixtures and appliances in equipment-buildings at navy-yards, foreign postage, car-tickets, ferriage, and ice, apprehension of deserters, assistance to vessels in distress, continuous-service certificates and good-conduct badges for enlisted men, including purchase of school-books for training-ships," from $40,000 to $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 223, to increase the appropriation "for necessary repairs of naval laboratory, hospitals, and appendages, including roads, wharves, out-houses, steam-heating apparatus, sidewalks, fences, garden and farms, cemeteries, furniture, head-marks for graves," from $10,000 to $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 227, to increase the appropriation "for the maintenance of the several naval hospitals and naval laboratory" from $25,000 to $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 254, to increase the appropriation "for preservation of vessels on the stocks and in ordinary; purchase of materials and stores of all kinds; labor in navy-yards and on foreign stations; preservation of materials; purchase of tools; wear, tear, and repair of vessels afloat, and for general care and protection of the Navy in the line of construction and repair; incidental expenses, namely, advertising and foreign postages," from $1,500,000 to $3,300,000, and after the word "dollars," in line 255, to strike out the following proviso:

Provided, That no proposal for materials to be furnished under this or any other section of this act shall discriminate against or in favor of the production of any State or section of the Union.

Mr. DAVIS. It will be noticed that that item is an increase over the House appropriation of $1,800,000; in other words, more than double the amount appropriated by the House. The House appropriated $1,500,000. The present item is now fixed by the Committee on Appropriations at $3,300,000, being $1,800,000 in advance of the House appropriation. It would strike any one giving the subject even a passing thought as being a very large increase, and something extraordinary ought to be the cause of it if the increase is to be made. In my judgment, $3,300,000, even if necessary, (and I do not question that it is, because I have not sufficient knowledge,) is more money than can be properly and economically expended during any one fiscal year, and more than ought to be expended. As to striking out the proviso, I see no harm that it would do if it remained in the bill. There is not any great good that would come from it, but there must have been an object in the House in inserting the proviso. There must have been some reason for it or it would not have been put there. However, I should be glad to hear from the Senator having charge of the bill why the great increase takes place.

Mr. SARGENT. In the first place, in reference to the proviso, by observing the debates of the House the explanation given by a member from Pennsylvania shows that the proviso ought not to be on this bill. I understand the explanation of it to be that in the revenue marine, which has no connection with this bill, an advertisement was made for the purpose of purchasing Tennessee iron. I suppose that they wanted Tennessee iron, and it was stated by a member from Tennessee that it is the best iron in the world. Nevertheless, to prevent that discrimination in advertising for any particular class of iron, the proviso was put in this bill; but as it does not apply to this bill at all, it had better go out, for that reason as well as on account of the merits of the case. If any Department of the Government wants Pennsylvania iron, or Swedish iron, or any other particular iron for any particular purpose, they have a right to advertise for it.

In reference to the increase, it is the amount of the appropriation for several years before this last year. By the appropriation of this year, perhaps both parties striving to make a showing before the people in view of the presidential election, our appropriation bills were diminished somewhat. The appropriations for the Bureau of Construction and Repair and also for Steam Engineering were cut down to a very small figure. Out of the ordinary appropriation for the Navy, as heretofore made, the Secretary of the Navy has been putting into efficient condition iron-clads of the Navy without asking extra appropriations for that purpose. Instead of repairing old wooden ships, which need to be rerepaired and rerepaired again, and which never would be of any permanent value, he has expended the money in putting the iron-clads into condition and has succeeded in finishing all the single-turreted monitors, and they are very admirable for defense. He is also putting in complete repair the double-turreted monitors, which are five, giving out contracts for that purpose. To aid in this work, we this year give to the Bureau of Construction and Repair $3,300,000. Last year this appropriation was cut down. The result was to leave these five double-turreted monitors in the different ship-yards where they are being repaired or put in order, and where iron is being put in instead of white oak. Ships which cost probably from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000, by the expenditure of seven or eight millions of dollars, are being put in complete order. These are now, one of them in the ship-yard in New York, one in the yard at Chester, one in Philadelphia, one in Delaware, and one at Mare Island. We understand that the appropriation made here will complete this work entirely, and give the Government some of the most powerful iron-clads in the world. We shall then be complete for all defensive purposes so far as ships go. The great iron-clads of Europe are stronger than these, unquestionably, but they could not get into our harbors. Therefore, for all purposes of defending our great cities we shall have the most powerful implements of war that can be devised.

If Congress had done as it usually did, and appropriated for the current fiscal year the $3,300,000, the deficiency would not have occurred. Instead of that they made the appropriation the amount less named by my friend from West Virginia. It is proposed, however, that part of this amount for the next year shall be available for the present year in order that this work may go on now, because it would be much more economical to continue it. Furthermore, it is a great hardship to those who have entered into contracts to have their yards burdened up with these ships. These remarks apply to both this item and the next item relating to steam engineering.

Of course, if there should be extensive debate on this matter and it were thought necessary to convince the Senate, we ought to have more Senators here, but this explanation was I think satisfactory to every member of the committee. I hope there will be no further objection to the amendment.

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator probably did not mean to say just what he did say, that the $3,300,000 was called for last year. I suppose he meant to say that it was reduced last year.

Mr. SARGENT. I did not intend to say that.

Mr. DAVIS. I only want to correct that remark. I ask the Senator whether I understood him correctly in saying that previous to the present fiscal year $3,300,000 was the usual appropriation for the items specified here?

Mr. SARGENT. Yes, sir; that was the amount in 1875–'76 and in 1874–'75.

Mr. DAVIS. I see a provision here following on the next page that a million and a half of this sum is to be made available for the present fiscal year. That would in part explain and take away the force of what I said a moment ago, that it was more money than would be economically spent in a single fiscal year, as there will be nearly one and a half years to expend the money in. The increase both in the item now under consideration and in the next one to which the Senator's remarks apply is very large and required, as I thought, an explanation to know why such an increase was necessary. The Senator's explanation, however, that this was the regular appropriation until last year and that a part of it is made available for the present year, relieves a part at least of the objection that struck my mind. Therefore I make no further objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was in line 265, to increase the appropriation for repairs and preservation of boilers and machinery on naval vessels; for fitting, repairs, and preservation of machinery and tools in the several navy-yards; for labor in navy-yards and stations not included above, and incidental expenses; and for purchase and preservation of oils, coals, metals, and all materials, and stores, from $800,000 to $2,000,000; and at the end of the clause to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That of the sum hereby appropriated an amount not exceeding $1,500,000 in the Bureau of Construction and Repair and $750,000 in the Bureau of Steam Engineering shall be available at once to complete necessary work already on hand and under contract, and which cannot be longer delayed without injury to the work and loss to the Government.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KERNAN. I ask the gentleman in charge of the bill whether he can expect these large changes to be made without a vote. I do not want to raise any question now.

Mr. SARGENT. I know they are large amounts, and they are important. They can be reserved in the Senate.

Mr. KERNAN. With that understanding, that they can be called up and explained in the Senate, I shall make no objection now.

The Chief Clerk resumed the reading of the bill:

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to strike out the following paragraphs:

That a commission of nine members be created, in the manner hereinafter provided, whose duty it shall be to examine and inquire into the present condition of the Navy of the United States, as to its personnel and material, and into the laws and usages now governing the naval service; to consider the relation of the commercial to the national marine; what active floating naval force, including the type and class of vessels, their armament and equipment, should be maintained in time of peace, and what should be kept in readiness for actual service in event of sudden war; what number and kind of vessels should be constructed annually to make up for decay, destruction, and casualty; what changes are required in naval architecture, in ordnance, in armor, and in the instruments of defensive warfare by the advance of naval science; how the Government can obtain the best designs and models of the same; and especially to consider what measures are necessary to protect and extend our rapidly growing commerce on the Pacific Ocean and in Asiatic waters; and to report to Congress, through the President, during the months of December, 1877, or January, 1878, the results of their investigation, recommending such legislation as they may deem requisite to bring the Navy up to the highest standard of effectiveness consistent with wise economy.

That the said commission shall consist of the Admiral, the General of the Army, two Senators, to be designated by the President of the Senate, and three members of the House of Representatives, to be designated by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, said Senators and Representatives being such as will be also members of the Forty-fifth Congress; and two officers of the Navy, to be designated by the President, one of whom shall also act as the secretary of the commission.

That said commission shall have power to send for records, books, and papers, and to summon and examine witnesses. And the Secretary of the Navy is hereby directed and empowered to furnish the commission with all facilities within his control for the convenient prosecution of their labors. But no expense shall be incurred by the United States on account of said commission except the regular and current salaries of the persons employed on the commission; but that all expenses incurred shall be borne by said commission.

Mr. DAVIS. It strikes me that the bill as it now stands, coming from the House, creating a commission of nine persons, asks for a great deal of information. If it could be properly gotten and put before Congress it would certainly be valuable to persons making up their minds as to the present condition and what is necessary for the future of the Navy; and unless there is some objection that I know not of, it appears to me we ought to agree with the House in regard to these items. The bill does not contemplate an expenditure of money for this purpose, I believe; or at least not to any great extent, and perhaps no expenditure whatever. The information which such a commission would obtain would be valuable. Whether or not all the provisions of the bill could be properly carried out I know not. I hope the Senator having charge of the bill will give us his objections to the proposition as it stands in the bill. The House certainly must have had an object in placing it there.

Mr. SARGENT. Take the whole of it and never was a greater absurdity attempted in legislation. Here we have coupled together enormous subjects which would require the proposed commission to visit all parts of the country, to examine witnesses, and pay the expenses out of their own pockets.

All expenses incurred shall be borne by said commission.

It is absurd on its face. Then again the constitution of the commission is such that most of them will know nothing about naval affairs. Think of the idea of putting the General of the Army on a board to report on a system of naval warfare! I should like to know what two Senators and three members are willing to discharge the functions under this bill and examine witnesses, without provision even for being supplied with a sheet of letter-paper. It says this shall be without expense to the United States, but the Secretary of the Navy is required to transport these people wherever they want to go.

This matter was fully argued in the committee and my friend was present and heard the arguments. I think he should not ask me to discuss it. But if this is to be seriously debated, I decline to do it with the Senate so thin because I do not want to repeat what I have to say hereafter. If the Senate will allow this provision to go out pro forma and then reserve it with the other amendments Senators wish reserved to be acted on in the Senate, very well.

Mr. DAVIS. One word. I have nothing to say as to what occurred in committee. I do not agree with the Senator from California, however, in what he says as to what occurred in committee.

Mr. SARGENT. Do you say that it was not fully discussed in committee in your presence? I do not say we came to any conclusion upon it, but it was argued in the committee. That is all that I said.

Mr. DAVIS. I have nothing to say as to what occurred in committee further than that I do not agree with the Senator from California on that. I am positive when I say I do not agree with him.

The Senator says that this whole proposition is absurd. This has been grafted upon the bill by the other branch of this Congress after debate; and it may be just as absurd for the Senate to say that there is no sense in it as it was in the House to put it here. I care not, and I know not whether it can be properly carried out; but I think it improper in the Senate to say that it is absurd and ridiculous. If there be an addition necessary to provide for the needful expenditures, which would be very little, that can easily be remedied; but that does not make the whole proposal absurd. I think, on the contrary, there is a great deal of good sense in it; and as the Senate is thin, and the Senator does not care about discussing the bill now, and I myself want to hear him—there are times I like to hear him, but at other times I do not—perhaps this matter had better be deferred for the present.

Mr. SARGENT. I ask that this go out pro forma, to be reserved for the consideration of the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. Very well.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SARGENT. Now let Senators indicate the amendments that they desire reserved, and we will take a recess until the Senate is fuller.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

Mr. DAVIS. I believe there are three amendments to be reserved, two by the Senator from New York [Mr. KERNAN] and the last one by myself.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Those amendments will be reserved.

Mr. COCKRELL. The increase of $1,020,000 on page 2, line 15; the increase of $200,000 on page 7, line 159; the increase of $1,800,000 on page 11, line 255, and the increase of $1,200,000 on page 12, line 265, I desire to have reserved.

Mr. SARGENT. Very well. Let the others be concurred in and then I will move for a recess.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments indicated on page 2, page 7, page 11, and page 12 will be reserved.

Mr. COCKRELL. And then that as to the commission at the close of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question will be on concurring in the amendments in gross, save those which have been specially reserved.

The amendments not excepted were concurred in.

Mr. SARGENT. I move that the Senate take a recess.

Mr. DORSEY. I hope not; I have a bill to call up.

Mr. SARGENT. Let the appropriation bill, then, be laid aside temporarily.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be laid aside temporarily.

HOT SPRINGS RESERVATION.

Mr. DORSEY. I move to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 2382) granting the right of way to the Hot Springs Railroad Company over the Hot Springs reservation in the State of Arkansas.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. DORSEY. The bill was read yesterday.

Mr. DAVIS. I did not hear it yesterday, and the Senator well knows if there is any question on a bill, as I am told there was on this yesterday, it cannot pass this morning.

Mr. DORSEY. I did not know that there was any question on the bill yesterday, except that the morning hour expired and the Senator from California called up an appropriation bill. This bill comes with the unanimous indorsement of the committee to whom it was referred after being there over a year. It is a bill that provides for perfecting the entries of four or five thousand people who are in a most distressed condition. I do not believe any more important measure is before Congress requiring action than this bill. It is a bill that meets with the approval of the delegation in Congress from that State and of the Legislature, and the reports of the committees of both Houses of Congress are unanimous. I do not see how there can be any objection to it. It is entirely a local matter.

Mr. McCREERY. I think the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WRIGHT] desires to be heard on this subject. He is not present. He made some remarks on it yesterday. He certainly wanted to look into it.

Mr. DORSEY. I understand that the Senator from Iowa wished an amendment made yesterday; but an amendment suggested by my colleague meets his views, as I understand, and will be satisfactory to him. Then there was one section which he desired to have stricken out, and in that I concur, and I shall ask to have it stricken out.

Mr. McCREERY. I think it would be well to wait until the Senator from Iowa shall come in.

Mr. DORSEY. I hope the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CLAYTON. Let the bill be read again for the information of the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. DORSEY. I have no objection to the bill being read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read for information.

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator says "let the bill be read for the information of the Senator from West Virginia." I ask that the bill be read for the information of the Senate, not the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. DORSEY. The bill was read yesterday morning. I have no objection to its being read again for the information of anybody who wants to hear it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the substitute reported by the Committee on Public Lands for the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 2382) granting the right of way to the Hot Springs Railroad Company over the Hot Springs reservation in the State of Arkansas.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLAYTON] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. CLAYTON. I ask the Secretary to read the amendment as I propose to have it amended to conform to the ideas of the Senator from Iowa, [Mr. WRIGHT.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment, as modified, will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed in line 6, of section 1, after the word "repeal," to strike out the following words:

Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the right of the United States to collect and receive rents already due.

And to insert in lieu thereof:

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay to the settlers upon said reservation all rents collected from them by said receiver, after deducting therefrom the expenses of collecting such rents; and for that purpose a sufficient sum is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suggest to my friend from Arkansas that as that amendment now stands the effect of it would be that you first deduct the expenses of administering the trust and then you still have to pay to the settlers the entire amount.

Mr. CLAYTON. No; what is left; the balance only.

Mr. WRIGHT. Then you ought to prepare the amendment in such form that they shall be paid only pro rata or paid a percentage of what is left. As it is now, you first deduct the entire expenses and then require the whole amount be paid to them after that.

Mr. CLAYTON. I intended to cover that point, and if the amendment does not it can be amended.

Mr. OGLESBY. I ask the Senator from Arkansas upon what ground it is he offers that amendment anyway?

Mr. CLAYTON. Upon the ground that it is unjust to the settlers on the reservation to make them pay rents. They were required to pay rent for lands they occupied. Some of them occupied the lands for twenty or thirty years, and their occupation has been no detriment to the public whatever but a great benefit. If they had not put improvements on these lands the public would have been inconvenienced and the Government would have suffered, because it is the interest of the Government to have its afflicted people receive the benefit of these waters. If they had not gone on the reservation it never would have yielded to the Government one dollar of revenue. The Government has never charged the settlers in such cases; and this is a stronger case than any other case of settlement on the public lands.

Mr. PADDOCK. Is it not true that the Government is collecting rents on the improvements in proportion to the value of the improvements?

Mr. CLAYTON. The Government is collecting rents for the buildings these men have erected. It is a great hardship. The people there are suffering in these hard times. A very large sum of money has been drawn from them during the past year and many of them are unable to pay it. Some have paid it, and I think it is no more than right that that should be refunded.

Mr. OGLESBY. I do not object to the Senator from Arkansas making an effort here to save his constituents from the payment of what he considers a burden. The Senate ought not to forget that the Committee on Public Lands have considered this bill somewhat hastily, not as fully as they desired to consider it, and that in the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate this point was considered in connection with the bill. The committee recommended the bill and are willing to stand by the bill, subject to such sensible amendments as shall be proposed by this body, and the committee did expect that it would undergo some amendment here. The general spirit of the bill we heartily indorsed. I do personally heartily indorse the general spirit of the bill. I do not wish, for one, to make any money off these people; nor do I believe the Government does; and I think if the Government undertakes it, it will fail in the long run from my personal examination of such matters. We put this provision in the first section of the amendment upon due consideration:

Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the right of the United States to collect and receive rents already due.

That proviso was considered in the committee, and agreed to.

Besides, if the amendment which the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLAYTON] proposes is carried, there are a large number of men as I am told who occupy these buildings that have habitually paid rent to the men who claimed to own them. The men who claimed to own them own them no longer. The title is in the Government. Is there any hardship in those men that rented from the claimants paying to the Government that rent which they were paying to the claimants? What particular hardship is there in that? The Government has been at great expense in this matter, and all I ask as a member of the Committee on Public Lands or as a citizen of the country is that the Government shall be saved harmless from expense or loss; and I take it it will be no great hardship if those people pay what has been assessed against them.

I shall be very glad if this bill can be passed and these titles can be arranged by resale or release. I for one shall be very glad to have the Government out of the business of receiving rents from lands or other property that, although the Government has a legal title to and does own, yet it does not care to speculate in. It strikes me that the Senate had better let this bill go along as it stands on that point.

Mr. CLAYTON. The Senator says he does not desire the Government to be out of money in this transaction. If he will look at my amendment he will see that it does not leave the Government out anything. The first thing I propose to do is to deduct the expenses arising from the collection of these rents and after that the money that is left to be returned pro rata to the persons who have paid it.

Mr. OGLESBY. The Senator's amendment, if I get the gist of it, involves some very complicated accounts between the receiver or the Court of Claims or some other Department of the Government and each individual who has paid any rents there for the last twelve months. Each account is to be opened, the expenses to be settled with each man or a pro rata part of what the expenses have been charged to each, and then the balance paid to him. The truth about it is that it is no great hardship for those men to pay the same rent to the Government that they paid to the old claimants. Sometime or other before the bill is finally disposed of I may have something to say about it. It is a bill that has given considerable trouble to the committee and is worthy of the attention of this body. It is not a very large tract. There are three or four sections of land, and the hot springs occupy a large portion of one of the sections. The title has been vested in the United States by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. CLAYTON. I want to ask the Senator from Illinois whether he will not accept this amendment. I withdraw the other and offer this, which I think will be acceptable:

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to repay to the settlers upon said reservation all rents arising from the use of the buildings and other improvements thereon as have been or may be collected by said receiver; and for that purpose a sufficient sum is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

This merely provides for refunding to those poor people down there the rents that they have been compelled to pay for the occupation of their own buildings, buildings erected by themselves and occupied by themselves, and I certainly think no person can object to that.

Mr. INGALLS. Can the Senator inform us the amount that has been collected?

Mr. CLAYTON. I cannot.

Mr. OGLESBY. If the Senator from Arkansas would take time to frame an amendment which shall be clear, free from ambiguity, and relate only to the people upon that reservation who have built their own residences, hotels, or business houses on their own ground or on their own supposed ground, and who have not paid any rent to anybody, but have only paid rent to the Government since the decision of this case by the Supreme Court, I believe as to that class I should not object.

Mr. CLAYTON. That is what I want.

Mr. OGLESBY. But I should want the amendment so clear and pointed as that there could be no trouble upon it upon that point. I see no hardship in having those other people who did pay rent to the old claimants pay that same rent or a less rent to the Government. I would be glad if the receiver had taken much less rent than he has charged; but then I am not informed of the facts as the receiver was. I am satisfied that the Government does not wish to make money out of these people. I do not believe it would be wise for the Government to undertake to make money or to earn revenues out of the buildings and grounds there under the circumstances. I think the people of the United States would not desire to do so.

And if I may venture to take another liberty in regard to this subject, not forgetting my relation to this body and as a member of the Committee on Public Lands, I would suggest that in the long run the Government would lose in that. I think it would profit by letting the people down there have that land at a dollar and a quarter an acre and quit the business. I have very serious doubts about the propriety of the Government undertaking to peddle out the water at the Hot Springs or to dealing it out or dividing it out. I rather think it would be better for all the people of the United States if it were in the hands of the State of Arkansas or in possession of the people of that county, or what is better still, in the individual ownership of the occupants of that territory. I think in the long run the Government will lose in the way of appropriations, costs, charges, delays, litigations, more than it will ever earn out of it.

Then these people have an equitable claim anyhow. They went down there to live, cast their lot with those waters and amid those people; and according to western policy, now of many years' standing, they have a sort of right to have the land at the lowest possible rate, even if they shall be required to pay anything. They are settlers; they are a sort of pre-emptors, and I would be quite liberal with them in getting rid of this portion of the public domain.

This bill has been considered in committee, and I am still of the opinion that I was in the committee when the bill was reported, that it is not a perfect bill. It was drawn hastily, because the circumstances were somewhat exacting. I have not felt that the bill is in that clear and precise language upon the subject-matter with which it deals, that it ought to be in order to prevent litigation between these very people themselves. So a little study of this bill as it goes along will not hurt any; and I should not be surprised if some good amendments might be made to it. The general spirit of the bill I favor; the general purpose of the bill the committee favors, and I know the committee would be glad to see it passed; but it must go slowly and be considered well.

Mr. ALCORN. Mr. President, if I understood the Senator from Illinois correctly, he proposes that the rents already collected by the United States shall be restored to the people who reside in their own houses; but he intimates that where persons are residing there who rent houses from others it would be proper for the Government to receive rents from that class. So I understand him; but perhaps I did not correctly appreciate him.

Mr. OGLESBY. The Senator will remember that I am opposed to changing this bill at all in this respect. The Senator from Arkansas proposes that amendment, and asks my consent. I tell him it will be less objectionable than the amendment he first proposed. I think it would be no very great hardship to let the matter stand as it is, and as provided for in the bill. I would not amend it in that respect at all; but I said this to him as I remember: If any class is to be relieved from the payment of rent to the Government, or to be relieved by having rents paid by them returned to them, it would probably be as nearly right as we can get it, to return the rents to those people who own their own buildings and had not previously to the decision of the Supreme Court paid anybody any rent. If I understand his amendment, that is it. It is to relieve those persons who live in their own houses upon ground claimed by themselves from the payment of rent; and it would be no great hardship to let the others who had paid the claimants rent pay the Government the same rent they had paid the claimants. The amendment, however, is the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas, not mine. I would let the bill remain as it is.

Mr. ALCORN. I do not see the equity of the Senator's distinction that he would draw. It seems to me that if there should be any preference given here, equity would require that the preference should go in favor of the claimants rather than the persons who have gone without color of title and entered upon the Government land. I do not think it is justice, I do not think it is right or equity, that any of these people should be required to pay rent. I do not suppose there can be another such instance found in the history of this Government. I do not suppose, if you will examine the records of this Government from its first Congress down to the present time, you can find a parallel to the case that now exists in the State of Arkansas and in the vicinity of and in the city of Hot Springs.

More than fifty years ago this land was entered by the claimants; they have held it for that length of time; they have exercised color of title. Upon two separate occasions Attorneys-General of the United States, and I may say two distinct and able Attorneys-General, also decided that these claimants were entitled to their patents. Under a technicality, and by reason of an omission, not on the part of these claimants, but on the part of an officer of the Government of the United States, after an occupancy of over fifty years, the Supreme Court of the United States have declared that the property rests in the Government of the United States. The claimants had gone on to terrace those mountains, pull them down, build houses, and rent them out to such persons as were willing to take them. Others went forward, built houses upon the Government reservation on the supposition that the title to the property would be ultimately decided in favor of the Government; and they went on in defiance of the claimants' title, entered upon the lands, and built houses. It is not proposed that these persons shall be made to pay rent. It is not proposed by the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas that any person shall be required to pay rent. The title to the property has been decided to be in the Government, but the Government has placed no improvements there. There is not a house, there is not a single improvement upon all the Hot Springs reservation that was placed there by the Government of the United States. The Government of the United States made no objection to the occupancy of the land by the claimants who are there under color of title and who have been there for fifty years. The Government of the United States has now in its Treasury the money of the claimants that was paid into the Treasury over fifty years ago for that property. It holds it to-day. It has taken the property away from the claimants, but has said nothing with regard to the restitution of the money that was paid for this property. It does not strike me as a case in which the Government has exercised any great amount of tenderness toward the people of Hot Springs.

The suggestion made by the Senator from Illinois, that he believes this will be a bad speculation on the part of the Government of the United States, is one that strikes me as looking in the direction of the truth. The Government of the United States will not profit by taking this Hot Springs property into its possession; and if it undertakes, as he says, to peddle out the hot water at Hot Springs the result will be a loss to the Government. Already the receiver, as I understand, has gone on to lease a portion of the hot water, and I am told—I do not know the fact to be so, but I believe it is true—that the party to whom he has leased has commenced a system of blasting whereby some two or three of the best springs on the reservation have been already dried up, and the chances are that before they get through with it no springs will be left by reason of the experiments that are carried on by this receiver who was sent there and those who take leases under him.

While the reservation was held by the claimants there were certain bathing places on the side of the mountain that were really given for charitable purposes. I have seen on the mountain at Hot Springs scores of poor people who were lying about without any other shelter than the broad heavens bathing in the waters that were there given by the claimants to the uses of charity. The pittance upon which they lived was supplied them by the visitors to the springs and by the inhabitants of the village. To-day, however, I understand that the poor have no privileges there. The water is all to be leased by a beneficent Government, and the poor man who goes crippling to the Hot Springs finds no longer a place in which he can bathe without price and without money. The Government of the United States has undertaken to peddle out the hot water to the lame and to the halt and to the afflicted. A beneficent Government it is if it shall pursue this policy!

If the suggestion of the Senator from Illinois is carried out, that this property shall be ceded to the State of Arkansas and let the State of Arkansas take it and dispose of it among its citizens who occupy the Hot Springs, it will be one of the wisest things this Government has ever done touching a matter of such small consideration. These are citizens of Arkansas, and its Legislature might be looked to to deal justly by its citizens. It would settle the question between them in a manner satisfactory to the citizens. The Government of the United States never will, I fear, settle it in a manner satisfactory to those people.

Men went to these springs with the last remnant of the fortune that they had. They went on this reservation and built houses, taking from the claimant a lease reserving a ground-rent for a term of years. They expended the last dollar that they had to erect their houses, and some of them had scarcely finished their dwellings when the title, to their surprise, was decided to be in the Government of the United States, a receiver was sent there, and they were told that unless they paid rent to the Government they must be ejected from their houses. A gentleman from the county in which I live in Mississippi two years ago went to the Hot Springs. He invested there the little sum remaining to him in a house, that he might live in for the purpose of being cured of his affliction, a rheumatism under which he had labored for a number of years. He had been in the past a man of fortune. He had an interesting family consisting of a wife and children. He had built his house, as I am informed. A certain rent was assessed against it by the agent of the United States. He was unable to pay it. He was ejected from the house and died of starvation, and was buried at the expense of the people of Hot Springs, the people who occupied this reservation. Cases of hardship and of starvation are occurring there that are appalling to contemplate.

While the Government of the United States was voting here $20,000 to feed the poor of the city of Washington, it was at the same time plundering the people of Hot Springs, the beggars of Hot Springs, the afflicted of Hot Springs, of the small pittance they had upon which they could live. It has starved that community. Not only that, but from some design or other, reports were circulated that the people there intended to resist the collection of rent. Some of them are no longer able to pay; and this is called resistance. When the receiver applied to them to pay or get out, they said "We cannot pay; put us out." This occurred in a few instances, and thereupon soldiers were sent there under the pretense that the people of Hot Springs intended to rebel against the authority of the Government of the United States; and thus the good, law-abiding citizens of Hot Springs were insulted by the presence of soldiers there menacing them with the threat "If you dare raise your finger against the authority of the United States you will be ejected at the point of the bayonet." A beneficent Government this, if this policy is to be carried out!

I feel assured that this body is not acquainted with the hardship that has been imposed upon these people. I feel that Congress has not become acquainted with, and is not aware to this day of the hardship and outrage that are being perpetrated on a portion of the citizens of this country. The South has felt that she has been trampled under the feet of power. Can you expect her feeling to be changed in the presence of circumstances like these, when you vote $20,000 to care for the poor of the city of Washington and wrest from the starving beggars of Hot Springs $40,000 in money to be brought into your Treasury?

I claim, Mr. President, that these people are entitled to consideration at the hands of the Government. I claim this for the claimants and for the occupants as well. Every man who knows anything of the situation of these people has a heart for their sufferings. There is no man, I care not who he may be, that would go to the Hot Springs and witness the suffering of these people who would not agree with me; for remember there is no man, woman, or child in Hot Springs who is not there as an invalid or living upon that which is derived from the necessities of the invalids. There is no commerce there, no mine or mining there, no business there except hotel-keeping and bathing in the water of the hot springs. There is merchandizing incidental to this; but it is an incident merely. But what says the Supreme Court? After having decided this case:

> In conclusion we feel bound—
>
> Say the court—
>
> to decide that none of the claimants are entitled to the lands in question.

I ask the Senate to mark the language of the court. The court were apprised, allow me to say here, of the hardship that was being imposed by the stern necessities of the law. These people lost their property, remember, upon a technicality. They had paid their money into the Treasury, I repeat; the Government has the money to-day in its Treasury that it derived from these people for the purchase of the property. It makes no provision for its restoration. The court was satisfied of the hardship it was imposing. The court said:

> The claims advanced all depend on one or other of the titles which we have considered, and all are equally untenable.

Now mark what follows:

> Whatever hardship, if any, may ensue from this declaration of the law of the case, we have no doubt, will be duly taken into consideration by the legislative department of the Government in dealing with the subject of the future disposition of those lands.

The court commends to the consideration of Congress, to the legislative department of the Government, the hardship of these people, and it recommends that it be alleviated. I trust, Mr. President, that the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas will be adopted and that the Government of the United States will make haste to take its hand off the poor and the distressed of Hot Springs; that it will relieve them of the rent they are daily paying; that it will relieve them of the presence of the collector, the receiver; that it will relieve them of the presence of the soldiers; and that it will relieve them of the fearful embarrassment of poverty that now enshrouds them.

Mr. DORSEY. I suggest to my colleague to withdraw his amendment; I have one to offer on the same subject.

Mr. CLAYTON. If I could have a vote on this, I should like to have it, because I feel that I owe a duty to those people, who are my constituents. I feel that they have been outraged in this matter; that their money has been extracted from them when it ought not to have been by the Government. I do not blame any officer of the Government for this. The Court of Claims has done its duty, the receiver has done his duty. There is no blame to be attached to them; but I think Congress ought to extend relief. I would sooner take a vote on this amendment. If it is voted down, that is an end of it.

Mr. DORSEY. I suggest to my colleague——

Mr. CLAYTON. Let us have a vote on the amendment.

Mr. DORSEY. We cannot have a division now, for there is not a quorum present. I suggest to my colleague that while I appreciate everything he says and understand the justice of the amendment he offers and think it ought to be adopted, yet I see around me that there is some opposition to it. I suggest, therefore, that all the words be stricken out in section 1, beginning with line 7 down to line 9, inclusive.

Mr. CLAYTON. The objection to that is that it would relieve those who have not paid rent and not relieve those who have. The good citizens on the reservation, who obeyed the laws and paid the rents, would have no relief, while those who have resisted the payments of rents would get relief. That would not be fair. I wish to see all treated alike. I think it is right that all these rents should be returned. If that cannot be done, let us return the rents they have paid on their own buildings, the buildings they put up with their own money and their own hands. Certainly no one can object to that.

Mr. DAWES. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Arkansas if the bill provides for the re-imbursement to these tenants of all that the Government has received?

Mr. DORSEY. No, the bill does not.

Mr. DAWES. I think the bill should do that.

Mr. CLAYTON. The amendment I offer does that.

Mr. DAWES. Does the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas go further than that, and require the Government to re-imburse them for what they paid to outsiders?

Mr. CLAYTON. O, no; not at all.

Mr. DAWES. Then I should like to hear the Senator from Illinois, who said he was opposed to the amendment, state why the Government of the United States having taken this money into their hands should not pay it back. I ask this because I did not have the benefit of hearing all the remarks of the Senator from Illinois. It seems to me that if the amendment only provides for paying back to these tenants what the Government itself has taken in the form of rent, less the expenses, unless there is something which I have not heard, it is proper.

Mr. DORSEY. I will say to the Senator from Massachusetts that the amendment of my colleague simply provides that what has been collected for rents on the improvements——

Mr. CLAYTON. Does my colleague speak of the first amendment I offered?

Mr. DORSEY. The last amendment of my colleague simply provides that the amount of money collected for the use of the buildings and improvements constructed by the occupants of them and owned by them shall be returned. Some of those persons have occupied those buildings for more than fifty years, many of them for ten, twenty, or thirty years. I think that nearly all of them have all that they have in the world in these buildings and improvements upon which they have been paying a very onerous rent. The rents down there, I believe, are greater than in any part of this city. I think on the main street the receiver, under instruction from the Court of Claims, has charged $10 a front foot for the use of land per annum. For example, for a lot fifty feet front the occupant would have to pay $500 a year for the use of it and then pay a good rent for the use of the building on such lot which he himself constructed.

Now, I submit that never before has the Government anywhere charged rent to any person occupying the public domain, much less charged rent not only for the occupation of the public domain, but for the improvements which the settler himself had put upon the public domain. Every dollar of it ought to be returned; but I am sure that the citizens on that reservation would much prefer to pay this rent and have this bill passed, so that they may get a title, than to have the bill fail on account of this question; and for that reason I suggest that my colleague withdraw his amendment.

Mr. ALCORN. I wish to make one remark just here in relation to the receiver if the Senate will allow me, and I do not intend to become troublesome about this matter. The honorable Senator from Arkansas who sits by my side [Mr. CLAYTON] says that nobody blames the receiver. The receiver is blamed, very properly I think, by the citizens of Hot Springs for the manner in which he has exercised his duties, and I will state a case now. It has not come within my own knowledge, but I undertake to say that the statement I make of it is true. A gentleman had a building to which was attached a yard. He rented his building and paid for it, and as a matter of course supposed he had rented the ground occupied by the yard. After he had rented his building, however, and they had extorted from him every dollar they could get for the building, then he was told that unless he rented his yard that would be taken from him and it would be rented out in order that others might put buildings upon that. One of the original claimants there, an old woman eighty years of age, who has been upon that reservation, I venture to say, forty-five years, old Mrs. Hale—I will name her—had her house standing back from the street a short distance. She perhaps occupies a room of it, renting out the rest. The grounds before her house and fronting on the street have been taken and have been leased out, and they have now put up shops or houses in front of her dwelling bordering upon the street. My own judgment is that the receiver has acted for the Government, that he has acted in a way that is calculated to bring to the Government every dollar of rent that he could get. How far he could have exercised a tenderness for the people there I will not undertake to say; but it is my opinion that he has not sought to do any such thing as that.

Mr. DORSEY. While concurring generally in what the Senator from Mississippi has said, I do not feel called upon to raise any question as to the manner in which the receiver has discharged his duties. His duties were very difficult, very onerous, and I fear that if the good man we read of had gone there he might have found some trouble to please everybody. I have nothing to say on that subject. I do not agree in many things that the receiver has done; I have objected in court, and I object here; but under the instructions he received his duties were onerous. I presume, inasmuch as they came from a high court, that they were justified in law, though I am bound to say that I do not know where the law is. I think that under those instructions the receiver has done probably the best he could.

Now, concurring in what the Senator from Mississippi has said, I have a letter here from a gentleman who was born at Hot Springs and is now probably forty years of age, who has raised a family there. I refer to Colonel Sumpter. He owns a house which stands back from the main street probably ten to fifteen rods, and has a yard in front of it extending one hundred and fifty or two hundred feet. The receiver has been charging him a rent, as he says in his letter, of $2,400 a year for this building and one or two other buildings. Now the receiver has rented out his front yard. He made the offer of it to the writer of the letter in the first instance at $6,200 a year, and said if he would not take it he would rent it to somebody else. He has so rented it.

Mr. CLAYTON. I cannot allow this reflection on the receiver to pass unchallenged. I believe that Mr. Morgan, the gentleman who was appointed receiver for that reservation, is an honest man and has tried to do his duty by the Government under his instructions. He went there with instructions to treat this property as the property of the United States without reference to the occupants upon it. He went there with instructions to rent out the property for the most it would bring, and if the property held by Mr. Sumpter could be leased to somebody else for $6,000, of course he put that price upon it. I apprehend when the truth comes to be known it will be found that Mr. Sumpter was endeavoring to hold a very large tract of land there, much larger than was neccessary for his house and his buildings. I know myself, and can bear testimony to the fact, that Mr. Morgan is an honest, faithful public official. There is no more honest or faithful official in the United States than he, in my opinion. Of course, as my colleague said, if the good man from above himself were to go there and undertake to carry out the orders of the court in relation to the property he would be assailed by citizens living there. They think it is their property and look to the receiver; they do not look to the law or to the court, but to the receiver, and hold him responsible.

Mr. DORSEY. My colleague will permit me to suggest, if he is answering me, that I do not know that I said anything that justified his answer.

Mr. CLAYTON. I am answering my friend on the left, the Senator from Mississippi, [Mr. ALCORN.]

Mr. ALCORN. If the Senator is answering me I will say that I said I believed the receiver had acted for the Government and without regard to the people.

Mr. CLAYTON. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. ALCORN. Certainly; and I would not have undertaken to take it from you if you had not referred to me.

Mr. CLAYTON. If I had not said what I say now, the inference might have gone forth that the receiver had been oppressing and trying to inflict hardships on the people there. I say the receiver did nothing more than his lawful and sworn duty under his oath and his bond. He was required to give a bond of $100,000. Under his oath he did his duty in my opinion and nothing more. No blame ought to attach to him.

Mr. WRIGHT. I assume that it is the purpose and wish of the Senators from Arkansas to get this bill through. It is certainly a matter of very great importance to these people that legislation should be had on this subject I see but little prospect of passing this bill if this game of cross-purposes shall be continued. I am exceedingly anxious, observing at all times the interests of the Government, to do whatever our friends in Arkansas may desire touching this reservation. I submit to both of them, however, that there has been an adjudication of the highest court in this land giving the title to the property to the United States; and pursuant to that decree a receiver has gone there and has been renting that property precisely as required by the decree, and has received money which has gone into the Treasury of the United States upon the basis that this is the property of the United States.

Now, I have understood from my friend from Arkansas who has the bill in charge [Mr. DORSEY] that the great wish on the part of these settlers is that they shall have legislation so as to secure their title, that the amount that has been paid for rent is entirely unimportant to them compared with the question of title.

Mr. DORSEY. That is true.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suggest, therefore, whether it is not better for our friends that they leave this section as it was reported by the committee, whatever of hardship there may be in it, and a hardship conceded by all, rather than to endanger this bill or delay its pasage by raising questions upon it that must inevitably provoke discussion and which must inevitably divide the friends of the bill.

I wish to say before I take my seat that all I desire in connection with this bill is this: I feel it important that these persons shall be secured in their title to this land. I think they ought to have it. I think at the same time that the Government ought not to have its interests unjustly jeopardized. I shall therefore seek to amend the bill, so as to leave it that they shall have a full and fair opportunity to obtain the property at a fair, reasonable compensation; but that the Government shall not under any circumstances be made liable for improvements upon that property from any appraisement or assessment made by the commissioners or otherwise. If that can be done, I cannot see how there can be harm to the Government; and it seems to me at the same time there would be right to the settlers.

Another thing I would suggest to my friend from Arkansas who has the bill in charge. As the bill now stands it contemplates that if the property shall not be taken at the appraisement by the commissioners or the persons appointed to do it, then the land shall be sold at public auction at the city of Little Rock. I propose to amend the bill so as to provide that the sale shall not be for less than for the appraised value. I can see, knowing full well how these things occur with us in the West, that if there is to be a public sale hereafter there may be combinations by which they will all refuse to buy their lands at the appraisement and wait for the public sale, and then by combinations at the public sale the lands will all be bid off at a mere nominal sum. I want to avoid this; and, to save time, I want to have it so that the settlers shall obtain their land at merely a reasonable and fair compensation. I think if these things are accomplished and they get their titles, they will be satisfied. Of course my friends from Arkansas know more about this matter than I do; but it would seem to me that the great important matter for them now is that they should have such legislation as would take this matter out of the hands of the receiver, avoid these continued wrongs, and they get the title to their lands; for our friends will see that unless we have some such legislation as this, this receivership will continue, these rents will have to be paid, and those wrongs of which they now complain will still continue. Of course they want to avoid all that.

It seems to me therefore, I repeat, that if these settlers can get the titles to their property, the amount they have paid heretofore in the way of rents, though it may be a very great hardship in many instances, it would be better for them to surrender, than to endanger their titles at present.

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. President, in the expectation and the hope that Congress will at some future day, as it will be in its power to do, refund these rents to these people that have been so unjustly, as I think, wrested from them, I withdraw my amendment. I hope that at some future time, a time when nothing will be jeopardized—for I see it may jeopardize the bill to raise the question now, as it seems to lead to discussion—Congress will, perhaps at its next session, do justice to these people and refund these rents that have been wrested from them by the operation of this law. I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. DORSEY. I also withdraw the amendment I proposed to strike out, so that the bill will stand as it came from the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Committee on Public Lands as a substitute for the bill.

Mr. DORSEY. I move to strike out section 6 in the following words:

SEC. 6. That it shall be the duty of said commissioners to fix, by appraisement, the value of all improvements upon said reservation, and the value of all improvements on the lands reserved herein, or upon lands condemned or taken for the purposes herein named; and to fix the cash value of every and each subdivision that said commissioners shall make of said lands.

Mr. ALCORN. I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that here is a direct proposition to rob the people at Hot Springs. If you shall strike out the sixth section, and have no appraisement of the property of the people there, the houses that they have built, and then go forward to assess the value of that property, the Government of the United States will by that process simply appropriate the property of these people to itself. The land belongs to the Government; and in law it is true that the man who builds a house upon the land of another thereby attaches to the freehold that which he cannot remove without the consent of the land-holder; but the Government has never up to this time acted upon that principle. This is the first time that the Government has ever undertaken to take the improvements erected by settlers and appropriate them to its own use.

Mr. DORSEY. I can explain this to the Senator from Mississippi and the Senate, I think, so that everybody will see the purpose. Section 6 provides for the appraisement of certain buildings and improvements on this land. Section 15 provides that in case the person in whose favor the commissioners shall adjudicate, and who has the right to buy the land, fails to do so, the Government of the United States must pay the person owning the improvements for them. That is seriously objected to by many Senators; and I propose now to strike out both section 6 and section 15, so that no obligation whatever on the part of the Government can be made by any action of the settlers on the reservation. That is all this does. It does not rob any settler; it does not rob any man; it does not give a chance to rob the Government. It is a just and fair thing. I move that sections 6 and 15 be stricken out together.

Mr. ALCORN. If you strike them out, as a matter of course you strike out the very thing that is least objectionable.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas moves first to strike out the sixth section of the substitute.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DORSEY. Now I move to strike out section 15.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the section.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out the fifteenth section of the amendment, in the following words:

SEC. 15. That all parties who do not enter the lands that the commissioners adjudicate they have the right to enter, and who do not remove their improvements before the same are sold at public sale, and all persons whose improvements have been condemned, their assigns or legal representatives shall, after said public sale, present their certificates of appraisement for such improvements to the register of the United States land office at Little Rock, who shall indorse upon each certificate the amount paid for the particular subdivision of land upon which the improvement therein described is situated; and such certificate so indorsed shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who shall certify the same to the Secretary of the Interior; and upon his indorsement the certificate shall be paid out of the fund arising from the sales of lands herein provided for, and covered into the United States Treasury for that purpose by section 16 of this act.

Mr. DORSEY. I hope that that section will be stricken out.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLAYTON. I move to add as an additional section:

SEC. —. That a suitable tract of land, not exceeding five acres, shall be laid off by said commissioners, and the same is hereby granted to the county of Garland, in the State of Arkansas, as a site for the public buildings of said county.

I will only say, in explanation of this amendment, that the county seat of Garland County is located at this place, and that the authorities are now occupying property belonging to the United States, as other settlers are. I think it would be right to give the commission the privilege of laying off a suitable tract of land, not exceeding five acres, for the benefit of the county, for their public buildings.

Mr. OGLESBY. It seems to me the Senator ought to provide in the amendment, to which I for one have no objection, that the five acres shall not be taken from the mountain in which are the Hot Springs, and which is specifically reserved in the bill.

Mr. CLAYTON. Of course it will not be taken from that land.

Mr. DORSEY. It could not be.

Mr. CLAYTON. It could not be; they could not occupy it.

Mr. OGLESBY. I think as we have reserved the mountain where the Hot Springs are and the boundaries are yet to be fixed by this commission, it would be proper to except it in the amendment just proposed.

Mr. CLAYTON. I will amend my amendment so as to provide that five acres may be laid off from land not reserved for the future use of the United States.

Mr. OGLESBY. "Which shall be taken from no part of the land herein reserved to the United States."

Mr. CLAYTON. Very well.

Mr. OGLESBY. "Which shall be no part."

Mr. CLAYTON. I take it for granted the commissioners would not do such a thing as that. In the first place, the land proposed to be reserved is a mountain and unfit for occupation; and in the second place——

Mr. OGLESBY. The Senator will pardon me; the members of this commission are to fix the boundaries to this line. That boundary is not yet fixed.

Mr. CLAYTON. Let the amendment suggested be made, but it will only be out of abundant caution.

Mr. CHAFFEE. I suggest to the Senator from Arkansas that he change the word "public" to "county" before "buildings," so as to read "county buildings."

Mr. CLAYTON. The amendment says "for public buildings of said county." I think that is the correct expression, although I do not stand upon it.

Mr. CHAFFEE. I understood it differently.

Mr. CLAYTON. No; it is "for the public buildings of said county."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the amendment to the amendment as it is proposed to be modified.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

SEC. —. That a suitable tract of land, not exceeding five acres, shall be laid off by said commissioners, and the same is hereby granted to the county of Garland, in the State of Arkansas, as a site for the public buildings of said county: Provided, That the tract of land hereby granted shall not be taken from the land reserved herein for the use of the United States.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WRIGHT. In line 7 of section 13, after the word "sale," I move to insert the words "for not less than the appraised value thereof;" so as to read:

Shall be sold by direction of the Secretary of the Interior to the highest bidder at public sale for not less than the appraised value thereof at the land office at Little Rock.

Mr. DORSEY. I hope that amendment will be adopted.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALCORN. I move to insert the following proviso at the end of section 5:

Provided further, That the word "claimant" used in this act shall be construed to mean a party holding or occupying ground on such reservation under color of title against the United States previous to the decision of the Hot Springs case by the Supreme Court of the United States, on the 24th day of April, A. D. 1876; and the word "occupant" used in this act shall be construed to mean a party holding or occupying ground on such reservation without any color of title; and in case of any conflicting claims or rights growing out of them between claimants and occupants, they are remitted to the local courts having jurisdiction over the county in which such reservation is situate for settlement by and under such procedure as is known and recognized in such courts.

Mr. DORSEY. The words "claimant" and "occupant" mean no such thing in the bill. The word "claimant" means a man who has a building or improvements which he does not occupy. The word "occupant" means a person who has a house and building or improvements which he does occupy. For example, a man may have a house on the outside of the reservation in which he lives and a store down in the town where he does business. He would be the occupant of one and the claimant of the other. In my opinion, if the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi should prevail, this whole case would revert back to the courts and the old claimants would come in and take possession of this land over again. That is all there is about it. It has been in litigation now for fifty years, and if the amendment should pass it would be in litigation for fifty years longer, and the old claimants would have possession of the land. I hope it will not prevail.

Mr. ALCORN. If that should be the effect of this amendment I should regard myself as very unfortunate; but it was in order to protect the people against this litigation and against any wrong which I think the bill will invoke that I offered the amendment. Now, let us look at it a moment and see what this bill does. There are two classes of persons recognized in the bill——

JOURNAL OF THURSDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, (at twelve o'clock.) The Chair will have to interrupt the Senator from Mississippi. It becomes the duty of the Chair to announce that the legislative day of Thursday has expired. The Journal of yesterday will be read.

Mr. DORSEY. Before the Journal is read, I desire to give notice that I shall call up this bill immediately after the morning hour.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on motion of Mr. MITCHELL, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

RECUSANT WITNESS—CONRAD N. JORDAN.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Sergeant-at-Arms has a recusant witness whom he has had in charge for some days, and he has had no opportunity to present him to the bar of the Senate as ordered to do by a resolution of the Senate passed some days ago. He is now in waiting with the witness and would be glad to have an opportunity of executing the order of the Senate.

Mr. INGALLS. What is the name of the witness?

Mr. MITCHELL. Conrad N. Jordan.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this matter?

Mr. DAVIS. To the consideration of what?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposition is to have a recusant witness presented at the bar of the Senate.

Mr. MITCHELL. The proposition is that the Sergeant-at-Arms shall present this recusant witness at the bar of the Senate in order that the resolution of the Senate passed some days ago may be executed.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I ask the Senator to allow me to call up a bill which will not occupy any time.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have no objection to the bill being called up, but I shall object to its consideration until this matter is disposed of.

Mr. JOHNSTON. It is a disability bill and will not take any time.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have no objection to a bill of that kind.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. EDMUNDS presented a petition of citizens of Vermont, praying an amendment to the pension laws so as to allow arrears of pension from the date of the discharge of the soldier; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. DAWES presented the memorial of Franklin Rives, of Washington, District of Columbia, praying Congress to buy the stereotype plates and extra volumes of the Congressional Globe; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. EATON presented a petition of citizens of Connecticut, praying an appropriation of $10,000 to complete the coast survey of the harbor of New Haven; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented the petition of James C. Bradley and 32 others, of Michigan, praying Congress to pass an act granting pensions in all cases from the date of discharge of the soldier; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of Montana, in favor of the establishment of a branch mint at Helena, Montana; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of Lewis S. Jones and 75 others, of Manistee County, Michigan, praying Congress to make an appropriation for survey of the outlet to Portage Lake, Michigan; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of A. W. Farr and 96 others, of Manistee County, Michigan, praying Congress for an appropriation for a survey of the outlet to Portage Lake, Michigan; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LOGAN presented a petition of citizens of Chicago, praying that the law imposing taxes on deposits, circulation, and capital of banks be repealed; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Elgin, Illinois, praying that the law imposing taxes on deposits, circulation, and capital of banks be repealed; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. McMILLAN presented the petition of Messrs. Doughty & Card, attorneys, Lake City, Minnesota, praying payment for legal services and expenses incurred in behalf of the United States in the case of Parish vs. The United States in the Court of Claims; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, in favor of the establishment of a post-route from Lake Park to Crookston, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota; which was read and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, That, whereas a certain bill relating to pensions, the same being House file No. 394, has been introduced into the House of Representatives by Representative WILLIS, which said bill provides that all applicants for pensions (insane persons and the minor children of deceased soldiers excepted) must file their applications for the same prior to January 1, 1877, or forfeit all claims upon the Government of the United States to any pension previous to the filing of their said application: Therefore,

Be it resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be requested to oppose the passage of said bill, (House file No. 394,) unless amended by extending the period of limitation for forfeiture of prior claim at least two years or until January 1, 1879.

Resolved, That the secretary of state be instructed to forward to our Senators and Representatives in Congress a certified copy of this joint resolution as soon as possible after its passage.

J. L. GIBBS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
J. B. WAKEFIELD,
President of the Senate.

Mr. INGALLS presented a petition of citizens of Kansas, praying for the removal of limitations upon pensions, and that in all cases they may date from the discharge of the soldier; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALLACE presented the memorial of the Board of Trade of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in favor of an appropriation for and recommending the establishment of a temporary colony near the north pole for purposes of scientific exploration; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MAXEY presented the petition of H. C. Wood, M. D., of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; J. M. Toner, M. D., of Washington, District of Columbia, and J. R. Chadwick, M. D., of Boston, Massachusetts, praying for an appropriation for the publication of the catalogue of the National Medical Library; which was referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. CONKLING. I present a petition of Hiram J. Penrod, doctor of medicine, of New York, and many other persons touching a bill favoring polar explorations. This petition is brief; it is signed by a large number of men who I may call eminent citizens. I am requested to ask that it be printed in the RECORD and unless some Senator sees objection to that I make that request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. It will be so printed.

The petition is as follows:

NEW YORK, February 17, 1877.

To the honorable Senators and Representatives in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, feeling a deep interest in the polar explorations already made by our own countrymen, as also by those of other nations, believe that the plan of Captain Howgate for the locating of a colony, far northward in the arctic regions, is the most feasible of any heretofore projected for the successful explorations of these regions and for the discovery of the north pole, do approve of the bill now pending before Congress appropriating $50,000 for the establishment of the colony, and respectfully urge the passage of the bill.

John H. Boynton, president Maritime Association, port of New York; Boyd & Hincken, James W. Elwell & Co., Benjamin F. Metcalf, John Zittlosen, James E. Ward & Co., Gerhard & Brewer, Benham & Boysen, John Norton, jr., & Son, shipping and commission merchants; John D. Jones, president Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company; J. P. Paulson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Company; Thomas Hale, vice-president Pacific Mutual Insurance Company; Arthur Leary, for National Lloyds; Ellwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Company; Alfred Ogden, president Orient Mutual Insurance Company; Ferdinand Stagg, vice-president Union Mutual Insurance Company; Daniel Drake Smith, president Commercial Mutual Insurance Company; A. Low & Brothers, foreign importers; Charles H. Marshall & Co., Grinnell, Mintuen & Co., Nath. L. & George Griswold, Thomas Dunham's Nephew & Co., ship-owners; Snow & Burgess; Thomas J. Owen & Son, shipping and commission merchants; Howland & Aspinwald, foreign importers; Lawrence, Giles & Co., ship-owners; R. W. Cameron & Co., shipping and commission merchants; George Wilson, secretary New York Chamber of Commerce; C. H. Mallory & Co., steamship-owners; Young, Smith & Co., foreign importers; Jonas Smith & Co., ship-owners; Johnson & Higgins, average adjusters; John D. Fish & Co., ship-owners; J. H. Winchester & Co., Lunt Brothers, Salter & Livermore, shipping and commission merchants; Floyd & Mewins, commission merchants; George W. Rosevelt, ship-owner; J. F. Ames, agent Portland Steamship Company; William B. Hilton, agent New York Balance Dry Dock; William A. Freeborn & Co., copper merchants; Smith W. Anderson, agent New York Screw Docks; Bucknam & Co., ship-owners; John C. Smith, superintendent Maritime Exchange; Perry Chubb, manager of Sea Insurance Company; E. Sanchez y Dolz, shipping and commission merchant; George W. Brown, shipping commission merchant; Stephen H. Mills, commission merchant; F. Wight & Co., copper merchants; Baxter & McVoy, ship-owners; Philip J. Kiernan, Wm. B. Smyth, Fred C. Schmidt, commission merchants; Thomas Norton & Co., shipping and commission merchants; A. K. Hadley, Theodore G. Case, Wm. L. Snyder, D. A. Hulett, Miles Beach, Robert Lyon, jr., Edward T. Bartlett, J. W. Huntley, counselors at law; Francis H. Smith, submarine builder; Potter & Robertson, architects; George W. Dow, importer India goods; L. H. Rogers & Co., stationers; Theodore Weston, engineer, 120 Broadway; Alfred Wagstaff, jr., State senator fifth district, New York; Abram C. Wood, of Barrett, Nephews & Co.; John D. Vermeale, of Goodyear's Rubber Manufacturing Company; Henry Hentz & Co., Robert Dillon, cotton merchants; J. Yeoman, cotton broker; Calvocoressi & Rodocanachi, cotton exporters; James F. Wenman & Co., cotton brokers; E. K. Powers, superintendent New York Cotton Exchange; James S. Dean, ship-builder; Andrew G. Meyers, manufacturer of plumbing material; J. D. Blanchard, manufacturer of glue; J. H. Cheever, manufacturer of rubber; J. F. Fiske, iron manufacturer; Buckhatlen Martin & Co., wholesale grocers; W. H. Stanford, secretary Old Dominion Steamship Company; H. A. Howe, president Niagara Fire-Insurance Company; Wm. R. Crowell, secretary Phœnix Insurance Company; B. F. Walcott, president Hanover Fire-Insurance Company; Levi P. Morton, of Morton, Bliss & Co., bankers.

NORTHERN BOUNDARY LINE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State, bearing date the 20th instant, with its accompaniments, being the report of the commissioner of the United States and of the officers of engineers attached to the commission appointed to determine the boundary line between the United States and the possessions of Great Britain from the northwest angle of the Lake of the Woods to the summit of the Rocky Mountains. These reports announce the completion of the labors of the commission, whereby the entire boundary line between the United States and the possessions of Great Britain is marked and determined except as to that part of the territory of the United States which was ceded by Russia under the treaty of 1867.

U. S. GRANT.

WASHINGTON, February 23, 1877.

The message was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WRIGHT, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Moses Brooks, praying for the payment of bounty and pensions for the loss of his two sons in the Union Army during the late war, reported adversely thereon, and he moved that the claim be rejected; which was agreed to.

Mr. CHAFFEE, from the Committee on Patents, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1219) authorizing the Commissioner of Patents to extend the patent of Horace A. Stone for improvement in the manufacture of cheese, reported it without amendment.

Mr. SARGENT, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the petition of Mrs. A. P. Miles, praying for legislation that will authorize payment to her of certain amounts due her from the eastern band of North Carolina Cherokee Indians, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs; which was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. WRIGHT (by request) asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1281) for the relief of Ella Long; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. DORSEY asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1282) for the enumeration of the youth of the District of Columbia between the ages of six and twenty years; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

REPORT ON THE FLORIDA ELECTION.

Mr. SARGENT. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That 1,000 additional copies of the report of the majority and minority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the Florida election (Senate report No. 611) be printed and stitched with the evidence.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. SARGENT. Is it necessary to refer it? I should like to state the circumstances. There has been so great a call for both the majority and minority reports for the use of the commission that there are not enough copies left to be printed with the ordinary number of copies of the evidence. The document is not very large, and I think it will not be necessary to refer the resolution to the Committee on Printing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, it will not be necessary. The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

PAPERS WITHDRAWN.

On motion of Mr. INGALLS, it was Ordered, That Francis A. Liebschütz have leave to withdraw his papers from the files of the Senate.

On motion of Mr. WHYTE, it was Ordered, That Elizabeth R. McCracken have leave to withdraw from the files of the Senate her petition for pension, with the accompanying papers.

On motion of Mr. MAXEY, it was Ordered, That Franklin Rounds, of the Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, an applicant for pension, have leave to withdraw his discharge, descriptive list, and other papers in support of his claim filed with the Committee on Pensions.

AMENDMENTS TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MORRILL. I am directed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to report certain amendments to the sundry civil bill. I do not ask to have them printed, but merely referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will be so referred.

Mr. MORRILL. I am also directed by the same committee to report other amendments to the sundry civil bill which I ask to have printed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed.

Mr. BARNUM, Mr. CLAYTON, and Mr. DORSEY submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

DISABILITY BILLS.

Mr. WEST. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to take up for consideration House bill No. 2197.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. JOHNSTON] has been waiting for some time, having obtained the floor to take up a disability bill.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will give way to both Senators, in order to have passed a few bills removing political disabilities.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 2197) for the relief of Henry B. Kelly, of Louisiana, from political disabilities imposed by the fourteenth amendment.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1277) to remove the political disabilities of Catesby ap R. Jones, of Alabama.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1274) to remove the political disabilities of S. P. Moon, doctor of medicine, a citizen of Virginia.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1276) to remove the political disabilities of W. F. Carrington, of Virginia.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senaters present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 3730) to remove the political disabilities of John D. Simms and Samuel V. Turner, of Virginia.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment in line 6, after the word "late" to strike out the words "civil war," and in line 7, after the word "from" to strike out the words "John D. Simms and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed, two thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

The title was amended so as to read:

A bill to remove the political disabilities of Samuel V. Turner, of Virginia.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No 3791) to remove the political disabilities of William A. Webb, of Virginia.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment in line 3, after the word "all" to strike out the words "legal and;" so as to read:

That all political disabilities imposed by the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution on William A. Webb, of Virginia, be, and they are hereby, removed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. CLAYTON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1096) to remove the political disabilities of R. C. Gatlin, of Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment in line 4, after the word "by" to strike out the words "the act of July 2, 1862, and;" so as to read:

That all the political disabilities imposed by the fourteenth amendment, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1272) to remove the political disabilities of William Butler, of South Carolina.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1136) to remove the political disabilities of Wade H. Gibbes, of South Carolina.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed; two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. MITCHELL. I suggest that we pass a general amnesty bill and have done with it.

Mr. MAXEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1273) to remove the political disabilities of William R. Jones, of Texas.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed; two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

Mr. MAXEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 3636) to remove the political disabilities of Richard S. Kinney and William R. Jones.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, in line 5 to strike out the words "and of William R. Jones, of Laredo, Texas," and in line 6 to strike out the words "reason of their participation in the late war" and to insert "the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States;" so as to read:

That the political disabilities of Richard S. Kinney, of San Antonio, Texas, imposed by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, be, and the same are hereby, removed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in. The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time. The bill was read the third time, and passed; two-thirds of the Senators present voting in favor thereof.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to remove the political disabilities of Richard S. Kinney."

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting the memorial of the Colorado delegation in favor of the removal of the military post of Fort Garland and its establishment near the reservation, and recommending an appropriation therefor; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CONOVER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1010) for the relief of Julius S. Bohrer, master in the United States Navy. It is a short bill and will lead to no discussion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the motion?

Mr. WRIGHT. Let the bill be read for information.

The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. LOGAN. I object. I object to paying any man who was discharged from the service under a cloud.

Mr. CONOVER. He was illegally dismissed.

Mr. LOGAN. That does not make any difference.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois objects, and the motion cannot be entertained.

TRUSTEES OF ANTIETAM NATIONAL CEMETERY.

Mr. LOGAN. I move to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 1231) for the relief of the board of trustees of the Antietam national cemetery.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It authorizes the Secretary of War to expend $15,000 for the purpose of discharging the balance of the indebtedness incurred by the board of trustees of the Antietam national cemetery in establishing the same and improving the grounds thereof, and the proper burial therein of the soldiers who fell on the battle-field of Antietam; and the Secretary of War is to provide for the preservation and superintendence of the cemetery as one of the national cemeteries of the United States under the laws now in force in regard to national cemeteries; but the sum appropriated to discharge the present existing indebtedness is not to be paid until the legal title to the property shall be vested in the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REDICK M'KEE.

Mr. SARGENT. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 620) for the relief of Redick McKee, which is pending on a motion to reconsider, entered by the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. HOWE.]

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote on the third reading of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the memorial and claims of Redick McKee, late disbursing agent of the Indian department in California, (Miscellaneous Document 102, printed February 25, 1871,) be, and hereby are, referred for examination and settlement to the Secretary of the Interior. If the Secretary shall find the allegations and statements of the claimant verified by the records of the Department, or other satisfactory evidence, he shall allow him such relief as may be equitable and just, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. MORRILL. Is there any report with this bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is a report. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. SEELYE, from the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives, March 3, 1876:

In 1850 or thereabouts, the said McKee was appointed by President Fillmore one of three commissioners upon Indian affairs in California, and also purchasing and disbursing agent for the commission.

In the execution of this trust, which was then one of great difficulty and importance, and which he seems to have fulfilled with remarkable success, the said McKee avers that an indebtedness of the United States Government to him was contracted, the evidence of which, he also avers, exists upon the records of the Interior Department, but which has never been paid.

The Interior Department, from which information respecting this matter has been sought, has "stated that it was not prepared, without a full examination of the case, to give an opinion upon the merits of the allowance suggested by the claimant in his memorial," and also that, "should the proposed joint resolution meet the approval of Congress, Mr. McKee's claim will receive careful attention at the hands of the Department."

And also an act, in precisely the same terms as the present bill, passed the House of Representatives March 19, 1872, but failed of action in the Senate.

The committee, therefore, report back the bill, with a recommendation that it pass.

Mr. SARGENT. The bill simply refers the case for examination to the Department. I think there can be no objection to it.

The motion to reconsider was not agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

Mr. MORRILL subsequently said: I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate this morning passed the bill (H. R. No 620) for the relief of Redick McKee. I do this at the request of my colleague, [Mr. EDMUNDS.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion will be entered.

PROOF IN HOMESTEAD ENTRIES.

Mr. WRIGHT addressed the Chair.

Mr. MITCHELL. I believe I have the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. MITCHELL. I must decline to yield any further until the matter I have in charge is disposed of.

Mr. WRIGHT. I appeal to my friend now to let us transact some morning business. It is within the morning hour.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will state that the Sergeant-at-Arms informed me a few minutes ago that he is called away from the Senate almost every moment and he cannot remain here very well, and therefore desires this matter to be disposed of.

Mr. WRIGHT. I appeal to my friend to allow me to call up a little bill which has once passed both Houses and has been reported favorably from the Committee on Public Lands. It is a matter of very great importance to the settlers on the public lands, and I am sure there is no objection in the world to it. It is a short bill of only two sections.

Mr. MITCHELL. It may be a very short bill and I have no doubt it is a meritorious bill, or it would not have been reported by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. WRIGHT. If it leads to any discussion I will not press it.

Mr. MITCHELL. Very well.

Mr. WRIGHT. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1225) to amend section 2291 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in relation to proof required in homestead entries.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that the proof of residence, occupation, or cultivation, the affidavit of non-alienation, and the oath of allegiance, required to be made by section 2291 of the Revised Statutes, may be made before the judge, or, in his absence, before the clerk, of any court of record of the county and State, or district and Territory, in which the lands are situated; and if the lands are situated in any unorganized county, such proof may be made in a similar manner in any adjacent county in the State or Territory; and the proof, affidavit, and oath, when so made and duly subscribed, shall have the same force and effect as if made before the register or receiver of the proper land district; and the same shall be transmitted by such judge, or the clerk of his court, to the register and the receiver, with the fee and charges allowed by law to him; and the register and receiver shall be entitled to the same fees for examining and approving said testimony as are now allowed by law for taking the same.

Mr. INGALLS. That is a good bill and ought to pass.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CORRECTION.

Mr. OGLESBY. Mr. President——

Mr. WITHERS. Will the Senator from Illinois yield to me a moment to have an error in the RECORD corrected in the name simply of a person whose disabilities the committee report to remove?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is a matter of privilege.

Mr. WITHERS. On page 81 of the RECORD of yesterday's proceedings, and I call attention to it in order that it may be corrected, "S. P. Moon, M. D., of Virginia," should be "S. P. Moore." The name occurs in the title of Senate bill No. 1274.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That correction will be made.

LAND AT STEVENS POINT, WISCONSIN.

Mr. OGLESBY. I ask the indulgence of the Senate to take up a bill which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and which I reported back last session without amendment. It will take but a few minutes to pass the bill. It is just and involves a very small amount of capital, and therefore I ask for its present consideration.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (H. R. No. 1947) granting to the city of Stevens Point, Wisconsin, a certain piece of land was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It instructs the Commissioner of the General Land Office of the United States to cause to be patented to the city of Stevens Point, Wisconsin, the island in the Wisconsin River, within the corporate limits of the city of Stevens Point, Wisconsin, in section 31, township No. 24 north, in range 8 east, of the fourth principal meridian in that State.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPRESENTATIVES OF Z. B. WASHBURN.

Mr. OGLESBY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 3093) for the relief of the legal representatives of Zachariah B. Washburn, deceased.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. The preamble recites that on the 20th of January, 1836, Zachariah B. Washburn did enter and purchase, of the proper officers, the west part of the northeast fractional quarter of section 24, in township 18 north, of range 11 west, of the second principal meridian, in the district of public lands then subject to sale at Danville, Illinois, and did thereupon receive a certificate of purchase therefor, in which the land was erroneously described as the northwest fractional quarter of section 24, and also a patent therefor was afterward issued to Washburn, in which the lot was also erroneously described.

The bill authorizes the Commissioner of the General Land Office to issue to the legal representatives of Zachariah B. Washburn a patent for the west part of the northeast quarter of section 24 in the township and range aforesaid.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHEYENNE CITY, WYOMING.

Mr. PADDOCK. I desire to call up House bill No. 3566.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to give notice that I shall give way to this bill, as I understand I have the floor, and then I shall insist upon it without any joking on the subject.

Mr. PADDOCK. I assure the Senator from Oregon that there will be no objection to this bill.

Mr. MITCHELL. I give way to the consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Nebraska, but after that I shall insist on the floor, because this party is under arrest; he has been under arrest by order of the Senate for several days. There has been no opportunity to present him at the bar of the Senate. He himself, as he informs me, has been desirous of coming before the Senate to purge himself of contempt. That is an opportunity that ought to be accorded to him, and it should be accorded to him at once. It is in his power to purge himself of the contempt, and he ought to be permitted the opportunity, and if he does not do so he ought to be dealt with as the law directs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nebraska.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (H. R. No. 3566) to authorize the board of trustees of the city of Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, to enter and purchase for the use of said city certain public lands, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MERRIMON. Does the bill appropriate any land?

Mr. PADDOCK. It comes from the Committee on Public Lands by a unanimous report, and is a House bill.

Mr. MERRIMON. Does it donate any land.

Mr. OGLESBY. It conveys no land. It is taking part of land already donated for one purpose and giving it to the same town for another.

Mr. PADDOCK. And requiring them to pay for it.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RE-ISSUE OF BOUNTY-LAND WARRANTS.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President——

Mr. PADDOCK. I still hold the floor.

Mr. MITCHELL. I understand the Senator from Nebraska has another little bill. I will yield for the purpose of allowing it to be passed.

Mr. MERRIMON. That is more than his share of opportunity. I do not want the Senator from Oregon to be parceling out the floor in this way.

Mr. PADDOCK. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Lands to report favorably——

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not think it is exactly right for the Senator from Oregon to hold the floor and parcel it out in this way.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have parceled out nothing.

Mr. PADDOCK. He simply yields for a report from the Committee on Public Lands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Several Senators on both sides have had bills passed while the Senator from Oregon has held the floor.

Mr. MITCHELL. And now I am complained of because I have been generous and good.

Mr. MERRIMON. The matter that the Senator from Oregon wishes to bring before the Senate is a matter of privilege and can come before the Senate at any time.

Mr. MITCHELL. It is a privileged matter, and therefore I ask that it be considered now. I ask in justice to the witness who is under arrest and is ready to be heard.

Mr. MERRIMON. Then let him be brought forward at once.

Mr. PADDOCK. I simply want to make a report from the Committee on Public Lands, to which I think there will be no objection.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read and we shall know.

Mr. PADDOCK. The Committee on Public Lands, having had under consideration the bill (S. No. 827) to amend section 2441 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, have instructed me to report it favorably, and I think there will be no objection to taking up the bill at once and acting on it. It is a matter in which my friend the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is interested for his constituency, and I think there will be no objection whatever to the bill.

The bill was read.

Mr. INGALLS. I object to the consideration of that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made and the Chair cannot entertain the motion to consider it.

Mr. ALLISON. I suppose it goes to the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It goes to the Calendar.

Mr. OGLESBY. It was not reported by the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. INGALLS. I am glad to hear it.

Mr. ALLISON. Why not?

Mr. OGLESBY. It has not been before them.

Mr. MERRIMON. I ask what committee reported that bill?

Mr. ALLISON. Senators need not disturb themselves in relation to the bill. It is a bill prepared carefully at the Land Office and is a proper bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is reported from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. WITHERS. The chairman says not.

Mr. PADDOCK. I understood the chairman of the committee did assent to the report of the bill.

Mr. OGLESBY. There is a mistake about it; that is all.

Mr. DAVIS. I did not understand what committee the bill had come from.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Committee on Public Grounds.

Mr. INGALLS. The chairman says it did not.

Mr. SPENCER. I understand the bill has been objected to and goes over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill goes to the Calendar, objection being made to its consideration.

Mr. PADDOCK, subsequently said. I desire to move that the bill (S. No. 827) to amend section 2441 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be recommitted to the Committee on Public Lands. There seems to have been a misapprehension in reference to the agreement of the committee in regard to the reporting of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be recommitted, if there be no objection.

JOHN H. FORNEY.

Mr. SPENCER. I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote postponing indefinitely the bill (H. R. No. 4439) to remove the political disabilities imposed upon John H. Forney, of Calhoun County, Alabama, by the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States. I desire to state that I have the consent of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee to enter that motion, as there was a mistake in the report. It was supposed that this man was a defaulter; but that is an entire mistake.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion will be entered.

RECUSANT WITNESS—CONRAD N. JORDAN.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to know if it requires a motion to bring the matter of the recusant witness before the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It does not. The Senator can ask for the return of the writ.

Mr. MITCHELL. I call for the reading of the return.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The return will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, ss:

The Senate of the United States of America to John R. French, esq., Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate of the United States, greeting:

By virtue of a resolution of the Senate of the United States passed on the 13th day of February, 1877, in the following words, to wit—

"Whereas Conrad N. Jordan, cashier of the Third National Bank, New York, was, on the 7th day of February, 1877, at ten o'clock a. m., duly served with a subpœna duces tecum issued by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, commanding him to appear before such committee on the 8th day of the present month, to then and there testify in reference to subject-matters under consideration by said committee, being matters relating to the controversy concerning the electoral votes for President and Vice-President, and to bring with him a full and exact statement of the accounts, as shown by the books of said Third National Bank, of Samuel J. Tilden, William T. Pelton, and ABRAM S. HEWITT, from the 1st day of June, 1876, to the 6th day of February, 1877;

"And whereas said Conrad N. Jordan has refused to respond to such subpœna, has failed to appear before said committee as required by said subpœna, or to produce such statement of accounts as required: Therefore,

"Resolved, That an attachment issue forthwith, directed to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, commanding him to bring said Conrad N. Jordan forthwith to the bar of the Senate to answer for contempt of a process of this body"— you are hereby commanded to arrest forthwith Conrad N. Jordan wherever he may be found and have his body at the bar of the Senate to answer for a contempt of the authority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, one of the standing committees of the Senate, and also for a contempt of the authority of the Senate of the United States, in refusing to obey an order of the Committee on Privileges and Elections to appear before the said committee after being duly summoned thereto. And this shall be your warrant for so doing.

Hereof fail not, and make return of this warrant with your proceedings thereon indorsed, on or before the 16th day of February, 1877.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the Senate of the United States this 13th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1877, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and first.

[SEAL.]

T. W. FERRY,
President of the Senate pro tempore.

[Return.]

SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
February 16, 1877.

To the Hon. T. W. FERRY,
President pro tempore of the Senate of the United States:

I have this day made service of this warrant, and now have the within-named Conrad N. Jordan in my custody.

J. R. FRENCH,
Sergeant-at-Arms Senate United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the witness is in the Chamber.

Mr. MITCHELL. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the witness, Conrad N. Jordan, be brought to the bar of the Senate by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

The resolution was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant-at-Arms will execute the order of the Senate, and bring the witness to the bar of the Senate.

The SERGEANT-AT-ARMS appeared at the bar of the Senate with the witness and said: Mr. President, Conrad N. Jordan is at your bar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant-at Arms announces the witness at the bar of the Senate. The witness will step forward.

The witness stepped forward to the area in front of the desk, and was accommodated with a chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the further pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. MITCHELL. If the witness desires to make any statement, I presume he has the privilege.

The WITNESS. I shall be pleased if the Secretary of the Senate will read such statement as I have to make.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness makes a statement, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President, before stating the grounds of my objections to producing the documents called for by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, permit me to disavow any intentional disrespect of the orders of your honorable body. I was ready to come here immediately upon the receipt of a telegram from the Sergeant-at-Arms, and did so come when thus summoned on a previous occasion. And further, Hon. O. P. MORTON, as chairman of that committee, had in his hands a telegram that I would be here on the 14th instant, at least twelve hours before the officer charged with my arrest left this city, and in fact I reached Washington and had reported to the Sergeant-at-Arms that I constituted myself his prisoner one day day before his deputy had returned. I would further state that my action in this matter was in accordance with an arrangement with the president of the bank, Mr. John W. Ellis, who left New York on the morning of the 13th instant in order to testify before this committee and before he was summoned, and who is the proper officer of the bank to summon in order to secure the production of its books or papers.

I have declined to answer the summons of your committee to produce the books or papers of the bank upon the following grounds:

First, that as cashier of the Third National Bank of the city of New York I am not the custodian of the books, papers, or accounts of that bank, and have no control over them. The president of the bank, as the representative of the board of directors, is the officer charged with that duty. He has been present and in attendance on the committee since last Thursday, and is at their service at any moment; and Second, I have declined to answer any questions without the advice of the counsel of the bank or such counsel as the board of directors of the bank may provide. I respectfully ask that I be permitted such advice and counsel.

Again, disavowing any attempt to treat the orders of the Senate with contempt, and apologizing for any action on my part which might seem to bear that interpretation, I wait the further action of your honorable body.

Very respectfully submitted.

C. N. JORDAN,
Cashier of the Third National Bank of the City of New York.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I offer a resolution which I send to the Chair.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas Conrad N. Jordan was, on the 7th day of February, 1877, by the authority of the Senate, summoned as a witness to give testimony and to produce certain papers, on the 8th day of February instant, before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, upon a matter under inquiry before such committee, to wit, an investigation into the eligibility of John W. Watts, a presidential elector in Oregon, and the facts attending the appointment of presidential electors in said State, in pursuance of a resolution of the Senate adopted December 22, 1876;

And whereas said Conrad N. Jordan failed to appear or testify or produce such papers, as required to do by such summons, which facts have been reported to the Senate: Therefore,

Resolved, That the President of the Senate be instructed to certify the facts under the seal of the Senate to the district attorney for the District of Columbia.

I desire to state, Mr. President, that the committee gave the witness an opportunity to purge himself, so far as in his power, after the order of arrest was made by the Senate. He was given the privilege to come before the committee and testify; he came before the committee; and that the Senate may know the course of the witness when there, I ask that his testimony may be read. It is not very lengthy. It is on page 468 of the printed testimony.

The Secretary read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 17, 1877.

CONRAD N. JORDAN sworn and examined.

By Mr. MITCHELL:

Question. You live in New York?
Answer. I do, sir.
Q. You are cashier of the Third National Bank?
A. I am.
Q. You were served with a subpœna issued by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections on the 7th of this month, were you not, requiring you to appear before this committee on the 8th day of February?
A. I was served with a paper purporting to be a subpœna. I had no evidence that it was so.
Q. You say that you were served with a paper purporting to be a subpœna?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it not a subpœna?
A. Signed by Mr. French, and Mr. French had delegated his powers to a gentleman by the name of Bangs or Banks. I neither knew Mr. French's signature nor did I know Mr. Bangs.
Q. You do not mean to say that the subpœna was signed by Mr. French, do you?
A. I think it was.
Q. Was not the subpœna signed by O. P. MORTON, the chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections?
A. I correct it; it was. The back was indorsed, signed by Mr. French—I forget his name—and then assigning whatever powers he had. I think that was the language of the instrument.
Q. Was there a copy of the subpœna left with you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you that with you?
A. I have not.
Q. What did you do with it?
A. I destroyed it.
Q. Did you make any question about the legality of the service at the time it was made on you?
A. I don't know that I did.
Q. Do you know that you did not?
A. I don't know that I did—whether I did or did not; I don't know. I don't remember.
Q. You do not know, then, whether you did or did not make any objection to the legality of the service?
A. No, sir; I made no attempt to carry it out. That is all I can say.
Q. What do you mean by that?
A. I did not come here.
Q. You treated it with contempt, did you?
A. I can't say that I treated it with contempt.
Q. You refused to obey it?
A. I refused to obey it.
Q. Why?
A. Because I thought if Mr. French needed me he would do just as he did before, telegraph me or send for me as he did before.
Q. Did not that subpœna require you to attend before the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the 8th day of this month, peremptorily?
A. It did.
Q. Did not that subpœna also require you to bring with you a statement of the accounts of Samuel J. Tilden, Colonel Pelton, and ABRAM S. HEWITT, as shown by the books of the Third National Bank of New York, from the 1st of June last to the time of the service of the subpœna?
A. It did; but as to the accounts of Colonel Pelton and Mr. HEWITT, I have no such accounts.
Q. I am not asking what you have.
A. I am just answering the question.
Q. No, sir; you are not. I am simply asking you the question whether that subpœna did not call upon you to produce a statement of these accounts before the committee, on the 8th of this month?
A. It did.
Q. And you refused to obey the subpœna?
A. I did.
Q. Why?
A. On the ground that, as cashier of the Third National Bank, I had no power or control over the books or records of the bank; and I declined upon that ground.
Q. Did you make any explanation or excuse to the chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or to the Sergeant-at-Arms?
A. I shall decline to answer any further questions. I shall require to see my counsel before I shall answer any questions whatever.
Q. You decline to answer any other questions put by the committee or by any member of the committee, do you?
A. I do.
Mr. KERNAN. He says until he sees his counsel.
The WITNESS. Until I have the opportunity to see my counsel.

By Mr. MITCHELL:

Q. Have you not had ample time to consult counsel since this subpœna was served on you?
A. No, sir; I have not.
Q. The subpœna was served on you the 7th of this month, was it not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Requiring you to appear on the 8th?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And yet you say you have not had ample time to consult your counsel?
A. I will explain why. I supposed all this time, as I explained to the Sergeant-at-Arms, that I would be telegraphed by him, saying when to be here, in which case I would quietly respond, as I did, saying that I would be here. I telegraphed to Mr. O. P. MORTON, the chairman, saying that I would be here on a given day; and in consequence of that I made no attempt. I was here yesterday. I was not well and I went to bed.
Q. You say you telegraphed Mr. MORTON that you would be here on a certain day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you do that?
A. It is now three days ago.
Q. Then that was about the 14th or 15th of this month?
A. My impression is that it would be the 14th or 13th.
Q. From the time that the subpœna was served on you, then, on the 7th of February, requiring you to appear before the committee on the 8th, you neither responded to the subpœna by coming yourself, or by furnishing any statement of accounts, or by offering any excuse to either the chairman of the committee, to any member of the committee, to the committee, or to the Sergeant-at-Arms?
A. Other than the telegram alluded to, I have not.
Q. Which telegram was not sent until long after the action of the Senate requiring the Sergeant-at-Arms to present you at the bar of the Senate for contempt?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I understand you to say that you have not had time to consult counsel?
A. I have not.
Q. And that you decline to answer any further questions before the committee until you have time to consult counsel?
A. I do.
Q. Now, I ask you this question: Will you please produce to me, for the inspection and use of this committee, the books of the Third National Bank of New York City, showing the account contained therein of Samuel J. Tilden, from the 1st of June last until the 1st of February?
A. Until I consult my counsel, I decline to answer that question.
Q. I will ask you another question: Will you please produce to me, as acting chairman of this committee, for the use of the committee, and for inspection, a statement of the account of Samuel J. Tilden, as shown on the books of the Third National Bank, from June 1, 1876, to the 1st of February, 1877, showing the amount deposited, the date thereof, the amount of each disbursement, and the date?
A. I answer as before.
Q. You decline to answer?
A. I decline to answer until I consult counsel.
Q. What time do you want in which to consult counsel?
A. I shall telegraph him to come from New York.
Q. Your counsel is in New York?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I understand you decline to answer these questions.
A. I do.
Q. Did you not state in substance and effect to Mr. Bangs, the deputy sergeant-at-arms, who served the subpœna on you in this case on the 7th of the present month, that you would not obey it?
A. I may have done so; I don't remember.
Q. Do you not know that you stated to him that you would not obey the subpœna?
A. I do not; but it is possible that I may have, because I should have determined then as I determine now, not to answer any questions.
Q. You should have determined then as you determine now?
A. Pardon me; in reference to bringing these books or the statement of the accounts of the bank; that I should have declined to do then, as I now decline to do it.
Q. Do you decline peremptorily now to do it?
A. I decline as before, except under advice of counsel.
Q. You knew before you left New York, of course, from the subpœna, what you were expected to do when you arrived here?
A. Perfectly.
Q. And you did not consult any counsel?
A. I did not.
Q. Did you consult with any person?
A. I did not.
Q. Did you see Samuel J. Tilden?
A. I did not.
Q. Whom did you consult with?
A. No one.
Q. Whom did you consult with in regard to your action?
A. No one, except the officers of our bank.
Q. Which officers did you consult with?
A. The president and vice-president.
Q. What is the name of the president?
A. John W. Ellis.
Q. Who is the vice-president?
A. Parker Handy.
Q. What did they tell you to do?
A. I think they concurred with me as to the impropriety of delivering the records of the bank; but the president, Mr. John W. Ellis, is here and can speak for himself.
Q. Did Mr. John W. Ellis, the president of the Third National Bank, give you any directions, as the cashier of the Third National Bank, as to the course you should take when you came upon the stand as a witness?
A. I decline to answer that question until I have consulted my counsel.
Q. You decline peremptorily?
A. I do.
Q. Did the vice-president of the bank, Mr. Parker Handy, give you any directions as to what course you should take as a witness before this committee?
A. I decline, as before, to answer until I have consulted my counsel.
Q. Did the directors of the Third National Bank, acting officially or otherwise, give you any direction as to the course you should take as a witness when you came before this committee?
A. I decline, as before.
Q. You decline to say whether they did or did not?
A. I do, as before, without the advice of counsel.
Q. Do you mean to say to this committee that you have not had abundant time to consult all the counsel you might wish to in regard to your rights and duties as a witness before this committee?
A. I may have had such opportunity. I have not availed myself of it.
Q. Do you not know that you have had ample time?
A. I have not made an attempt.
Q. Did you expect to wait until you were called upon the stand and then make this excuse that you would not answer until you had consulted counsel?
A. I decline to answer, as before, except under advice of my counsel.
Q. But you did not make any attempt, in all these two weeks that have elapsed, or nearly two weeks, since you were served with a subpœna, to take the advice of any counsel, or anybody else?

A. I decline to answer, as before.
Q. Are you in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms now?
A. I am.
Q. You have not yet been presented at the bar of the Senate?
A. I have not.

Mr. MITCHELL. Now turn to page 483.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

CONRAD N. JORDAN recalled and examined.

By Mr. MITCHELL:

Question. You heard the testimony of Mr. Ellis just now in reference to your statement to him that you had received a dispatch, and that that was the reason why you had not gone to Washington, did you?

Mr. MITCHELL. That will do for that. Now I ask that the testimony of Mr. John W. Ellis be read, beginning on page 476. It is necessary, in order to show what transpired.

Mr. COOPER. I wish to inquire under what authority that which has been read, the testimony of Mr. Jordan, was taken. I understood he was here under attachment to answer at the bar of the Senate, and I wish to inquire of the Senator from Oregon what authority there is in a committee to take the testimony of a witness under imprisonment by attachment, until the order of the Senate is had.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the Senator had been in when the case was opened, he would have heard what I said in reference to that matter then. It is true the Senate had directed the Sergeant-at-Arms to arrest this witness and bring him before the Senate. Before that order was executed by the Sergeant-at-Arms, the witness voluntarily came before the committee; came to the committee-room himself, not in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, but on his own motion, as we supposed, to testify and give explanations as to why he had not appeared. The committee thought it was no more than right to give him that opportunity, and they permitted him to go on the stand, and he proceeded to testify in the manner which has appeared from what has been read.

Mr. COOPER. I submit to the Senator, the committee having given him that opportunity, is he not discharged from the order of the Senate to bring him to the bar?

Mr. MITCHELL. By no manner of means.

Mr. COOPER. Is he not discharged by virtue of the examination? That is the point I make.

Mr. MCMILLAN. Will the Senator from Oregon yield for a question?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. MCMILLAN. Was the order to the Sergeant-at-Arms to report the witness to the Senate and present him at the bar of the Senate made subsequent to this voluntary appearance of the witness? ["O, no."]

Mr. MITCHELL. O, no; this was before his appearance. And what has been read, what little examination there was, shows that the witness refused to answer any questions put to him which were intended to elicit the evidence which the committee desired to obtain. He did answer some questions as to why he did not appear.

Mr. COOPER. Then, Mr. President, the remedy is plain. You can bring him to the bar of the Senate for contempt in refusing to answer, but you cannot hold him now in contempt for having failed to obey a subpœna. That is the point. He is here under arrest for having disobeyed your subpœna. Now the committee take him and examine him; your subpœna is intended for an examination, and the committee having examined him he is released by all rules of law and ought to be discharged from the present arrest, whatever the committee may do afterward.

Mr. MITCHELL. That, of course, is the Senator's opinion. It may be correct. I am not disputing it now; it will be a matter to be considered when the resolution comes up for consideration. But I ask that the rest of the testimony be read.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Mr. President, I do not know that we ought, in the consideration of the resolution by which this gentleman is at the bar of the Senate as for contempt in not appearing before the committee, to read testimony given before the committee subsequent to that time, because of the effect it may have in prejudicing the proper consideration of the resolution under which he is here. I think the point taken by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER] is well taken, that the action of the committee in permitting the witness to testify before the committee after the issue of the attachment was a waiver of the attachment. But I say in considering that subject I question very much the propriety of suffering any examination that was made subsequent to the time when the attachment was ordered to be read before the Senate, because of the effect it may have in prejudicing a proper and due consideration of the resolution ordering the attachment.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President——

Mr. KERNAN. If the Senator from Oregon will allow me a minute, I shall be obliged to him.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. KERNAN. I wish to state to the Senate that Mr. Jordan was under arrest when he was brought before the committee; he was in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms. He, early in the examination which has been read, stated that he had not control over the books and accounts which he had been summoned to produce and declined to answer questions until he could consult counsel. Notwithstanding this a long examination ensued, not with a view to excuse him, but rather, as it seemed to me at the time, with a view to throw suspicion upon others.

I only wish to say that he certainly testified while he was here under arrest in the charge of the Sergeant-at-Arms. I did not take any objection to this examination because I had discovered, as I thought, that this examination was to throw, if possible, suspicion upon other persons, and I was not willing to give color to that by interposing an objection. I was willing to leave it to the Senate to do whatever it deemed proper in reference to the bank accounts which he was subpœnaed to produce. It is due also to say that I never had any communication with Mr. Jordan before he was brought before the committee. The communication addressed to me by Mr. Tilden through the press, which you have all read, shows that he is not disposed to shrink from a full investigation of his bank account or any other matter touching his actions.

Mr. Jordan was examined while under arrest, and answered as he did. I did not make any objections to this, although it seemed to me at the time extraordinary to bring a man before us and examine him who was in contempt and in custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, because I believed that if I did object it would be supposed that some one desired to prevent a full investigation of the bank accounts which the witness was summoned to produce. Mr. Tilden certainly has no such wish.

Mr. MERRIMON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state the question. The Senator from Oregon has asked for the reading of a paper. Does the Senator from Delaware object?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I said that I questioned exceedingly the propriety of reading that evidence.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the Senator does not object.

Mr. MERRIMON. Mr. President, the facts of this case, as I understand them, are these: Some days ago the Committee on Privileges and Elections issued a subpœna, about which there was some question, commanding this witness to appear before that committee to be examined. The subpœna was what is called in law a subpœna duces tecum, to bring certain papers and to testify touching those papers and certain accounts that were mentioned. The witness did not come as in obedience to the summons. Thereupon, by order of the committee, the acting chairman came before the Senate and asked that an order be entered directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring the witness to the bar of the Senate. The effect of that order was to cause him to show cause, not to put him in contempt, but to show cause why he should not be attached for contempt; that was the effect of it. The Sergeant-at-Arms did his office; he brought the witness to the city, and the witness was in his custody. Whether he was immediately in his manual possession made no difference; he was in custodia legis.

Mr. MITCHELL. When? At what time?

Mr. MERRIMON. When the Sergeant-at-Arms had him and when he went before the committee.

Mr. MITCHELL. Well, probably when he went before the committee. But he was not brought here by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. MERRIMON. He came here at the command of the Sergeant-at-Arms. He was in the custody of the law.

Mr. MITCHELL. No, sir; the witness came because he saw in the newspapers that the Senate had directed the Sergeant-at-Arms to secure his arrest.

Mr. MERRIMON. While the witness was thus in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, or pending the order to the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring him, it was improvident for the Committee on Privileges and Elections to examine him at all until he had come to the bar of the Senate in custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms and had answered the order to show cause. It might be that the Senate would imprison him; it might be that the Senate would fine him; we could not tell what the Senate would do upon his answering the order to show cause. Nevertheless the committee examined him; and, now when he is here to answer for having failed to come before the Senate to answer that order to show cause, this improvident examination of the witness touching a matter before the committee and which has no connection with this order to the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring him to the Senate, is brought before the Senate at this moment when we are considering the order upon him to show cause. It seems to me that that is very unfair to this witness. It may be that this testimony is going to aggravate the case, so far as the point before the Senate goes. He is here to answer for failing to obey the summons, for failing to go before the committee. He is not here for failing to answer questions that were propounded to him. The chairman of the committee has not said that the committee directed him to come and move against this witness because he failed to answer those questions. The examination was improvident; and it is out of order, it is irregular, it may be prejudicial to this witness that what he said before the committee when certain questions were propounded to him pending that order should be read before the Senate now. I do not know whether it will turn out so or not; but according to the regular course of things that examination ought not to be read at this moment. When he shall have purged himself, when he shall have answered to the satisfaction of the Senate and shall have been discharged, if he shall be discharged, for failing to come in pursuance of the summons, then I take it he will be taken before the committee and proper questions will be propounded to him. If he fails to answer them as he is in law bound to do, then the committee will bring him before the bar of the Senate for failing to respond to questions which he was required to answer.

Mr. MITCHELL. It is not very material to me whether this testimony or these statements made by this witness before the committee be read now or not, but I desire to reply to what the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER] suggested. The Senator advances the proposition that because this witness was under arrest and the Sergeant-at-Arms had been directed by the Senate to produce him at the bar of the Senate, the fact that the committee saw proper to permit him to go on and testify if he desired to do so is a waiver of any right on the part of the Senate to proceed against him for the original offense. That is the proposition. Now, I deny that proposition. I deny it upon the record made in this case. I deny it as a matter of law.

What was the offense for which this witness was to be brought to the bar of the Senate? It was not merely for a failure to attend before a certain committee of this body; that was a part of the offense, it is true; but he was ordered to be brought to the bar of the Senate not only for failing to appear——

Mr. MERRIMON. When was the subpœna issued?

Mr. MITCHELL. On the 7th; but for a failure to testify, and not for that alone; but for a failure to bring with him certain papers that he was directed to bring in the original subpœna. The offense was a failure to attend, a failure to testify, a failure to produce certain papers, all of which he was called upon to do by the subpœna, and for failing to do which the Senate by a unanimous vote directed the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring him to the bar of the Senate that he might be dealt with according to law.

There can be no mistake about this, and my statement of the facts will not be questioned by any one, I take it. If my statement is questioned, then I shall read from the record the resolution directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring Mr. Jordan here, which recites that on the 7th of this month a subpœna duces tecum was served upon him commanding him to appear on the 8th before the Committee on Privileges and Elections and commanding him to bring with him before that committee certain books and accounts. My friend from Tennessee says because the committee, of its own generosity, thinking that the witness was willing to respond to the subpœna by the production of the accounts and thereby purge himself of the contempt so far as in his power, gave him that opportunity, that in law is a waiver on the part of the Senate of any right on its part to proceed against the witness for the original contempt. Why, most certainly not. What is the law in reference to this matter upon which my resolution sent to the Clerk a few moments ago, is based? It is found in section 104 of the Revised Statutes, and is as follows:

> Whenever a witness summoned as mentioned in section 102 fails to testify, and the facts are reported to either House, the President of the Senate or the Speaker of the House, as the case may be, shall certify the fact under the seal of the Senate or House to the district attorney for the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to bring the matter before the grand jury for their action.
> Whenever a witness summoned as mentioned fails to testify——

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Does he conceive that that statute applies to the case of the non-production of papers?

Mr. MITCHELL. I do.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. How do you make that appear? It says when he fails to testify.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is a part of the testimony. The testimony of the witness is not merely the answers that come by word of mouth to questions propounded, but it covers any legal testimony. These papers are as much testimony as any statement the witness might make as testimony. They are a part of the testimony. Besides, the order of the Senate in this case directing this witness to be brought to the bar of this body recites the reasons why that order was adopted by the Senate, and those reasons are, first, because he failed to appear; second, because he failed to produce the papers that the subpœna called for; and lastly, because he refused to testify.

The witness never, until the present hour, has complied with any one of the three requirements of that proceeding. He has never testified; and the only information that we have as to the fact that he was permitted to go before the committee at all is the testimony that has been read. If that is competent for the purpose of showing this Senate that he was before the commitee, then it is also competent to show that he failed to testify when he did go before the committee, because the statements of the witness read show that he threw himself back upon what he supposed to be his reserved rights to decline answering any questions until he had the privilege of consulting his counsel, although nearly two weeks had elapsed from the time the witness was served with the subpœna until the time that the committee gave him an opportunity to purge himself of the offense.

He has never testified; he has refused to testify; and it will not do for the Senator from Tennessee to say that if he is called before the committee and refuses to testify, then the committee will issue an order directing its chairman to present him at the bar of the Senate for refusing to testify. Why? Because the Senate has already directed that he shall be presented at the bar of the Senate, among other things for the refusal to testify, and he never has testified.

Mr. COOPER. Will the Senator read the order without the preamble?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, sir, I will. The order of the Senate is in the following words:

> Whereas Conrad N. Jordan, cashier of the Third National Bank, New York——

Mr. COOPER. No, I just want the order without the whereases.

Mr. MITCHELL. This is the order, and I want it all. The difficulty with the Senator is that he wants a part. I want it all.

Mr. COOPER. I want the order without the preamble.

Mr. MERRIMON. What is the date of that order?

Mr. MITCHELL. The date is the 13th day of February, and it reads:

> Whereas Conrad N. Jordan, cashier of the Third National Bank, New York, was on the 7th day of February, 1877, at ten o'clock a. m., duly served with a subpœna duces tecum issued by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, commanding him to appear before such committee on the 8th day of the present month to then and there testify in reference to subject-matters under consideration by said committee, being matters relating to the controversy concerning the electoral votes for President and Vice-President, and to bring with him a full and exact statement of the accounts as shown by the books of said Third National Bank, of Samuel J. Tilden, William T. Pelton, and ABRAM S. HEWITT, from the 1st day of June, 1876, to the 6th day of February, 1877;
> And whereas said Conrad N. Jordan has refused to respond to such subpœna, has failed to appear before said committee as required by said subpœna, or to produce such statement of accounts as required: Therefore,
> Resolved, That an attachment issue forthwith, directed to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, commanding him to bring said Conrad N. Jordan forthwith to the bar of the Senate to answer for contempt of a process of this body.

Now, even admitting the proposition advanced by the Senator from Tennessee to be good law, it cannot affect this case; and why? From the simple fact that the witness never has testified before the committee.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator be kind enough to read the return of the Sergeant-at-Arms to that order?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly, I will read it. The return is as follows:

> SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
> February 16, 1877
>
> To Hon. T. W. FERRY,
> President pro tempore of the Senate of the United States:
>
> I have this day made service of this warrant, and now have the within-named Conrad N. Jordan in my custody.
>
> JOHN R. FRENCH,
> Sergeant-at-Arms Senate United States.

I submit, Mr. President, to the Senate, that, even admitting all to be true, as a matter of law, as stated by the Senator from Tennessee, that if the witness had gone before the committee and testified and answered questions in regard to the matter of inquiry before that committee, it would be a waiver of the right of the Senate to proceed against him at once, it cannot affect this case, for the simple reason, as shown by the very paper read at the desk—by the very same paper that shows that he went before the committee—that he peremptorily refused to testify; that he would not answer a solitary question relating to the matters pending before the committee; that he declined to testify, and gave as a reason that he wanted the privilege of consulting counsel. Then will it be said that there has been a waiver of the right of the Senate to proceed against this witness for contempt? Most assuredly not. Not for a solitary moment can any such proposition as that be successfully maintained.

Is there any evidence here of a single fact that in the opinion of the Senator from Tennessee amounts to a waiver? There is not, unless we say that the paper purporting to be the statement made by the witness before the committee is evidence of that fact. If that is evidence of the fact, it is also evidence, I submit to the honorable Senator, of the further fact that the witness instead of testifying refused to testify.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Refused to produce papers.

Mr. MITCHELL. Not only in reference to that matter, but in reference to every other matter. He not only refused to produce the papers in answer to a question put to him, but he refused to answer any question. When a certain question is propounded to him he states that he declines to answer that question, and not only that one, but he will not answer any question that the committee or any member of the committee puts to him until he has the privilege of consulting counsel, when he had had two mortal weeks since the subpœna was served upon him to consult counsel.

Then I say, Mr. President, admitting all the force of the objection made here as a matter of law, that if he had gone before the committee and testified that would amount to a waiver, it cannot affect this case; from the fact that it appears conclusively that he did not testify and that the original sin for which he was called to the bar of the Senate stands uncondoned by any act of the Senate, by any act of the committee, and what is worse still by any act of the witness when he had an opportunity to purge himself. Why, Mr. President, that would be a strange doctrine to obtain in the Senate of the United States.

Mr MERRIMON. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. MERRIMON. I ask the Senator what is the proceeding against this witness for now?

Mr. MITCHELL. We are proceeding against this witness for the offense that he committed in refusing to respond to the subpœna duces tecum and in refusing to testify before the committee.

Mr. MERRIMON. Where is the authority to proceed against him for refusing to testify?

Mr. MITCHELL. Where is the authority?

Mr. MERRIMON. The committee has sent no order here and no report to the Senate directing proceedings against him for refusing to testify.

Mr. MITCHELL. I beg pardon of the Senator from North Carolina. The trouble with him is that his memory is so short in reference to this matter that he cannot remember far enough back to remember all the facts of the case.

Mr. MERRIMON. I will thank you to point me to them.

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly. The original resolution asking the acting chairman of the committee to bring this matter to the attention of the Senate recited that this witness was served on a certain day with a subpœna to appear on a certain other day before the committee to testify, and recited furthermore that he had refused to appear and that he had refused to testify.

Mr. MERRIMON. As I said a while ago and as the order shows, this witness was brought here in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms because he failed to appear before the committee in pursuance of that summons. It was upon that ground that the order was issued; and it is in the nature of an order to show cause why he should not be attached. At the time that order was entered this witness had not been before the committee; no questions had been propounded to him; and this whole examination which is being read here to his prejudice at this moment was not in existence at the time that order was entered in the Senate, and it was taken sometime after that. I undertake to say—and I believe I can do it truly—that the Committee on Privileges and Elections have made no order and taken no action with a view to ask the Senate to proceed against this witness for failing to answer questions.

It may be, as I said awhile ago, that the Senate will put him in contempt, fine him or imprison him because he did not come in pursuance of the command of the summons. They may do that, or they may discharge him if he proposes to go before the committee now and be examined. As I said awhile ago, I repeat now that while there is nothing wrong imputed to the Senator from Oregon at all, the examination of this witness while he was in the custody of the law was improvident; it ought not to have taken place; and he ought to be treated now as though he had not been before the committee, for that improvident examination may prejudice his case when he is here to answer for failing to come.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am not particular whether that statement is read or not. I do not care a copper whether it is read or not. I think, as a matter of justice to the witness, it would perhaps be proper that it should be read.

Mr. MERRIMON. Let me say another word. The Senator will remember that grave questions may arise as to whether when these inquiries are propounded to this witness regularly before the committee he will be bound to answer them. I take it that he is not to be put in contempt for failing to answer a question when his right has not been passed upon or considered by the committee at all.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from North Carolina appears to think that there can be no contempt on the part of a witness for refusing to testify except where he comes before the committee and a question is propounded to him. I submit that that hardly can be good law.

Mr. MERRIMON. The Senator misapprehends me. I say that it is competent for the Senate to put him in contempt for failing to appear before the committee; and that is the motion now, to put him in contempt for failing to come before the committee. He may purge himself of that; he may assign a sufficient excuse for which the Senate will discharge him and direct him to go before the committee; or, if it turns out that he stubbornly refused to go, the Senate may punish him for that. Then when he shall go before the committee in pursuance of the order of the Senate, after he has purged himself of the contempt for failing to go originally, then the further questions that were propounded to him may be propounded to him again. Then he may raise the question of his right to refuse to answer; and then it may be the committee will ask the Senate to put him again in contempt for refusing to answer, as well as for the contempt in refusing to come.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from North Carolina is certainly too good a lawyer to advocate the doctrine here that a witness cannot be held in contempt for refusing to testify unless he is absolutely before the committee and refuses to answer a certain question propounded to him. There are two ways of refusing to testify. I may be summoned to appear before a committee of this body or before a court of this District, and I may refuse to testify in two ways: I may refuse to testify in the first place by saying to that committee and its officer or to that court and its officer, "I do not recognize your right to bring me before your committee and will not testify at all."

Mr. COOPER. Would that be contempt for failing to testify?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly it would.

Mr. COOPER. Or for failing to answer the process? They are distinct propositions. That would be a failure to answer the process, but certainly not a failure to testify.

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, it would be a failure to answer the process, it is true, and it would be furthermore a failure to testify. And then there may be another failure to testify, and that is where a witness is before a committee and certain questions are propounded; he may fail to testify for various reasons; he may fail to testify because he is stubborn and does not wish to testify on the subject. He may fail to answer a particular question because he thinks in law he ought not to be compelled to answer that particular question. He may fail in court to answer a particular question because the answer might criminate himself, although that would be no excuse before a committee.

Mr. COOPER. Will the Senator from Oregon answer me whether he insists before this body that a witness can be placed in contempt for failing to testify, he never having had the opportunity to testify; for failing to answer questions when no questions have ever been asked?

Mr. MITCHELL. I insist that I will point the Senator from Tennessee to the resolution adopted by the Senate which recites the fact of the failure to testify.

Mr. COOPER. I submit that the resolution does not. The order is for failing to obey the process of the Senate.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have read the order.

Mr. COOPER. It was for failure to obey the process.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Will the Senator from Oregon allow me a moment?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAULSBURY. The resolution offered this morning by the Senator from Oregon is the question before the Senate; that is a resolution to send this witness to the courts of the country for failing to obey the process of this body. That in substance I understand to be the purport of the resolution.

I hold that that resolution cannot be properly adopted by the Senate, because the witness has had no opportunity to purge himself of the contempt with which he is charged. A subpœna duces tecum issued requiring the witness to appear before the Committee of Privileges and Elections of this body. He failed to appear, and then an order was issued that he should be arrested and brought to the bar of the Senate; for what purpose? That he might purge himself from contempt. That was the object and the purpose of the order requiring him to be brought to the bar of the Senate; and yet, before a single question has been propounded by the President of this body to the witness, a resolution is offered by the Senator from Oregon to send this witness to the courts of the country, without affording him the privilege before this body of purging himself of the contempt with which he is charged.

Now, Mr. President, I am anxious to uphold the dignity of this body, though, as is known to the members of the Senate, when the order was pending requiring the arrest of the party in default here I objected, because there had been an improvident issuance of the subpœna duces tecum, but I am equally anxious to uphold the rights of persons who are brought to the bar of the Senate. This gentleman has had no opportunity of purging himself of the contempt with which he is charged in this matter.

Mr. MITCHELL. I did not yield for a speech, because I was not through.

Mr. SAULSBURY. If the Senator objects, I am on the floor by his courtesy and will give way.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from Delaware says the witness has had no opportunity to purge himself. He has had an opportunity. He was brought to the bar of the Senate and, upon my own motion, he was permitted to make any statement he might desire to make, and he presented a written statement that was read in the presence of the Senate.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Perhaps I may have something more to say when the Senator gets through.

Mr. MITCHELL. I shall take but a few moments longer.

Mr. SARGENT. Is this matter privileged, I ask the Chair, or can it be laid aside?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It can be laid aside by order of the Senate.

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to remind Senators that we ought to pass the naval appropriation bill this afternoon.

Mr. MITCHELL. In order that we may get a vote I will occupy no further time.

Mr. WHYTE. I desire to say one word before we take a vote on this proposition.

Mr. DAVIS. I have no wish to continue this case until another day, but the Senator well knows that a single objection carries the resolution over until to-morrow.

Mr. WHYTE. O, no, it is a privileged question.

Mr. DAVIS. That is my judgment at any rate. I will reserve the objection to the resolution.

Mr. WHYTE. Mr. President, the hardship of passing the resolution at this time is too apparent for any one to do it without due deliberation. If the resolution is passed this witness is held in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms until the action of the grand jury of the District of Columbia. Whenever that may take place no one can now predict. The whole thing is wrong from beginning to end. This party was summoned on the 7th of February last under a subpœna duces tecum instructing him to appear before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and to bring with him certain books and papers relating to the accounts of the three persons named by the Senator from Oregon. Subsequently, having failed to attend, an order of the Senate was passed commanding the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring him before the Senate or before the committee which is the representative of the Senate. That order was issued on the 13th day of February. On the 14th, I think, he telegraphed that he would appear on a certain day, and on the 16th he appeared in Washington in response to the order of the Senate, and on the 18th he testified before the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator allow me to ask a question right here?

Mr. WHYTE. Yes.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator is mistaken in supposing that he ever did testify, because he never did; he has never answered any question; but suppose that were all true, does that as matter of law wipe out the original offense?

Mr. WHYTE. Yes.

Mr. MITCHELL. It does?

Mr. WHYTE. Yes.

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to see some law on that point.

Mr. WHYTE. I will show you some in a few minutes. I know that is what you want exactly. [Laughter.]

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes.

Mr. WHYTE. The Senator is confounding two different processes, one a process upon a failure to appear, another a different process which is to be taken where he refuses to testify. One specially is provided for under the law of Congress that the President of the Senate certifies to the district attorney where the party refuses to testify.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator allow me a question?

Mr. WHYTE. Certainly, a hundred if you wish.

Mr. MITCHELL. Suppose a man is subpœnaed to appear in court on a day certain to act as juror; he does not appear on the day fixed in the summons, but he does appear a week later and takes his place on the jury and the end of the term comes; I want to know if that fact prevents the court from imposing a penalty on him for failing to appear?

One other question——

Mr. WHYTE. One at a time. Do not let us run them together. It is your misfortune that you are running two things together, and now you want to run two questions together. If we had a juror here, I would answer that question; but we have a witness.

Mr. MITCHELL. One question. Now we will take the witness. Suppose a witness is summoned to appear in court, I will say on a day certain, to give his testimony in a case which it is supposed will come up for trial on that day. He does not appear; he delays the action of the court; he keeps the court and witnesses in waiting; he obstructs the course of justice. Afterward he appears. An attachment is issued for him, for instance, and he takes knowledge of that through a statement in a newspaper, and he goes sneaking into court and places himself upon the witness-stand and is examined by the court. Now, I want to know if the Senator from Maryland will claim as a matter of law that that wipes out the original sin of failure to appear so that the court cannot impose a penalty on him.

Mr. WHYTE. I will tell my friend——

Mr. MITCHELL. I say that the Senator cannot produce any such law.

Mr. WHYTE. I tell my friend that the rules that prevail in Parliament are constantly different from those that prevail in a court of law, and I will show him that the parliamentary law in England and in America is exactly the same and that the moment a witness is brought to the bar of the Senate or of the House for failing to appear he is discharged. In a court of law where a witness fails to appear upon an original summons but afterward appears upon an attachment for contempt, then the court has the right either to discharge the attachment without punishment or to fine him. But could the court examine him as a witness and then send him to jail and let him rot there? No, Mr. President, if the court examines him as a witness, all it can do is to fine him for his past contempt.

But the principles prevailing in courts of justice in that regard are not similar. We have no right to send this man to jail and punish him. On the contrary when we have exhausted our power by sending the Sergeant-at-Arms for him and bringing him here, the proceedings drop. I will show my friend from Oregon that that is the principle of law prevailing in England and America which he will find stated plainly in May on Parliamentary Law:

> The attendance of a witness to be examined before a select committee is ordinarily secured by an order signed by the chairman by direction of the committee. But if a party should neglect to appear when summoned in this manner, his conduct is reported to the house, and an order is immediately made for his attendance.

That was precisely what we did on the 13th of February.

> If, in the mean time, he appears before the committee, it is usual to discharge the order for his attendance

That is the law laid down by May and pursued always in Parliament.

Mr. MITCHELL. As a matter of discretion, of course.

Mr. WHYTE. There is no discretion about it. It is laid down, and so my friend the Senator from Oregon——

Mr. MITCHELL. The law read by the Senator does not say that that fact discharges him by operation of law. It is usual to discharge the witness, as a matter of discretion in the body.

Mr. WHYTE. Never except where he refuses to attend is there any other proceeding. The moment he attends and appears before the committee the proceedings drop.

And so is the law in this country, too. Now I quote for the edification of my friend, the Senator from Oregon, Wilson's Parliamentary Law. It is Indiana parliamentary law, which prevails here to a great extent. On page 298 of Wilson's Digest the rule is thus stated:

> If the witness should neglect to appear when summoned in this manner, his conduct is reported to the house, and an order is immediately made for his attendance.
>
> If, in the mean time, he appears before the committee, the order is discharged.

Here is a case on all-fours with the case of this man brought to the bar of the Senate. He was summoned. It was a subpœna duces tecum to bring certain books and papers belonging to the Third National Bank of New York. He failed to respond and appear in accordance with that order. He was reported to this House, and on the 13th of February we passed an order directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring him before the House. Before that order was executed, that is to say, before he was taken into custody by the Sergeant-at-Arms, he came to Washington, having previously notified the chairman of the committee that he would attend. He comes to Washington and goes before the committee, makes his appearance. He is brought here at the bar of the Senate under that order, or he is not here at all; I mean legally here. Having been so brought, there is no principle of parliamentary law, there is no warrant in parliamentary procedure which justifies this Senate in passing the order now upon the table. It is a different case for which that order should provide. If this witness is now taken before the Committee on Privileges and Elections and asked to produce these books, and replies, as he has replied at the bar of the Senate, that he is not the custodian of these books of the Third National Bank, but that the president, representing the corporate authority of the bank, has them in his charge and custody—if he makes that answer, and he is reported to the Senate, there is no lawyer in the Senate that will not say he is justified in refusing to produce that over which he has no control. Therefore you cannot pass an order reporting him to the court of the District of Columbia as having committed a misdemeanor in failing or refusing to testify. He does testify; he does bear witness; he does say, "I cannot produce these papers; they are not in my power; they are not in my custody; they are in the custody of the president of the bank; you can send for him and compel him to produce them."

I submit, Mr. President, that on such a state of case as this will not the Senate be guilty of such stultification as it seems to me it would be guilty of in passing an order of this character?

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from Maryland undertook to show the Senator from Oregon some law applicable to this case. The Senator has produced two authorities; one laying down what is supposed to be the law in England, another stating the law in America. I submit now that if the Senator from Maryland bases his argument and undertakes to sustain his position here upon the doctrine of the law as laid down by those two authorities, then the Senator from Maryland needs to be edified a little himself in the law. What are these authorities? Do they hold to the doctrine that the appearance of a recusant witness in Parliament, or the appearance of a recusant witness in Congress after the time he must appear by the subpœna, operates ipso facto to discharge him? Is that the position? Is it that that fact discharges the witness and wipes out the contempt of which he was guilty? Why, Mr. President, the authorities read do not state any such proposition. The authority in England states that in that case it is usual to do—what? To discharge the witness? That is true. As a general rule it would be the exercise of a proper discretion upon the part of the Senate and upon the part of the House to discharge a witness who had failed to appear in the first instance but who afterward voluntarily came forward and gave his testimony. I say it would be the proper exercise of a discretion on the part of the Senate to discharge such a witness. But to hold that that fact discharged him in law, wiped out the original offense, condoned the original sin, is a proposition, I submit, that the Senator from Maryland, however superior his legal attainments, cannot sustain before this Senate or any other tribunal. I submit that the parliamentary law in this respect is in no essential respect different from the law of the judicial courts, and that the questions I put to the Senator from Maryland in reference to a juror and in reference to a witness in a court of justice are pertinent and applicable. The Senator admits, and is compelled to admit, that in those cases in courts of justice the appearance would not wipe out the original offense, and therefore he is compelled to fall back upon the proposition that there is a distinction between the rule as applicable to courts of justice and as applicable to Parliament or Congress.

Then I submit that the Senator from Maryland must produce some better law than that. I am surprised at my democratic friends on the other side raising these technical objections. Why, Mr. President, the Senate of the United States has not undertaken to convert its committee-rooms into bastiles. The Senate of the United States and its committees have not in the case of recusant witnesses confined them in prisons and put them on bread and water. The witness at the bar of the Senate to-day is an illustrious example of the contrary rule, so far as the Senate of the United States is concerned. He has not been imprisoned, except technically; he has not been confined, as he will tell you, in any jail or prison-pen, nor yet in any committee-room of the Senate, and deprived of his liberty. No proceeding of that kind can be laid to the door of the Senate of the United States.

Mr. COOPER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him what he is seeking to do now? Is it not that?

Mr. MITCHELL. I am seeking to have the Senate of the United States vindicate its process.

Mr. COOPER. How? By putting him in a bastile?

Mr. MITCHELL. How? In pursuance of law.

Mr. WITHERS. What law?

Mr. COOPER. How?

Mr. MITCHELL. In pursuance of law, by turning the witness over to the courts, and not making a bastile out of the committee-rooms of the Senate. Will the Senator from Tennessee or the Senator from Virginia take the position here that the Senate of the United States can have its process treated with contempt without any resort or attempt whatever to vindicate its authority? Certainly not; of course not. What would the Senators have us do? The witness has been called upon by a subpœna in the first place to produce certain papers. It is not for the witness to judge as to the competency or incompetency of those papers. What he was expected to do, and the only thing he was expected to do, was to produce certain, papers which he has failed to do.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Does he not offer a reason for their non-production?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly he does, and now is the time and here the proper place and the only proper place to submit that reason, and he has done it, as was his right to do. If that reason is a satisfactory one to the Senate, he should be discharged. That is another thing. I will vote with my friend from Florida and with all my democratic friends if they can satisfy me that the reason submitted here by this witness is a good one and justifies him in refusing to obey the process of the Senate. But that does not touch this question; that is a different question.

Not wishing to take any further time, because in this matter we are taking up entirely too much of the time of the Senate, I submit the case. I have felt it necessary to say this much in vindication of the course of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to hear the explanation of the party. I have forgotten really the excuse.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I ask that the resolution be reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be reported.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas Conrad N. Jordan was on the 7th day of February, 1877, by the authority of the Senate, summoned as a witness to give testimony and to produce certain papers on the 8th day of February instant before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, upon a matter under inquiry before such committee, to wit, an investigation into the eligibility of John W. Watts, a presidential elector in Oregon, and the facts attending the appointment of presidential electors in that State, in pursuance of a resolution of the Senate adopted December 22, 1876; and whereas said Conrad N. Jordan failed to appear, or testify, or produce such papers, as required to do by such summons, which facts have been reported to the Senate: Therefore,

Resolved, That the President of the Senate certify the facts, under the seal of the Senate, to the district attorney for the District of Columbia, and that the witness, Conrad N. Jordan, remain for the present in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. WHYTE. Mr. President, there is no provision of law which authorizes you to certify that Jordan failed to produce any papers. The provision of the law is in these words:

SEC. 104. Whenever a witness summoned as mentioned in section 102 fails to testify—

Not to produce papers; not to appear; but "fails to testify"— and the facts are reported to either House, the President of the Senate or the Speaker of the House, as the case may be, shall certify the fact under the seal of the Senate or House to the district attorney for the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to bring the matter before the grand jury for their action.

Mr. MERRIMON. Mr. President, whatever has been said, this witness is before the Senate now under this resolution:

Resolved, That an attachment issue forthwith, directed to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, commanding him to bring said Conrad N. Jordon forthwith to the bar of the Senate for contempt of the process of this body.

He is not here to testify; he is here and here only for the purpose of answering why he did not come before the committee in pursuance of the command of the summons; and, it seems to me, it is irregular and outside of this case for us to take into consideration in this connection any improvident examination that was had of him before the Committee on Privileges and Elections or any other body. He has put in his answer, which, with one addition, I think would be sufficient to purge him of the contempt, if there were contempt in not obeying that summons. I desire to hear now what the temper of the witness is, and to have the Chair put this question: Having put in this answer, is he willing now to go before the Committee on Privileges and Elections and answer all the questions that may be lawfully propounded to him, and which he is bound to answer in law?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is a resolution pending. If there be no objection, the Chair will——

Mr. MITCHELL. I have no objection to the question being propounded, because I desire to get the answer.

Mr. MERRIMON. Before we get into confusion about this let us see exactly the logic of this thing. This witness is brought to the bar of the Senate to answer for failing to obey the command of the Senate to go before the Committee on Privileges and Elections. He sets forth in his answer certain excuses for not going. If we are satisfied that there was excuse for that, surely we are not going to turn him loose now, if he refuses still to go before the committee, and I want to see if he is willing to go before the committee.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Allow me a question?

Mr. MERRIMON. I will, because I want to get at the proper course of action about this matter.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I understand that the witness is here for refusing to do three things, not one, but three. First, failure to appear in response to the subpœna duces tecum; secondly, refusal to testify——

Mr. MERRIMON. No, not for that.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Thirdly, for refusal to produce books and papers.

Mr. MERRIMON. No, he is here now simply for failing to come in obedience to the command.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. What command?

Mr. MERRIMON. To appear before the committee.

Mr. KERNAN. Will the Senator from Florida allow me to state that whenever we proceed against this man for refusing to testify, we must proceed by reporting to the Senate, which has never been done, that we asked him certain questions and he refused to answer them. We have never reported him to the Senate at all for refusing to testify. Whenever he does that, we will report the questions we put and his refusal to answer them. We have reported him to the Senate for refusing to obey its subpœna. That is the only ground of complaint, I submit, that there is before the Senate against him, at this time, and we cannot have any other ground of complaint until we make a report, that he has been before us and that we asked him to testify to certain matters and that he declined. We have never even reported the evidence which was taken irregularly while he was before us under arrest.

Mr. CONKLING. Will my colleague allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. KERNAN. Certainly.

Mr. CONKLING. After the witness failed to attend, and after this order of attachment was made by the Senate, did he come before the committee voluntarily for any purpose?

Mr. KERNAN. I will answer. I went up one morning to the court-room and he was there after he had been arrested. I never have had a word of conversation with him, and I do not know whether he came voluntarily or whether the Sergeant-at-Arms brought him in involuntarily. In his testimony it was brought out that he was there under arrest; and I know that when they stopped examining him, the committee remanded him to the Sergeant-at-Arm's custody. That is all I know about it.

Mr. CONKLING. Was he examined?

Mr. KERNAN. He was examined by the Senator from Oregon, and one answer was that he had not control of the books and papers.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator will allow me. The Senator says he was examined, and examined by me. He was placed upon the witness-stand, but he refused to answer the questions. That was the fact. He refused to produce the papers.

Mr. KERNAN. Whenever we seek to punish him for not testifying we must proceed for that, and report the questions put him and the answers he gave and what answers he refused to give. Then the Senate can proceed against him for refusing to testify. But we have done no such thing. He was under arrest when he was there, and he is brought here under an original warrant for not appearing in obedience to the subpœna. We ought not to mix the two things together.

Mr. MITCHELL. One word, Mr. President. The resolution pending is simply my own resolution. It is not reported from the committee; it was simply my motion of what ought to be done in this particular case. I regard it as a case of gross contempt, so far as that is concerned, of the process of the Senate. This witness was not only subpœnaed to appear before the committee, but he was subpœnaed to produce certain papers. He is in contempt for a failure to appear, for a failure to produce certain papers, and for a failure to testify—all three. They are all mentioned. He was ordered under arrest. While he did go before the committee, he has never yet produced the papers.

Mr. EATON. Will my friend allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly; two of them if you wish.

Mr. EATON. I wish to make an inquiry of the Senator from Oregon. I ask him if he intends to produce this witness before the committee at all?

Mr. MITCHELL. The testimony which we expected to obtain by this witness I suppose has been virtually obtained in other directions. I will now submit to the Senate and to the witness the proposition that, if he is willing to state to the President of the Senate and the Senate that he will go before the committee and answer any proper questions, I will not insist upon the resolution, the question whether they are proper questions or not to be determined afterward, for if he declines to answer a question he can be reported. If he is willing to do that, I will not insist on the resolution.

Mr. BLAINE. Why, then, does not the Senator from Oregon have that question propounded to the witness by the Chair? That is the proper way to do.

Mr. MITCHELL. I shall be perfectly satisfied with that.

Mr. COOPER. I shall object to the witness going on the stand here and answering any question. The Senate is not to determine upon his rights now. He has the privilege of being interrogated by the committee and the committee is to ask questions and report to us, and then the Senate may adjudge. It would be unjust to the witness, in contempt by the attachment, brought to the bar of the Senate and put upon the witness-stand, to be questioned here. He has the right to answer why he did not obey this summons, and certainly it would be unjust to ask him questions now as to what he would do or what he would not do.

Mr. BLAINE. Will the Senator from Tennessee permit me to interrupt him a moment?

Mr. COOPER. Certainly.

Mr. BLAINE. Does the Senator from Tennessee state that it would be unjust for the President of the Senate to ask the witness, "Are you now willing to appear before the Committee on Privileges and Elections to answer all proper questions addressed to you by that committee?"

Mr. COOPER. I should say it would be unjust, because——

Mr. BLAINE. Then the Senator has queer ideas of justice.

Mr. COOPER. That is not the proposition which has been insisted upon.

Mr. BLAINE. That is precisely the proposition I understand the Senator from Oregon to make.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is the proposition; and I propose, if the witness answers that question in the affirmative, to withdraw the resolution.

Mr. COOPER. I wish to offer a resolution in lieu of the one proposed by the Senator from Oregon. Unquestionably, I have no objection, if the witness wants the privilege of answering the question, to letting him do so; but I think it is the duty of the Senate to act upon the original attachment, the process, the contempt for which he is here.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is just what we are doing.

Mr. COOPER. I offer the following as a substitute for the resolution of the Senator from Oregon:

That the witness, Conrad N. Jordan, having appeared at the bar of the Senate in custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms upon an order of the Senate heretofore made, and having purged himself of contempt for failing to obey its process, it is Ordered, That the witness be discharged from said arrest, and that he appear before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, there to testify.

Mr. BURNSIDE. It seems to me that it is well understood by all Senators that the question at issue has been settled both before the committee of the House and the committee of the Senate. If this witness will answer the simple question suggested to be propounded by the Chair, as to whether he is willing to go before the committee now to answer any proper questions, I think that ought to settle the matter, because both committees have agreed not to have any examination upon the very matter on which this witness was required to testify. We all know that to be a fact.

Mr. CONKLING. What is that question, if the Senator please?

Mr. BURNSIDE. There are several questions touching it. Both committees have dropped examination into the private accounts of Mr. Tilden and the private accounts of Mr. Chandler; they have dropped all investigation with reference to such matters. That is a fact known to everybody.

Mr. CONKLING. I do not know it.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I beg the Senator's pardon. I have been told so. The president of Mr. Tilden's bank, a friend of mine, and the cashier himself told me so. The president of the bank took the accounts of Mr. Tilden out of his pocket and said he was quite ready to present those accounts whenever called upon, but he had been relieved from that obligation. I was informed that certain things had been agreed upon, in other words, a compromise had been made between the two committees. If there was anything at issue here, notwithstanding the fact that the witness is a personal friend of mine, I should vote for making him answer all proper questions, and I should be in favor of using all necessary force to make him answer such questions, but I see no reason why he should be placed under any restraint at this time, if he will express a willingness to the President of the Senate to go before the committee and answer all proper questions. I submit to the Senate that it would be proper for the President of the Senate to ask him a question of this character, and if he is willing to answer all proper questions before the committee let that end the matter.

With reference to the action of the House, I do not think, because men are treated badly by the House committees and put under restraint when they ought not to be, (and I do not know that they are treated badly, but it is the understanding of a great many people that witnesses have been treated badly by the House committee,) it is any reason why the Senate committee should keep a witness under restraint when no good can result from it.

Mr. BLAINE. Mr. President, I know nothing whatever about any compromise that was made or to be made in regard to questions that may be intended to be addressed to this witness. I do not wish to be understood as believing myself at all in the policy of going into every back-room and private drawer and personal memorandum and portemonnaie and bank-account of every man in the United States, whether he is a democrat or whether he is a republican. I do not wish to conclude myself in regard to that question at all, either in regard to what is proposed to be done here or what may be done elsewhere over which I have no control. On that I reserve my judgment, or rather, if I should express my judgment, I would express a very great contempt for a great deal that has been done by both sides in that matter, and if there is any justification in what has been proposed here it is simply on the basis of the lex talionis. It is not, probably, parliamentary to refer further to the matter, but when blows are struck there will inevitably be blows given back again.

Probably that is the reason why this witness is at the bar of the Senate to-day; but, being here, I submit that the only question you can address to him, the only question by rule known to parliamentary procedure, is for him to purge himself of contempt, if he be in contempt, by answering to the President of the Senate that he is ready to go before the committee to answer all proper questions.

I have seen an attempt to make a witness say that he would answer all questions, but I never saw a parliamentary body insist on that yet. There is always the reservation whether the question be a proper one, reserving it first to the committee, next the reserved right of the witness to refuse, and finally the right of the body itself here to determine whether it is a proper question. That does no injustice to the witness; that does no injustice to any party whom the witness may represent or whose interests may be in his keeping; it does no injustice to the committee and it maintains in its full force the dignity and propriety of procedure in the Senate.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to offer a resolution in lieu of the one which I previously presented.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Will the Senator allow me to ask a question of the Senator from Maine?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I concur very generally in the views expressed by the Senator from Maine, but I desire to ask him a question because I know his great familiarity with parliamentary usage. The questions which he says are proper to be asked would be proper in my judgment; but has not the witness in fact been discharged by the action of the committee? I desire to propound the question to the Senator from Maine: if a witness has been ordered to appear at the bar of the Senate and before that order is executed he appears before the committee and is there examined, is not that a discharge of the order commanding him to appear at the bar of the Senate?

Mr. MITCHELL. What evidence is there that he was examined before the committee?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I am asking the Senator from Maine a question, and I do not think it proper to answer a question while I am asking one.

Mr. MITCHELL. Perhaps I have been impertinent, and if I have I apologize.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Not at all.

Mr. MITCHELL. I say that he never was examined, but he refused peremptorily to answer any question before the committee.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. There is a difference of opinion in the committee on that.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I should like to have the opinion of the Senator from Maine on this question.

Mr. BLAINE. I ask the Senator from Delaware to state the latter part of his question again. I did not correctly apprehend it.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I have no doubt the views expressed by the Senator from Maine in reference to the proper procedure to be had are correct, unless the witness himself has been discharged from the fact that he appeared before the committee and was there interrogated. The question I propound is whether if, after the order issues to bring a witness to the bar of the Senate, he appears before the committee and is there interrogated, it does not operate to discharge the witness from the contempt under which he is placed?

Mr. BLAINE. The Senator from Delaware addresses to me a question of fact, not a question of principle. Of the facts which transpired in the committee-room, I am entirely ignorant. I only find a recusant witness at the bar of the Senate, and I am dealing with the fact as it now exists here in presenti. I know nothing beyond the fact that I see him here, and he is brought here by an authorized committee of this body; he is presented at the bar of the Senate to be dealt with, and the ordinary and proper mode, I am merely repeating myself in saying, is to address to him that question which has assumed really the position of a formula in such cases. The only question to be addressed to him, and that is the touchstone, is: Are you ready and willing now to go before the committee and answer all proper questions? Does not the Senator from Delaware agree with me that that is a very proper, a very pertinent, and a very reasonable question to be addressed to the witness?

Mr. SAULSBURY. Certainly; I agree that that is the proper course, but it appears from the papers read at the desk that the witness has actually appeared before the committee, and that he has been interrogated. Therefore, the point of my inquiry to the Senator from Maine is whether that should not operate to discharge the witness from any contempt that he may be in.

Mr. BLAINE. On the mere question of whether he would come here from New York and appear before the committee it might, but evidently it did not in the minds of the committee discharge him from contempt, or they would not have presented him here. The mere fact of his personal presence in the committee-room would not discharge the contempt; if he sat there with sealed lips he might as well have remained in New York.

Mr. COOPER. The committee have not reported him since he has been in the committee-room, but this action was taken by the committee before that time.

Mr. BLAINE. There again, the Senator from Tennessee will permit me to say, he is dealing with questions of fact not before the Senate.

Mr. COOPER. The Senator from Maine will not contend that he was not before the committee?

Mr. BLAINE. It is a question on which it is not proper for the Senate to hear testimony even.

Mr. COOPER. That is the fact.

Mr. BLAINE. The Senator is speaking of what took place in the committee-room. The fact for us to deal with is that the committee, acting with proper authority, have brought this witness before the bar of the Senate.

Mr. COOPER. He is not here by the action of the committee; he is here by an order of the Senate, and he has been before the committee since that order was made.

Mr. MITCHELL. He never has been discharged from the original order.

Mr. BLAINE. I have simply to repeat that he is then here by a higher authority than I supposed, and he can discharge himself from contempt of the Senate by a simple answer, yes.

Mr. COOPER. Yet he has answered in writing, and why do you require any further answer?

Mr. BLAINE. I have not heard the answer.

Mr. COOPER. He has answered in writing.

Mr. BLAINE. I have not heard an answer to that question.

Mr. COOPER. It was read, for he answered in writing. That is the reason why I insist you cannot address to him any further question; he has answered.

Mr. MITCHELL. I propose to modify my original resolution; and if that modification should be adopted and the question answered in the affirmative, then I hold in my hand another resolution which I shall offer. The first resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the Senate propound the following question to the witness: Are you now willing to appear before the Committee on Privileges and Elections and submit to examination?

I wish to state as part of my argument that if this resolution should be adopted and the witness should answer in the affirmative, I shall then offer this resolution:

Resolved, That the witness, Conrad N. Jordan, upon his appearance before the Committee on Privileges and Elections for examination, be discharged from contempt in refusing to respond to the subpœna.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon in lieu of the original resolution; which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment of Mr. MITCHELL.

Mr. BLAINE. That is proper.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. It seems to me we are losing sight of the whole point in the controversy. This gentleman has come in here to purge himself of contempt. He has filed his answer. The record shows the ground upon which he was arrested:

Whereas Conrad N. Jordan, cashier of the Third National Bank, New York, was, on the 7th day of February, 1877, at ten o'clock a. m., duly served with a subpœna duces tecum issued by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, commanding him to appear before such committee on the 8th day of the present month, to then and there testify in reference to subject-matters under consideration by said committee, being matters relating to the controversy concerning the electoral votes for President and Vice-President, and to bring with him a full and exact statement of the accounts, as shown by the books of said Third National Bank, of Samuel J. Tilden, William T. Pelton, and ABRAM S. HEWITT, from the 1st day of June, 1876, to the 6th day of February, 1877;

And whereas said Conrad N. Jordan has refused to respond to such subpœna, has failed to appear before said committee as required by said subpœna, or to produce such statement of accounts as required: Therefore,

Resolved, That an attachment issue forthwith, directed to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, commanding him to bring said Conrad N. Jordan forthwith to the bar of the Senate to answer for contempt of a process of this body.

Under that attachment this witness is now here and he has brought in his answer. The sufficiency of that answer is the only question now before the Senate, and unless it is proposed to furnish him counsel to frame a new answer or to get a committee of the Senate to prepare one for him, I take it this case must stand upon the answer now before the Senate. The witness had a right to present his own defense, and what is it? It is that the books, the possession of which the committee desired, are not under his control, and that has been made to appear to the satisfaction of the Senate. Then there is no other question before the body, because it would be folly to insist, as is proposed by the substitute of the Senator from Oregon, that he shall testify without these books. What is a subpœna duces tecum? It is not a process to require the presence of a witness to speak from matters within his own knowledge.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the Senator will allow me I will state that this witness is desired for various reasons.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I am going by the record. I am following the record as I find it here and I do not think it is legitimate now to go beyond it.

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly not.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. The witness says in his answer that it is not in his power to produce these books. You propose now to question him without the books, when the whole object of the subpœna was to obtain the possession of the books and papers in order that he might go before the committee and explain them. How is he going to give the information the committee desires when he has not the books, when, as he shows, those books and papers are beyond his control, being within the custody and jurisdiction of the corporate authorities, whose action he is powerless to control? Therefore, when he says to the Senate that he cannot produce those books and papers, it is an end of the whole case. If his explanation on that point is satisfactory, he ought to be discharged, and discharged at once, because it would be folly to retain him.

Mr. MERRIMON. Mr. President, I am not exactly satisfied with the resolution which the Senator from Oregon offers as a substitute for his original proposition. I wish this recusant witness simply to say that he is willing to go before the committee and to make such answer as he may be lawfully required to make, and he ought not to be required to do anything further.

I wish to say another word. Something has been said about a compromise whereby certain examinations were not to be gone into on the part of the Committee on Privileges and Elections. I wish to say to the Senate and to the country, as a member of that committee, that I know nothing about any such compromise; and if any such compromise has been made I protest against it. I am willing that the examination shall be made as fully as possible on either side. I am only anxious here now to protect the right of this witness, as I would desire to be protected myself under like circumstances.

Mr. SARGENT. Unless we can have a vote on this question I shall move to lay it aside in order to proceed with the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. MERRIMON. I trust the Chair will propound to this witness the question whether he will answer all lawful questions propounded to him by the committee.

Mr. MITCHELL. There is no objection to that.

Mr. KERNAN. I wish to make a personal explanation. I heard what was said by the Senator from Rhode Island, and as a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, I wish to say that as to any compromise or arrangement I have no knowledge of it; I was no party to it. I wish to say that throughout the investigations by that committee, as my course is shown by the record, wherever there was an allegation that there was anything fraudulent or corrupt anywhere, I have uniformly acted with the committee and endeavored to have witnesses answer all proper questions and give us the truth.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I did not mean to say that I understood there had been a compromise between the two committees. I think I did use the word "compromise," but I meant to say that the two committees came to an understanding that it was not worth while to push this investigation any further, because it was of no importance whatever. The accounts of Mr. Chandler, I believe, had been presented and were absolutely in the hands of the House committee, but it was my understanding from good authority that those accounts were given up, and that the Senate committee agreed not to insist upon the delivery of the accounts of Mr. Tilden from Mr. Ellis. If I have been misinformed, I should be happy to be corrected.

Mr. MITCHELL. In view of what has been said by the Senator from Rhode Island and the Senator from New York, it is but justice to the committee, of which I have been the acting chairman for the last two or three weeks, to say that if there was any such arrangement between the two committees I know nothing about it. I never have spoken to any member of the House committee, I believe; in fact, I do not know who the members of the investigating committee in the House are. That is all that I desire to say in regard to that matter. I hope we may have a vote on the resolution.

Mr. COOPER. As one of the members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, I wish to state that I have not been at a meeting of that committee since the resolution was offered and carried to present this witness to the Senate, and I have no knowledge of any proceeding since that time in any way. The last time I was there as a member of the committee was when the order was made to bring this witness before the Senate.

Mr. SAULSBURY. As disclaimers on the part of the members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections are in order, I will take occasion to say as a member of that committee that I have not attended any meeting of the committee since the subpœna in this case was issued, and I have no knowledge whatever of any arrangement which may have been made; and I do not know anything about it.

Mr. MAXEY. The witness was required by subpœna to appear before the Committee on Privileges and Elections as bailee of the bank's books. That order was issued by the Senate. He appears here and in a written answer, which he has the right by law to make in this body, says, "I am not the bailee." Now, that is a complete answer and discharges the witness.

Mr. MERRIMON. The committee want him for another purpose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the resolution last submitted by the Senator from Oregon, which will be reported as modified.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the Senate propound the following question to the witness: "Are you now willing to appear before the Committee on Privileges and Elections and answer all proper questions?"

Mr. MERRIMON. I suggest "all lawful questions."

Mr. SARGENT. "All proper questions."

Mr. BLAINE. That is right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is due the witness to state that before a vote was taken upon any proposition he desired to make a statement to the Senate. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none. Mr. Jordan, you can make the explanation you desire.

The WITNESS. In the first place I will say that I am prepared to answer any proper question that may be put to me by the committee. Next, as some statements have been made by the Senator from Oregon which seemed to reflect upon me, I should like to make some little explanation in regard to them. I went to the room of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms. I reported on that morning at his rooms two hours before any one was there. I went with him to the room of the committee and there I was summoned as a witness. I did not go of my own volition into the witness's chair; I was put there. I answered such questions as I did answer under protest, as I should do again under similar circumstances, but under the circumstances, being brought as I was, I believed I was arrested needlessly. The telegram to the chairman of the committee, Mr. O. P. MORTON, was in his hands. He transferred it to Mr. MITCHELL, and in spite of that I was arrested. Now, this is the offense to me, and it is the offense by reason of which I declined to answer any question while in the committee-room. I declined on the ground that I was then under arrest. I am now prepared to say to the President of the Senate that I am ready to answer any proper questions propounded to me by that committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the resolution submitted by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. CONKLING and others. It is not necessary now.

Mr. MITCHELL. I withdraw the resolution on the statement made by the witness, and offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the witness, Conrad N. Jordan, upon his appearance before the Committee on Privileges and Elections for examination, be discharged from contempt in refusing to respond to the subpœna.

Mr. WHYTE. I shall not vote for that resolution. The witness states that he was subpœnaed after he got into the committee-room.

Mr. MITCHELL. No, he does not state anything of the kind.

Mr. WHYTE. He states that he was arrested, and after he got into the committee-room he was there committed for contempt.

The WITNESS. I was there put in the chair. I did not go there to testify of my own volition.

Mr. WHYTE. Was he ever subpœnaed, and by whom?

The WITNESS. I was subpœnaed.

Mr. WHYTE. Let us understand by whom. I want to know whether the Sergeant-at-Arms ever subpœnaed the witness at all.

Mr. MITCHELL. When?

Mr. WHYTE. Before he was arrested.

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly the witness was subpœnaed.

Mr. WHYTE. Let us get at the facts.

Mr. SARGENT. I understand the witness to say, sotto voce, that he was subpœnaed, in reply to the question of the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. WHYTE. By whom?

Mr. MITCHELL. By the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. WHYTE. I should like to hear the Sergeant-at-Arms say that he subpœnaed him.

Mr. MITCHELL. The record is better evidence of the fact.

Mr. WHYTE. Where is the record? Is the record here?

Mr. MITCHELL. I am not the custodian of the records of the Senate. The Senator has access to the records of the Senate.

Mr. MERRIMON. It has been read.

Mr. WHYTE. The original subpœna upon which the resolution was based?

Mr. MERRIMON. The witness was summoned by the Sergeant-at-Arms through his deputy, who made affidavit that he had served the subpœna.

Mr. WHYTE. I venture to affirm that that man was not deputized when he served this subpœna.

Mr. MERRIMON. The record shows that he was.

Mr. INGALLS. Is the resolution offered by the Senator from Oregon subject to amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to strike out all after the word "resolved," and insert:

That the witness, Conrad N. Jordan, be now discharged.

Mr. BLAINE and others. That is right.

Mr. MITCHELL. I accept the amendment.

Mr. KERNAN. Let the amendment be read.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. MITCHELL. He is to be discharged from contempt simply.

Mr. SARGENT. Of course from contempt simply.

Mr. MITCHELL. I do not desire to have him discharged as a witness, because we propose to examine him on other matters.

Mr. INGALLS. I will add the words "from contempt."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the resolution as modified.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the witness, Conrad N. Jordan, be now discharged as from contempt.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Mr. Jordan is discharged from contempt.

The witness thereupon withdrew.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills:

A bill (S. No. 286) for the relief of W. S. McComb, of the State of Georgia; and

A bill (H. R. No. 1271) to authorize the printing and distribution of the eulogies delivered in Congress on announcement of the death of the late Allen T. Caperton, a Senator from the State of West Virginia.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. No. 1270) to authorize the printing and distribution of the memorial addresses on the life and character of the late Michael C. Kerr, Speaker of the House of Representatives, with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

A bill (S. No. 691) for the relief of Edward A. Leland;

A bill (S. No. 1185) to ratify an agreement with certain bands of the Sioux Nation of Indians and also with the northern Arapaho and Cheyenne Indians;

A bill (H. R. No. 901) for the relief of J. E. Robertson & Co., of Indianapolis, Indiana;

A bill (H. R. No. 2690) to refund to the mayor and city council of Baltimore certain moneys illegally assessed and collected for internal-revenue tax;

A bill (H. R. No. 3163) to authorize the Ocean City Bridge Company to maintain and operate a bridge heretofore erected over and across Synepuxent Bay, in Worcester County, Maryland; and

A bill (H. R. No. 4668) to perfect the revision of the statutes of the United States and of the statutes relating to the District of Columbia.

EULOGIES ON THE LATE SPEAKER KERR.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. No. 1270) to authorize the printing and distribution of the memorial addresses on the life and character of the late Michael C. Kerr, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The amendments of the House of Representatives were in line 1 to strike out the word "nine" and insert "twelve;" in line 4, to strike out the word "six" and insert "nine."

The amendments were concurred in.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

Mr. WEST. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana calls for the regular order, which is Senate bill No. 984.

Mr. SARGENT. That is not the regular order; I beg pardon. We were proceeding with the naval appropriation bill when interrupted by the morning hour.

Mr. WEST. I shall not interfere with the Senator from California in the appropriation bill with which he is charged, but I object to having a bill which is the regular order of the Senate set aside without a formal understanding. That is all I desire, and the Senator understands it well enough.

Mr. SARGENT. Let the railroad bill be passed over with the same understanding as before.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood the Senator from Louisiana to call up the bill, he having the right to call for the regular order at any time.

Mr. SARGENT. I suggest that it be laid aside temporarily, that the naval appropriation bill may be considered.

Mr. WEST. Without prejudice to its order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without prejudice to its order. Subject to the call of the Senator from Louisiana it will be laid aside temporarily for the purpose of considering the bill that has been pending.

Mr. KERNAN. I ask the Senator from California to yield to me for a statement which I wish to make now.

Mr. SARGENT. Very well.

ELECTORAL VOTE OF OREGON.

Mr. KERNAN. When the acting chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections and the chairman of the subcommittee on the electoral vote of Oregon made the report the other day of the majority I said to the Senate that I dissented from the report. I ought to have said then what I state now, that my colleagues of the minority of the committee unite with me in dissenting from that report.

I have only one other word to say. I desire to call the attention of the chairman of the committee and to have corrected one word which is very important in this evidence and which I see is erroneously printed. In the translation of the telegram on page 253 the telegram as printed begins with the word "know." This is not correct. It should be "no," and then there should be a period, and another sentence then begins. I appeal to the Senator from Oregon if that is not correct?

Mr. MITCHELL. That is a misprint; it should be "no."

Mr. KERNAN. It should be "no," because it is a telegram apparently in answer to one of the 28th. The first word of the telegram is "no," and not "know."

Mr. MITCHELL. That is correct.

Mr. SARGENT. Now let us proceed with the appropriation bill.

Mr. KERNAN. I thank the Senator from California.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4616) making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, the question being on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole which had been reserved for separate votes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first reserved amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senate, acting as in Committee of the Whole, in line 14, struck out after the word "men" the words "six million two hundred and fifty" and inserted the words "seven million two hundred and seventy;" so as to read:

For pay of commissioned and warrant officers at sea, on shore, on special service, and of those on the retired list and unemployed, and for the actual expenses of officers traveling under orders, and for pay of the petty officers, seamen, ordinary seamen, landsmen, and boys, including men of the engineers' force, and for the Coast Survey service, seven thousand five hundred men, $7,270,000.

Mr. SARGENT. That matter was very fully debated yesterday upon the deficiency bill. It is a simple matter of arithmetic which was fully explained then, and I do not see that there can be any objection.

The amendment was concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next reserved amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. The next reserved amendment is in line 159, after the word "navy-yards" to strike out the words "seven hundred" and insert "nine hundred and seventy;" so as to read:

For equipment of vessels: For coal for steamers' and ships' use, including expenses of transportation; storage, labor, hemp, wire, and other materials for the manufacture of rope; hides, cordage, canvass, leather; iron for manufacture of cables, anchors, and galleys; condensing and boat-detaching apparatus; cables, anchors, furniture, hose, bake-ovens, and cooking-stoves; life-rafts for monitors; heating-appartus for receiving-ships; and for the payment of labor in equipping vessels, and manufacture of articles in the several navy-yards, $970,000.

Mr. SARGENT. That makes the same amount that is allowed for the current fiscal year. We have not increased it at all. I do not think there will be any criticism on that amendment. There are only two cases where we have made a variation from the amount allowed for this year.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the amount allowed for the present year?

Mr. SARGENT. The amount allowed for the current fiscal year is $970,000.

The amendment was concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next reserved amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 11, line 254, the Senate as in Committee of the Whole struck out after the word "postages" the words "one million five" and inserted "three million three," and after the word "dollars" in line 255 struck out the following proviso:

Provided, That no proposal for materials to be furnished under this or any other section of this act shall discriminate against or in favor of the production of any State or section of the Union.

So as to read:

For preservation of vessels on the stocks and in ordinary; purchase of materials and stores of all kinds; labor in navy-yards and on foreign stations; preservation of materials; purchase of tools; wear, tear, and repair of vessels afloat, and for general care and protection of the Navy in the line of construction and repair; incidental expenses, namely, advertising and foreign postages, $3,300,000.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the amendment will not be concurred in without the yeas and nays. Let us have the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. SARGENT. Very well.

Mr. WHYTE. This is more than a double appropriation; it is an increase from $1,500,000 to $3,300,000. I hope the Senate is not going into that sort of extravagance.

Mr. SARGENT. It is not an extravagance. It is the amount which has been appropriated from year to year down to the amount provided for this fiscal year, when, under influences which the Senator knows very well, a spirit of rivalry between both parties to see how far the service could be cut down, the amount was reduced $1,800,000 from the ordinary appropriations. The Secretary of the Navy for a number of years past has been using the ordinary appropriations for the Bureau of Steam-Engineering and the Bureau of Construction for the purpose of putting in efficient order the iron-clads. The work upon all the single-turreted monitors has been completed and they have been made valuable and effective for means of defense. A year and a half ago this work was extended to the five double-turreted monitors, and out of the ordinary appropriations they were proceeding to make repairs upon them to put them in thorough order. In place of white oak, for instance, iron was substituted. If this work could be completed, we should have the five most powerful monitors in the world, and the proportion of the amount appropriated which would be available for this purpose, I understand, would complete them. There are five of these in the ship-yards. They are under contract to be completed. There is one in New York, two in the State of Pennsylvania, one in Delaware, and one at Mare Island. The work certainly ought to be done. It can be done better if it is done continuously than by interruption. The Secretary of the Navy made some remarks upon this matter in his annual report which are well considered, and I ask the attention of the Senate to them:

Of the amount of appropriations asked for the next year—

He says—

as hereinafter stated, I beg to suggest that the sum of $1,550,000 of the amount estimated for the Bureau of Construction and Repair and $750,000 of that estimated for the Bureau of Steam-Engineering be made available at once, in order that the repairs of our five double-turreted iron-clads, which have been for some time regularly progressing out of the current annual appropriations, may be completed. These have been delayed in the hands of the contractors during the current year by the fact that the appropriations made for these bureaus were not sufficient for their continuance. The reasons why this should be done at once are many, and will be readily understood. The vessels are, as I have said, in the hands of the contractors, actually in a state of partial repair. These repairs, to be economically and properly done, should progress regularly as a continuous work, with the different parts advancing simultaneously, of homogeneous material, on a concurrent plan, under the same general direction, and, as far as possible, with the same workmen. To stop it from time to time must involve more or less of change in all these conditions, to the manifest increase of the cost and injury to the quality of the work. Delay involves also increased cost of superintendence, care-taking, and preservation, and risk of injury or loss to the public property. The work can be done now cheaper than at any other time, and if done now it will give employment at a season of great distress for establishments and workmen to whom it is not only kindness but practical wisdom on the part of the Government to afford all proper encouragement and assistance. Besides, the ships are useless to the Government while in progress of repair, but when concluded they will constitute a large element of the strength of our Navy, and, adding immensely to its fighting power, will raise it to a position more in harmony with our national responsibility and requirements.

The secretary states carefully the reasons why this should be done. It will be observed that by making a portion of this appropriation available immediately, the amount for the next fiscal year is not so great, and it is the most favorable season of the year, between now and next September or October, when a portion of these moneys may be applied. The amount of $1,800,000 less than was appropriated for this fiscal year, it is not proposed to appropriate at all. That remains in the Treasury. It is simply a return to the scale of appropriations which existed before this curtailment for the current year was made.

The Senator should understand that the cost of the Navy is not in construction and repair and steam engineering; it is in housekeeping. For instance, more than one-half of the whole amount appropriated by this bill goes for pay of officers and pay of men, a large portion of it goes for provisions and clothing and items of that kind; but when you cipher it down to the portion which is available to keep our Navy afloat, to make these repairs either temporary or permanent, you will find it to be a small portion of the whole. Furthermore, to show that the amount asked to be appropriated is not extreme, I should like to call attention to one passage in the Secretary's report, where there are some reflections worthy of attention. He says on page 24:

How small these appropriations of less than $13,000,000 really are for the carrying on of our naval service at this time will be seen by comparing them with the naval appropriations made in 1856, $15,701,968.49; in 1857, $14,125,434.55; in 1858, $13,109,359.36, and in 1859, $15,987,079.49, a period when the Navy consisted of only about fifty sailing-vessels, with a dozen side-wheel steamers, and about the same number of screw-vessels, against the twenty-three sailing-ships and one hundred and twenty-three steamers now on the register; when our motive-power was the free wind of heaven, and our ships were not supplied with expensive steam machinery of great weight, occupying great space on shipboard, and required neither the large supply of fuel, appliances, and material necessary to the use of this machinery, nor the numerous body of officers and men employed to prepare, operate, and preserve it; when armored ships were unknown, and the armaments of our most powerful cruisers consisted principally of 32 and 64-pounders, against 200-pound rifles and 15-inch guns of these times; when the materials and supplies for naval use were comparatively cheap; when skilled labor was not half its present price, and its working-hours had not been reduced by one-fifth; and when the pay-roll of the Navy had not assumed half its present proportions, and contained but few invalids and no reserve-list.

I think that these considerations ought to be borne in mind when we speak of the amount of appropriations made at the present time. We propose by this bill to exceed but little the amount of appropriations made in the days to which the Secretary refers, when the steam-machinery and other appliances had not been introduced.

Mr. KERNAN. Will the Senator in charge of the bill state the entire amount appropriated by the bill as it came from the House?

Mr. SARGENT. The whole amount appropriated by the bill, as it came from the House, was $12,492,524.40, less by $300,000, or thereabouts, than the appropriation last year.

Of course we can allow these iron-clads to remain in a state of incompletion. They are cumbering the yards. Private parties have taken contracts to put them in order. There is one at Chester, one at Philadelphia, one in Delaware. We can allow them to stay there and deteriorate, if we see fit, but it would seem the part of wisdom to finish them up; and as the amount asked for is only the ordinary amount usually appropriated for the Bureau of Construction and Repair, with the exception of this present fiscal year, it seems to me the request is reasonable, especially as it is proposed to be distributed between the time of the passage of the bill, the 4th of March, and a year from next July.

Mr. WHYTE. The usual appropriation is just what we do not want to have. The great trouble that we have had heretofore has been that the usual appropriations were entirely too large. What I want to get rid of is those large appropriations and get down to a condition that the financial affairs of the country justify. I am sure we should reflect upon the startling statement that from 1864 down to this time we have spent $125,000,000 in repairing old vessels in the Navy. People can hardly believe such a statement.

Mr. SARGENT. Has the Senator a document from which he reads or to which he refers?

Mr. WHYTE. Yes, I refer to the statement of the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SARGENT. I have not the statement here.

Mr. WHYTE. I take his statement. I go a step further, and say that the money has been so expended and so wasted upon these old vessels that the amount put in repairs has in many instances exceeded the original cost of the vessel itself. I call the attention of the Senator from California to that point. The original cost of the Pensacola was nearly $500,000, of the Kearsarge $292,948, and of the Lackawana $451,069, making the total cost of these three vessels $1,243,987. The repairing of these vessels was as follows: The Pensacola, $1,000,000; the Kearsarge, $612,122; and the Lackawana, $766,364. Here is the startling announcement that the repairs on these three vessels are nearly 100 per cent. advance on the original cost; and now we are told that we must go on with this extravagant expenditure of the public money. I hope that this amendment will not be concurred in.

Mr. SARGENT. My friend's argument would be excellent if it were based upon facts. If he is sure of his facts, he reasons well; but his premises are not always scund. In reference to the vessels which he mentions, the Kearsarge, the Lackawana, and the Pensacola, the original cost is estimated simply on the contract price for their hulls, and the cost of equipment, the sails, the armament, and displacing and replacing it, and everything of that kind, is not included. Furthermore, in regard to the repairs spoken of, all vessels were built of white oak during the war, and they were so rotten that it was difficult to find a sound place in the keel big enough to fasten the vessel. Necessarily great cost was incurred in repairing them; but to take a single element of the original cost and to say that the repairs have exceeded the original cost is not a fair argument. My friend will find, if he will investigate the matter as I have done in reference to all such criticisms, that they simply refer to the original making of the vessel before the vessel was launched, and all that was put upon the foundation thus created, the superstructure is not in the computation at all, while all these items are in the computation for repairs.

When these vessels are repaired and good live-oak or iron is put into them, to a certain extent they become imperishable or almost imperishable, like the ship called the Constitution, built nearly a century ago, the hull of which is still sound. These vessels need repair from the condition of the work which was put on them, and they should be put in a sound condition, although I do not believe generally that there is economy in expensive repairs upon old vessels. Few have been built in the Navy since 1864, and unless repairs were put upon them our Navy would not be in a condition to go to sea at all, or if it did, in the shape of wooden coffins, which would afford an opportunity for the loss of lives of our gallant sailors and officers and the Government property on board those vessels. Cases of such loss have occurred; many of these old vessels have been lost and never been heard of, I believe, because there was not money enough appropriated to put them in efficient repair.

Mr. WINDOM. Mr. President——

Several SENATORS. Let us vote.

Mr. WINDOM. I do not wish to say anything if we can vote.

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. COCKRELL. I asked for the yeas and nays on concurring in the amendment, but the gentleman seemed to be afraid of committing themselves to the record. I desire however to say that I was one of those who voted "no" on the amendment.

Mr. SARGENT. The Senator can have the credit of that statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next reserved amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, line 265, the Senate as in Committee of the Whole struck out after the word "stores" the words "eight hundred thousand" and inserted "two million," and after the word "dollars" in line 266 inserted the following proviso:

Provided, That of the sum hereby appropriated an amount not exceeding $1,500,000 in the Bureau of Construction and Repair and $750,000 in the Bureau of Steam Engineering shall be available at once to complete necessary work already on hand and under contract, and which cannot be longer delayed without injury to the work and loss to the Government.

So as to read:

For repairs and preservation of boilers and machinery on naval vessels: For fitting, repairs, and preservation of machinery and tools in the several navy-yards; for labor in navy-yards and stations not included above, and incidental expenses; and for purchase and preservation of oils, coals, metals, and all materials and stores, $2,000,000: Provided, That of the sum hereby appropriated an amount not exceeding $1,500,000 in the Bureau of Construction and Repair and $750,000 in the Bureau of Steam Engineering shall be available at once to complete necessary work already on hand and under contract, and which cannot be longer delayed without injury to the work and loss to the Government.

Mr. SARGENT. The considerations which I advanced in reference to the other item apply strictly to this. They must go together or else the increase in one case is useless.

The amendment was concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next reserved amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. On pages 18, 19, and 20 the Senate as in Committee of the Whole struck out the following provision:

That a commission of nine members be created, in the manner hereinafter provided, whose duty it shall be to examine and inquire into the present condition of the Navy of the United States, as to its personnel and material, and into the laws and usages now governing the naval service; to consider the relation of the commercial to the national marine; what active floating naval force, including the type and class of vessels, their armament and equipment, should be maintained in time of peace, and what should be kept in readiness for actual service in event of sudden war; what number and kind of vessels should be constructed annually to make up for decay, destruction, and casualty; what changes are required in naval architecture, in ordnance, in armor, and in the instruments of defensive warfare by the advance of naval science; how the Government can obtain the best designs and models of the same; and especially to consider what measures are necessary to protect and extend our rapidly growing commerce on the Pacific Ocean and in Asiatic waters; and to report to Congress, through the President, during the months of December, 1877, or January, 1878, the results of their investigation, recommending such legislation as they may deem requisite to bring the Navy up to the highest standard of effectiveness consistent with wise economy.

That the said commission shall consist of the Admiral, the General of the Army, two Senators, to be designated by the President of the Senate, and three members of the House of Representatives, to be designated by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, said Senators and Representatives being such as will be also members of the Forty-fifth Congress; and two officers of the Navy, to be designated by the President, one of whom shall also act as the secretary of the commission.

That said commission shall have power to send for records, books, and papers, and to summon and examine witnesses. And the Secretary of the Navy is hereby directed and empowered to furnish the commission with all facilities within his control for the convenient prosecution of their labors. But no expense shall be incurred by the United States on account of said commission except the regular and current salaries of the persons employed on the commission; but that all expenses incurred shall be borne by said commission.

Mr. WHYTE. This seems to me a very inexpensive inquiry. It is the appointment of a commission to make inquiry, to report to Congress, without any expense to the country, as to some policy that ought to be adopted for the future of the United States Navy, and I can hardly see what good can come from striking out of existence such a commission as has been proposed by the House. It is not to cost anything. It is only diverting a certain amount of naval talent to give us the benefit of their service between now and the next session of Congress. If it were an expensive service, I should oppose it, but only the salary is to be paid out to those parties which they already receive. If they were to have a junketing expedition around the country in Government vessels, I should be opposed to it; but it is proposed that the expense shall be paid out of the pockets of the commission. If we can get distinguished gentlemen like admirals and others, without any expense to Government, to give us a treatise upon a future policy in regard to the Navy, I do not think we ought to refuse it. I should like to hear some good reason for rejecting this proposition of the House.

Mr. SARGENT. Junketing expeditions are so popular that I do not know that it is gracious to object to them. Now it is proposed here that the Admiral, the General of the Army, two Senators, and three Members of the House, and two naval officers shall be a commission. By the way, the naval officers are very much in the minority on the board, and the Secretary of the Navy, who is not to be placed upon the board, is to "furnish the commission with all facilities within his control for the convenient prosecution of their labors." They would be required in "the convenient prosecution of their labors" to visit all the navy-yards. It may be, as I see they are to watch the "commerce on the Pacific Ocean and in Asiatic waters," that they will make a visit there and go to China, for aught I know. If this commission is raised, we certainly ought to raise the contingent fund of the Navy by fifty or a hundred thousand dollars, and I give notice that I shall feel compelled to move an amendment to increase the contingent fund of the Navy for this purpose. I know just what it means. The Senate passed a resolution some two or three years ago instructing the Committee on Naval Affairs to visit the different navy-yards and report upon certain matters. I think a very useful report was made in that case, but it cost the Government considerable money. The Secretary of the Navy, under exactly this kind of a provision, did put a vessel at the command of the committee and they went upon their expedition. It was a very pleasant one, I have no doubt. They visited the navy-yards and they reported their opinions as to what ought to be done with reference to the various yards, the naval hospitals, &c. They were very pleasantly entertained.

I do not want Senators to vote under the idea that this would not cost the Government anything. There is the idea carried into the provision that it will not cost the Government anything, but I think that is deceptive. For instance, it is said that the commission "shall have power to send for records, books, and papers," which is all right, and they are to have the power "to summon and examine witnesses;" and yet the provision is made "that all expenses incurred shall be borne by said commission." I should like to know where you are going to summon witnesses from and who is to pay their mileage. If you suppose that the members of the House and the Senate, the Admiral of the Navy and two other naval officers, and the General of the Army are going to pay out of their pockets for witnesses and their attendance, I think you would be mistaken in that belief. If the opinions of the Admiral of the Navy are wanted upon these different matters, let us require those opinions to be laid before Congress. If we want him to send for witnesses who are to appear and testify before him, we ought to furnish the money to pay for those witnesses who appear before him. There is not a single person here who may not be laid under contribution by Congress, for anything he knows.

I am aware that we have a very few moments, and I do not wish to prolong the debate; but it seems to me that the proposition as it appears in the bill is not such as will operate. We require duties of these persons which we ought not to enjoin upon them at their expense. We ought not to require the Admiral of the Navy and two naval officers, whatever we may provide in regard to ourselves, to send for and examine witnesses and pay the witnesses out of their own pockets. I do not think that we ought to send them all over the country upon this special duty and require them to pay their traveling expenses. It is said that all this can be done without the examination of witnesses. Then why insert the clause in regard to witnesses? If the information can be obtained without traveling and is in the possession of these officers now, why not call for a report upon these different matters from either of the officers mentioned? Why not require a naval board, if you want simply their experience, to sit in Washington and consider these various matters and lay the information before Congress; but to make a roving commission and put in it a suspicious provision that would make it a junketing excursion, I think is of exceedingly doubtful propriety.

Mr. WHYTE. It is extraordinary that the Senator from California did not discover this fact last year and make objection to precisely a similar commission in regard to the Army. We passed the appropriation bill last year for the pay of the Army with just such a provision in it.

Mr. SARGENT. I had not charge of the Army bill, but I will introduce the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] who had it in charge, and he will reply to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. ALLISON. We introduced that provision in the Army bill last year as the only means of solving a difficult question with reference to the pay, rank, and numbers of the Army. I will say for the benefit of my friend from Maryland that, although that commission was requ red to report on the first day of the present session, we have not heard one single word from them yet with reference to this great subject. Of that commission my honorable friend from Louisiana [Mr. WEST] is a member. They have not had time to give that thorough examination to the re-organization of the Army which it should have, so that this time we have not an intelligent opinion upon the question of the numbers of the Army or the pay and rank of the Army.

These mixed commissions are not generally very effective. We have had several recent examples of this character of commissions. I do not think, with all due respect to my friend from Maryland, that this proposed commission will be of any service whatever with reference to the Navy. If we are to re-organize the Navy let it be done by the leading officers of the Navy, and let them make their recommendations to Congress. It cannot be expected that two Senators and three members of the House of Representatives can intelligently re-organize the Navy of the United States between now and the beginning of the next session.

Mr. WHYTE. I would not object to any change in the personnel of the commission, but as to the act of the last session of Congress appointing a commission in relation to the Army I expect beneficial results to come from it. Although they have not yet reported, I have no doubt that by the meeting of Congress next winter we shall have an able and intelligent report from that commission. I think the condition of the Navy is such that there ought to be a commission to inquire whether there should not be some change in the management of that Department of the Government. We have had complaints all over this land about extravagance in the Navy. All over the country the cry has come up that money has been most lavishly expended and there are no results to show for it. It is due to the people that some commission, some intelligent body of men, made up entirely of naval officers if you please, should take charge of the whole subject and report to Congress some definite policy by which the money of the people, wrung from them by taxation, shall procure for them some beneficial fruits for its expenditure.

Mr. SARGENT and Mr. BOUTWELL addressed the Chair.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. SARGENT. I shall not detain the Senate long. I do not care to go into a discussion of the assertions that have been made at the expense of the Secretary of the Navy or the entire Department as to the economical management of his Department. I insist, however, as a fact that the Secretary of the Navy has been careful and economical; that he has produced the best possible results from the money placed in his hands. I fairly believe this to be true from an examination of the testimony. If a man is to be judged simply by the floating rumors of charges made here and there, God knows that many who stand fair and who are deserving to stand fair, would have very hard usage.

I shall not detain the Senator from Massachusetts except to say that the commission appointed last year was not such a mixed-up commission as this is proposed to be. There was as much reason that the Admiral of the Navy should be put on the board last year in order to re-organize the Army as that the General of the Army should be put on the board now proposed to re-organize the Navy; but I do find an appropriation made for the expense of the Army commission, and the Secretary of War was not required to furnish facilities for taking the commission around the country either.

Mr. WEST. Let me call the attention of the Senator from California to another fact. In this case the Secretary of the Navy, the head of the Department, is left off the board, and in the other case the Secretary of War was put on.

Mr. SARGENT. Certainly; the Secretary of War was put on the board re-organizing the Army, while the Secretary of the Navy is ignored in this case. Of course before this bill can become a law and go into effect the present Secretary of the Navy will cease to exist, if gentlemen have any prejudice against the present Secretary of the Navy. If that would influence their leaving him off, why not take the next one, who in the range of possibility, until the question is finally decided—and it is only within the range of possibility—may be of different politics from the present Secretary.

Mr. HEREFORD. O, no!

Mr. SARGENT. My friend from West Virginia says "O, no." I hope he is correct. But there seems to be something extraordinary, there seems to be something sinister about the endeavor to raise a commission to re-organize the Navy which, while it includes the General of the Army, leaves off the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. BOUTWELL. Mr. President, I expect to follow the committee in this amendment, and I do so because I think the question of the character of the Navy is entirely a political question. I mean by that that it is not a question as to how ships shall be built. Therefore we find such a commission provided for as is contemplated by this bill. I have for many years given some thought to the question of the expenditures in the Navy Department, and while we still adhere, with variations of opinion from time to time arising, to the idea of former times, I imagine that we are discontented with that former idea. We are expending large sums of money and securing small practical results; yet in the expenditure of these sums I have no doubt there has been as much economy as is usually attained in the administration of public affairs. Now then, if the time has not come when we can abandon the idea of fighting battles upon the open sea, we should not only not abolish the policy which we have heretofore pursued, but we should extend that policy by increasing the naval armament for such purposes. But I am of the opinion that the time passed several years ago when it was for the interest of this country to make the least preparation for an open-sea fight. Anybody who looks at the character and extent of this country, the number of its people, and the magnitude of our influence as a nation, must see that an open-sea fight would settle nothing in any controversy that we might have with any power upon the face of the globe, and to be expending money year after year, whether one million a year or ten millions a year or twenty millions a year, with the idea that something is to be gained in a naval contest, has no foundation in any generous conception of public policy.

Therefore, for one, although I stand alone, I am prepared to say that it is not the interest of this country to expend a dollar for naval appropriations directly except such as are necessary for coast defenses. To such perfection has the construction of torpedoes and steam-rams been carried that there is not a navy on the face of the earth which could enter a harbor that is protected by these modern inventions. Therefore, wherever these inventions are known and applied for the purposes of defense they are more complete than any means of defense that ever before were known. When we have provided for the defense of our coast and when we have taken means of policing the seas, which should be simply such an armament as is necessary for the protection of commerce in time of peace, we have done all that is required of us as a nation. For one I think we ought to abandon the idea of maintaining a navy for the purpose of contesting for our rights on the open sea against any power on the face of the globe.

What would follow from such a policy? By that policy the construction of large vessels upon which enormous sums are expended would be dispensed with. We can construct war vessels of about a thousand tons each capable of carrying eight or ten guns, capable of sailing with greater rapidity than the large vessels which now exist, for half a million dollars apiece, and we can keep them afloat for $40,000 a year. We could construct two of these vessels each year for a million dollars, and we could keep forty of these vessels on the ocean for two million dollars more. I submit that such a system (perhaps not exactly that amount of expenditure, perhaps not exactly that number of vessels, but a naval system based upon the idea that we are to show the flag and protect the commerce of the country in time of peace) could be maintained for an expenditure not exceeding five or seven million dollars a year. Consider that in the recent great wars there have been no naval engagements. Nothing is settled by contests upon the open sea.

If we are prepared to enter upon this policy, and this is a simple question, we do not need a commission. If we are prepared to take a different course and enter upon another line of policy to declare what we ought to declare to this country, it needs no preparation for war in time of peace. The countries of Europe to-day are supporting 2,700,000 men in arms. They are paying $600,000,000 a year for the support of their armies. They are paying $200,000,000 a year for the support of navies. They are paying $600,000,000 a year for interest on debts created by war. Twelve or fourteen hundred million dollars a year are drawn from the people of Europe for the maintenance of armaments in time of peace and for the interest on a public debt contracted mostly in the prosecution of useless wars. For us I think our duty clear that we should set an example to the world that we pay not a dollar for the purpose of preparing for naval contests upon the sea. Such is the pre-eminence of this country to-day, so valuable is it as a market for the products of every nation on the globe, that we can command our rights by withdrawing our diplomatic representatives from any country on the face of the earth. We are independent of any danger of hostile attacks from any country on the face of the globe. If we demand nothing but what is our right, it will be conceded by every civilized nation of the world.

My suggestion is that whenever we take a departure it shall be upon the idea that we are not to maintain armaments for the prosecution of offensive wars. In connection with a change like this in the Navy I have to say that if we would appropriate so small a sum as $2,500,000 a year in bounties to those who would construct commercial vessels upon the models furnished by the Bureau of Construction and Repair in the Navy, we could put upon the sea two hundred steamships of twenty-five hundred tons each, capable of carrying naval armaments, if it were necessary, which would render us in time of war ready for any emergency. Consider that upon this continent south of us trade is substantially suspended with the United States merely because we are destitute of the means of communication with them. We have but a little of the trade of Mexico; we have not more than a tenth of the trade with the states of South America, merely because we have no lines of steamships by which we can communicate with the people of those countries. If we are to expend money in any direction, I submit that we should give the small sum of $8 a ton to merchants who should build iron steamships of not less than a thousand tons burden, to be employed exclusively in the foreign trade. For two million and a half dollars a year for ten years we could furnish the means of opening commercial intercourse with every considerable country on the face of the earth, and in time of war convert these vessels to the uses of the Government.

There, Mr. President, are the views that I entertain in regard to the Navy, hastily stated, but the result of considerable thought and examination of this subject; and I believe the time will come when the country will say that the expenditures for a Navy should be reduced to just such a sum as is necessary and no more than is necessary to police the seas in time of peace and furnish coast defense to protect the country as far as necessary in time of war.

Mr. WHYTE. Mr. President, I do not desire to be put in a false position, even if it be agreeable to the Senator from California to do so, by the statement that I have any feeling toward the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. SARGENT. Not at all.

Mr. WHYTE. I thought the Senator intimated I had some feeling toward the Secretary.

Mr. SARGENT. No, sir; not at all.

Mr. WHYTE. I was speaking of the general management in time past of the Navy Department, and have never spoken about the Secretary of the Navy personally.

Mr. SARGENT. My belief is that the Secretary and the Senator are friends.

Mr. WHYTE. The Senator also intimated that I had taken wild rumors flying around as the basis upon which I justified the remarks which I made awhile ago on this subject. I took no such rumors, if there be any, but I took the sworn testimony of one of the first admirals of the country, and I desire now to read it in the presence of the Senate, very briefly, to show that I was entirely justified in the remarks which I made. Admiral Porter, in his testimony on the 29th of May, 1876, before a committee of the House, said:

> The amount calculated for these gradual additions to the Navy may appear large in the aggregate, but it is in fact small when compared with the appropriations estimated for from 1866 to 1876, ($251,779,000,) which, after deducting pay of officers and men and expenses of the Marine Corps, amount, for navy-yards, repairs, equipment, and building a few small vessels, to an average of $18,200,000 annually. This, too, after an expenditure of $280,000,000 during the war, which ought to have left us a powerful Navy. With all this expenditure, we are not at present provided with a single first-class vessel, either for defense or for fast steaming, nor have we one powerful rifle-gun in the Navy.

Again, he said:

> Our Navy, taken as a whole, is worth nothing, and the sooner the country understands that fact the better. It would require a great stretch of credulity to make one believe that the Navy is in the flourishing condition represented by Chief Constructor Hanscom in his late report to the honorable Secretary of the Navy.

And again:

> Many officers of the Navy who now hold prominent positions were in the service in its palmy days, and can draw a just comparison between its condition now and then.
>
> They have seen it recede from the high position it once held, and realize its inefficiency to protect our interests at home or abroad; yet they have been obliged to stand quietly by and witness the Navy go from bad to worse without power to prevent it.

And again:

> I may, therefore, say that our Navy as compared with others is like a foot-soldier armed with a pistol encountering a mounted man clad in armor and carrying a breech-loading rifle. It would be easy to determine how little chance the man on foot would have should such a conflict occur.

Commander Meade, of the Navy, said in his examination on the 27th of May, 1876:

> Question. Since the publication of Mr. Hanscom's report have you made the comparison to which you allude?
>
> Answer. Yes, sir; I took the list as Hanscom gives it and compared it with the official returns of the English navy, and found that this comparison is not correct, and that it is calculated to deceive all but experts. I made the comparison correctly and carefully, and it is from that comparison that I speak now. This report is not correct; it is a false comparison and is calculated to deceive.

Therefore, Mr. President, I favor a commission of intelligent experts and I oppose the striking out of this whole section, but, if it is left in, I will gladly propose to put the Secretary of the Navy at the head of it and to confine it to naval officers and naval experts, that they may tell us what is the truth between these conflicting statements of naval constructors and intelligent and honorable officers of the Navy.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, Admiral Porter may be an authority upon questions of economy for some, but he is not at all with me. The whole gravamen of Admiral Porter's testimony is to inculcate the idea that we ought to have vessels like the Thunderer or those great iron-clads that cost somewhere from three millions to nine millions of dollars, with guns that cost from a hundred to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars apiece. That is the style of navy the Admiral wants. I do not know but that it might be well to have such things, but I know that in the present situation of our finances we cannot afford such expensive defenses, I was going to say such expensive luxuries.

I would further say that, in my judgment, knowing something of the facts, the most expensive time the Navy has ever seen was during the brief period that Admiral Porter was practically the Secretary of the Navy. There were at that time larger expenditures and with the least warrant of law that I have ever known in all the history of the Navy Department, from the foundation of the Government down to the present time. He certainly is not good authority to me.

I know, furthermore, that Admiral Porter is a man who expresses what views he has in the extremest possible language. If he takes an opinion upon a matter he is intolerant of any opposition, and the person who opposes his ideas is very apt to hear from him subsequently; and sometimes, perhaps, he does injustice to those with whom he differs.

I hope, however, that we may have a vote upon this bill and pass it, as it is the last of the appropriation bills before the Senate. I am perfectly willing, if Senators desire it, that we shall have the yeas and nays upon this question, it having been fully debated upon both sides. The bill ought to be passed and go to the House of Representatives. I have had before my mind the fear of an extra session. I have that still to some extent. We very soon shall be called into joint session again, probably to-morrow, if not to-night, and then we do not know how soon we may be able to resume the regular business.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, I only wish to occupy the time of the Senate for about two minutes to state my reasons for opposing this commission and favoring the proposition of the committee to strike it out.

I am for striking out this part of the bill because it provides a commission a majority of whom are members of Congress to investigate and decide upon certain questions almost every one of which necessitates the knowledge of an expert; and I think it is an utter absurdity to send out two members of the Senate and three of the House, with the General of the Army and only three naval officers, whose business would give them a knowledge the subject which they were to investigate, in order to give information upon these subjects which require the knowledge of an expert so that any opinion might be given which would be worth consideration.

Mr. NORWOOD. I would like to ask the Senator from Virginia why the committee did not reform the provision of the bill instead of striking it out altogether, and place this commission in the hands of experts?

Mr. WITHERS. The committee did not think that it was necessary or proper that they should undertake to remodel and entirely destroy, as it would have done in effect, the provision as embodied in the bill by the action of the House of Representatives. They contemplated a mixed commission.

In addition to that, another objection I have to it is that it provides legislation upon this appropriation bill in a new direction, creating a commission, involving an entire change possibly in the whole Naval Department, which I do not think ought to go upon an appropriation bill. A third reason is that it provides for a commission with authority to perform very many and very important duties without making provision to pay them one cent. Although it is possible, if it were carried into effect, that we might find other deficiency bills presented to us to provide for the payment of this commission, yet, as the bill itself made no provision for paying them anything, I thought it unjust to require members of this House and officers of the Navy and of the Army to spend as much time as would be absolutely required in order to make an intelligible report without paying anything for it. And as to this spontaneous service, as to this idea of securing service without adequate compensation, I do not believe in it at all. I believe that men who work for adequate compensation will much more effectually work than those who expect to do the work for nothing.

These are in brief the reasons why I vote to strike out this portion of the bill.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I believe that this provision is in the right direction. Some inquiry ought to be made. It may not be just what many of us would like or what it ought to be; but as the bill, necessarily almost, will go to a conference committee and the whole subject can there be opened upon, I have been disposed to favor the amendment of the committee, thinking that in conference probably something better than is now before us will be obtained.

The amendment was concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4554) for the support of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. LAWRENCE T. NEAL of Ohio, Mr. JULIAN HARTRIDGE of Georgia, and Mr. WILLIAM U. CRAPO of Massachusetts, managers at the conference on the part of the House.

HOT SPRINGS RESERVATION.

Mr. ALLISON. I am ready to submit the report of the conference committee on the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. DORSEY. I want the Senate to go on with the Hot Springs bill, which was laid aside to take up the bill which has just been disposed of.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; I will not antagonize the Senator's bill.

Mr. WEST. If I can get the consent of the Senator from Iowa who represents the Judiciary Committee in the pending measure relating to the Pacific Railroads, [Mr. WRIGHT,] I shall be willing to have the Senate bill No. 984 go over again informally to enable the Senate to act upon the bill which the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. DORSEY] now desires to call up, with the understanding that if it leads to any protracted debate I at least, and I believe the Senator from Iowa also, will be compelled to call for the regular order.

Mr. WRIGHT. I do not think there is any objection to that. I appreciate the very great importance of the bill, which the Senator from Arkansas has in charge, to the people to be affected by it; and I shall therefore not interpose any objection to its present condition, but with the understanding stated by the Senator from Louisiana, [Mr. WEST.]

Mr. DORSEY. I am much obliged to the Senators for their consideration.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 2382) granting the right of way to the Hot Springs Railroad Company over the Hot Springs reservation in the State of Arkansas.

Mr. DORSEY. When the bill went over for the morning hour, the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi, [Mr. ALCORN,] I believe, was pending.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the Committee on Public Lands, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. The amendment to the amendment is at the end of section 5 to insert:

Provided, That the word "claimant," used in this act, shall be construed to mean a party holding or occupying ground on such reservation under color of title against the United States previous to the decision of the Hot Springs case by the Supreme Court of the United States on the 24th day of April, A. D. 1876; and the word "occupant," used in this act, shall be construed to mean a party holding or occupying ground on such reservation without any color or title; and in case of any conflicting claims or rights growing out of them between claimants and occupants, they are remitted to the local courts having jurisdiction over the county in which such reservation is situate for settlement by and under such procedure as is known and recognized in such courts.

Mr. ALCORN. I have offered that amendment in order to simplify the bill and to save the unfortunate people of Hot Springs from litigation, from strife among themselves. I have offered it as an index-board to the commissioners who may be appointed and whose judgment may not be all that the appointing power may have hoped for. It will be observed that the commissioners appointed under this bill have plenary powers. There is no court that overlooks their decision. They go there to adjudicate the rights of those people. I would send them there without embarrassment upon them and I would not open the way for their being approached or charged with favoritism.

Any Senator who will read section 5 of this bill will find that the words "occupants" and "claimants" are mixed together conjointly in the same paragraph, sometimes with the conjunction "and" and in other instances, not however in that section, with the conjunction "or." Sometimes the phrase is "claimants and occupants," at other times it is "claimants or occupants." Now I can very well understand how claimants "and" occupants may hold title to the same property. A claimant and an occupant may feel that he is entitled under this bill to have his rights observed. The same property may be held by a claimant and may be tenanted by an occupant. The amendment severs them; the amendment states to the commission what they are and what they shall be, and says no more.

I have not offered it in any hostility to the bill; I have offered it in a spirit of friendliness to the bill. I have offered it because I feel that the people of Mississippi and of the whole country are just as much interested in this matter as are the people of Arkansas outside of Hot Springs. They are the people who are directly interested, and I have given them an appeal to the courts of their own county, where their rights may be adjudicated if it shall appear that they have not been dealt with properly by our agents.

Now, while I am up, I wish to reply to what my friend on my right, the Senator from Arkansas, [Mr. CLAYTON,] said this morning in relation to this receiver. I have made no charge upon the integrity of the receiver. I have not intimated that he had not gone there and executed the law of the case. I know nothing of him; the people of Arkansas know nothing of him. He was sent there from abroad, as are all the officials of the country who are sent to the South, to dispose of the rights of that people. He was sent perhaps for the reason that he had no sympathy with the people of Arkansas; that he had no sympathy with the people of Hot Springs. I know not how that is; I only know that he has not manifested, since he has been there, any sympathy for those people. He has pursued the law; he has claimed the last penny; he has demanded "the pound of flesh." It has been yielded to him by the poor afflicted mendicant for whose government and for whose control he has been put there.

I have stated the case briefly as it exists. These people were not squatters upon the public lands, nor can they be held to be squatters upon public lands. The Attorney-General, Mr. Wirt, gave it as his opinion, when he was filling that office, that the claimants were entitled to a patent for the land. Reverdy Johnson, when he was Attorney-General of the United States, gave a like opinion, and he died with a judgment of the law of the case different from that which has been proclaimed by the Supreme Court. Be that as it may, however, the court has decided otherwise, and all submit to the decision of the court. It is the law, whether it is justice to these people or not. More than that, the Commissioner of the General Land Office has given it as his opinion that this is an exceptional case; that thousands of patents have been issued to claimants where the objection rested as it was held to rest in this case, and which the court has decided to be fatal to the title of the claimants. The Commissioner holds that it has not been the rule to consider such failures upon the part of the surveyor-general as were relied on here to be fatal to the title of the claimants, but that in all cases that objection has been overruled and the patent has issued.

Here I have nothing to do with the claimants; I have nothing to do with the occupants; but I do know those people and I do know the hardship that has been imposed upon them. It was their misfortune. As a Senator here, while taking from them their property, while disregarding the intimation of the Supreme Court that they are entitled to the consideration of Congress—for the Supreme Court says so—I would not give them a lawsuit; I would not offer a temptation to the commissioners, but I would decide and define in the bill precisely what we were doing. I would state in plain, unmistakable terms what we mean by "claimant" and what we mean by "occupant." If we cannot agree upon that, how can you hope the commissioners will agree upon it? If it is not right, strike it out. If the occupant should have all, give it to him; if the claimant should have it, give it to him; but do not send them to this commission with the terms "occupant" and "claimant" jumbled up together in a form that will lead to dissatisfaction, that will lead to injustice, that will lead to the perpetration of wrong.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. President, this property has been in litigation for more than forty years. In that time the different persons claiming it have been in almost every court in this country, certainly through all the courts of the State of Arkansas; certainly through the Court of Claims, and finally to the Supreme Court of the United States. I think in almost every instance, in almost every court, the decision has been against these claimants. In the Court of Claims, and in the Supreme Court of the United States, the decision has been in favor of the Government of the United States.

These persons called "claimants" have no more right than any other settler or squatter on that reservation. The bill as it now stands, without the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi, simply provides and intends to provide for permitting every person owning improvements, owning buildings, owning stores, to buy the lands on which their improvements are located. If there is a lawsuit in that I should like to have it pointed out.

The old claimants, so called, the three persons who formerly held possession of this property, have got a very large number of buildings there, I do not know how many; and it is true that under this bill those persons will have a very large possession for which, of course, they will have to pay just the same as anybody else. But if the amendment of the Senator be put into the bill it will throw, I think, two-thirds of the occupants of the reservation into the courts of that State. Why? Because during the last ten years or fifteen years the old claimants holding possession of this property, as shown by the decision of the court, without a title, have made contracts by which lots are held. There are a great many contracts between the persons formerly having possession of the reservation and the occupants there. How many of them there are exactly I do not know; what the conditions of all of them are I cannot tell; but certainly they are conditions that would lead to litigation between the occupants and the old claimants. That litigation might go on for years, and in the mean time, the old claimants being wealthy, strong, prominent citizens, and many of the occupants very poor, and of course very weak, the latter would stand a very small show indeed in maintaining possession of their property as against the old claimants.

Mr. ALCORN. Will the honorable Senator answer me one question? I do not wish to interrupt him.

Mr. DORSEY. I will try to answer; I do not know whether I can or cannot.

Mr. ALCORN. I just wish to point the Senator to one difficulty in this bill, and it is the one that I seek to obviate. Here is a claimant. The claimant, as I understand the bill, is the party who heretofore held the land under color of title.

Mr. DORSEY. No, sir; the Senator is mistaken.

Mr. ALCORN. If he is not, then I want to know it. He built a house and he leased that house; none of them has any right to the land; it belongs to the Government, but he built a house ten years ago; he leased it to A, B, or C; now they are the occupants; he is the claimant, for the house was his; he built the house. Now, under your bill to whom are you going to give it?

Mr. DORSEY. To the man who owns the improvements.

Mr. ALCORN. Why not say so, then?

Mr. DORSEY. The bill does say so.

Mr. ALCORN. The bill does not say so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators will please address the Chair.

Mr. DORSEY. The bill says that the owner of the improvements shall have the sole right to buy.

Mr. ALCORN. But there is no owner.

Mr. DORSEY. There is an owner; or there is supposed to be an owner.

Mr. MERRIMON. But he has no right at all.

Mr. DORSEY. This commission is appointed for the purpose of settling that question, whether there is an owner or not. We assume that there are owners. That is the very purpose of passing this bill. There are four or five thousand people there, with a large number of houses, stores, and shops; and we assume that they do own them.

Mr. ALCORN. Now I will ask the Senator to have my amendment read, to see whether it conflicts with his idea.

Mr. DORSEY. If the Senator will allow me to conclude, I will accommodate him. What the bill means by the terms "occupant" and "claimant" is simply this, and I thought I had explained it this morning: There are many people down there who own as many as half a dozen buildings. They only occupy one. These old claimants own a very large number of buildings; they only occupy one themselves; they lease out the others. The word "claimant" is used, so that they can purchase the buildings they own, whether they occupy them or not. It covers buildings that they built and own, and therefore claim. That is the intention. I want to add that the citizens on that reservation, these old claimants, all three of them, together with the delegation in Congress who visited that place, every one of them, has agreed to this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. ALCORN] to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected; there being on a division—ayes 19, noes 22.

Mr. ALCORN. Now I move to strike out all after the word "that," the first word in the substitute, and insert:

> The order of the Court of Claims in the matter of appointing a receiver of the Hot Springs reservation in the State of Arkansas, under section 5 of the act of June 11, 1870, be, and the same is, so far modified as to suspend the collection of rents by said receiver until Congress shall direct by law what disposition shall be made of said reservation.

I merely desire to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that we are here legislating with regard to the habitations of 4,000 people in Arkansas, and that we have that legislation attached to an amendment to a railroad bill, hurriedly drawn up, confusedly stated, with incongruities existing in the body of the bill which will lead simply to litigation, to the disappointment and distress of that community. I simply propose in my amendment that the collection of rents shall be suspended; that the next Congress may hear this matter, that they may take it under advisement. I shall not be here, but let them take it under advisement, and prepare such a bill as will be just to the people and satisfactory to the Government, and that will lead to no litigation among them. I call for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

Mr. DORSEY. I do not know but that the Senator from Mississippi is correct in saying that this bill has been hastily drawn and is full of incongruities. I want to say, however, that the bill was drawn more than a year ago; that it has been reported from the Committee on Public Lands unanimously and from a committee in another place in the same way; that it meets the approval of the delegation in Congress from that State, without respect to party, and of the citizens on that reservation without a single exception. I speak for the people of that State and for the citizens on the reservation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment.

Mr. ALCORN. The Senator from Arkansas makes a very broad statement, and one which, if he were put to the proof, I judge he would not be able to establish. So far as this bill is concerned the committee will bear me out in the statement that the bill reported is different altogether from the one that was referred to them. They have cut the bill out from the beginning. It came to this body an attaché, the tail end of a railroad bill. The committee have at least reversed the order of things, for they have now the bill in front and the railroad in the rear. Perhaps that is as it should be; but I undertake to say that if any Senator who has it before him will look at the bill he will find that the committee have striken out all the provisions of the bill as it was presented here and have recommended another and a different bill altogether. I call upon the honorable chairman of the committee to state to the Senate whether it is not as I have stated. It now comes an amendment to a railroad bill. It is not the bill that was presented from the House of Representatives.

The bill is not satisfactory to the people of Arkansas in the aggregate. I will not undertake to say to whom it is satisfactory or who is opposed to it, for I have not heard from Arkansas on that point; but I hold that the Senate now has the disposition of this property, and that the people of the United States have the right to speak and that it is their duty to speak; or, if they propose to leave it to Arkansas, make a donation of the property to the State of Arkansas, and let the Legislature of the State dispose of it; and the people of that State will be satisfied with that disposition. If, however, you see proper to take it here for disposition and for legislation, if you refuse to give it to the people of Arkansas, that they may dispose of it, and you see proper to dispose of it here, then certainly we are not to be crowded down on the idea that, because this measure is satisfactory to the Senators from Arkansas and to the delegation from Arkansas, we are forestalled from expressing an opinion on this subject.

I hold that the position I take upon this subject is a good one, that you have mixed up here "occupants" and "claimants" so that there is not a lawyer on this floor who can undertake to define what they mean as the bill stands. The Senator from Arkansas undertakes to give the meaning and the interpretation of the bill. I confront him with my poor judgment that his interpretation of the law is not correct. He talks about owners. There are no owners there. The property belongs to the Government. Not a man upon that reservation can take a stick of timber, a board, or anything else without becoming a trespasser. The property is that of the Government. It is for you, Senators, to dispose of it.

I ask you to look at the bill and not now saddle these people, who have been as the Senator says for forty years in law, with a lawsuit for forty years to come, or subject the poor man there who is not able to pay his way for favors to be kicked out of his house without day.

I will not charge and do not intimate that there is anything intentionally wrong in this bill. That would be unbecoming me and I have no such insinuations to cast; but I do say——

Mr. DORSEY. I should like to have the Senator explain what he means by saying that men will be kicked out of their houses unless they have got money to pay their way. What does he mean by that?

Mr. ALCORN. I mean by that, sir, that they have been kicked out of their houses because they have not had money to pay.

Mr. CLAYTON. When?

Mr. ALCORN. Since this receiver has been appointed.

Mr. CLAYTON. I deny it most emphatically.

Mr. ALCORN. I do not say——

Mr. CLAYTON. Do you mean to say because they had not money to pay properly?

Mr. ALCORN. I am not talking about "properly."

Mr. CLAYTON. Improperly.

Mr. ALCORN. What I say I say understanding the force of the language that I use. I say that the man there who has not been able to pay his rent has had to leave his premises. Has he not? Did I say that it was improperly so? I say that the man who is not able to pay lawyers and who is not able to go there to obtain favors needs the protection of Congress. That is what I say. It is for the poor fellows that I speak who are now occupants and claimants at Hot Springs.

Gentlemen talk about "the claimants." Who are "the claimants?" They are broken down in fortune and bending under the weight of years. It is true that they have been contending for this property, some of them for the last fifty years, and it is true that they paid their money for the property, and it is true that the money is now in the Treasury of the United States and that no provision has been made for returning it to them. Yes, sir, it is true that the widow stands there hanging over the grave, the survivor of her family, ejected from the house that was built by her husband, who died long, long years ago. Yes, sir, she is there. If she is entitled to no consideration at the hands of Congress, I ask that she shall not be saddled with a lawsuit by a bill that is unjust, that is complex on its face, and that will not be understood alike by any two men who undertake to interpret it.

Now, Mr. President, I have said all I intend to say on the subject.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. President, I do not profess to any very great familiarity with the controversy touching the Hot Springs reservation. My attention has been called somewhat, however, to the litigation touching that reservation and the condition of the people upon the same since such decision. I have had some letters on the subject, and gentlemen who claim to know something of their condition and the necessity of legislation have conferred with me on the subject, attempting to point out the difficulties and also the need of some legislation at this time.

It seems that for many years there were conflicting claims to the property known as the Hot Springs reservation. Litigation ensued which continued for many years, and was finally, something over a year ago, decided by the highest court in the land, and the title to the property was found to be in the United States. The consequence was that all the persons upon that land were there without title. That judgment stands, in no manner set aside or reversed.

We are therefore confronted with this condition of things, that some three or four sections of land are found there the title to which is in the United States, as much and as absolutely and entirely as that of any land that was ever held. There are persons, however, upon these lands as settlers. Many of the settlers and claimants there regarded that they had good titles. These titles were subjected to judicial examination, and it was found that they were without title, and, as I have already said, the title is in the United States. These claimants or occupants, many of whom have put large sums of money in the way of improvements upon these lands, come to Congress and ask that they shall have such legislation as shall relieve them from the burdens of the receiver who is there and the rents that they are paying, and at the same time that they can have provision made to secure to themselves the title to their little homes.

Since the decision was made by the Supreme Court of the United States a receiver has been appointed, who has been collecting from time to time rents from the persons who are upon these lands, and these rents go to the benefit of the United States. Now it strikes us all as being inequitable and unjust that these persons who are there should be required to pay these rents. In strict law of course, as the decree stands of the Supreme Court, they are required to pay, and they have been complying for the most part with the law in making these payments; but it will not do to leave the matter in this way and leave these persons without title and to be required to be continually paying rent or be dispossessed. They want to remain in possession of their homes.

As I understand it, this bill, prepared by the Committee on Public Lands after conference with the persons interested in it, after conference also with the officers of the Land Department of the Government, and after taking into consideration the rights of the Government in connection with this property, proposes a commission that shall go there and appraise the different subdivisions of this property, it being given the power to subdivide also and determine what each of these several pieces of land is worth, and give to the occupants the opportunity to buy first under the appraisement. Of course, when they buy the land that is thus appraised they take with the land the improvements that are upon it.

I do not understand that it is contemplated that the Government is to derive profit from the improvements on these lands, but that the Government proposes by this commission to give to the settlers there, the occupants there, the opportunity to get a title to their homes, and that it is not anticipated that there is to be large profit made by this arrangement, but that the Government will deal justly and equitably with the people that are there, the aim being for the most part that the Government shall get fair compensation for its property and also have a return for the expenses connected with the disposition of the property there found, and that, when the appraisement is made and all these occupants or claimants shall have had an opportunity to buy under this law, if it shall turn out that any portion of this property shall not thus be bought under appraisement, then it is to be put up at public auction in Little Rock and there sold to any person who may see proper to buy, but at a sum not less than the appraisement.

It seems to me that this is equitable and just. If there is any one thing that is a crying shame in our legislation and in connection with the grants of lands that are made and the title held by the Government in reservations upon which persons have gone as settlers or squatters so called, it is that we leave the title of those persons so uncertain and so confused as that litigation ensues, continuing for years.

The Government ought not to hold a partnership with these persons. The Government ought to part with its title; the Government ought to give the title to the persons who are upon these lands, and it ought to provide a means of parting with its title and surrendering the property to the persons that are equitably entitled to it. I understand that by this bill it is proposed to do so.

It may be that there are defects in this bill. There were some defects in it that I pointed out to the Senator having the bill in charge, and he consented at once to amend it accordingly. There may be other defects still in the bill. What I think we ought to aim to do largely is this: so provide that the settlers on this property should have a title to their homes; that the Government should not hold in partnership with them, and that steps should be taken by which they can get their homes by paying a fair reasonable compensation. If this bill effectuates that object—and I understand that such is the belief of the persons interested in it—I am for it. All the persons interested, as I understand from the Senator from Arkansas, are agreed on this bill. The entire delegation from the State are agreed upon it. I understand it has the approval also of the Land Department. Of that I am not certain, but I have been so informed. If so, I think we are reasonably safe in following the lead of the committee on this bill.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. WRIGHT. I do not profess to be so familiar with the bill as to be able to answer, but I will try.

Mr. MERRIMON. I ask the Senator whether the words "claimant" and "occupant" in line 5 of section 5 are used synonymously, or if they are intended to represent distinct classes of people; and, if they do represent distinct classes of people, whether the difficulty suggested by the Senator from Mississippi does not arise and will it not give rise to endless litigation among the people?

Mr. WRIGHT. What is the question?

Mr. MERRIMON. Whether the words "claimant" and "occupant" in line 5 of section 5 are used as synonymous terms?

Mr. WRIGHT. I think not.

Mr. MERRIMON. Then they represent different classes?

Mr. WRIGHT. I understand so.

Mr. MERRIMON. Then John Smith has made an improvement, built a house, stables, &c. He is a claimant, for he is not in possession; he has allowed somebody to come into possession who is the occupant. Now, when these parties come before the commissioners to establish their right, who is entitled under this bill: the man in possession or the man who claims?

Mr. DORSEY. The man who owns the improvements.

Mr. MERRIMON. There is nobody there who does own the improvements at all. Nobody has any right there at all.

Mr. PADDOCK. Somebody must own the improvements.

Mr. DORSEY. The man who made the improvements.

Mr. MERRIMON. Then say so. That is what the Senator from Mississippi proposed to do.

Mr. WRIGHT. I will endeavor to answer the inquiry of my friend from North Carolina, and perhaps I can answer it as well by asking him a question. Would he have the bill so framed as that only occupants should be entitled to buy this land?

Mr. MERRIMON. I simply want to see the difficulty solved, and avoid litigation. I say that there will be endless litigation if it goes the way it is now.

Mr. WRIGHT. If my friend thinks it is so, he ought to be able to suggest some means to get us out of the difficulty.

Mr. MERRIMON. The Senator from Mississippi did offer an amendment which did obviate the difficulty, and it was rejected.

Mr. WRIGHT. I think that went very far beyond what the Senator thinks it did.

Mr. MERRIMON. I believe an amendment can be readily devised that will obviate the difficulty, and the friends of the bill, it seems to me, ought to desire that it should be done.

Mr. OGLESBY. I do not take the interest in this measure that the representatives in Congress from the State of Arkansas feel in the subject and in the bill. It was not possible for the Committee on Public Lands, with all the attention that it could give to this intricate subject, to take the same interest in it that the people occupying the reservation and their friends in the two Houses of Congress take in the subject. We knew when this subject came before us that it would be an embarrassing one. For myself, I have been absent many weeks and have not been present in the committee during the deliberations, whatever they have been on this subject, but I knew that it would be beset with difficulties at the start; and it is beset with difficulties even yet.

Now, to start out, Congress has the same right to look at any claim the original claimants to that ground had as to look merely at the rights and interests of the people who are there now occupying it. If Congress chooses to go back to the three different interests at stake, represented by three different claimants, and say which of those three original claimants shall have this land, we can do so. If we choose to go back and say that all three of them ought to have it all, notwithstanding the decision of the Supreme Court, Congress can do it. But the Committee on Public Lands, after giving the subject the best consideration they could, thought that as the Court of Claims and the Supreme Court of the United States, with all the facts before them, with able counsel representing the claimants, had decided that the title to these three or four sections of land was in the United States and in neither of those three persons, and thereby made it public domain again, thought they would take what seemed to be a more liberal view than that.

This committee could not tell which one of these three claimants had the best right. There were three contestants for these hot springs. This committee could not tell which had the best right. This Congress could never find out which of these three claimants had the best right unless they would go behind a returning board, [laughter,] and then the trouble never would end. So the Committee on Public Lands concluded that they would look on this public domain as they would at public domain west of the one hundredth meridian or east of it. We found it occupied by men, women, and children, by landlords and merchants, by traders, and by a great many people in good health and by a greatly larger number of people beset in some way or other with some sort of malady or other. The waters are supposed to have great curative qualities. It is expected the place will become in time a great national resort, and that a great many poor people will go there to get rid of those diseases that human flesh has ever been and I suppose ever will be heir to. So the Committee on Public Lands thought they would take that view of the subject which would meet the conditions of the people living there rather than the rights of the old three claimants.

Now, I do not wish Congress to understand, nor the friends of the three old claimants to understand that the committee did not believe Congress had a right to look at their interests also. We have been thinking on that subject for this body. Whether we have thought wisely or not as a committee is another question. We did expect when this bill came up into this body it would be thoroughly discussed, that it would be examined, because there are many millions of dollars at stake, I am told. The property is worth two or three or four million dollars. I have heard it estimated as high as $5,000,000.

Others put it lower. There are a great many interests there. So we believed that when the subject came up it would receive the attention of the Senate in that frank and generous spirit that ever characterizes this body in seeking out the true remedy for the wrongs of mankind.

I owe it to frankness to say that the Committee on Public Lands, while recommending this bill, as they do recommend its passage, felt that it was not perhaps the best disposition of the property, or to speak more correctly, that it was not disposed of in the best possible way; that the methods and machinery for the disposition of it were not exactly satisfactory in all respects. For my own part, what I dreaded more than anything else was the possibility that the occupants, the people down there, would be thrown into litigation under this bill, and as for that under almost any other bill.

To start on, they have got now under the decision of the Supreme Court no title; the title is in the United States, but the people say they have vested rights here; they sincerely believe it. I have no doubt the old three claimants think each one of them that he ought to have the whole of it, and when the three old claimants found that each one of them could not get the whole of it then I think they would have considered that they three together ought to have it all, and I expect they could be got to compromise now and divide equally. But it is out of their hands by the decision of the Supreme Court.

Now, then, come back to the machinery of the bill. We found that if we said these commissioners should divide this land out between the claimants and the occupants, we should be troubled, and so would the commissioners, with what was the signification and legal meaning of "claimants." The committee decided that by the word "claimants" they did not mean one of the old three claimants, that they did not mean a claimant under color of title existing prior to the decision of the Supreme Court; but they meant by "claimant" one who had made improvements on twenty feet, forty feet, or one hundred feet, or an acre, or five acres of the ground, who put the improvements upon it, a hotel, or a boarding-house, or a residence, or a cottage, but did not live in it, possibly absent from the Springs, or living in other buildings on the reservation; but as such persons had built the house and made the improvements, we tried to use apt language to describe this sort of claimant we would include in this law. As distinguished from that "claimant," and as a separate person from him, we define an "occupant." We make two classes, the "occupants" and the "claimants." Now the occupant may be the owner of the house and the improvement. Bear that in mind. But a man may not be the owner of the improvement and yet be an occupant.

Then another class came into view. Who would that other person be? If the occupant on public land of a house belonging to the people of the United States had no claim to it, what other person could have an equitable claim to it? Manifestly the person that put it there, that built it and improved it. Therefore we say a claimant by reason of having made improvements on the ground, as an occupant, and if it be an occupant as distinguished from a claimant, if he made the improvements he is protected. If he did not make the improvement the man who did make it is protected, and ought to be I think in equity. The commissioners provided for by this bill bring witnesses before them; they bring proof before them to ascertain who made the improvements or whether the person who occupied the ground, him or herself, made the improvements; and that is as close as we can get to the subject. It is as definite as we can be; it is as definite as this bill is.

Now if any Senator on this floor can find more apt language than is used in this bill to carry out those two ideas, I would welcome it, as I doubt not the Senator from Arkansas would. If you go beyond our meaning of the word "claimant," and put in "claimant under color of title," the Senate will see that you go back at once to a class of men who claim to have owned the land prior to the decision of the Supreme Court. As the Committee on Public Lands wished to steer clear of those claimants and to recognize a subsequent and altogether different class from those, they used the language in the fifth section, which I will now read:

That it shall be the duty of said commissioners to show, by metes and bounds on the map herein provided for, the parcels or tracts of lands claimed by reason of improvements made thereon—

Is not that plain enough to go by—or occupied.

There may be houses or lots there that no one is occupying; there may be nobody in the building, but there the building would be; and a claimant, because he put it there, not because he owned the ground, not because he had a title to the land there, could go before those three commissioners and show by proof that he made the improvement. The moment he establishes his right, the commissioners have no trouble, if they be governed by proof honestly and fairly, as we suppose the commission will be, to give to each occupant of fifteen feet frontage on a street, or twenty feet, or forty feet, or one hundred feet, for there is a little narrow street running down by the stream, and it is the most valuable portion of the property, and there is where all the business is carried on. These claimants and occupants are all jostled in together there in one continuous mass up and down that street, or up and down that stream, some occupying little shops, barber-shops, some little saloons, some all kinds of buildings, from the lowest order up to those where respectable and valuable business is carried on.

These commissioners have got to make a plat and survey, with the frontage of every lot, of the size of it, and of every building on it, and they have got to fix the value upon it on proof given to them, and they give the claimant, if he made the improvement, the prior right to purchase at the price fixed by the commissioners; and they give the occupant the prior right to buy where he made the improvements, at the price fixed by the appraisers.

If you can get out of this trouble on any better plan than that, gentlemen, say so. The committee felt, and I think correctly felt—and I believe the good sense of the Senate will sustain them in the end—that the Government of the United States cannot afford to go down there speculating in this property; that it had no desire to go down there and occupy this property for the purpose of receiving rent from it. I believe if the Government were to undertake it for any length of time it would be involved in more loss than it would gain, and a vast amount of other trouble would come out of it which I do not care about describing now either directly or inferentially. The Government had better get away from it, in my opinion. Therefore, I said this morning, I have no objection as a Senator on this floor to giving it to the State of Arkansas, or giving it to the county of Garland, or, better still, giving it to the occupants of the ground.

I would be willing to take a dollar and a quarter an acre for all the land there is there, so far as the Government is concerned, if you will just let us get out of this mess of stuff without another dollar. The Government never will make a dollar out of it. The expenses we shall be required from year to year to meet, in my opinion, the appropriations we shall be required from time to time to make to keep the springs in repair, to erect hospitals, eleemosynary institutions, to open parks, construct highways, sidewalks, promenades, and bridges, and everything else, would consume more than we should ever get out of the land. Nor do I believe it is the just principle. I believe the juster principle is to give it to the people who have been occupying it, who have been living on it.

Mr. President, suppose the Supreme Court of the United States had decided that the title to the property belonged to Mr. Rector; Rector thought the court would decide that way, or the assignees of Rector did. If that had been the decision of the Supreme Court, does anybody suppose that the occupants of that ground would have remained there paying no rent, or that they would have a title in that property recognized for an instant? Not at all. Take either one of the other claimants; if the Supreme Court had put the title in any of them, these occupants would all have had to pay rent forever.

I am replying now more particularly to the argument about the rent directed by the Court of Claims to be collected there until the United States shall divest itself of what title it has in the property. So I said, and I say again, that I do not believe on reflection Congress would feel that it would be a good investment for the United States to retain that property and undertake to lease it or rent it out. They had better get rid of it, and I think get rid of it on the easiest possible terms. I would fix the purchase-money to the occupants at such rates that they would have no difficulty in meeting it. Mind you there is ground there not occupied by anybody. There is plenty of ground there which there is no building on and no improvements on. That is to be sold also by these commissioners, and the money put in the Treasury from the sales of that land. As to the people there and the ground held by them, I would be very liberal.

It is not unreasonable to expect that the three old claimants who thought they owned that property, who attracted public attention to it, who in one way or another doubtless contributed to its improvement and development, have felt and feel now that they have been harshly dealt by by the Government and that we ought in passing any bill on this subject to consult their interest. The trouble about that—coming back to that point again—is that Congress cannot determine which of the three had the legal right, or which of the three had the most equitable right to all or to any portion of it. Therefore we dispose of it as we do of other public land. The trouble was in making a distinction between a claimant and an occupant, so that both could go before this commission and get something like a fair settlement. When the price is fixed by the commissioners, and they take it at that price, the bill goes on to direct and define how the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall issue a patent to them. They get possession of the patent and get possession of the property, whether it be a small lot or a large one, whether it have a house on it or no house on it, but the title goes out of the United States into the custody and keeping of these people.

Since the property has been decided to belong to the United States there are several powers conferred on this board of commissioners that if properly exercised must be of great benefit to that town. For instance, they lay it off into blocks and squares, into lots, into streets, and into alleys, and they have the power to go where there is an inconveniently narrow street and widen it. They have the right to condemn property upon it, remove it, and make the Hot Springs of Arkansas accessible to the public. If it were not in the United States that could not be done now without very great expense by a municipal government there. But it so happens that the title is in the Government and as we are to dispose of it we can provide now for a system of subdivision of the land into blocks, lots, squares, streets, and alleys, that will make it far more acceptable as a visiting-place and as a habitable place than it ever was before.

The bill also reserves the mountain out of which these hot springs flow. That is reserved not as a public park, I wish the Senate to understand. It is not dedicated to the public. There is no provision made in the bill for the United States spending a dollar. It simply reserves the mountain out of which the hot springs flow from sale at all; and at any time hereafter the Government will have the choice to dispose of that mountain either by sale or by donation, and any vested rights that may arise from improvements made upon that reserved piece of ground will not involve the Government in expense in the future. So we have been looking, if I may be excused for saying so again, quite as much to the interest of the public and the Treasury of the Government for the future as we have toward the accommodation of the occupants and claimants of the present.

The Committee on Public Lands has no sort of interest in this bill separate from the most generous and public spirit. It is due to say that the delegation in Congress from that State have. They are more deeply concerned and the bill I understand has been largely prepared under their supervision and by their consent. It is not likely true that everybody has agreed to it any more than it is likely true that everybody ever will agree to any bill; but I am assured by gentlemen who take the responsibility of saying so to me, that it does embody the sentiment of the people living there and of their representatives in Congress, that it does meet with the favor of the Land Department of the Government, and it is recommended by the Committee on Public Lands; and therefore in its spirit, in its principle, is pretty well indorsed and Congress can afford to pass it I suppose with considerable security.

One more remark and I will conclude. What is most desirable, in my humble opinion more desirable than anything else, is to dispose of it so as to accommodate those people and entail no future liabilities upon the Treasury in consequence of it. This much I have thought it necessary to say because the bill came from the Committee on Public Lands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. MAXEY. I call the attention of the Senate to section 19 of this proposition. In that section the United States in the exercise of the right of eminent domain grants to the Hot Springs Railroad Company a reservation through the Hot Springs reservation of one hundred feet in width. There is not in that section 19, nor anywhere else in the bill, any protection whatever granted to occupants or claimants within the hundred feet.

Mr. DORSEY. Let me say to the Senator from Texas that this railroad passes over and through a very worthless valley. There are no occupants; there are no buildings, and no improvements of any kind within some distance of the railroad. In granting this right of way we have simply done what the citizens of that place have petitioned us to do. It is some distance away from the springs, and in no manner affects the right of any settler.

Mr. CLAYTON. And the road is a completed road.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. President, I hope we shall have a vote.

Mr. MAXEY. I will call the attention of the Senator from Arkansas to the fact that the line of railroad is specifically designated on the face of this bill. I supposed the purpose of the railroad was to go through the village of Hot Springs. If that is so it must necessarily interfere with some one of the claimants or occupants.

Mr. DORSEY. That is not so. I am entirely familiar with the location of the railroad and the location of the owners of property. It is not true that it passes over any property now occupied, and it is not true that it goes within half a mile of the hot springs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. ALCORN. I wish to say a single word for the purpose of correcting, not a misstatement by any means, but an inference that might be drawn from the remarks of the Senator from Illinois. He stated, or at least the Senate would have inferred from his remarks, that the occupants were in no worse condition to-day than they were when the decision of the Supreme Court was rendered, in this, that they were then paying rent to the claimants of this land and to-day they are paying rent to the Government of the United States. I wish to say that as a matter of fact that is not correct, in this, that the occupants who are protected under the provisions of this bill, if we understand the bill aright, have in many cases, for mere nominal sums, being poor people, taken ground-rents, the claimant, as a matter of course, always protecting himself against the statute of limitations. For mere nominal sums of one, or five, or fifty dollars a year, they have taken ground-rents for a term of years upon particular portions of the reservation. They went forward and built their houses. Then the Government comes and takes the property—and here is the hardship of the case—takes the occupant's home, his house, and the only thing of value to the Government at the present time, and rents out his house. This disturbs the original claimant in the ratio of perhaps $5 a year; it disturbs the occupant in the ratio of everything he possesses. Not able to pay the rent, he must leave his house, which represents everything that he possesses.

Now I propose by my amendment to remit this matter to the next Congress, simply suspending the rent the occupants and claimants have been drained of at the rate of sixty or seventy thousand dollars during the last twelve months; and I apprehend that when the time comes for them to make purchase they will have been drained of everything that they possess, and they will be unable to purchase.

Mr. PADDOCK. I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi if the effect of his amendment is not to go behind the decision of the Supreme Court and to open up all the questions of title?

Mr. ALCORN. Not at all. If I thought so, I would not offer it.

Mr. PADDOCK. I think it is.

Mr. ALCORN. I do not think so, for certainly nothing can go behind the decision of the Supreme Court.

Mr. PADDOCK. That was a question which the Committee on Public Lands did not at all consider. They simply took the situation as they found it, subsequently to the decision of the Supreme Court.

Mr. ALCORN. Certainly the amendment I first offered was a plain one. It simply undertook to define the relation of occupant and claimant, so that there should be no confusion in the construction of the law when it came to pass, not upon their rights but their equities that have been recognized by Congress. That was all. Now, if it shall be the pleasure of the Senate to pass the bill in its present form, I certainly shall content myself with the reflection that I have endeavored to discharge a duty which I felt every Senator owed and which I have construed only for myself.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. ALCORN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCREERY, (when Mr. STEVENSON'S name was called.) I wish to state that my colleague is confined to his room by indisposition.

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 8, nays 40; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Alcorn, Bogy, Davis, Goldthwaite, McCreery, Robertson, Saulsbury, and Whyte—8.

NAYS—Messrs. Allison, Bailey, Blaine, Booth, Bruce, Cameron of Wisconsin, Chaffee, Clayton, Conkling, Conover, Cragin, Dawes, Dorsey, Edmunds, Ferry, Harvey, Hereford, Hitchcock, Ingalls, Johnston, Jones of Florida, Kelly, Logan, McDonald, McMillan, Maxey, Merrimon, Mitchell, Morrill, Oglesby, Paddock, Patterson, Randolph, Sargent, Teller, Wadleigh, West, Windom, Withers, and Wright—40.

ABSENT—Messrs. Anthony, Barnum, Bayard, Boutwell, Burnside, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Christiancy, Cockrell, Cooper, Dennis, Eaton, Frelinghuysen, Gordon, Hamilton, Hamlin, Howe, Jones of Nevada, Kernan, Morton, Norwood, Ransom, Sharon, Sherman, Spencer, Stevenson, Thurman, and Wallace—27.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment of the committee as a substitute for the bill.

The amendment was agreed to, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

